The production of gold last year was more than double that of both gold and silver in 1896, when the money question so intensely challenged the attention of the world. Let us hope that this enormous output will indefinitely continue, but if not, beware of silver's demand for restoration as standard money. Good times and bad times alternate as day and night, as sunshine and shadow, as the hill and the valley. We are now enjoying the high tide of day, the sunshine upon the hill crest; but as we scan the horizon we see the ominous gathering of financial clouds and hear the awful rumbling of a commercial storm. I have often heard it predicted of late that the strenuous commercial conditions prevailing throughout this country at no late day will reach a climax and culminate in the most distressing and far-reaching panic the world has ever known. I pray that this cup may pass, but unless something is done soon to curb the avarice and the rapacity of commercial greed we will awake some day to find our worst hopes realized and our country in the throes of chaos and anarchy.

I am no pessimist; I am an optimist; and trusting and believing in the wisdom, the intelligence, and the infallibility of the American people, I know a remedy will be found ere it is too late. No hope can be indulged during the incoming Administration. President McKinley and his party are wedded to the commercial interests; are controlled and dominated by those influences, and will continue to foster and encourage them in the future as they have in the past. The trusts will continue to feed and fatten upon the vitals of the people; monopoly will continue to absorb the resources of the country, and commercial cupidity and greed will continue to hold high carnival, enforcing extension, exacting tribute, and demanding subsidy at the hands of a puny Administration and a servile Congress.

What has become of your boasted promises to suppress the trust evil? You have full power—you have the Executive and both branches of Congress—why does not the Senate pass the anti-trust bill which passed this House last session for campaign purposes, as we then charged and you now confess? In a speech upon this floor last May I said the Republican party did not intend to pass any measure designed to suppress the trust evil. I then used this language:

> The only excuse and justification claimed for the Philippine war is that it will extend American trade and commerce, all at the instance of the great trusts and monopolies which are sapping the life-blood of our nation—and right here permit me to digress long enough to inquire why no anti-trust legislation has been enacted by this Congress. Why has every bill introduced for the suppression of these gigantic and monstrous evils been suppressed by the majority? I understand you have introduced a constitutional amendment of some kind; but that was done, I venture to say, for the purpose of tiding the question over the Presidential election. You do not intend to legislate against the trusts, and your amendment is only an excuse and a makeshift. You intend to rely upon platform promises rather than performance, when you have the present power and opportunity.

Tell me, has not the prediction I then made been fulfilled? Answer me, was that bill passed for the purposes of the campaign only? Were you in good faith, or were you merely exploiting your pretenses for the purpose of hoodwinking and cajoling the people into voting to continue your reign of plunder and robbery?

Let me call your attention to the fact that both the Democratic and the Republican platforms last campaign declared against the trusts. The Republican platform proposed some vague, uncertain, and indefinite remedy against this evil. I would invite you, gentlemen of both the Democratic and Republican parties, to read the Republican platform and its friendly allusion to the trusts. It does not pain me to say that the Republican platform against trusts is insincere and was not adopted with a view to its enforcement in the case of Mr. McKinley's reelection, and was not intended to commit the leaders in the Republican party to the enforcement of existing anti-trust laws or the enactment of new laws to suppress the trust evil.

Recently when standing upon the platform of a car, the porter came to me and gently tapped me upon the shoulder and said, "Mister, you must not stand upon this platform." I said, "Sir, what is this platform for?" and he replied, "This platform, Mister, is to get in on, sir." I never fully understood the full purport and meaning of that definition of a platform or what a platform was really intended for until I reread the declaration or plank in the Republican platform against trusts, and then I discovered for the first time the full purport and meaning of a political platform, especially a Republican platform, that they are not made to stand on, but made to "get in on."

When Republican spellbinders during the campaign went about the country telling the people they undertook to provide a remedy against the trust evil last session of Congress by a constitutional amendment, and that they were defeated in their project by the Democratic minority, they no doubt deceived many and left the impression that the proposed amendment was necessary, and that the Democratic minority in Congress was hostile to all legislation against the trust evil.

Let me read that amendment, and then point out the objections to it which induced almost the whole of the Democratic minority in Congress to vote against it. Here it is:

> Congress shall have power to define, regulate, control, prohibit, or dissolve trusts, monopolies, or combinations, whether existing in the form of a corporation or otherwise. The several States may continue to exercise such power in any manner not in conflict with the laws of the United States.

I assume that Congress already has ample power and authority to suppress all trusts doing an interstate business and that a constitutional amendment is wholly unnecessary. Trusts are foreign or domestic; that is, those which do a business wholly within the bounds of a single State—the State of their origin—and trusts which do an interstate business. Every State legislature has ample and full power to suppress every local or domestic trust doing business wholly in the State of its origin, and the Federal Congress has no power to interfere with any such trust, monopoly, or combination, and should have none. We desire that the several States of the Union shall continue to exercise that power; that they shall not be limited or prescribed in the power which they may exercise toward the suppression of all local and domestic trusts, monopolies, and combinations; that no restriction of Congress, that no definition of a trust, that no regulation or control of trusts which Congress may see fit to adopt shall abridge or interfere with the right of the State of Illinois or any other State to protect itself against any local or domestic concern of that character.

I assert that Congress already has ample and sufficient power to protect the several States of the Union against a trust, monopoly, or combination existing or incorporated in another State and to prevent it from doing business outside of the State of its origin, and that a constitutional amendment is wholly unnecessary to afford Federal interference and relief against this evil.

Let me call your attention to the wording of the proposed amendment. It provided that "Congress shall have power to define trusts, monopolies, or combinations." Now, if Congress should have the power to define a trust, it could place upon these combinations in restraint of trade a very liberal or a very strict definition, and, influenced by trust agents and lobbyists, could so define the trust that even the Standard Oil Company would not come within its definition, and every State legislature would be prescribed, limited, and bound by the definition, for by the very terms of the amendment the States could act only in harmony and not in conflict with the law of Congress, thereby depriving the people of any and all remedy by means of State legislation against a most iniquitous evil.

It provides that the States shall not exercise such power—that is, the power to define, to regulate, to control, to prohibit, or to dissolve trusts—except that they do so in compliance with the laws prescribed by Congress. And hence if the Congress should so define a trust as to permit all combinations of capital organized for the purpose of limiting production and arbitrarily fixing prices to continue to do business, the States would be powerless to exercise a remedy against that character of combinations, whether they are domestic or foreign, and would be wholly without a remedy, because the States would be limited to the remedy afforded the people by the definition placed upon trusts by this body. The result would be to abridge the power of the States, to make State legislatures wholly subservient to the will of Congress and subject to the definition placed upon trusts by the Congress, and to deny the people any other remedy than that which Congress would see fit to afford against the trust evil. The only remedy heretofore afforded against trusts has been through the several State legislatures, and we insist that the power to enact and enforce anti-trust laws shall not be abridged or denied to the States, but that the States shall continue to exercise unrestricted power concurrent with Federal authority and not be subject to any limitations or restrictions of Congress.

The Republican party are under obligations to the trusts. They receive contributions for campaign purposes from these unlawful combinations. The Republican party is said to be always true to its friends; true to its obligations. I must confess the Republican party was never known to betray a trust. And they will not be so ungrateful in the next four years to come as to prosecute their best friends, the men who furnish them the money by which they hope to corrupt the ballot box; they will not be so ungrateful to MARK HANNA and his friends as to put a straw in the way of the trusts.

I want to go a step further. I would impress upon your minds that we are involved in complications growing out of the acquisition of the Philippine Islands by reason of the demand made by the trusts, by monopoly, and by commercial greed. The negotiations for the Philippine Islands and their acquisition was demanded by the trusts that they might have a new field to exploit, and insist that the whole people of the United States shall maintain a standing Army; shall be compelled to support the Government in its policy of imperialism and militarism that commercial greed may reap a harvest. By reason of this demand upon the part of the trusts, the Administration, controlled and dominated by MARK HANNA, and men of his character, negotiated for the Philippine Islands and paid $20,000,000 for their cession to the United States.

I have often been asked the difference between Thomas Jefferson expansion and McKinley imperialism. Let me define the difference. When Thomas Jefferson negotiated for the Louisiana Territory, it embraced the mouth and the whole western bank of the Mississippi River. Mr. Jefferson knew it was safer to acquire the Louisiana Territory that we might avoid foreign complications and future wars. He negotiated for the Louisiana Territory that we might control the Mississippi River, its tributaries, and its mouth. Remember that when we secured all that vast domain known as the Louisiana Territory it was vacant, unoccupied, and practically uninhabited territory. It lay at our very door, inviting the footsteps and the ax of civilization. When we acquired that territory, Mr. Jefferson required that there should be incorporated in the treaty ceding it to the United States this declaration: "That the future inhabitants of the Louisiana Territory should be citizens of the United States." That was not imperialism. That was not creating colonies. That was not profaning the Constitution, defiling the Declaration of Independence, or prostituting the American flag, but was a wise provision for the extension of the Constitution and the blessings of free government and free institutions to all that vast expanse of vacant territory to be occupied by our own people and to be erected into States of the American Union, extending the blessings of free government from the Mississippi River to the Pacific Ocean.

Contrast that, if you please, with McKinley imperialism. When we acquired the Philippine Islands they were not necessary to avoid foreign complications or future wars, but were calculated, as results have shown, to involve us in the very character of wars and complications which we sought to avoid, and in fact have avoided, by the Louisiana purchase. They were not contiguous territory, but lay 8,000 miles across the sea. They were not vacant, unoccupied, and uninhabited territory, but were populated more densely than any rural portion of the United States. Populated by a people alien in race, alien in color, alien in religion, alien in tongue, alien in customs and education, alien in all that ought to be common between the citizens of the same republic. But that is not all. Let me impress upon the minds of my Republican friends that the treaty ceding the Philippine Islands to the United States does not provide that the inhabitants shall be citizens of the United States, but it does provide "that the civil rights and political status of the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands shall be determined by Congress."

If we keep the Philippine Islands, we must determine in what capacity we will retain them. When Congress determines their civil rights and their political status, it will determine whether they shall be citizens of the United States or whether they shall be subjects. If you make them citizens, you will confer upon them all the constitutional privileges, all the rights and all the blessings of free government which you yourselves enjoy. There can be no distinction between American citizens, whatever their race, color, or previous condition of servitude. Every American citizen is entitled to the same privileges, the same rights, the same immunities under the American flag the world over. You can not discriminate between them. If you make the people of the Philippine Islands citizens, you give to them all the privileges which you and your children possess and enjoy. You must admit the products of those islands free of duty to our markets in competition with the products of the American farm and factory. You must give them representation in the Congress of the United States, that there shall be no taxation without representation. You must give them a voice in the government, that we may not impose upon them a government against their consent, in violation of the plain letter of the Declaration of Independence. You must erect them into States of the American Union. You must admit the brown men of the Philippine Islands into your home, into your political society, into your business affairs with the same rights that you yourselves possess and enjoy. You must tear down the Chinese-exclusion act and admit the pauper labor of the Philippine Islands in competition with the free labor of the United States. Are you now ready—are you prepared—are you willing to make the brown men of the Philippine Islands citizens of the United States?

If you do not make them citizens you must make them subjects. Subjects of a free Republic; denying them the Constitution of the United States; imposing upon them a government without their consent; enforcing the payment of taxes without representation. To make them subjects you must maintain a standing army, that you may enforce your government without consent and taxation without representation at the point of the bayonet.

There are but two kinds of government—government by consent and government by force. Government by force is imperialism. Government against will and sustained by military authority is foreign to the institutions of the United States and in violation of constitutional rights. When Mr. McKinley was first elected President our standing army was but 25,000 men. After the Spanish war had closed, after victory upon sea and land, adding renown and luster to the American Army and Navy; after the volunteer soldier had returned to his peaceful pursuits and when no war was imminent in the Philippine Islands, Mr. McKinley asked Congress to give him authority to increase the standing Army to 100,000 men. Why? That the Republican policy of government by brute force might be extended to the Philippine Islands. That an army might be in readiness to hold these people in subjection. That they might be governed as England sought to govern the thirteen American colonies prior to the American Revolution. Not only that, the trusts and the combinations in the United States demanded an increase in our standing Army that they might feel more secure in the possession and enjoyment of their ill-gotten gains; that a standing army might be stationed at every industrial center to enforce government by injunction, and to awe and deter and bulldoze union labor and the American workman.

To make them citizens of the United States is to endanger our civilization. To make them subjects endangers our form of government, because it is a departure from the principles which have guided us to prosperity in the years that have passed. Let me call your attention to what ex-President Harrison has said. At the time of the Porto Rico tariff bill discussion in this House, when it was proposed to tax the Porto Ricans without representation, in violation of the Constitution, which requires that taxation shall be uniform throughout the United States, Mr. Harrison said: "I regard it a serious departure from right principles."

I do not stand here appealing in behalf of the brown men of the Philippine Islands. They are a matter of small consequence to you and to me as compared with the future of our country and of posterity. All humanity sympathizes with them, but my heart bleeds for my own country and for my own fellow-citizens. Extend to them a policy such as proposed by Mr. McKinley, a colonial policy after the style of England; impose upon other people a government by force, sustained by the military power; create colonies; recognize government by brute force, and you have taken not only the first but an irretrievable step in the direction of imperialism; not only threatening the liberties of other people, not only depriving the brown men of the Philippine Islands of their rights and of their liberty, but in the end jeopardizing and threatening the liberty, the institutions of our own country. You can not extend despotic power to other people without in the near future the seed you plant returning to curse you at home, and it is for and on behalf of our own country and our own people that I plead against that departure from our form of government under which we have grown prosperous and great.

I am opposed to a large standing army because it begets a spirit of intolerance and of tyranny at home and abroad. I am opposed to maintaining an army of 70,000 men in the Philippines to crush the spirit of liberty and the germs of free government there. The volunteer soldier is a republic's best defender. The mercenary soldier is a machine, while the volunteer soldier fights for a principle and dies for a just cause. I am opposed to a large standing army, not only because it tends to subvert free institutions, but because of the enormous expense entailed. Our Republican friends, drunk upon the lust of empire and imbued with the spirit of conquest and commercial aggrandizement, propose by this bill to maintain an army of 100,000 men at an expense of $170,000,000 a year. During the last year of Mr. Cleveland's Administration the total cost of our Army was but $23,000,000 a year, and now it is proposed to appropriate seven times that amount for the ensuing year. We were told during the campaign that Mr. McKinley's election would witness immediate cessation of hostilities in the Philippine Islands. If the war is over, why the necessity of increasing the Army? Why this immense expenditure of money?

I submit the following estimate of the costs of our Army and Navy, including pensions, for the year 1891 as compared with that of Great Britain, France, Germany, and Russia:

	Army.	Navy.	Pensions.	Total.
United States, 1901	$170,000,000	$78,000,000	$144,000,000	$392,000,000
Great Britain	115,000,000	135,000,000	15,000,000	265,000,000
France	127,000,000	57,000,000	26,000,000	210,000,000
Germany	127,000,000	15,500,000	15,000,000	157,500,000
Russia	147,000,000	34,000,000	19,000,000	200,000,000
United States, 1895	23,000,000	25,000,000	151,000,000	199,000,000

Let me warn our Republican friends against the extravagance in public expenditures which has characterized the McKinley Administration. Whatever may be the fundamental issues in the next general election, whether it be bimetallism, trusts, or imperialism, one you must meet will be willful extravagance and corruption. The watchword of 1904 will be "retrenchment and reform."

Let me contrast the expenditures of the Cleveland Administration with that of the McKinley Administration. I would invite your attention to these figures:

Year.	Amount.	Per cent.
1893	$383,477,954.49	5.78
1894	367,525,279.83	5.43
1895	356,195,298.29	5.16
1896	352,179,446.08	5.01
1897	365,774,159.57	5.11
1898	443,368,582.80	6.97
1899	605,072,179.85	8.14
1900	487,713,791.71	6.39
1900-1902 (estimated)	1,500,000,000.00	20

For the purpose of avoiding an extra session the Senate has seen fit to extend certain powers to the President in relation to the Cuban situation which are greater than that exercised by any sovereign upon the earth, and yet we are told that imperialism is a myth and a fraud.

I am opposed to this bill not only because it begets a spirit of intolerance and tyranny; not only because of enormous expense of maintaining a large standing army; not only because it may and will be used as an engine of oppression in the Philippine Islands, but because it is a violation of the solemn pledge given Cuba and the world in the following resolution of Congress when war was declared against Spain. I will read it:

That the people of the island of Cuba are, and of right ought to be, free and independent, and that the Government of the United States hereby recognizes the republic of Cuba as the true and lawful government of that island, * * * hereby disclaiming any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said islands except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

By this bill the United States seeks to exercise sovereignty and jurisdiction over the island of Cuba and absolute control of its foreign relations. The sacred words of that resolution, borrowed from the Declaration of Independence, are no guaranty against its violation by the Republican party, and the country is about to witness another act of perfidy on the part of Congress by the passage of this bill that will go far to convince the world that our boasted love of freedom and independence is but a sham and a fraud.

Mr. SULZER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BARBER].

Mr. BARBER. Mr. Speaker, I simply desire an opportunity to incorporate in the RECORD a statement showing the balance sheet of our account with the Philippine Islands during the two years since their acquisition, taken from an editorial in the Evening Post (New York):

To-day marks the completion of two years since the ratification of the treaty of Paris enabled President McKinley to add certain "gems and glories of the tropic seas," as he proudly called them, to the national domain. Americans are a thrifty and prudent people, unless all proverbs lie, and should be ready to strike a balance of our Philippine business up to date. The first account would relate purely to the money investment and the return thus far had, and would stand as follows:

William McKinley in account with the United States.

Dr.		Cr.
To 1 archipelago	$20,000,000	By 2 years' exports to Philippines, say $5,200,000, profit on which, at 12 per cent, is	$384,000
To benevolently assimilating the same, 730 days, at $750,000 a day	547,000,000
To expenses able negotiators Paris treaty	222,000
To 2 islands which able negotiators thought they had bought	100,000
	567,322,000
	384,000
Profit and loss	566,938,000

Evidently "there are millions in" the islands; but they are so far "in" that it may be doubted if we ever get them out.

Charles Sumner said that President Grant's scheme to annex San Domingo was but a plan to "buy a bloody lawsuit." President McKinley bought of Spain a still bloodier insurrection. The cost of the islands in terms of flesh and blood and misery should furnish the next page of our Philippine account. But here it is hard to be exact. We know, it is true, that 711 American soldiers have been killed outright in the Philippines; that 446 have died of wounds and 2,184 of disease; but no figures can set forth the story of ruined health, crippled bodies, and maimed lives which always lies behind the official returns of casualties.

Then where are we to reckon in the 30,000 Filipinos whose lives have been taken? Are they a set-off to our own losses? But they are subjects of the United States, and the Supreme Court may decide that they are our fellow-citizens. However, we will be generous and allow the imperialists to put the slaughtered Filipinos on the credit side of the account. We will also give them the slain or starved women and children, the looted homes, the smoking towns, the waste fields. It is hard to see just where the pecuniary or moral profit of all this comes in, but, such as it is, the imperialists are entitled to it.

A correct Philippine balance sheet would also show the respective profit and loss in the moral and political sphere. Figures and values can not, in this part of the statement, be sharply defined; but the two sides of the account would stand something like this:

LOSS.	GAIN.
Confidence and admiration of oppressed peoples.	Applause of arbitrary and oppressive rulers.
Gratitude of struggling republics.	Thanks of republic destroyers.
Watchwords of liberty.	Shibboleths of Empire.
Peaceful expansion.	Criminal aggression.
Ideals of the fathers.	Toys of the nursery.
Reverence for the Constitution.	Trust in force.
The party of moral ideas.	The party of the pocketbook.

Again we leave it to the imperialists to say on which side the balance is From what we know of them we are sure, however, that, as Thomas Fuller always made the praise and glory of God come out in the conclusion, no matter what his premises, so they can infer glory and greatness and goodness where others are able to see only shame and contempt.

Any prudent business concern "writes off for depreciation," or wear and tear of plant, from time to time. We are bound to do the same in looking into the actual status of our Philippine investment. One of our most valuable pieces of machinery, for example, "the consent of the governed," is hopelessly rusted and broken down. We can never use it again and should strike it from our list of assets.

It is obvious, too, that we shall have to get something to put in the place of the old Constitution, which is plainly obsolete. "No taxation without representation" has served us long; but the really up-to-date Government plants have now introduced "Tax according to your own sweet will" in its place, and we shall have to adopt that style. Our stock of national consistency and good faith is clearly so much depreciated that it would not be honest bookkeeping to carry it any longer at par. On the other hand, our stock of false pretenses, hypocrital professions, and silly boasting has been enormously increased by our two years in the Philippines, and if we can only get the world to take it at its nominal value, we may yet be able to lift our eyes from the ground and look the nations in the face again.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman on the other side of the House to use some of his time now.

Mr. HULL. How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. Thirty minutes.

Mr. HULL. How much time is there on the other side?

The SPEAKER. Twenty minutes.

Mr. HULL. I suggest that the gentleman on the other side use a little more of his time. Of course, we reserve the right on this side to close. I ask the gentleman from New York to go ahead for a few minutes longer.

Mr. SULZER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LENTZ].

Mr. LENTZ. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND].

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, with but one beggarly hour upon a side for "debate"—God save the mark!—not the least attention can be given to the great appropriation bill upon which have been ingrafted in the Senate, in brazen disregard of the rules of that body, the amendment to lend the sanction of a degraded Congress to indefinite imperial rule, with the American President as the acting emperor of the Philippines, and that other amendment shamelessly proclaiming the repudiation of our pledge of honor to Cuba and to the world and to all the to-morrows in the history of mankind. In this House, where free speech is stifled and the gag law prevails, where the most that is accorded the representatives of the people, with these tremendous issues pending for the moment and so soon and so slavishly to be settled against liberty and honor and in favor of tyranny and shame, is "leave to print," I avail myself of this poor privilege—all that the enslaved will grant to those whose rights and the rights of whose constituents they wantonly violate—to put into the RECORD a few words, hastily penned, to express, however feebly, my protest and the protest of the liberty-loving people whom I represent (or would represent if my lord, the usurping despot, and his groveling vassals here would permit) against the deep damnation of the foul deed and of the meek servility which attends its execution.

First, a word concerning the thin gauze behind which some may fancy shelter can be found. The bugaboo of an extra session seems to be appalling to certain persons. Why, is it not a fact that all of us are paid by the year, and that our country and our respective constituents are entitled to our legislative services at all times? What right have we to what some gentlemen are pleased to call "our vacation" if there be occasion for the sitting of Congress during a portion of that "vacation" season? And where in the Constitution (if the fathers who made it, after gloriously making it possible by their heroism in battling for liberty upon a thousand bloody fields—if the fathers, bending in pity and shame upon the brink of the shining heights above and looking upon the littleness and recreancy of this hour here below—if they will pardon the reference here to that almost sacred instrument which they gave to their countrymen and to hope and aspiration universal—if they will pardon the reference to their work here among the cringing, shriveled misrepresentatives of a mighty nation)—where in the Constitution is the "vacation" exalted above duty and liberty and honor? There could be no extra session unless the President, against whose election we upon this side of the Chamber worked and voted, should see proper to call it, and why should we shrink from the contemplation of such a call? For one, I believe Congress should assemble regularly when the Congressional term begins.

Might a river and harbor bill fail to become a law, unless sacred principles be surrendered, and incalculable harm be done, and the stain of ineffaceable dishonor be put upon the flag, and perfidy be written, in unfading characters, upon the once shining record book of the Republic? Better that the rivers be choked by the shifting sands, better that the ships cease to find anchorage in the harbors, than that the wellsprings of constitutional liberty be polluted with the garbage of blind greed.

And as for the Louisiana Purchase Celebration, and the Pan-American Exhibition at Buffalo, and the exposition at Charleston, the most delicately adjusted scales can not find the smallest fraction of calculable weight in all of them combined when they are cast into the balances against the Constitution, the Declaration of Independence, national honor, and human rights. Better, far better, to let all these celebrations and exhibitions go over, to be managed by other men, in another century, than to do, or to make possible the doing of, or condone, this double abomination. Better far that Buffalo wait, and wait, and wait for an appropriation until atom by atom the walls of rock over which the Niagara plunges shall have worn away and the mighty cataract shall be numbered with the things that were and are not; better far that a cycle of centuries shall roll by before the Louisiana purchase shall be celebrated; better far that Charleston, vainly reaching out for an appropriation, shall wax in age and her brave men and devoted women cease to dwell in memory even; better all this than that the plighted faith of the American Republic to Cuba and to the world shall be broken in greedy wantonness, and liberty and life be the perpetual sacrifice to imperialism in the Philippines, with formal Congressional approval.

Our nation was dedicated to liberty, and some of us, come weal or come woe, will continue to strive as best we may against the swelling hosts of greed and timidity and servility to hold fast to the faith of the sages of the Revolution. How far we have wandered from the simplicity and glory of the earlier day! One hundred years ago Thomas Jefferson, the immortal author of the immortal Declaration of Independence, having been elected President of the infant Republic without the aid of privilege or the contributions of corruption or the coercion of plutocracy, came quietly to the Capitol, walking from his boarding place in Washington, now the hotel named the Varnum, and in republican simplicity took the official oath and entered upon the duties of his great office. But that was a century ago, and such things are done differently now, with an increased cost of a quarter of a million of dollars as one of the minor incidents of the change that has been wrought.

Then, too, we were not in the work of imposing our government—no; not our government, but the government of empire, by the agency of the carpetbagger, at the point of the bayonet and the mouth of the cannon, with the nasal twang of hypocritical cant between the puffs of smoke—upon an unwilling people on the other side of the globe. Then, too, every resource of constitutional resistance against such outrages upon the rights of man as declared in the Declaration, and upon the principles of our Government as embodied in the Constitution, would have been employed if any party could then have been found base enough to attempt what is to be perpetrated now. Yes, changes have taken place since the days of Jefferson.

When we entered into the war with Spain we declared—

That the people of the island of Cuba are, and of right ought to be, free and independent.

Did we mean what we said? Were we hypocrites then? Or are we unblushingly rushing into the embrace of dishonor now?

Then we also solemnly declared—

That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination when that is accomplished to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

Now, what candid man can say that the amendment with reference to Cuban affairs, so complacently lodged in this appropriation bill, can be harmonized, or is intended to be harmonized, with our lofty pretensions, expressed in the words which I have quoted? How could hypocrisy go further, or shamelessness be more transparent, than in the pretense upon pretense embodied in this amendment? What profligate irony—repeating the words of a pledge with sanctimonious unction, while breaking it, letter and spirit, with brutal indifference!

Let us get what comfort we may out of the hope that the wisdom and virtue and patriotism of the Cubans (until the pride of the American people—their sense of honor, their sense of shame—shall come to the rescue) may avert the calamities which our perfidy invites. Cubans, be patient under the wrongs which we are inflicting upon you! Rest upon the hope that American honor will yet assert itself—that dishonor can not rule here forever! Do not, in righteous indignation, do anything which may be seized upon by those who, having dishonored themselves, await with eager greed and pretext, however flimsy, to despoil "said island." And American sons of freedom, remember the lesson of all the ages: Honor is priceless, and perfidy is death. Stand by your solemn pledge to Cuba; cling to the letter and the spirit of your noble proclamation to the world. Not all the wealth of all the islands of all the seas could recompense you for the loss of honor; and your honor is gone unless you right the wrong done the Cubans, and the still greater wrong done yourselves, and retire to the pitying embrace of charitable obscurity the men who are working this monster iniquity.

As an incident in the war with Spain our fleet destroyed a Spanish fleet in the harbor of Manila, in the Philippine Islands. Later, we entered upon operations for the capture of the city of Manila, and the destruction of the Spanish power in those islands. We found willing and efficient allies in this warfare in the Filipino forces, under the command of Aguinaldo. Success crowned the united efforts of our army and their army, the Spanish flag came down from the walls of Manila, nevermore to be raised, and the glorious stars and stripes and the Filipino flag waved in triumph. The land was redeemed, as then it was thought, from the blight, the curse, the measureless wrong of alien rule, imposed and maintained by force.

Commissioners met in the city of Paris to negotiate a treaty of peace, but there was no room in the council chamber for any representative of Filipino land. One imbued with the principles of free government and familiar with the noble declaration of our independence from Great Britain might take it for granted that we would look out for the Filipino, our friend and ally. And it is evident that we did look out for him—as our prey. For many weary, bloody months hundreds of millions of dollars of our treasure have been spent, and thousands of our young men have been sacrificed, in the tyrant attempt to impose our rule upon the Filipinos against their will, with fire and sword.

Whatever of law has attended our march and marked our slaughter and devastation has been the unrestrained will of the President. Hitherto a subservient Congress sat with folded hands while the work of the empire progressed or retrogressed under the untrammeled sway of the President. Now "Congress is to share the responsibility of the Executive." Thank God, it is not in the power of all the minions of the empire to force upon the minority in this House any sharing of that awful responsibility! We are powerless to prevent the action which you, in doing the bidding of your masters, are about to take, just as we were powerless to prevent these amendments from coming into the House upon this appropriation bill, with the days of this Congress almost numbered. If henceforth, until even you shall sicken of the slaughter and the waste, or until the American people shall assert themselves, and as the first and indispensable stroke for the recovery of their honor, which you turn into dishonor, and the protection of their free institutions, which you devote to the deeds of despotism, hurl you from power, imperialism in the Philippines is to have Congressional sanction, none of the infamy can attach to the minority, whom your denial of free speech renders voiceless now in this Chamber.

The Spaniards had but a poor foothold in the Philippines when Dewey sailed into Manila Bay. Outside of the few towns garrisoned by them, the power of the Filipino, even then, was omnipotent. When Spanish dominion was terminated by the triumph of the joint forces of the Americans and the Filipinos, Aguinaldo completed the structure of the temporary government which, with our concurrence and approval, he had proclaimed promptly upon his return from exile, whence he had been summoned by Dewey to our aid; and his followers were armed and equipped in part by Dewey for the work which he and they gladly undertook and efficiently performed for us and themselves and their countrymen. This Aguinaldo government, even in embryo, was adapted to the wants of the Filipinos, who gave cheerful allegiance to it. Aguinaldo builded his government upon our model, and we have builded our Government in the Philippines upon the Spanish model.

Under Aguinaldo's rule peace and contentment prevailed generally among the Filipinos; and there is little room for doubt that if we had not shot the Aguinaldo government to pieces, it, a good government for the Filipinos, would now be protecting them and guarding efficiently all the rights of foreign subjects domiciled in the islands. Instead of that we have carried desolation to our late allies—death to many, misery to more, vice and drunkenness to a multitude, and despair and desperation to all. As I have already stated, this was done as the President willed and as his irresponsible emissaries executed. Congress being negatively responsible. Now Congress, with the minority gagged, registers the decrees of imperialism and strives in indecent haste to make more pretentious the absolute reign which before it tolerated.

Whatever of woes shall come, whatever of fresh disgrace shall attend, however deep our degradation may be before conscience resumes its wonted sway, whatever penalty Providence shall impose upon our nation for being Spanish instead of American in its administration, however severely our own governmental fabric shall be wrenched, however measureless may be the wrongs which we are perpetrating, however long greed may shove patriotism aside, however long a dollar may seem larger than a man, a franchise greater than a myriad of human lives, temporary loot more valuable than a multitude of immortal souls—whatever may come, we of the minority in this House, rendered powerless here now, will stand in the brighter day behind the impregnable walls of the Constitution, unconquered and unconquerable, and with no stain of this dishonor upon us, with no stench of this perfidy about us. You silence us now, but we shall yet be heard when you will be silent, not because of the denial of free speech, but because you shall be busy praying in voiceless penitence for the rocks and the mountains to fall upon you and hide from the wrath of the aroused American spirit of justice, equality, and rational liberty, which to-day you crucify.

Mr. LENTZ. I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. RYAN].

[Mr. RYAN of New York addressed the House. See Appendix].

Mr. LENTZ. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH].

[Mr. SHAFROTH addressed the House. See Appendix].

Mr. LENTZ. Mr. Speaker, to be or not to be free is the question Cuba is asking in the beginning of 1901, just as she was asking this question about three years ago. But when she was asking it in 1898 she had in mind the question of freedom from a hereditary despot. To-day asking it she has in mind the tyranny of a majority, and that majority having been secured by bribery and falsehood and other means of corrupting the voters of the land. To lie or not to lie is the question before the American people. We told Cuba and the world that our war against Spain was neither for conquest nor for the acquisition of territory, but purely in the cause of liberty and humanity. In that declaration we gave the Filipinos, just as much as the Cubans, a bond that we would use our strong arm to secure for them the right of self-government. Why is it that those who are now fattening in the land because this Government keeps its bond to pay principal and interest on Government debts express no concern or solicitude whatever that this solemn bond should be kept, as we pledged ourselves to do on that night when we declared that the people of Cuba "are, and of right ought to be, free."

I am not alone concerned about the sacrifice of our own character and reputation in this betrayal of the people of Cuba and of the Philippine Islands, but I am much more concerned about the gradual dry rot that is taking place in the American conscience. We could afford to be guilty of sacrificing unnecessarily some of our young manhood, but we can not afford to violate practically all of the ten commandments in this brutal and murderous warfare which we are making in the Philippine Islands. The lack of moral growth and the absolute hardening and degrading of American conscience that is manifest to-day is the greatest menace to American liberty and American progress that this Republic has ever seen. The encroachment made upon liberty by Nicholas Biddle and his greedy associates in the days of Andrew Jackson and the threatened destruction of the Union by the slavocracy in the day of Abraham Lincoln are diseases of minor importance when compared with the tyranny and criminal aggression now manifest in every act and every word of those who favor the present policy of the Federal Government.

For some time I have been accustomed to liken our wickedness in the Philippine Islands to that of England in South Africa. But, speaking of the matter a day or two ago to a gentleman and his wife, placing the conduct of the two nations on the same level, the good wife of my friend interrupted me to suggest that the conduct of England in South Africa was far more honorable than our conduct in the Philippine Islands. She suggested, and I think with entire justification, that England had the advantage over us, in that she is honest enough and frank enough to admit to the world that she is making war to the death on the two South African Republics not because of any purpose of benevolent assimilation, but purely and simply because it is her habit to go about the face of the earth seeking whom she may devour. England admits that her purpose is to secure possession of the rich gold fields and other property which the Boers, in their search for liberty, had discovered.

We, the good wife argued, are making war on the Filipinos for the benefit of a few of our speculators and governmental jobbers, and have our highest officials in the National Government prating to the world that we are doing it for the purpose of Christian civilization and for benevolent assimilation. The difference between the policy of England and the policy of America is as wide as the difference between frankness and hypocrisy. In that conversation I had commented on the shamefulness and the barbarous brutality manifested by Great Britain in the last battle in which the lion-hearted Cronje participated. I had made comparison between what took place in Cronje's last fight and some of the pictures of Rome in her pagan days, when she threw the Christians, men and women, into the arena to be torn and fed upon by lions, tigers, dogs, and other brutes. In that conversation I read and here submit a description given in the Washington Evening Times of the 27th of February, 1900, which is as follows:

Cronje surrendered, saying he wished to save the women and children. Throughout that week the grim old African lion Cronje, with 3,000 men, held out against the persistent assaults of Roberts's 45,000 men. The Boer laager was on fire most of the time after the third day's battle from British lyddite shells. Shot and shell were poured into the laager by the British, and the condition of affairs in the camp of the Boers was something frightful. They had run entirely out of food, their ammunition had given out, and the laager was strewn with the corpses of the dead, lying in the broad light, unburied and festering. The wounded were in an awful plight. The hospital corps was insufficient to attend to them, and they lay about the laager in heaps, some crying piteously, others shrieking in their pain, many silently enduring their agonies.

Is it possible for anyone claiming membership in any one of the Christian churches to gaze on this picture of fifteen Britons murdering one Boer, and say that this picture is not far more disgraceful and savage than anything ever perpetrated upon any human being by even the vilest or most brutal of the pagan Romans? Is there not much in this to justify Buckle's deduction when he says that civilization had developed intellectuality, but not morality; and if it be true, as my friend argued, that England has the advantage over America in being frank instead of hypocritical, then what language can be found strong enough to describe the crimes which we are perpetrating in the Philippine Islands? Evidences are coming thick and fast that we are perpetrating outrages in many forms against the Filipinos, and that in those outrages we are violating individually and collectively the commandments, "Thou shalt not steal; thou shalt not kill; thou shalt not lie; thou shalt not commit adultery." What a legacy will be coming home to America in the spiritual and physical wrecks that are to return to us as American soldiers. Comment need not be enlarged on this subject. I insert here a statement from the issue of date February 23, 1901, of the Bulletin of the American Iron and Steel Association, of Philadelphia, which is as follows:

Three soldiers from Johnstown and vicinity, who enlisted a year or so ago to go to the Philippines, are back at their homes, having been returned as invalids on the transport Sherman. They were not much more than shadows when they arrived. All declare the climate in which they served to be something horrible, and that white men can not serve in it over a few months and keep their health. The Sherman carried 800 souls, of which 297 were invalid volunteers, including 16 insane.

John W. Kissel, of Edenville, Franklin County, Pa., who was a member of the Thirty-ninth Regiment United States Infantry, in the Philippines, has returned to his home on account of bad health. On the steamer in which he returned to this country there were 400 soldiers, the majority of them being ill, and 200 bodies of soldiers who had died on the islands or on the way over. Kissel says he has had enough of war in the Philippines.

A dispatch from Washington, dated February 18, says: General MacArthur has informed the War Department that the transports Hancock and Kilpatrick left Manila yesterday for the United States. The Hancock has the Thirtieth Volunteer Infantry on board, and the Kilpatrick carries 400 sick soldiers.

It may assist some to understand the real conditions in the Philippine Islands if I quote from a letter recently received from a soldier who has been there long enough to speak with authority and whose language is sufficient evidence of his intelligence.

One extract is as follows:

I wish I could tell you in person my impressions of this country and its people. You would be astonished and pleasantly surprised at some things. The people are constantly misrepresented by men who have their own interests to subserve and by men also who can see no good in anyone here.

In the communities below the mountain sections the people are law-abiding, industrious, temperate, moral, and religious. It is true they are in arms, shooting and being shot, but when one considers they are fighting us as invaders and despoilers one can not blame them for continuing to hope for what is theirs, or should be, if justice prevailed.

Concerning their aptitude for self-government, no sane man will doubt it, for they are, in fact, governing themselves at the present time, except in the untutored savage portion of the archipelago. The least government is the best for this people. To change or force a change to the American plan would be folly. These people are satisfied to be let alone and to live as they have been living. Give them proof that we are not here to despoil them, and peace is assured.

The morality of the people has suffered through the soldiers. The soldiers look upon the women as common property. Even some of the officers appropriate women to their lust; yet the people stand it, for they fear to offend by complaining. The Americans have brought the drink habit to these islands. They have promoted immorality, and their conduct has brought shame to many, but they say, "That's the way with the invaders of every country," and there is no recourse for those who come under their control. The commission is the whole thing in Manila. Everything is done in the name of the President of the United States. Great is the President! Great sums of money are spent here. Some day great scandals will grow out of the whole business; it is inevitable.

What American can read such a letter as this, bearing such evidence of fairness and keen observation, without feeling that Hannaism and McKinleyism in the Philippines are blood cousins to Weylerism in Cuba?

What American can read this and feel like voting for hundreds of millions of the people's money to be expended in criminal aggression and murder in the Philippines?

Less than a year ago I warned the country that when you cut down the military appropriation from $128,000,000 to $112,000,000 it was done to deceive the taxpayers. I then asserted that $128,000,000 would not cover the war expenditures. A few days ago, when we passed the deficiency bill, after tedious interrogatories I succeeded in forcing the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to admit that it was necessary to make an additional deficiency appropriation of $21,000,000, which, added to the $112,000,000, makes the appropriation for this fiscal year ending July 1, 1901, $133,000,000, or, in round figures, $110,000,000 more than was appropriated for war purposes four years ago. In other words, we have entered upon a policy which in one Department alone will require more than $100,000,000 of additional expenditure from year to year for many years to come, to say nothing of the additional expenditures of scores of millions that will be required in the naval establishment.

It would have been far better could we within this Congress just closing have spent our time discussing and developing the post-check system, which would have facilitated and simplified the sending of money by mail—an urgent necessity, as every business man well knows. But we have been so extremely mad with this business of taking on the title of "world power" that we have gone abroad minding everybody's business and neglecting our own. I introduced in the House the post-check bill, and Senator McMillan introduced it in the Senate, which was a measure indorsed by the business men throughout the country and indorsed by the leading newspapers throughout the country, yet we could not get for it even a moment's consideration. Many other bills have been pigeonholed and our homes and our families have been neglected while we have gone to the other side of the earth imitating the monarchs of Europe, and with them pretending that in some way we have received a divine commission to attend to the business of governing the other nationalities of the earth.

While our "plain duty" to the Filipinos should insure our granting them self-government, our duty to ourselves would still more strongly point to that course. It is almost unnecessary to state that the Philippine Islands can never be of any material benefit to the masses of the American people, however much the lands and franchises may enrich a few exploiters. On the other hand, we have spent, and are spending, and must perforce continue to spend, hundreds of millions of dollars to guard them from within and without. It will be remembered that they are surrounded by nations which may at any moment become hostile to us, and without an immense navy and enormous incessant expense we are forever to be at the mercy of any combination of these nations.

To-day we are humiliatingly subservient to Great Britain on that account. Already we have permitted her to take our territory and our citizens in Alaska. She harbors the Filipino junta at Hongkong, openly plotting against us, and we dare not say her nay. She built the Canadian Pacific Railroad as a military base immediately on our northern borders, and now she is about to build a parallel line in case the Canadian Pacific should at any time be blocked. She has sent Sir Edward Warren, her greatest military engineer, to Canada, and has arbitrarily seized the island of Anticosti for the purpose of fortifying it. She is delaying the building of the Nicaraguan Canal to keep closed that means of connection with the Pacific Ocean, and is attempting, with our acquiescence and virtual assistance, the subjugation of two sister republics in South Africa. If she succeeds, she will have practical control of South Africa. She controls the Straits of Gibraltar and Suez Canal, and we are thus completely at her mercy for peaceable transit to the Philippines by that route. When we were confined to our own illimitable and inexhaustible continent, the surface of which has only been scratched, and the resources of which have barely been touched, we were masters of the situation. We were truly a "world power."

To-day we are a world mendicant, seeking whom we may placate. We have been befogged, befooled, and betrayed by England. It was said, "Beware of the Greeks, even when bearing gifts." The same is true of England. With the honeyed phrases about the Anglo-Saxon race, and blood being thicker than water, she has cajoled a few pin-head politicians and sycophantic plutocrats in the United States. She told the Paris peace commission that 5,000 soldiers would be sufficient to hold the Philippines. Instead, it takes 75,000. Who pays? We. Who is weakened? We.

But her prime object in all the diplomacy by which she has fooled us so completely is to take our minds off Canada. She knew that the war fever had only been whetted by our brush with Spain, and she succeeded only too well in drawing a herring across the track leading to our northern neighbor.

Hence the betrayal of our ideals. In our present humiliating predicament we find hostile territory in Cuba and the Philippines, the South American Republics rendered uneasy and suspicious, perfidious Albion surrounding us on every side and constantly strengthening her position, the faith of millions of our own people in our Constitution shaken. Our condition is truly lamentable. Had we granted Cuba and the Philippines self-government asking only such naval and coaling stations as we deemed necessary, and which would have been freely given, we would not only have been a world power, but a world master. We could have insisted on Canada being given autonomy or annexed to the United States. The spirit of the Monroe doctrine has been violated by her sending troops to fight in South Africa, by her territory being made a recruiting ground for Great Britain.

Suppose we are in difficulty with England, as is inevitable, for the present "era of good feeling" will only last till England succeeds in South Africa. Would not England import troops from South Africa and Australia to fight us? Would the Dutch of South Africa not be justified in coming over to avenge themselves for the mules and horses, aye, and men, we have sent to help to destroy them forever? Would the Irish and the Germans who helped to save the Union which England sought to destroy be so willing to fight the English legions as they were before this unwarrantable and unwise understanding with the infamous and mendacious Chamberlain? What we should have done, if we desired expansion, was to take Canada. She has illimitable acres of public lands. She has millions of square miles of forests. We need the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence as an outlet to the Atlantic as much as we needed the Mississippi as an outlet to the Gulf of Mexico. Jefferson, that man of peace, was willing, if necessary, to go to war to secure Louisiana and Florida. The great Seward took Alaska as an entering wedge to the annexation of Canada.

We need her to complete our continental Republic. Her people are congenial, and the vast majority of them willing for the change. It would benefit them even more than it would us. We could, without danger of interference, develop our domestic institutions on national lines, as the people of New Zealand and Australia are doing. Large armies and huge navies, with ever recurring and ever increasing cost, would be unnecessary. The best and bravest of our sons would not be condemned to death or a living hell by reason of residence in torrid climes. Our free institutions would not be turned into autocratic despotism. In the play of Quo Vadis, the courtly and learned Petronius is told by the miserable Cæsar that he has "lived too long." McKinley, in effect, says the same thing day after day when he removes men from office. Everything depends on the whim of one man, and arbitrary power will make even a good man bad and a bad man a demon. Our institutions need development in accordance with principles of justice and equity. Instead of concentration of power, we need a balance which conserves the principles of individual liberty without weakening the state. To do this, the power of patronage must be taken away from the President as far as possible.

In this way the popularity of Executive action can be effectually passed upon at least every two years. As a matter of fact, a state of anarchy has existed in the United States and Territories for the past four years. No one knows what may be done next. The programme foreshadowed one week is departed from the next. Even judicial decisions are reversed to order. Murder is constantly on the increase in the United States, and wholesale murder, under the guise of war, is chronic in the Philippines, while bribery and corruption are wholesale at home and abroad. To compensate for this there is a plethora of wealth in the hands of a few, and the flittering baubles of empire held up to dazzle the unthinking masses.

The statesmanlike solution, if we are to go into the expansion business, is to annex Canada, and to do it now while England is in difficulty. Turn the Philippines over to her own people, who have shown themselves amply able to take care of themselves, and protect them till they are on sure foundation, securing coaling and naval stations. In this way we will have the friendship of a nation of ten millions in the Orient, guarding the security of our interests in that quarter; we will have disarmed the suspicions of our southern neighbors; we will have our great Republic strengthened from the Arctic to the Equator, impregnable in its solidarity, and probably peacefully acquiring the country to the Isthmus of Panama at no distant day, and thus we can go on and on in paths of peace, which is vouchsafed to men of good will on earth.

We have undertaken to legislate for the Filipinos, ignoring their own desires, and giving no heed to their aspirations, but for my part I believe it is only fair and just that they should be allowed to speak, even through the columns of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I therefore offer as a part of my remarks the address of Apacible, one of their representatives, as contained in his appeal to the American people, dated June, 1900.

To the American people:

God Almighty knows how unjust is the war which the imperial arms have provoked and are maintaining against our unfortunate country. If the honest American patriots could understand the sad truth of this declaration, we are sure they would, without the least delay, stop this unspeakable horror. And that they may have a just understanding of it, we entreat them to hear our voice, to meditate on our exhortations, and to weigh our statements against the misrepresentations under which imperialism seeks to conceal its designs. Turn not away from our prayer, Americans, but listen and give judgment according to reason and conscience.

We, the Filipinos, are a civilized, progressive, and peace-loving people. Many impartial writers and speakers have testified that we are advanced in civilization, that we are capable of improvement, that many of our people for two centuries have enjoyed the advantages of university education, that the number of illiterates among our people is small, and that as artists, scientists, magistrates, generals, and dignitaries of the church, the sons of the Philippines, have distinguished themselves greatly and have achieved many positions of eminence, especially so in Spain. That we are progressive was well shown by the conduct of our whole country when, at the time of the capitulation of the city of Manila, the inhabitants of our islands, supposing themselves to have entered upon a career of national independence that was to be assured to them by the United States Government, instead of abandoning themselves to any revolutionary fever and excess, established with careful thought and scrupulous regard for justice a prudent government which respected all rights created legitimately; they convoked a congress whose legislative work has not been justly criticised by anybody; they reorganized the administrative machinery which had been disturbed by recent struggles; telegraphs, railroads, and means of communication began to work regularly; we had adopted the electric light in some of our towns; and we had established a new university, four high and several primary schools. In brief, the new nation had entered upon a path of progress which already promised a bright future. All this progress the imperialists have disturbed; all this progress have they destroyed.

For proof that we love peace, we ask you to remember the story of our relations with Spain. For three hundred years our country has been at the mercy of Spanish domination; we were the subjects of that monarchy; the Government of that nation denied us any voice in the enactment of remedial legislation; they denied us representation in the Spanish Cortes. They allowed themselves to be directed by the most reactionary elements, and took counsel chiefly from the friars who sought to estrange the mother country from us and to deny us the blessings of liberty, so that they might the more completely exploit us at their will. They denied us freedom of the press, restricted the right of peaceable assembly, and violated the security of our homes. They created the so-called administrative process (expedientes gubernativos); so that often without hearing and without trial the most peaceable citizen was snatched from his house and condemned to the miseries of banishment. In brief, the Spanish Government, whose despotic cruelty American imperialism now imitates, and in some respects surpasses, denied to us many of the liberties which you were already enjoying when, under pretext of oppression, you revolted against British domination.

Notwithstanding these great wrongs, we submitted quietly, confining our protests to earnest prayers for reparation, such was our love of peace. Only when we became convinced that our requests were absolutely disregarded, that the most worthy officials were removed from office, even those of eminent character, when it was made known that they had manifested even a slight sympathy for us; when we had lost every hope of peaceful remedy and all faith in the oft-promised liberal reforms; only then it was that the armed protest—the Philippine revolution, the most justifiable of all revolutions—began. It was an uprising void of every feeling of hatred and revenge toward Spain, the country that we respected and loved; it was a revolt against her bad government, just as we now revolt, not against America, whose power and greatness we recognize, and whose justice we still hope to see proven, but against her unworthy rulers. Those who tell you that we are an adventurous and seditious people, ready to go to war at the least pretext, basely deceive you in this as in many other calumnies invented by the imperialists.

If yesterday we fought against Spain, and to-day are resisting your powerful arms, even though sure to be vanquished, it is because we have been forced as a last resort to an unequal and bloody war for the attainment of an aspiring people's legitimate ambitions. Thus we can repeat proudly and with the firmness of one who carries the truth on his lips and in his heart that if our character and culture entitle us to independence, still more do we show ourselves entitled to it by the high motives which have always inspired our resistance. Why, then, do you deny us liberty? Why, forgetful of all your history and the noble precepts of your illustrious forefathers, are you fighting against the cause of independence, of progress, and of justice, which is our cause? What has come to pass between you and us that should cause you to permit this incredible and monstrous war to be waged against us?

When you declared war against Spain you proclaimed to the world at large that you had appealed to arms only in order to free oppressed peoples; and when your flag waved before the coasts of the Philippines on powerful vessels which easily destroyed the weak fleet of the enemy it was an emblem of liberty then. Your diplomatic representatives invited the most famous of our Filipino leaders, Hon. E. Aguinaldo, to an offensive alliance against those whom you represented to us as a "common enemy," in order that by vanquishing them we might achieve our aspirations for peace and happiness. It was then that your idol, Admiral Dewey, and your distinguished generals, Merritt and Anderson, treated us as friends and allies, saying sincerely that we were fit for independence, even more so, as the Admiral asserted, than the Cubans to whom you have with equity promised to give it. It was then that the flag of the new Philippine nation waved in the shadow of the Stars and Stripes at Manila Bay. It was then that the independence of the Philippines was proclaimed at Cavite, within range of your cannons, without any opposition, and in almost the very words of your immortal Declaration.

It was then that your soldiers hailed the new nation, while ours were cheering the American liberators. It was then, to save your cause, since you had assured us that your cause embraced our freedom, that the Filipinos gave their blood for you in your fight against a valiant and obstinate enemy and at the same time placed in your reach all available resources and aid. You were at that moment almost at the point of breaking into hostilities with another nation which had manifested her sympathy for Spain by attempting to bar at Subig Bay the course of what you yourselves had called "an army of liberation." That was the hour of the beautiful fiction; now we seem to have come to the time of the bitter reality, the cruel disenchantment. Then we were received and treated as allies; now we are scourged back into the mountains and denied every right except that of fighting the very flag in whose beneficent shadow we had expected to find freedom and happiness.

From the outset our country took sides with the United States in the war with Spain, and we marched proudly with your sons as comrades in arms, as soldiers in the same cause, to victory. At all times during that war, and for months afterwards, the civil, military, and naval authorities of the United States caused us to hope for independence. Papers and pamphlets advocating this ideal were published in Manila under the protection of the United States authorities; with their consent the revolutionary army had been conquering the Spanish positions and establishing in them provincial governments dependent on that of the Philippine republic. America was then a great Republic releasing the Cubans and the Filipinos from the iron grasp of an imperial government and conducting them to emancipation and freedom; and our people hailed the Stars and Stripes as an emblem of freedom, as the token of liberty for the living and a badge of honor for the patriots dead.

With renewed energy, with proud alacrity, with fearless determination they pressed on, side by side with your noble sons to the end. What reward did we get? Did the expected freedom come to us? No! As a requital for our sacrifices and as a reward for our loyalty, subjugation is offered to us instead of freedom. We may have a colonial government of the United States, administered in a foreign language, instead of the colonial government of Spain, which, at least, was administered in a language already known to us and which we have made ours. We are to have a colonial government which will deny us the citizenship of its nation. In spite of their imperialistic tendencies, the Spanish Government never went so far as to deny us citizenship.

When, on a day of sad recollections, we declined to accept this shame, when we protested against this iniquitous ingratitude, then the guns of the United States were turned upon us; we were denounced as traitors and rebels; you destroyed the homes to which you had been welcomed as honored guests, killing thousands of those who had been your allies, mutilating our old men, our women, and our children, and watering with blood and strewing with ruins the beautiful soil of our Fatherland. Behold, therefore, Americans, and consider not only our right to independence, but what your conduct has been, and what your plain duty is toward us in good faith, and then judge, in view of these antecedents, whether the crusade of extermination which the imperialists have inaugurated against our unfortunate country is a worthy one, whether it is just, and whether it is in the least degree excusable.

These and only these are the true terms of the simple problem. Do not give ear to the specious arguments of those who, in order to excuse a political crime and in order to disguise their greed and covetousness, tell you the contrary by means of assertions whose falseness is as great as the bad faith of their authors. They tell you that we are incapable of self-government, as if the accomplished facts had not proven the contrary, and as if, also, all the Americans who had calmly judged us previous to this war of conquest had not unanimously asserted otherwise. They assure you that there exist deep divisions among us and that the withdrawal of the American troops would create anarchy and misgovernment in our country, as if it were not evident that the most complete order prevailed there until the imperial troops had, with their unjust war, brought confusion.

They tell you that the government of the Philippine republic had never been recognized by the whole country. This is a manifest falsehood, because it had been recognized even by the Mohammedans in the south whom the imperialists, their friends and allies, boast so much of having reduced to submission, and by the mountain races of Luzon, who always refused to recognize the Spanish Government, and who will do the same to the American Government. The Philippine government is the only one which can conciliate and redeem them, for in that government only have they confidence—a success for civilization which imperialism could never accomplish. They assert that the existence of these mountain races makes the Philippine independence impossible. This is an absurd assertion, which would be equal to maintaining that you are incapable of self-government simply because there are Indians on your soil in a proportion almost equal to that which the Igorrotes, Aetas, etc., represent among us.

They mislead you with the idea that because the Tagalogs, the Visayos, the Ilocanos, etc., speak different dialects, it is not feasible for us to constitute a national unity. This is an objection of gross ignorance which forgets that in the most civilized European nations people speak different dialects and even different languages, as in the highly civilized Switzerland. It is also a sophistical objection which overlooks the fact that in all the provinces of the Archipelago, in the Tagal, the Visayan, and the Ilocos provinces, etc., whose inhabitants are of the same ethnical condition and culture, the only language officially spoken is the Spanish. They allege that the majority of the Filipinos are in favor of the American sovereignty, and that they would rather be colonials of America than be independent. This is a base falsehood, which belies the fact of the thousands of soldiers which the imperialists have had to put on the islands, and of the régime of military tyranny more terrible than was ever known before by us, of which they were compelled to avail themselves, imprisoning thousands of honest people, suppressing serious newspapers, and other endless abuses against all law, in order to smother the cries for independence.

They also tell you that we were the aggressors in the present war, as if it were not evident how much we have done in order to prevent the outbreak of hostilities with which we were daily provoked, and how many times we proposed a cessation in the fight in order that we may come to an agreement, a demand which your rulers have always refused to grant us. They further tell you that our country has great and unexploited riches, and that with it America would gain. This is a new deception of imperialism, because such treasures, even the mines, have already been carefully exploited by Spaniards, Germans, and English, and they never obtained the marvelous success of which imperialism now dreams; on the contrary, the record of these exploitations shows more failure than success.

They go on to say that there are in our country rich lands to distribute and cultivate. To this the deceived American immigrants who, believing such promises, shall go and succumb to the rigors of the climate, so fatal to their race, will answer, accursing those who made them leave their rich and habitable land. That the higher interests of Christianity demand the retention of the islands is another deception, because if our subjugation becomes a reality, we could never forget how much religious fanaticisms have had to do with it, and our present Christian belief would stagger, and perhaps we would look with distrust on the creeds of our subjugators. Finally, the imperialists say that God trusted in their hands the government of the future destinies of the Philippines, as if the Supreme Spirit could have been incarnated in the gold of the $20,000,000 which were paid to Spain and in the steel of the quick-firing guns which are mutilating the unfortunate Filipinos.

No, do not listen to the false assertions of the imperialists; listen only to the voice of reason and justice. Heed not the suggestions of those who pretend to excite your national self-love and your innermost feelings in order that you may convert yourselves into docile instruments of their cupidity and ambition, of their immoralities and scandals, which are peculiar to every colonial administration, and which have already dishonored the, until now, immaculate name of America and her foreign policy. Do not be deceived by false charges nor allured by false promises. Give judgment without hypocrisy and without self-deception. On the one hand, your honor and your glorious traditions are calling upon you to accord to us our rightful and well-earned independence. On the other hand, the distorted dreams of avarice, the dark conspiracies of greed and remorseless ambition, nurses of imperialism throughout all time, these counsel you to uphold the war of subjugation which your rulers but not your people have authorized and forced upon us.

Choose, then, sons of Washington, of Jefferson, and of Lincoln, between these two alternatives: Freedom for the hapless peoples who are in your power, and thus, under God's just laws, the recompense to you of a larger freedom for yourselves, or tyranny and destruction for your struggling but helpless victims, whose wrongs the Great Ruler of all will in due time avenge by the mournful destruction of your own liberties. Shall it be generosity or colonial greed? Shall it be right or wrong? Give ear to your own conscience and we are sure you will incline yourselves toward mercy, toward justice, and toward the only honorable course that will restore peace to our ransacked homes and to our devastated fields, stopping at once and forever this horrible war, which has already cost so much in treasure and blood, and which, if not abandoned, will yet cost much more, because our resolution is fixed: Liberty or death; independence or annihilation.

Why do the imperialists wish to subjugate us? What do they intend to do with us? Do they expect us to surrender, to yield our inalienable rights, our homes, our properties, our lives, our future destinies to the absolute control of the United States? What would you do with our 9,000,000 of people? Would you permit us to take part in your elections? Would you concede to us the privilege of sending Senators and Representatives to your Congress? Would you allow us to erect one or more Federal States? Or, would you tax us without representation? Would you change your tariff laws so as to admit our products free of duty and in competition with the products of your own soil? And thus would you allow the American trust to utilize our cheap labor in the manufacture of goods that would compete with the products of your own factories? Would you permit the trusts to bottle up our people to subserve their own ends, depriving us even of those liberties which you are enjoying?

Would you admit our artisans, mechanics, laborers, and servants to take employment in your country on an equal footing with American citizens, Indians, and negroes? Would you allow us to prohibit Chinese immigration? Would you permit us to retain our own language and not force us to adopt yours? Would you let us elect our own local officers? Would you allow us to share your offices, your honors, and your privileges? And, as for the saloons (which were almost unknown in Manila before), would you allow them to go on multiplying at the appalling rate at which their number has increased there within the past two years? Would you allow the lands in the Philippines to remain at all untaxed, as formerly, simply because some religious corporations have acquired enormous and fraudulent properties in them?

Would you remove your American soldiery and permit us to create an army of our own? Or, if you were determined to maintain a powerful army and fleet in order to protect your newly acquired "property" from foreign ambitions, and from our natural and perpetual anxieties for liberty, would you do this solely at your own expense, because the revenues of a poor country like ours could not do so? You who so ardently protest against the destruction by England of two small republics which challenged her to war, would you continue to remain indifferent whilst your rulers are destroying a sister republic which is much more helpless than those of South Africa, and which, far from declaring war against you, was your obliging friend, your successful ally? What would you do with the Philippines and the Filipinos if you refused to allow them to become a new American State, if you refused to allow them to enjoy your citizenship?

Imperialism knows not how to answer these questions. It is inspired only by greed, by a vile thirst for gold, and by the lust of spoliation. But, ever misled by its ruthless impulses, it can not determine which would be its better plan, which should be its settled purpose for the future, or how far it may safely indulge its insatiable appetites, for the dilemma is inexorable. Either the retention of the Philippine Islands, if it is realized with a noble purpose, will result in great harm to your industries and your commerce or it will become a system of merciless and shameful colonial spoliation, which will forever blot out the honor of whatever there is that is lofty and noble in your history. Can it be possible, sons of America, that you will allow us to become subjects or slaves? Should this happen, how will you reconcile it with the wise and noble principles set forth in your Declaration of Independence?

"That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

Will you transform these beautiful and honorable sentiments into specious deceits, fraudulent promises, and high-sounding but hollow words? No! You can not belie your whole history. You can not tolerate the violation which imperialism is so evidently working against your most venerable and fundamental principles. Until Congress succeeds in redressing the illegal aggressions of which we are the victims, and shall suppress these violations of reason, of solemn contracts, and of the elementary conceptions of gratitude we shall rely upon and appeal to the high sense of justice which has hitherto so honorably characterized the free American conscience. We do not believe you will allow us to be enslaved; it would be a dishonor to yourselves.

Influence, then, as soon as possible your legislators and rulers to give us self-government, which by right belongs to us, and peace will be restored immediately, to your benefit and ours, ending the now incessant and fruitless bloodshed entailed upon us by the present war.

We are ready to make peace, and in order to facilitate this end we propose—

First. That we will pay back to the United States the $20,000,000 paid by them to Spain.

Second. That the most amicable and perpetual commercial relations shall exist between us for our mutual benefit and for the greater progress of our country.

Third. That we will grant to the United States whatever space is reasonably necessary for coaling stations outside of our established cities.

Fourth. That we will not allow monopolies of any kind in the islands, and that we will give to your citizens all the guaranties and protection accorded to our own citizens for the security of life and property.

Fifth. That we are ready to entertain whatever terms you may desire for yourselves, so long as they do not infringe upon our individual and political liberties, or upon the integrity of our nationality.

After these offers it only remains that you, the free citizens of America, for the glory of your name throughout the world and for the honor of your flag, shall do justice. Thus shall the hands of your noble sons be no longer stained with innocent blood. Thus shall it not be said that the vile inspirations of greed have banished from your hearts those lofty traditions of liberty and philanthropy which you have inherited from your honest forefathers.

Toronto, June, 1900.

For the Central Filipino Committee.

G. APACIBLE.

In addition, so much has been loosely written about the desires of the Filipinos by Americans who have no true knowledge of what such desires may be that I add to my remarks the letter of an accomplished Filipino, Sixto Lopez, to Major-General Wheeler, dated June 30, 1900:

41 WOBURN PLACE, LONDON, W. C., June 30, 1900.

DEAR SIR: Having been favored with a copy of your circular letter requesting a statement of opinion on certain matters relating to the Philippines, I am desirous of furnishing replies to the several questions propounded by you.

Your circular is addressed to "eminentes Filipinos." I do not know exactly to what class you refer by that superscription, but I beg to assure you that I do not profess to be in any sense "eminent." Nevertheless, I am confident that the views herein expressed are those held by an overwhelming majority of my countrymen.

"It will be of great interest," you declare, "to those who may have to legislate on Philippine affairs to know the opinions of eminent Filipinos." Allow me to cordially congratulate you on being the only eminent American, among those who desire to take our country by force, who has deemed it of any interest to know the desires and opinions of the Filipinos on vital questions. I gratefully acknowledge that there are many eminent Americans who have spoken and written in favor of not only our cause, but also the cause of human liberty. But among those whose policy embraces the forcible annexation of our country and who profess that that policy is dictated by motives of philanthropy you stand preeminent as being the only one who has ever dreamed that the Filipinos have opinions which might be worthy of even passing attention.

The following are the questions in your circular letter, to which replies are given:

Question I. "It is the opinion of many that the war between Americans and Filipinos and the consequent bloodshed might have been avoided. Be kind enough to say what was the cause of the conflict and bloodshed, and if it could have been avoided?"

Your question may for convenience be subdivided thus: What was the cause of the war? Could the war and bloodshed have been avoided? To the first of these questions the reply is, that not being in the Philippines at the time of the outbreak of hostilities I can not speak from personal contact or observation. But from abundant evidence which has come from our people and from official reports published in American papers I am convinced that the conflict, in so far as our general and soldiers were concerned, was a pure accident due to misinterpretation of the acts of American soldiers. As to the ulterior motives, if such existed, which induced the American soldiers to fire the first shot and to shed the first blood I here express no opinion. But I am firmly convinced that if the commander of the American forces had adopted the system pursued by the Philippine army, of simply arresting those who ignorantly or wittingly crossed the lines of the respective forces, the conflict would not have occurred.

Of far more importance is the question as to whether the war and bloodshed could have been avoided. It is also much more serious, because it involves the question of moral responsibility. Every drop of blood that has been spilled, every life that has been sacrificed, the sorrow in every home made desolate in both America and the Philippines, must be charged to the moral account of the side which is in the wrong. Our contention, therefore, is this: The Philippines were and are our country. "Forcible annexation," as your President has admirably expressed it, "would be criminal aggression. No legal quibble about "the right of conquest and purchase" will obscure the moral question or even serve as a lubricant to conscience.

No profession of "philanthropy" or "benevolent assassination or assimilation"—we will not quarrel about the word, the meaning is practically the same—will serve to shield your President from the charge which he has made against his own policy. Nor will it avail to offer insult to one's moral sense by claiming a legal title to sovereignty due to "cession" and "purchase" from Spain.

Spain never had a moral right to our country. Her alleged ownership rested solely on might and not on right. She never possessed even the tentative right which comes to the provider of beneficent rule.

This was recognized by the United States when it went to war on behalf of Spain's colonial possessions and demanded that Spanish sovereignty should cease. In addition to this, Spain did not possess sovereignty at the time of the so-called "cession." Her territories were in the hands of the Filipinos (with the exception of one city), who had established an independent government de facto and de jure. If Spain, then, had no moral and no legal ownership to the Philippines, who had? There is but one answer—the owners were and are the inhabitants, the Filipinos.

Who, then, is the aggressor in this war? Who is it that is endeavoring to seize and annex the Philippines over the heads of the natural owners, the inhabitants, and to purchase a doubtful legal title in the absence of a moral one? Who was it that fired the first shot and took the first life? Who is it declares that "all just powers of government are derived from the consent of the governed?" Who is it that now seeks to deny the application of that principle of human rights to the Filipinos? Who was it that sought and accepted our aid in the conflict with Spain and now denies that we have any right whatsoever to a voice in determining the fate of the Philippines? Whoever is chargeable with these acts, on him and on them must be laid the responsibility of the war and bloodshed.

If the United States administration had promised that the principle enunciated in the Declaration of Independence and quoted above would be made applicable to the Filipinos, there never would have been a shot fired, and if that promise were now made there would be no more war. That promise could have been made and can now be made. I am therefore of opinion that the war and bloodshed could have been, and can be, avoided.

Question II. "If the Americans had abandoned the islands, would Aguinaldo have been acceptable to all the tribes, or would some have opposed his government, causing revolutions and other conflicts?"

General Aguinaldo not only "would have been acceptable" but has been accepted by what you term the "tribes." Practically all the islands sent emissaries declaring their loyal support to Aguinaldo and his government. Even the Igorrotes, and the Moros of Central Mindanao, who never submitted to Spanish rule, have acclaimed our president and government, and the former have sent gold dust to Aguinaldo to assist in the prosecution of the present war. In addition to this, the provinces of the archipelago have elected representatives—in some cases by a unanimous vote—to our "Asamblea," or house of representatives. It is true that certain Filipinos within the sphere and under the domination of the American forces, have professed being favorable to American rule. Though I do not approve it, I can quite understand their attitude.

When the British troops entered Bloemfontein, many of the Free Staters professed being favorable to British supremacy. But whatever may be the rights or the wrongs of the Anglo-Boer dispute I am quite sure that those Free Staters would much prefer Boer supremacy. The Filipinos in and around Manila are in precisely the same position as are the Free Staters in and around Bloemfontein. Take your army from the Philippines and you will soon discover whether the Filipinos are in favor of American rule! It is also true that on payment of certain emoluments by America the Sultan of Sulu has agreed to submit to American rule.

I do not wish to say anything unkind about the Sultan, but I am of the opinion that he was not entirely a free-will agent in the matter, and that his submission does not necessarily mean the submission of the people over whom he exercises a somewhat doubtful sway. At the time of the American Revolution were there no colonists who professed being favorable to English rule? Your great liberty-loving country will hardly be proud of purchased loyalty. Much has been made of the supposed favor with which some Filipinos are said to regard the prospect of American rule in the Philippines. But as a matter of fact there is an overwhelming majority of our people in favor of Filipino rule. If you doubt the truth of this statement; if you still honestly believe that the Filipinos are in favor of American rule, let a plebiscite be taken on the question.

Let it be conducted fairly and free from any threat of the sword of either General MacArthur or General Aguinaldo. Let chosen representatives of both parties superintend the voting which should be by ballot. You will find yourselves outvoted by a hundred to one even in the city of Manila. I can not give you any formal pledge, but I firmly believe that Aguinaldo and all the Filipinos would be prepared to abide by the result of such a plebiscite. If your Administration will also agree to abide by the result, the Filipinos will bear half of the incidental expenses. On behalf of the Filipinos I challenge you to put your contentions to this test. One of the first principles of republicanism is that the will of the people, expressed through the ballot, shall be supreme.

Are the Filipinos—the "savages," as some of your illustrious colleagues have defined us to be—the pleaders for, and you the deniers of, the application of this principle?

To the second part of your question, as to whether there will be any opposition to Aguinaldo's government, the reply is that we have never been foolish enough to imagine that any government in this world would be free from opposition. Is there no opposition to President McKinley's government? Was there no opposition to President Lincoln's government? Do you fondly imagine that, if your Administration ever succeeds by force of arms in establishing a government in the Philippines, there will be no opposition to it?

Undoubtedly there will be opposition—healthy opposition—to any government established in our country. But the opposition will not be between the so-called "tribes." Your question implies that if there is opposition to Aguinaldo's government, there will also be revolutions and other conflicts. If our government ever became unjust or corrupt; if it refused to admit that its "just powers of government were derived solely from the consent of the governed;" if it sought to thrust its will upon an unwilling people, it would deserve to be, and would no doubt be, subject to revolution.

But even just and righteous governments are not always exempt from such dangers. Will any high-minded American declare that the government of President Lincoln was unjust or corrupt? Yet against it was directed the greatest revolution known in the history of the world. Your question also implies that if we ever had a civil war in our country the event would prove that we are incapable of self-government. What, then, did the civil war in America prove? Every country in the civilized world has had its revolutions and its civil wars. Revolution has been the means by which tyrants and dictators have been dethroned. America will never rule the Philippines without becoming a dictator.

Give us complete franchise and the power which justly belongs thereto, and we will declare ourselves independent of America. Deny us the franchise, and you will become a dictator. Under such dictatorship there will be not only "opposition," but also an absolute certainty, sooner or later, of "revolutions and other conflicts." If you sincerely desire the pacification of our country, leave us to ourselves. Protect us, if you will, from foreign aggression, and earn not only the gratitude of our people, but also the grandest title of which a nation can boast—the title of liberator and defender of those who struggle for national life.

Your question further implies that if Aguinaldo were removed from the sphere of operations the Filipinos would be left like sheep without a shepherd. We have every confidence in President Aguinaldo. He is the object of our highest esteem and admiration. We are prepared to follow him as long as he pursues, as he has hitherto pursued, a policy of righteousness and justice. But if, through unforeseen misfortune, he should be removed from our midst, we have other men able and willing to lead our people.

Though we gratefully recognize his splendid services to our people; though we believe that he is a born leader of men, our national existence no more depends upon Aguinaldo than does the existence of the American nation depend upon President McKinley. You have evidently taken the splendid unanimity which our people have shown toward their chosen leader as an evidence that there is only one who is capable of leading. If our people had been divided into factions or "tribes" with a multiplicity of leaders, perhaps we should have been credited with the possession of many capable men! Verbum sat sapienti.

Question III. "The American nation wishes to protect the Filipinos in so far as regards their personal liberty and property, by means of an honorable government and by other licit means of just government, and to guarantee their prosperity and happiness. Do you think that the Filipinos would accept and be content under such a benevolent American government?"

I never knew that it was possible to "guarantee" happiness! President McKinley, and also the Philippine commission in its proclamation at Manila, promised to provide us with a government, the like of which is possessed by no other country in this world. According to the above-mentioned proclamation we are to have a "wise, just, stable, effective, and economical administration:" we are to be "guaranteed" an "honest and effective civil service;" the "collection and application of taxes" are to be on a "sound, honest, and economical basis;" "public funds" are to be "raised justly and collected honestly;" we are to have "prudent and honest fiscal administration;" "pure, speedy, and effective administration of justice;" our "civil rights" are to be "guaranteed and protected to the fullest extent;" "religious freedom" is to be "assured;" "all persons" are to "have an equal standing before the law;" "the evils of delay, corruption, and exploitation" are to be "effectually eradicated;" we are to be blessed by "a considerable reduction in taxation;" and the whole fabric of this magnificent government is designed for "the welfare and advancement of the Philippine people" who are to become the "constant objects" of President McKinley's "solicitude and fostering care." On top of all this you now propose to "guarantee" us "prosperity and happiness."

Why do you not adopt this sublime government in America? Do you not see that you and your commissioners "protest too much?" The word "honest" occurs four times in eight lines of the commissioners' proclamation. Why all this protestation of honesty? The greatest men speak least of greatness; the real artists seldom talk learnedly of "art;" the truest scientists are not forever dilating upon "the scientific;" honest men seldom protest their honesty.

Why do the commissioners repeatedly assure us of their "honestyisms" and "honest" intentions? Is it because they promise so much and give so little? Are they endeavoring to make up by promise what they lack in performance? I note that notwithstanding these lavish promises it still "remains with Congress to finally determine the form of government for the Philippines." The commissioners naively tell us that Arguelles (Aguinaldo's emissary) was "satisfied" with the proposed government as set forth in their proclamation, but—simple soul!—he spoiled all by asking for some guaranty that this millennial government would become a fact in history.

But to be serious. Notwithstanding Senator BEVERIDGE'S speech, in which he compared us to the "noble red man," who, I note in passing, has already been "benevolently assimilated;" notwithstanding the apparent cordial approval with which his extraordinary speech was received by your coannexationists, we cheerfully admit the absolute honesty and sincerity of intention of the people of America. At the same time, we do not believe for one moment that you or they could give us anything approaching in perfection to the government which your commissioners have promised.

But even if we were to admit that your ability is commensurate with your promises, we should still prefer to rule ourselves. All the "protection to life and property," all the "liberty under the Stars and Stripes," all the "peace and charity" and "liberty of opportunity" and "fostering care" and "honest" administration which your great nation might be able to give us would not compensate us for the loss of national life. Put the question to yourself. Would you be satisfied—assuming that some powerful nation were to deny you your independence and at the same time offer you the millennial government which you promise to give us—would you be satisfied with such foreign rule?

You know that you would not. Then do not unto others as ye would not that others should do unto you. There is no necessity to tell us how incapable we are and how enlightened you are; there is no need to argue about "legal" titles or "sovereignty by right of conquest and purchase" or the "task which Providence has imposed upon you." Put all such puerile considerations aside and come back to the golden rule. It is simple enough and embraces the whole of man's duty to man. It will show you whether you are doing right in the Philippines, and whether your legal contentions will stand the moral test. Come back to the Golden Rule and take your dripping sword from out our heart.

Question IV. "Do the Filipinos desire the construction of railways, factories, and other modern improvements?"

This question brings us down from the moral to the commercial aspect of the question. If we did not believe in the absolute sincerity of your intentions we should consider your question offensive, because it presupposes the possibility of our giving a reply in the negative. It is usually considered unnecessary to put a question seriously and deliberately unless there is the possibility either of a negative or of an affirmative reply. Now, you have been in our country. You address your questions to "eminent" Filipinos, and you thereby imply that the most enlightened of our people may be indifferent to the advantages of the arts of modern civilization. This shows how little you and your colleagues understand our people.

It also serves to destroy whatever confidence we may have had in your ability to provide a suitable government for our country, because if you do not understand a people you will never successfully govern them. But as we believe in your sincerity, we simply give a formal reply to your question. We do desire the railways and other improvements you mention, and we desire many other things which you do not mention, such as additional schools, universities, libraries, art and musical institutions, and all that pertains to the moral as well as the material advancement of our people. If it will pay your Government to build railways, it will also pay our government to do so.

You may tell us that we will not be able to find the capital for such public works as are necessary if America withdraw her protection. We have never asked America to withdraw her protection. But if America will not protect us without annexing us, then, though we should prefer American protection, we can obtain complete protection without annexation from one of the greatest European powers. Under such protection we could obtain all the capital we require.

The final intimation in your circular letter is that "any other note on the well-being and prosperity of the Philippine government will be appreciated." I therefore beg to remark that I consider it somewhat strange that you make no mention of Filipino independence.

You ask us: Are we satisfied with Aguinaldo? Would there be opposition to his government, causing revolutions and other conflicts? Would we be satisfied with a guaranty of happiness? Do we desire railways and other improvements? But you do not ask the most important question of all, Do we desire independence? You might as well ask a drowning man if he feels cold, and if he would be satisfied with a "guaranty" that the water will be comfortably warmed! What the drowning man wants is life; what the Filipinos want is national life. What will all your honeyed promises amount to if you deny us our hearts' desire? Take from us our national life and we will never be satisfied with your promised cake and wine.

Material prosperity, though desirable, is by no means the most desirable condition. I therefore take the liberty of asking you and those who think with you a final question: Why do you shed all this blood? Why do you spend all this energy, all these millions of dollars, in the effort to thrust upon us what we desire least and deny us what we desire most? Is it for our good or for your own? For an answer to this latter question I beg respectfully to refer you to Senator BEVERIDGE'S speech on the 9th of January.

In conclusion, I beg to assure the people of America through you of our faith in their righteousness and of our belief that ere long they will give us the justice which we crave and cease to interfere with our dearly won independence.

Sincerely, yours,

SIXTO LOPEZ.

Maj. Gen. JOSEPH WHEELER, U. S. A.,
Washington, D. C.

Inasmuch as those who have assumed to describe the Filipinos, even commissions sent out by us, have blundered, consciously and unconsciously, with regard to the very people of whom they wrote, and believing that we should know something of the tribes of the Philippine Islands, I have also added a letter of Sixto Lopez covering this particular point:

It has been suggested that I should give a few facts about the so-called "tribes" of the Philippines.

Statements have been made to the effect that we are divided into 84 tribes, speaking different languages, and of all degrees of barbarism and civilization; that these "tribes" are at enmity with each other; that they would never agree to form a united, strong government; and that one warlike "tribe" is seeking to dominate all the others, and to rule with an iron hand the weaker and peaceable citizens of our country.

These statements are entirely incorrect.

That there are a few uncivilized or semicivilized peoples still inhabiting the northern part of Luzon and the interior of the island of Mindanao is a fact which no one disputes. They correspond roughly to the uncivilized or semicivilized remnants of the Indian tribes still inhabiting certain parts of the United States.

The Schurman commission is responsible for the statements about these 84 different "tribes." But it is clear that the commissioners' list has been compiled from imperfectly kept and still more imperfectly spelled Spanish records. The confusion into which they and others have fallen in reference to the so-called "tribes" is due to the fact that our country is divided not only into provinces, but into provincial districts, wherein slightly different dialects are spoken. The inhabitants of these provincial districts have been confused with the few mountain peoples. The latter have been subdivided by purely artificial boundaries, by which means a small community has been subdivided into two or more "tribes." Additional "tribes" have also been created by the incorrect spelling of local Spanish officials, and by giving two native equivalents for the same people, as, for instance, when two "tribes" are created by calling the one Buquils and the other Buquiles, which is equivalent to saying that there are two "tribes" in England, the English and the British.

Examining the list still more in detail, we find that there are said to be two tribes of Aetas, two more of Attas, and one of Atas. These are not tribes at all. The word "Aeta" is the Tagalog equivalent of "Negrito." This word has been spelled in three different ways by careless Spanish officials, and thus multiplied by the commissioners into three separate and distinct "tribes." The word "Baluga" is another native equivalent for the Negritos, and this word is also given by the commission as the name of a separate and distinct "tribe." It would be just as absurd to regard the Americans as one tribe and the "Yankees" as another, and then to increase these two tribes into four or more by misspelling the word "Americans," or by translating it into French.

The names are also given of "tribes" which do not exist in the Philippines at all, as, for instance, the Manguianes of Masbate, the Manguianes of Ticao, the Negritos of Tayabas. I have been in all of these places, but I never saw or heard of these "tribes," nor have I ever met anyone who had seen or heard of them.

Thus, by the processes of imagination, bad spelling, translation, subdivision, and multiplication, the 15,000 Negritos are split up into 21 "tribes."

There are also said to be 16 Indonesian "tribes" in the island of Mindanao. It would be interesting to know where the commissioners obtained this information. The interior of Mindanao has never been explored; all that is known of it with any degree of certainty is that the inhabitants are Indonesians, and that they are divided into sections under small chiefs or headmen.

It would be impossible, in the time at my disposal, to even attempt to explain all the errors and confusions of this list prepared by the Schurman commission. It is sufficient to say that by the processes which I have indicated the few semicivilized people and the civilized inhabitants of the provincial districts in Luzon and the Visayas have been multiplied into 84 "tribes."

Now, as a native of the country, and as one who has given some attention to the ethnography of the archipelago, both by personal research and by a study of the best works on the subject, I may be permitted to give a brief statement of the facts.

There has been a considerable amount of speculation about the Negritos, who are erroneously regarded as the aboriginal inhabitants of the whole archipelago. But Pedro A. Paterno, one of our most capable ethnologists, and others have shown that the Negritos are the surviving remnant of the slaves brought to our islands by the Moros in the eleventh and subsequent centuries. They are not especially negroid in appearance, and only those inhabiting the province of Bataan in Luzon have curly hair.

In the large and only partially explored island of Mindanao there are several Indonesian "tribes," the chief of which are the Subanos, estimated to number from fifty to seventy thousand; the Mendayas, who are estimated to number 35,000; and the Tagabauas, comprising about 30,000. The Mendayas and the Manobos are said to practice, the one human sacrifice, and the other ceremonial cannibalism.

But the evidence of this is conflicting and untrustworthy. It is also said that the small "tribe" of 4,000 Ilongotes in Luzon are head-hunters. This has been denied and asserted on equally untrustworthy authority. I have never met or heard of anyone who had witnessed any of these practices. The information has always come from a neighboring people. The idea has probably arisen by travelers having seen the heads of criminals erected on spears, just as one might have witnessed the same thing a century or two ago on Temple Bar or London Bridge.

But if that proved head-hunting on the part of Ilongotes, it also proves that the English people were head-hunters.

If, however, these statements are true, they are paralleled by the scalp-hunting Indians of the United States and by the human sacrifices and ceremonial cannibalism of the Canadian Indians.

There are, also, the Moros of Mindanao and the Sulus. They are, of course, Mohammedans, and some of their institutions are contrary to the true ideals of morality and liberty.

There are a few natives on Mindoro who have not been Christianized nor tyrannized by Spain.

But they have a religion and a code of morals of their own, the latter of which they adhere to and which in many respects is superior to that practiced by the Spaniards. They believe in one God and are monogamists. They are a moral and hospitable people who do their duty to their fellowman, worship God in their own way, and do not believe in any kind or form of devil.

The so-called wild men of Luzon are the Igorrotes, who are "a warlike but semicivilized people, living in villages, owning farms and cattle, irrigating their rice fields, mining and working gold and copper and forging swords and spear heads of iron," but who have never been converted to Christianity or subdued by Spain.

They are, however, prepared to submit to and recognize Aguinaldo's government and have sent him presents of gold dust to assist in the war. The Igorrotes are probably an early branch of the Malayan race which originally populated the island.

These uncivilized and semicivilized people are not separate genealogical tribes. The inhabitants of Mindanao are a homogeneous people of common Indonesian descent, who have become divided into sections under petty chiefs or headmen, some of which have slight differences of dialect which have arisen gradually owing to there being little or no intercommunication. But most of them speak the same dialect.

Let us now glance very briefly at the remaining millions of Filipinos, who are generally regarded as belonging to the Malayan race.

They constitute more than nineteen-twentieths of the entire population of the archipelago, and are divided into provincial districts inhabited by the Visayans, the Tagalogs, the Bicols, the Ilocanos, the Pangasinans, the Pampangans, and the Cagayans. All of these provincial people belong to one race, and all of them are Christian people practicing the morals and arts of civilization and speaking dialects which are as similar to each other as are the dialects of the different provinces in England. The divergence between these dialects is much less than that between the Spanish and the Italian languages. I have traveled alone in Italy. I do not know Italian, but I have had no difficulty in understanding and in making myself understood by the Italians.

Similarly, I have traveled in the Visayas and elsewhere in the Philippines and have had very much less difficulty in communicating with the Visayans and the Bicols. A Tagalog will become proficient in the Visayan or other dialects within a fortnight, and vice versa.

As a matter of fact, the difference between the dialects of the seven provincial districts would not be a real difficulty to indepe...lent self-government. First, because the difference is so slight, and secondly, because Spanish is the official language of our country, spoken by the educated people of all provinces; and, as the Schurman commission declares, these educated people are far more numerous than is generally supposed. When Tagalogs, or Visayans, or Bicols meet they never dream of speaking in their own dialects; intercourse between them is carried on in Spanish.

And I may state parenthetically that the Filipinos have so excelled in Spanish as to have won valuable literary prizes in competition with the Spaniards themselves. Dr. José Rizal, at the age of 17, took the first prize in the Cervantes literary competition at Manila, which was open to Spaniards and Filipinos alike in both Spain and the Philippines.

But if the language were a difficulty under Filipino rule it would be a still greater difficulty under American rule, due to the necessity of the introduction of English, which would form a third language in our islands.

Other countries do not find that a difference in language forms a difficulty to self-government. In every country in the world, with perhaps the exception of the United States, there are two or more languages or dialects spoken by the people.

The only difficulty with regard to language in any of these countries has been due to jealousy as to which language should become the official one. This difficulty has already been settled in the Philippines.

Now, as to the supposed enmity between the so-called "tribes." Such enmity is quite unknown among our people. There may be, and no doubt there is, enmity between individuals, but the enmity does not exist between the so-called "tribes" or provinces. During the short term when our government was not interfered with the most perfect harmony and unanimity existed, and provincial and racial differences were never even thought of.

When our government was first established emissaries came from almost all the provinces and islands declaring their support on behalf of those from whom they came. Even the Moros of Mindanao and Igorrotes of North Luzon, who had never been subdued by Spain, acclaimed Aguinaldo, and were prepared to recognize his government.

Our "asamblea" or representative chamber, under the new constitution, comprised representatives of all the provinces. Some of these provinces include two or more islands, while some islands are divided into two or more provinces. Thus the province of Romblon includes the islands of Romblon, Tablas, Sibuyan, and other smaller islands, whilst Panay is divided into four and Luzon into many provinces. It should be remembered that these provinces are separated by artificial boundaries. They are geographical but not racial areas. Frequently in one province two dialects are used, as in North Camarines, where Tagalog and Bicol are spoken. On the other hand, in some cases two or more provinces use only one dialect, as in the 13 provinces where Tagalog is spoken. A Spaniard or other foreigner can not distinguish any difference in the accent of the inhabitants of these 13 provinces, although a native may in some cases, but not in all, be able to tell whether a speaker is from, say, Batangas or Bulacan. But to imagine that the inhabitants of these provinces generally are at enmity with each other, or that they would be likely to tear one another's throats, is as absurd as to suppose that the inhabitants of Massachusetts would naturally desire to rend the men of New Hampshire or Rhode Island.

The interrelations of the people of the several provincial districts show that no such enmity has existed or does now exist. For instance, in the schools and colleges, especially in Manila, there are representatives of all the chief provincials, and it would be impossible to tell which were which. I may be pardoned for here referring to myself. I am a Tagalog; but it would be impossible for another Filipino to say, judging from external appearance only, whether I was a Bicol, a Visayan, a Tagalog, or a Pangasinan. The only way of discovering from which provincial district I came would be by means of the dialect.

There are many institutions in the Philippines the benefits of which are not confined to the people of any one province. For example, there is an educational institution (purely Filipino) granting scholarships which enable the winners to study in Europe. These scholarships are open to all Filipinos in the archipelago.

In Japan the official representative of the so-called "Tagalog despotism" is an Ilocano. In Madrid all the Filipinos have formed themselves into a committee and are working unitedly for independence. The president of the committee is a Bicol, the vice-president an Ilocano, the secretary a Visayan, the treasurer a Tagalog, and the remainder of the committee are Tagals, Visayans, Bicols, Ilocanos, and Pangasinans. In Barcelona, in Paris, and in London the same diversity of province and the same unanimity of purpose obtain. Among all the Filipinos resident in Europe who represent the educated and moneyed classes, and who know something of European methods of government, there is not one "Americanista."

This is an important fact, because all these men are entirely free from the supposed despotism of Aguinaldo or General MacArthur. They are thus free from all external influences; yet every one of them has voluntarily chosen to support Aguinaldo and to work for the independence of our country.

As a matter of fact, with the exception of the few uncivilized tribes in central Mindanao and the Sulus, and the semicivilized Igorrotes and Negritos of Luzon to which I have referred, the Filipinos are a homogeneous people belonging to the Malayan race. They speak several dialects, but they are one people. They constitute an overwhelming majority of the inhabitants of the Philippines. They are opposed not solely to American, but to any foreign rule; and they are united in the desire for independence and for the purpose of maintaining a stable, independent government.

In conclusion, I again assert, without fear of contradiction, that the alleged antagonisms between the inhabitants of the provincial districts, or between the so-called "tribes," have arisen, not in the minds of the Filipinos themselves, but in the minds of those who do not understand our peoples and who have reached conclusions in no way warranted by the facts.

I have also been asked to say a word about a so-called "tribe" not included in the commissioners' list. It has been stated that "the Macabebes are fighting on the American side." The statement has been made in a manner which would convey the idea that the Macabebes are a large tribe, somewhat like the Tagalogs, and that it is therefore clear that all the Filipinos do not desire native rule. You will no doubt be surprised to learn that the Macabebes, or Macabebians, as they should be called, are simply the inhabitants of the town of Macabebe, in Pampanga.

The population of this town has been estimated at from four to ten thousand, all told, and of these only 200 are scouting for the American forces. If that shows disunity on the part of 10,000,000 of Filipinos—well, "make the most of it!"

I should like to mention that these same Macabebians also fought for Spain against the Filipinos in the insurrection of 1896. Apparently they prefer foreign rule of any kind, whether it be Spanish or American, to that of their own. We are glad, therefore, that such men as these are not fighting on our side.

SIXTO LOPEZ.

As showing that their desire is for justice and not for charity, I further supplement my remarks by the letter of the gentleman last named to Rev. Dr. Hale, dated February 7, 1901:

DEAR SIR: In the Boston Transcript of January 17 there is mention of a project to provide "practical help for the Filipinos" by "sending them farming implements and seeds, which they much need as a means toward gaining a livelihood." It is further stated that the project was set on foot by Miss Sarah E. Hunt, at the request of an American officer in the Philippines; that it has the approval of Governor W. Murray Crane and yourself, and that you, as president of the Lend-a-Hand Society, have been good enough to send out circulars asking for contributions.

While admitting that this movement is prompted by the best motives and kindliest feelings, I must, in so far as I can speak on behalf of my fellow-countrymen, respectfully decline the proffered aid. In doing so, let me say that I feel sure if you only knew the real conditions in the Philippines you would not offer this indignity to a people who are silently suffering misery and death in defense of their rights, but who will not accept the bounty of any foreign nation; least of all of the nation that is causing the misery.

If the Filipinos were only freed from this terrible curse of "benevolent assimilation" and left in peace to continue the beneficent government which they themselves instituted two years ago, they would not need the charity which I am sure they will now politely but firmly decline.

It is said that the present policy in the Philippines is an imperialist policy. Upon that I here offer no opinion. But this I know: It has always been the policy of imperialism to give charity while it withholds justice; it has always been the custom of peoples freeing themselves from tyranny to demand justice and refuse charity. In this the Filipinos are not an exception. They do not shrink from suffering when honor demands it. They are not as exercised about an empty dinner pail as some persons seem to be about a full one. Better to have gnawing hunger with self-respect than surfeit with shame. Better to be a starving Filipino asking for liberty than a descendant of Washington denying it.

We do desire an amelioration of these conditions of misery and horror. We desire it on behalf of the patriot fighting against a reincarnation of the principles of George III, and on behalf of the wife and mother whose stifled cry may never reach the ear of pity in America. But we will accept that amelioration only from the hands of justice. That which is ours by right we will not accept in charity. Give us justice, and we ourselves will be able to attend to the wants of our people.

The Filipinos are described by competent authorities as "excellent agriculturists." Improvement in some of their methods is possible, and they know it. But let me be fair. It is possible—as the unknown officer writes to Miss Hunt—that there are "natives digging with bamboo sticks and scooping the earth up with their hands when repairing roads" for the American forces. This is a new kind of agriculture. No doubt it will result in more digging—of graves! It is also possible that these misguided natives—the only class with whom the officer comes in contact, and from whom he receives his utterly erroneous impressions and information—may be willing to accept charity. If the lend-a-hand society desires to help them, be it so. But let each parcel of seeds and each implement be addressed to those who are building roads with hands of shame in order that their own brethren may be shot.

If I were permitted a suggestion, it would be this: Let the money received from the generous donors be applied, with their permission, to purchasing and supplying to every person in the United States a copy of the Declaration of Independence, with the third paragraph printed in large capitals. This rare old seed, so long hidden away in neglected barns, might thus bring forth fruit that would bless both your country and mine—yours with honor, mine with liberty and peace.

I am taking the liberty of writing this in the form of an open letter, because I desire that it should have the same publicity as the appeal in the Boston Transcript.

With every assurance of my respect and my appreciation of your intended kindness, sincerely yours,

SIXTO LOPEZ.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 7, 1901.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, I renew my request that all members may have an opportunity to print remarks on this bill.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PARKER].

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I beg to say a word about the special provisions of these amendments. First, we ask Cuba to agree to maintain her independence and her territory against all foreign countries. That is the Monroe doctrine. We have the right to enforce this. Second, we ask Cuba not to make herself the slave of any foreign country by a public debt which she can not pay. That is also really the Monroe doctrine, because it is necessary to its enforcement, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] admitted this.

Third. We ask Cuba to consent that we may intervene to preserve her independence against foreign nations. That is also the Monroe doctrine, and is our guaranty to her of the very independence which we have given her.

We likewise ask Cuba to consent that we may intervene to maintain republican government. This is a guaranty of liberty, the same guaranty of a republican form of government that the United States gives to every free State of this Union.

We also ask Cuba to agree that she will discharge the obligations which were imposed by the treaty of Spain with the United States, and that we may enforce this agreement.

There is not time in the three minutes remaining to go over these obligations in detail.

They include such fundamental rights as the protection of the property of Spaniards, their free exercise of their religion, their right to fair trial in the courts, and the right of Spain to send consuls. These treaty rights we must demand of Cuba to assume.

It was agreed by the treaty that we should occupy the island for a time, that we should perform these obligations while in such occupancy, and that on its termination we would advise any government that should be established to assume these obligations.

Now, when we ourselves have assumed the responsibility of establishing that government, the right of advice becomes a duty, and to require performance of these obligations is nothing but justice.

We ask Cuba (fifth) for sanitation. This is necessity, and above all law. Self-preservation, Mr. Speaker, is not only the first law of nature, but sanitation is humanity to the people of Cuba as well as to ourselves. We ask Cuba (seventh) to give us coaling stations. This is for her own defense, for the Navy will be the only defense of the Pearl of the Antilles against the desire of foreign nations.

The provisions of this bill are well drawn as to Cuba. They are for her liberty and not against it. We could not improve them.

Let us turn to the Philippines for a minute. There we find 80 different tribes with 20 different languages, different habits and customs, different institutions, and different conditions, so that there is civilization in one place and semibarbarism in others. Each place may need a different form of government as its laws and customs differ, and the establishment of such governments, with officers, municipal, judicial, executive, or legislative, is not a matter for code legislation, but must, for the present, be lodged in the Chief Executive.

This was the rule of the common law, that mother of free institutions. It was the chief executive which established republican government among us, and established the legislatures of the colonies which became these United States. The establishment of free institutions by the Executive is no dream. It is history; it is practical, and it is a necessity.

Mr. Speaker, under leave of the House for that purpose I submit the following in extension in the RECORD of what I said more briefly in the House.

The principles of the Cuban and Philippine provisions of this bill are those that make for liberty and are required by our own plighted faith; and I am not sorry that my time to speak was short if I was thereby induced to state them so briefly that he who runs may read.

These provisions establish the guaranties of liberty and republican self-government that we have pledged to Cuba, and they grant to the Philippines the inestimable privilege of receiving civil government, as fast as circumstances will permit, by the mere act of the Executive, without waiting for ponderous legislation by a Congress 11,000 miles away. They are for liberty in each case.

It is not without reason that those who have attacked these provisions have not quoted them and have indulged in wild attacks, talk about tyranny, and breach of faith and violation of Cuban independence. We favor these provisions, because they guard that independence, carry out our plighted faith, and enable the necessary tyranny of military rule to be changed as soon as may be into government by law.

We challenge those who make these attacks to find one word in these provisions to the contrary. They bear the minutest scrutiny.

We have declared that the people of Cuba are and ought to be free and independent. We mean to carry out that declaration and protect her against any foes of that independence. Beyond question, there are such foes. The pearl of the Antilles has been the long-coveted prize of the world. Her fertile soil, her abounding minerals, her balmy clime, her commanding position, her sheltered ports that nature itself has fortified, her domination of the mid sea of the Western Hemisphere and of the isthmus that will soon be a gateway of the world's commerce—all those considerations make every foreign nation covet her.

The mere declaration of the Monroe doctrine and that the United States would not permit European aggression on the American Continent has sufficed to protect most of the mainland. But it did not protect Central America against settlements which will yet be a thorn in our side. England in Nicaragua and France in Panama are standing examples of the folly of bare declaration.

The Monroe doctrine did not hinder foreign nations from going into Mexico, nor induce them to withdraw, until they saw that doctrine supported by the veteran hosts of both sides of the civil war. Cuban independence and the Monroe doctrine must stand and fall together. They are not merely to be declared, but to be maintained, as well against open force as against secret machination, bribery, intrigue, and all the means that great empires use on weak and especially new-born States. We are determined that the wiles that have bought or conquered the East Indies are not to be used in the West, and the right of America to secure this, and to maintain Cuban independence and the Monroe doctrine, is therefore to be so recognized by Cuba itself that Europe shall never put it in dispute.

Could any less be asked? Yet this is all that is done by this bill. It bears detailed examination. There is nothing of it that is not directed to these objects and these alone.

This is the express statement of the bill, that it is for the recognition of the independence of Cuba and in order to leave the government of Cuba to its people, in fulfillment of our declaration in 1898, viz:

Provided further, That in fulfillment of the declaration contained in the joint resolution approved April 20, 1898, entitled, "For the recognition of the independence of the people of Cuba, demanding that the Government of Spain relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba, and to withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters, and directing the President of the United States to use the land and naval forces of the United States to carry these resolutions into effect," the President is hereby authorized to "leave the government and control of the island of Cuba to its people"—

This is our act, and we are to withdraw when a government shall be established which shall recognize the principles before stated, viz—

so soon as a government shall have been established in said island under a constitution which, either as a part thereof or in an ordinance appended thereto, shall define the future relations of the United States with Cuba, substantially as follows:

First, that Cuba will maintain its independence and her territory and population against foreign domination.

I.

That the government of Cuba shall never enter into any treaty or other compact with any foreign power or powers which will impair or tend to impair the independence of Cuba, nor in any manner authorize or permit any foreign power or powers to obtain by colonization or for military or naval purposes or otherwise, lodgment in or control over any portion of said island.

What is this but protection? What but the American Monroe doctrine?

The second provision is to the same end—that she shall not become the bond servant of any other country by contracting a debt that she can not pay.

II.

That said government shall not assume or contract any public debt to pay the interest upon which and to make reasonable sinking fund provision for the ultimate discharge of which the ordinary revenues of the island, after defraying the current expenses of government, shall be inadequate.

The distinguished gentleman on the other side of the House [Mr. COCHRAN] has expressed this far better than I can in this very debate:

I concur in the views of many of my colleagues, who have declared in my presence that in respect to several matters of the utmost importance it is the duty of this Government, and its right, to have something to say as to the affairs of Cuba.

* * * * * * *

News comes from Cuba that no objection will be interposed to a stipulation guarding this country against the danger of treaties with foreign countries inimical to the interests of the United States. I am glad to know this, for I unhesitatingly declare that it is not only the right but the duty of this country to supervise the foreign power relations of the island in such a way and to such an extent as will save Cuba from embroilment with foreign powers. I think that we should see to it also that Cuba shall contract no debts or obligations of a nature or in quarters which might in the future imperil her safety.

Mr. Speaker, not long ago the German Emperor sent a man-of-war to the island of Santo Domingo as the bearer of a sight draft against the Government of that island. Bombardment and invasion were threatened, and the poor islanders were compelled to pay the claim. Five or six years ago Nicaragua was invaded by the English and a similar outrage was perpetrated there. Are these cases to be regarded as precedents?

Our Government made no protest, and so the proceeding was at least tacitly approved at Washington. It may be said the claims were just, but who knows they were just? The little Republics thus assailed demanded arbitration, and the fact that it was refused is some evidence that they were robbed.

The United States is bound by the highest considerations to safeguard Cuba against similar complications; for, Mr. Speaker, any attempt of a foreign power to repeat in Cuba the proceedings in Santo Domingo and Nicaragua to which I have referred would not be tolerated by the United States. To put it plainly, whatever would endanger Cuba in the future is of interest to the people of the United States, and it is only reasonable that we should seek to throw about the island such safeguards as are manifestly necessary to her safety.

Third. To protect Cuban independence, to maintain a republican government, and to carry out the treaty of Paris, we claim a right of intervention.

III.

That the government of Cuba consents that the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty, and for discharging the obligations with respect to Cuba imposed by the treaty of Paris on the United States, now to be assumed and undertaken by the government of Cuba.

This right of intervention is not against the liberties of Cuba. It is necessary for their preservation. It is the same right that we exercised in Mexico. The United States guarantees republican government to the free States of the Union under the Constitution, and it would intervene in State affairs, if necessary, to maintain that guarantee against anarchy or tyranny. This clause of the Constitution is no infringement of the liberties of the State, but the contrary. The like clause is also as to Cuba.

The remarks of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] apply fully to this clause.

By the treaty of Paris the United States agreed that Spanish citizens in Cuba should be protected in life, religion, property, and civil rights, especially in the courts. These rights are by our plighted faith, as well as in accordance with the just and equitable provisions of the law of nations.

Articles IX to XV of the treaty state them in detail.

ARTICLE IX.

Spanish subjects, natives of the peninsula, residing in the territory over which Spain by the present treaty relinquishes or cedes her sovereignty, may remain in such territory or may remove therefrom, retaining in either event all their rights of property, including the right to sell or dispose of such property or of its proceeds; and they shall also have the right to carry on their industry, commerce, and professions, being subject in respect thereof to such laws as are applicable to other foreigners. In case they remain in the territory they may preserve their allegiance to the Crown of Spain by making, before a court of record, within a year from the date of the exchange of ratifications of this treaty, a declaration of their decision to preserve such allegiance; in default of which declaration they shall be held to have renounced it and to have adopted the nationality of the territory in which they may reside.

The civil rights and political status of the native inhabitants of the territories hereby ceded to the United States shall be determined by the Congress.

ARTICLE X.

The inhabitants of the territories over which Spain relinquishes or cedes her sovereignty shall be secured in the free exercise of their religion.

ARTICLE XI.

The Spaniards residing in the territories over which Spain by this treaty cedes or relinquishes her sovereignty shall be subject in matters civil as well as criminal to the jurisdiction of the courts of the country wherein they reside, pursuant to the ordinary laws governing the same; and they shall have the right to appear before such courts and to pursue the same course as citizens of the country to which the courts belong.

ARTICLE XII.

Judicial proceedings pending at the time of the exchange of ratifications of this treaty in the territories over which Spain relinquishes or cedes her sovereignty shall be determined according to the following rules:

1. Judgments rendered either in civil suits between private individuals or in criminal matters, before the date mentioned, and with respect to which there is no recourse or right of review under the Spanish law, shall be deemed to be final, and shall be executed in due form by competent authority in the territory within which such judgments should be carried out.

2. Civil suits between private individuals which may on the date mentioned be undetermined, shall be prosecuted to judgment before the court in which they may then be pending, or in the court that may be substituted therefor.

3. Criminal actions pending on the date mentioned before the supreme court of Spain against citizens of the territory which by this treaty ceases to be Spanish shall continue under its jurisdiction until final judgment; but, such judgment having been rendered, the execution thereof shall be committed to the competent authority of the place in which the case arose.

ARTICLE XIII.

The rights of property secured by copyrights and patents acquired by Spaniards in the island of Cuba and in Porto Rico, the Philippines, and other ceded territories at the time of the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty shall continue to be respected. Spanish scientific, literary, and artistic works, not subversive of public order in the territories in question, shall continue to be admitted free of duty into such territories for the period of ten years, to be reckoned from the date of the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty.

ARTICLE XIV.

Spain shall have the power to establish consular officers in the ports and places of the territories, the sovereignty over which has been either relinquished or ceded by the present treaty.

ARTICLE XV.

The Government of each country will, for the term of ten years, accord to the merchant vessels of the other country the same treatment in respect of all port charges, including entrance and clearance dues, light dues, and tonnage duties, as it accords to its own merchant vessels, not engaged in the coastwise trade.

This article may at any time be terminated on six months' notice given by either Government to the other.

The last article is a merely temporary arrangement.

Now, it is true that we limited our obligations to the time of our occupancy, agreeing only to advise the Cuban government to assume them at the termination of that occupancy.

ARTICLE XVI.

It is understood that any obligations assumed in this treaty by the United States with respect to Cuba are limited to the time of its occupancy thereof; but it will upon the termination of such occupancy advise any government established in the island to assume the same obligations.

When that article was framed it was claimed that there was an independent Cuban government in existence, with its president, legislature, and courts, a government which we were aiding and whose action we could not control. We likened our intervention to that of France in the American revolution. The similitude has failed. We have found it our duty to help create a new civil government in Cuba, and under these circumstances our right of advice has become a duty to see that the new government assumes these obligations, for they are already historically part of its constitution—the conditions of its existence, treaty landmarks bought by the blood of Americans in the work of rescue of Cuba from the Spanish yoke.

So are the rights which have accrued during our occupancy, and which Cuba is to respect.

IV.

That all acts of the United States in Cuba during its military occupancy thereof are ratified and validated, and all lawful rights acquired thereunder shall be maintained and protected.

There is one topic that has been forced on us as a matter of necessity. We can no more tolerate the yellow fever in Habana than we could the protection by its government of a nest of pirates making war upon mankind. Steam has brought that port too near to us for the comfortable enforcement of weeks of quarantine. We therefore make proper sanitation a matter of treaty agreement, to be conducted on plans already devised or to be agreed upon. Be it that the provision is unusual, I admit it. But it is necessary most of all to that part of the United States chiefly represented by members who oppose this bill, but from whom I have yet to hear a word of protest as to this provision. Civilization itself demands that a nation or city shall not become a breeder of any plague that can be prevented.

We ask, therefore—

V.

That the government of Cuba will execute, and as far as necessary extend, the plans already devised or other plans to be mutually agreed upon, for the sanitation of the cities of the island, to the end that a recurrence of epidemic and infectious diseases may be prevented, thereby assuring protection to the people and commerce of Cuba, as well as to the commerce of the Southern ports of the United States and the people residing therein.

The provision as to the Isle of Pines is a mere reservation of a question of boundary for further settlement. It was always a question and a fair question.

VI.

That the Isle of Pines shall be omitted from the proposed constitutional boundaries of Cuba, the title thereto being left to future adjustment by treaty.

The foregoing discussion explains the important provision for coaling stations. The defense of Cuba against any foreign power must be by a fleet. Who can forget when our blockade of Santiago was almost broken by a rough sea, so that we had to contemplate going to Key West to coal? Other nations have coaling stations in the Gulf of Mexico. The United States have none, and the possession of such stations is essential to her ability to maintain Cuban independence against any foreign navy and to protect her own Navy there.

It is therefore provided:

VII.

That to enable the United States to maintain the independence of Cuba, and to protect the people thereof, as well as for its own defense, the government of Cuba will sell or lease to the United States lands necessary for coaling or naval stations at certain specified points, to be agreed upon with the President of the United States.

Unless the United States have these stations, Cuban harbors would be a mere shelter to foreign fleets. What would strong nations care for the neutrality of our ward? If we would be guardian we must be able to protect.

It is for mutual protection and in order to the guarantee of liberty and law in Cuba and its full and plighted independence that we ask that these provisions be embodied in its constitution and in treaty with the United States.

VIII.

That by way of further assurance the government of Cuba will embody the foregoing provisions in a permanent treaty with the United States.

By such a treaty the United States also becomes bound. It recites the act of 1898. It reaffirms our pledge. It binds us to the objects mentioned in these provisions, and especially to the guaranty of liberty, independence, and republican government against all enemies, foreign and domestic.

But we are told that these provisions should not have been first formulated by us.

The gentleman from Missouri, whom I have quoted, says that their formulation during the session of the Cuban constitutional convention is an insult, and that we "suspend over the heads of the delegates to the Habana convention as a menace the sword of a dictator;" that the threat of intervention endangers peace, and that we multiply the difficulties of the convention by these provisions.

I do not think that calm reflection will so regard the matter. These matters are vital to the welfare of Cuba. They are vital to the Monroe doctrine. They can not be too soon formulated. Do gentlemen urge that we should let the Cuban convention adjourn, and then step in afterwards to demand a new assembling of the convention to agree to these necessary provisions? Are we to bid against foreign nations for the right of guardianship, for coaling stations, sanitation, and the needs of the hour? Are we to turn the lamb loose to the company of the lion and the bear, confident that we can win her back to the fold by waving the flag? We owe a duty to her. We owe a duty, also, to America—not to ourselves only, but to the continent that is under the ægis of our protection.

We disclaim sovereignty. We pledge to Cuba full independence. But it is a necessary and historical condition of that independence that she shall help America in its self-protection. We think it more honest to be frank and true. All that we ask is for Cuban welfare. We are friends, and between friends there shall be no concealment. Nor can misunderstanding last. It needed only such a frank statement as this to remove doubt as to our intentions in this all too tempting island, and to assure its people that Congress as well as the President stand by their pledge, and that America renews its troth and trust to maintain the independence that its sons have achieved.

What the future may bring we know not. Cuba is too close to the United States not to desire the most intimate trade relations that will build up the island with American capital. This treaty will be but the prelude to many more—desired by both. It does not go into the particulars; that must be the free agreement of both. It includes only those fundamental articles which are part of the constitution of the island, settled by history, settled by our pledges and responsibility, settled by treaty and necessity, and settled by the lives of our sons.

This bill provides further that the President may establish civil governments in the Philippines and maintain and protect the inhabitants in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion until Congress shall legislate on the subject.

All military, civil, and judicial powers necessary to govern the Philippine Islands, acquired from Spain by the treaties concluded at Paris on the 10th day of December, 1898, and at Washington on the 7th day of November, 1900, shall, until otherwise provided by Congress, be vested in such person and persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct, for the establishment of civil government and for maintaining and protecting the inhabitants of said islands in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion.

These are the powers which were conferred upon the President as to Louisiana and again as to Florida. The precedents have been many times referred to.

This act is guarded by many new and careful restrictions. Franchises are to be repealable; full reports to be made to each session of Congress; public lands, timber, and mining rights are not to be sold, leased, or disposed of; no franchises shall be granted that are not immediately and absolutely necessary, and all franchises shall terminate one year after the establishment of permanent civil government. These restrictions are as follows:

Until a permanent government shall have been established in said archipelago full reports shall be made to Congress on or before the first day of each regular session of all legislative acts and proceedings of the temporary government instituted under the provisions hereof; and full reports of the acts and doings of said government, and as to the condition of the archipelago and of its people, shall be made to the President, including all information which may be useful to the Congress in providing for a more permanent government: Provided, That no sale or lease or other disposition of the public lands or the timber thereon or the mining rights therein shall be made: And provided further, That no franchise shall be granted which is not approved by the President of the United States, and is not in his judgment clearly necessary for the immediate government of the islands and indispensable for the interest of the people thereof, and which can not, without great public mischief, be postponed until the establishment of permanent civil government; and all such franchises shall terminate one year after the establishment of such permanent civil government.

It may be fairly maintained that such a provision as this is absolutely essential to the establishment of government in these islands. It is idle for the leaders on the other side to insist that this is the establishment of tyranny, because it is the same law under which free governments have been established by Democratic Presidents under the authority of Democratic Congresses. The only difference is that this act is guarded by restrictions, which do not exist under these precedents.

It is fair to say, also, that this is the only way in which civil government can be simply and well established. Government must precede legislation. There is no body of men as numerous as the population of these islands which have not laws of their own to be administered. Such administration is the duty of the Executive. We owe it to our free institutions that military government should cease as soon as may be and government by law should take its place. We must therefore authorize the Executive to appoint officers, who shall establish courts and administer the laws as they find them or as they have been necessarily altered by the changed relations of these islands. Our own history shows this exact policy.

The thirteen original colonies received their self-government in exactly the same way—not from the legislature of England, but from its Executive. Some had charters granted by the Crown. Others had legislatures elected under proclamation. My own State and the great State of New York administered their governments under proclamations of Queen Anne, which appointed a governor, commanded the election of a legislative assembly by the freeholders, established courts at law with all the powers of the great law courts in England, and ordered the administration therein of the law of England so far as applicable to the colony, as well as of such laws as should be duly passed by the colonial legislature. It is from such proclamations or charters that the original States have received their free institutions, and have passed them on to the States which have been since formed.

It is likewise interesting to observe that the complaints of our forefathers were universally directed, not to the action of the Executive in establishing such governments, but to the action of the English legislature in attempting to interfere with them. Let us benefit by this experience. There are laws and institutions now existing in the Philippines. Every man there who has property or is engaged in trade must desire the establishment as soon as possible of officers, who shall execute those laws. They demand government by law as one of the rights of man. Such government, so instituted by the President, will be according to customs and rules which they understand, modified only by the great principles of freedom which guard our courts, protect the administration of justice in criminal cases, and make for the liberty of the citizen.

It is to be remembered also that there are not one, but many islands in the Philippines, and not one nation, but many tribes, with different languages, institutions, and laws. Yet our friends on the other side object to a provision which enables the President to send proper officers to each locality to see to the administration of these laws. They ask, on the contrary, that Congress, without knowledge on the subject, and with the blindness which we must have as to the conditions affecting men of other races in another clime, scattered over various islands, in another hemisphere, should nevertheless attempt to make codes of law for them, which are as likely as not to be repugnant to every condition to which they are used and to be subversive of the whole system of jurisprudence with which they are familiar, while they are certain to be unsuitable to the various conditions prevailing in the different parts of these islands.

The provisions of this bill make no such fatal mistake as this. They provide for the establishment of that civil government to which the islanders have a right. It will be a government of law. It will be subject to change by Congress, if change become necessary; but the example of parliamentary interference with the American colonies renders it desirable that such Congressional interference shall be exercised with discretion. We may better trust the men of these islands to work out their own free institutions under the guidance of the patriot who now sits in the chair of the President, and under the general regulations for protection and freedom that will be established there, as they have been established wherever the government exists under the American flag.

Let us not think, however, that Congress has nothing to do. It has much to do. We must establish our trade with the Philippines upon such a basis as will bind them to us by ties of affection and with bars of steel. Trade brings men closer than bayonets or laws. We must in time by law turn the temporary government into one that is permanent. But we can not act hastily.

It is a curious contrast that those who have been urging that we should let the Philippines have nominal independence under the military tyranny of Aguinaldo should now wish to bind them hand and foot with American-made codes.

This bill gives them real independence. It refrains from inflicting upom them foreign legislation, leaving them to be governed by their own laws, modified only by such changes as shall be made by those who know their wants and are on the ground. Perhaps soon those changes will be made by representative bodies elected by themselves. Our friends are mistaken when they think, or at least call, this bill a measure of tyranny. It is a measure of necessary administration. It is likewise a measure by which the Philippines are allowed to go on for themselves in the path of progress. Those who desire Congressional legislation are rather the promoters of tyranny, for Congress would be making laws without knowing the conditions, and there is no tyrant like ignorance.

We support the provisions of this bill both as to Cuba and the Philippines. Those provisions are timely. They are necessary. They recognize existing needs; they enable the settling of civil government, and they give proper powers, in the interest of law and liberty, into the hand of that servant of liberty and law who fills the office of President of the United States.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, had the gentleman from Michigan not addressed the House I should have contented myself by sitting in silence during this debate. But I can not agree to the view which he takes of these resolutions. If I gave to them the meaning and tendency which he attributes to them, I should have no hesitation in voting "no." If I thought that there was hidden in the language of the resolutions the purpose to accomplish the results he desires and advocates, I should have no hesitation in voting "no."

I do not understand that the Senate amendment is in the nature of an ultimatum; rather in the nature of a proposal, which we hope the people of Cuba, in the interest of our country and theirs, may accept. It authorizes the President, under the conditions named, to deliver the island, now under our military rule, to the control and government of its people. It is not necessarily the final word. We are dealing, as the gentleman from Ohio well said, with the present—the duty of to-day.

I am one of those who voted for the first time in the affirmative upon any of the Cuban resolutions, for the resolutions as they finally passed the House of Representatives. I had steadily voted against all declarations upon the subject of Cuba up to the House resolutions which were finally adopted. I believe that the American Congress and the American people are bound in honor by that part of the resolution which is commonly called the Teller resolution. Whether it was wise or unwise, we gave our pledged word to the people of Cuba, to the people of the world, and to our own honor. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

I believe that it is the ultimate duty of this country to fulfill that pledge to the letter. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.] I realize the embarrassment which surrounds the occasion. I like not this method of legislation. It is "yes" or "no" upon many propositions with no qualifications. With no opportunity for amendment and little time for deliberation, how difficult it is to come to a proper conclusion which one may not regret in the end.

As the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] has well pointed out, there are many things in this amendment which are for the interest of this country and for the interest of Cuba alike. It may be that all the conditions prescribed are for her interest as well as ours. I realize that free and independent nations can not be built up in a day out of the ruins of centuries of despotism.

I persuade myself—and it is the only thing that induces me not to vote against the motion—I persuade myself that our action is but one step forward, and that a long one, in the accomplishment of our promise, that the plighted faith of Congress, the declaration of the Republican party, and the message of the President of the United States in God's good time will be fulfilled. [Loud applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. HULL. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS].

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, it is utterly impossible in the five minutes allotted to me to attempt any general discussion upon either of the amendments which have been proposed to the Army appropriation bill.

I can say in brief, however, that I indorse to the fullest extent in letter and in spirit the resolutions relating to the island of Cuba and those relating to the Philippine Islands. I regret that the gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber in their discussion this afternoon upon the pending measure have not seen fit to point out substantial objections rather than indulge in invective.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Give us time and we will.

Mr. HOPKINS. Now, we all know that there is no argument in abuse and no persuasion in vituperation. They have utterly failed to show that there is anything in this Philippine proposition that is unconstitutional and is not in accordance with the high and patriotic principles that have thus far governed and controlled the Republican party.

As my colleague from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] this afternoon pointed out, the resolutions are predicated upon a law more than one hundred years old, a law that was framed by the fathers of the Constitution for the purpose of extending liberty and the protection of law to our newly acquired possession, the Louisiana territory. This law, as I have said, is a substantial reproduction of that.

Mr. Speaker, as everybody familiar with history knows, President Jefferson appointed Governor Clayburn under the great powers contained in that law to take possession of that territory. I want to ask my Democratic colleagues to-day if they are not willing to admit that his administration of the law was beneficial to the newly acquired possession and to the people that lived thereon?

Everybody knows that the people were unacquainted with our language, unfamiliar with our institutions, and that they hated our flag, and yet with legislation of that kind we developed these people until to-day they are among the most cultured and patriotic of the American citizens.

So, sir, will it be with the Philippine Islands and the Filipinos themselves. We must give them to-day such legislation as their character and their civilization warrant. The proposed legislation in this bill is better adapted to govern and control these people than it would be possible for us to frame should we take months to do it, because it puts it in the hands of the President to take trained men, familiar with the island, familiar with the character of the people, to legislate for them in accordance with the varying degrees of their civilization.

Now, one word further, Mr. Speaker, and I am done. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON], when he was addressing the members of the House this afternoon, took occasion to denounce the President of the United States, and claimed that he had violated his pledge to the people.

I deny, Mr. Speaker, that he has violated any pledge given to the American people, or to the people of the world. I claim, as did the people in the November election, that every promise has been kept, every pledge has been fulfilled, and that his Administration will compare favorably with that of the Father of our Country and that of the sainted Lincoln. [Applause.]

Mr. SULZER. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RICHARDSON].

Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, one of the most memorable declarations of one of the greatest patriots in this country—Patrick Henry—was, "By the light of the lamp of experience shall my feet be guided." That applies, Mr. Speaker, to nations as well as to individuals, and if we could but content ourselves to do——

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SULZER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SCUDDER. Mr. Speaker, the conditions under which the United States troops are to be withdrawn from Cuba are contained in the amendment offered to the pending Army appropriation bill. It is now provided by the measure that the United States is to leave the government and control of the island of Cuba to its people when they shall agree, either in their constitution or by ordinance, to eight provisions, which may be briefly summed up as follows:

First. No treaty inimical to the interests of the United States with any foreign power.

Second. No debt beyond the power of the island revenues to meet and cancel.

Third. The right of the United States to intervene whenever the independence of Cuba is threatened, and to maintain a government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty.

Fourth. Acts of the United States during military administration to be ratified.

Fifth. Development of plans to prevent recurrence of epidemics.

Sixth. Isle of Pines to be omitted from Cuban boundaries until title thereto can be adjusted.

Seventh. The selling or leasing of land necessary for coaling or naval stations.

Eighth. A treaty embodying all these provisions.

This Cuban amendment, I think, will be upheld by the country. It meets a situation which is complicated and difficult, but the duty and wisdom of dealing with which far outweigh the considerations not to deal with it at all.

The amendment meets a situation which many wish did not exist, but which does exist, and which must be met.

The United States wrested Cuba from the clutch of a despotic Government which was converting the Pearl of the Antilles into a desolate island. At the cost of blood and treasure the United States undertook to give the Cuban people an opportunity to erect for themselves a government free and independent in conformity with a constitution which should meet their needs and requirements and insure peace, prosperity, and a permanent government. By this proposed amendment the United States demand guaranties as to the future of the island to promote these objects as much as to safeguard its own coasts from the dangers of hostile navies, which, in the course of events, might use Cuba, whether in alliance with a Cuban republic or by aggressive action, as a base of operation against ourselves. This the United States may well claim in all reason without compromising its conscience in the least.

There was no Cuban republic when this country went to war with Spain, but when we swept Spain out of the West Indies we did so in conformity with the ardent prayers of the people of the island.

Notwithstanding this fact, the constitution recently adopted for the island by a convention of Cubans makes no mention of the obligation due from the islanders to the United States for their emancipation from Spanish rule, but, on the contrary, ignores the subject, while the Cuban politicians who are now in control do not hesitate to give out the most violent expressions of hatred for the United States and our people.

Recently at Habana and elsewhere on the island was celebrated the anniversary of the beginning of the revolution of 1895 against Spain. The occasion brought out in the public speeches to large assemblages the sentiments of the popular leaders, showing the bitterest animosity toward this country. Vigorous protests were made against the proposal to submit the new Cuban constitution to the United States Congress for sanction. The request of the United States for naval stations was denounced, and there was a general popular expression of impatience with all Cubans who suggested any agreement for mutual relations between the United States and the new republic.

In a meeting at the Tacon Theater, one Señor Zaya is reported to have gone so far as to blame the policy of intervention, which, he said, had not been beneficial to Cuba, had prevented progress, and caused unrest. The island, he insisted, must be a sovereign nation. Sovereignty lay in the machetes of its inhabitants. He said that the question of giving the United States naval stations on Cuban soil was being suggested. The only possible answer to this was a refusal. Cuba must be grateful to the United States, but she must not allow her gratitude to become servile, etc.

There were many other speeches in the same tenor. The new constitution establishes universal suffrage; it vests the political power in the hands of an ignorant and thriftless population, composed largely of negroes, in view of which fact the prospects of peace and prosperity for the newly enfranchised island would be poor were the United States to abandon Cuba at this time.

On the other hand, the property holding and commercial classes are greatly alarmed. There are on the files of the State Department confidential letters from substantial business men, not only in Habana but in all other large cities of the island, begging this country not to leave them at the mercy of the adventurers and professional patriots now influencing Cuban sentiment. These men say that when the United States resigns its authority the local officials, whose ideas of government are derived solely from their Spanish predecessors, will blackmail every business house, bank, and sugar plantation on the island; that life and property will be in danger.

This fear, it is said, amounts to a panic. The Spanish Government, while woefully corrupt, at least was capable of maintaining order in the commercial centers. No grounds exist for such a hope from a purely Cuban government. Upon the United States has devolved the responsibility of protecting life and property in the fulfillment of the conditions of the Paris treaty.

The withdrawal of all United States authority and force from Cuba at this time, in my opinion, will be the signal for trouble. In view of our blunder in passing both the Foraker amendment and the Teller resolution two years ago, I am opposed to the forcible annexation of the island of Cuba; but I recognize the duty of this Government to see that public order is maintained there, and that the protection to life and property guaranteed in the treaty of Paris to the people of the island be carried out. Cuba was surrendered to the United States. The United States, in accepting its cession, pledged due protection to the rights and lives and property of all its people. In transferring control of the island to the Cubans, or a dominating faction of them, the United States Government would not free itself of its pledge, its responsibility, its high duty.

Mr. Speaker, one of the chief reasons which justified this country's intervention to rescue Cuba from Spanish misrule is to be found in the fact that the deplorable sanitary condition of the island made it a dangerous nuisance.

It was like having an open cesspool opposite one's front door. The thing had to be abated. Its existence was a standing menace to the welfare of the American people. It involved them in periodic plagues which cost hundreds of lives, great financial loss, and brought business over a large part of the country to a standstill. It had to be gotten rid of.

At a very considerable expense of life and money we have gotten rid of it. By the application and enforcement of modern methods of sanitation at Habana and Santiago the scourge of yellow fever has been greatly mitigated—almost stamped out. It has now become the duty of the Congress to see to it that a return to the old condition of affairs be not permitted. This is a subject with regard to which there must be a special understanding between the United States and the Cuban republic of the future.

How this result can be accomplished if Cuba is to be an independent sovereignty is a problem not without its difficulties. If the Cubans ever get to control things absolutely it is not unreasonable to assume that, in the light of the past, all the sanitary improvements which have been introduced will quickly go by the board. The Cubans did not want those improvements. They did not want to be clean and healthy. They opposed the American innovations in this respect as so many assaults upon their traditional privileges and personal freedom. They preferred the old way of doing things. They liked smells; they had a fondness for dirt; they resented the deprivations to which they were subjected.

If they are left quite free to do as they please they will return to the old state of things. Then the yellow-fever fiend will rage once more. This the Congress must prevent. It is one of the things that "Cuba libre" involves. It is unfortunate the Congress did not think of it from the start.

Whether the Cubans will accept or repel these amendments is of more interest than importance. They are acceptable to and will be accepted by the United States. They will be insisted upon by this country. The Cubans will do well also to accept them, for if they do not voluntarily agree to them they will be required involuntarily to conform to them. This Republic is done with nonsense. It accepts its responsibilities, and it recognizes alike the dominance of duty and the duty of dominance, wherever it is under contract with mankind to plant civilization, order, pacification, and reasonable liberty, firmly regulated by just and equal law.

What we ask of the Cubans is not unreasonable. It is consistent, in my opinion, with what should be accepted as the purpose and spirit of the Teller resolution. I concede that resolution has added to our embarrassment in dealing with this question. Could I cast a separate vote on each of the proposed amendments, I should have no hesitancy in voting for the Cuban amendment, and willingly would I shoulder my share of the responsibility of its adoption. I believe the welfare of this country demands the annexation of Cuba, sooner or later. It will have to come—by peaceful means, I trust—but if the Cuban spirit of to-day foretells their future attitude toward the United States, annexation will come as a result of conditions not of our making, and will to the Cubans prove their greatest blessing.

Mr. Speaker, the Philippine amendment to this appropriation bill confers upon the President extraordinary powers. It is a question whether the Parliament of England would confer so much power on King Edward. Certainly never was it contemplated by the framers of the Constitution that such sweeping autocratic, absolute, despotic power could or should be in the hands of the Congress to confer upon any one man or body of appointed men under the sanction and authority of that great declaration of principles and Bill of Rights. The Constitution provides that—

> The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States.

Under this provision the Congress itself should take the initiative and act; it should not shirk its high responsibilities and endeavor to shift them by this attempted delegation of its great prerogatives to the Executive. Legislation such as this I believe beyond our authority and unconstitutional, a menace to our free institutions, an unjustifiable assault upon popular government, a challenge to the people of our country, because repudiating them.

Far be it from me to insinuate even that the Congress or the country has cause to question the ability, integrity, and patriotism of the President. His ambition must have been gratified by his reelection to the Presidency, and I entertain no doubt his aim is now to increase his reputation for statesmanship.

With me the question is, not whether the President is to be trusted, but whether under our form of government it is wise to make so serious a departure from our ancient landmarks and principles. Whether we should vest such power in any President. Once vested, this power will in due course be transmitted to the next President who may be less worthy.

Why does the other side set so much store by this resolution? Why is it necessary to tack it onto this appropriation bill in the shape of an amendment? It will give the President little power that he has not exercised as the Commander in Chief of the military forces of the United States in the Philippines. General MacArthur is responsible to him; the Taft Commission is of his creation and acts under his orders, and Judge Bates, of Vermont, who has just been appointed district judge of the Philippines, must serve under his authority.

Then why, by Congressional enactment, delegate such sweeping authority to the Executive? As an incident of the war he possesses all needed power and authority in the Philippines. This war is not won; it will still be waging when Congress convenes in December; in my belief it will be waging for years to come. If in this I am in error, if the islands shall be pacified before December next, the President, without the authority conveyed by the amendment, would still be able to deal with the Philippine question.

I deem it most unwise to intrust to any President full legislative, executive, and judicial powers; it is a dangerous precedent; it is contrary to a republican form of government; it is the very essence of imperialism. To authorize a dictatorship abroad is a long step toward its authorization at home. We must remain a government of the people, by the people, for the people—therein lies our national safety.

I do not believe there was ever much doubt in anybody's mind in this country—at least in the minds of any considerable percentage of those who have given the matter careful consideration—that American rule would be better for the Filipinos than any government they have ever had or can ever establish for themselves if permitted to make the experiment. The question has been and now is, whether a colonial system would not be a very bad thing for this country. In my opinion it certainly will be. However, there does not seem to be much to be accomplished by discussing that question now. It is almost a foregone conclusion that the United States will never give up the Philippines. The thing to do, therefore, is to shape our government of them so as to do ourselves the least possible harm and them the greatest possible good.

This Philippine amendment may do us great harm, and as its adoption is unnecessary, it should be stricken from the bill. A question of such great moment to the future of this country should have been thoroughly discussed instead of being disposed of by the Senate in a day or two, and in the House in a couple of hours under a compulsory rule, as if it were a matter of minor importance.

Ours is a government by the people. For the first time in our history it is proposed, by legislative and executive sanction, to make an individual supreme; true, now in the Philippines only. But where next? Who can answer?

Individual absolutism is not for us, nor is it for Congress to authorize as an annex to our governmental system. All force used by a government of the people must be used according to law and not according to personal whim and caprice. If the operation of the law is not just, those who suffer from it suffer from the injustice of the people, not from the tyranny of any person. Whenever it becomes apparent that this is the fact an appeal to the people will secure a change in the law. Under our system there is no ordinance, no statute, no charter, no constitution the people can not change. Under such conditions there is no reason for the use of violence to gain an end for which the law has provided or may be made to provide.

The requirement is that those whom the people intrust with the execution of the law shall perform their duty promptly and effectively. If any public officer fails to so execute the law, the people have power over him, as they have power over the law. Every public officer is responsible under the law to the people for the administration of his office. If he does not perform his duties honestly, intelligently, and economically, the people have the power to remove him or to refuse to reelect him, according to his offense. With supreme power over the law and over the administrators of the law, every person who disregards the law by any act is an enemy of the people, and should be so recognized by every well-wisher for the general welfare. When the people govern, there is no reason for irresponsible or lawless action by persons or mobs. Will the same be true when we shall have vested absolute power of life and death in one man?

This Philippine amendment substitutes in American territory individual irresponsible government for the people's government. The fact that our President is a safe man is an incident for which we have cause to rejoice; it should not, however, be considered a factor in weighing the merits of our proposed departure from ancient principles.

Mr. Speaker, aside from our indisposition, from political and economical reasons, to acquire the Philippine Islands, we of the minority have made our fight not from a desire to force independence on the Filipinos, but from a wish that those people should be given the opportunity to decide for themselves, unhampered by military control, the form of government acceptable to them.

Democrats hold that the acquisition of the Philippines was not an unavoidable result of our war with Spain and that if self-interest demanded it to-day we could withdraw our forces from the islands and leave the people to work out their own salvation. While we repudiate the idea that a consequence of our interference in Cuba must be the assumption by us and the working out of Spain's most difficult problem, it seems to me we can cease, now that the fight has gone against us, our opposition to the plans of the Administration and afford the President every aid in our power in his efforts to tranquilize the Philippines, without abating one jot of our opposition to the acquirement of colonial empires or of our right to question the continuance of the present relation in the future. I cast my vote for the Army reorganization bill for this reason, among others.

If the outcome of the policy now on trial shall be the voluntary acquiescence of the Filipinos in American rule, whatever form that rule may take, we are not bound even then to tie ourselves to them. Whether we shall do so or not will depend on a favorable answer by the people to the question: Is it our duty and does it pay? Bearing in mind the enormous expenditure necessitated by them at present, and the admitted necessity for a continuance of this expenditure for a number of years, Democrats can afford to give the imperialists all the latitude they require. If the people become satisfied—duty does not enter into the question—and find the experiment does not pay, they will cut it short without any compunctions of conscience as to our manifest destiny in the premises.

Mr. Speaker, in opposition to the principle of the Philippine amendment to this bill, I desire to place myself on record. We are not permitted to vote upon the two amendments separately, but must vote for or against the bill in its entirety; therefore, in solemn protest I shall vote "no" on this measure, though gladly would I have voted "yes" had it not contained this obnoxious and dangerous Philippine rider.

Mr. SULZER. I yield half a minute to the gentleman from North Carolina.

[Mr. BELLAMY addressed the House. See Appendix.]

[Mr. JETT addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. SULZER. I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD].

[Mr. FITZGERALD of New York addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. SULZER. I now yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAINES].

Mr. GAINES. The law of the United States as to acquired territory is this: The "existing" or old laws of the acquired territory remain unchanged, except those "found to be in conflict with the Constitution and laws of the United States."

This is clearly decided by our Supreme Court in two cases I have in mind: Leitendorfer vs. Webb, 1857 (20 How., p. 177), from which I have just quoted; and in a later case: Chicago and Pacific Railroad vs. McGlinn (114 U. S., 546).

That is the law, Mr. Speaker, and it is what the Republican party is now running away from, saying here to-day this is not the law. Thirsting for imperial power, they are studiously avoiding this law by assuming powers unheard of, contending that the Constitution is not in the Philippines and that the President can have—and this bill so provides—the power to legislate in these islands, when the power to legislate by the Constitution is lodged in Congress.

The Constitution ordains:

1. All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

This power can not be delegated (143 U. S., Field vs. Clark), but this amendment known as the Spooner provision undertakes to do so. It is unheard of as law. The Louisiana act of 1803 continued "existing" laws, and only "until the expiration of the present session of Congress," or before. It said it was temporary, and to be had under "existing" laws. This bill does not continue "existing" laws, but gives the President power to enact new ones and repeal old ones.

Now, then, the people—natives, aliens, and Americans—in the Philippine Islands, with this amendment as law, are to be protected, if at all, not by "existing" laws there, for this act does not "continue" them; not by the Constitution, for the President says it is not the law of the Philippine Islands, but by any and every law, so called, the President may enact, all of which are and must be valid at the will of the President, because the Constitution is not in the Philippine Islands to test, validate, or invalidate them. My God, have we come to this after a century of exclamations that ours is the home of the free and the asylum for the oppressed from all lands? [Applause.]

Mr. SULZER. I now yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CROWLEY].

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, my only purpose in rising here to-day is to register my protest against the passage of this bill, or, rather, not so much against the bill as against the passage of the amendment attached. Many members on this side would liked to have discussed this bill, not from a partisan but from an unbiased patriotic standpoint, had they been given time under the stringent rules of this House. I regard this amendment, delegating despotic power to the President of the United States, as the gravest question yet presented before this Congress. I protest against its being put to a vote until every member shall have placed himself upon record, should he care to do so, extra session or no extra session. Congress has the power to legislate for these Territories, and we, today, by allowing this amendment to become a law delegate away our own authority.

It seems to me that we have been doing little else since I became a member of this body but delegate the President authority. It is a matter that seems to be creeping in upon us or creeping up upon us. It is a very easy matter to shift responsibility, but when the time arrives, as it most certainly will, that we desire the return of what we have so lightly given up, it will have to be bought at a steep price. The minority can only protest against such outrages, and during this short session has been given but little time in which to even do that.

'The Congress shall have the power to dispose of and to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States." It is a question of power involved in this amendment. It is a question each member of this House should consider well before he votes to delegate it to any one man or any body of men. You are not performing the duty devolving upon you, under the oath you took, when you delegate your power to the President of the United States or his appointees. I can conceive no conditions under which I would vote for this bill as amended.

I do not for a moment weigh the institutions of this free Government against dollars. Listen while I read an editorial from the Washington Post of last year, the leading Republican paper of this Administration. It does not deign to shelter itself behind pretended patriotism and providential responsibility, but ruthlessly lifts the veil. It is headed:

LET US BE HONEST.

Why can not we be honest in our utterances touching the territories we have recently acquired? Really, it would save time and trouble, to say nothing of life and treasure, to come out frankly with the announcement that we have annexed these possessions in cold blood and that we intend to utilize them to our profit and advantage.

All this talk about benevolent assimilation, all this hypocritical pretense of anxiety for the moral, social, and intellectual exaltation of the natives: all this transparent parade of responsibility and deep-seated purpose: all this deceives nobody, avails nothing, helps us not an inch in the direction of profit, dignity, and honor. We all know down in our hearts that these island groups, etc., are important to us only in the ratio of their practical possibilities. We value them by the standard of their commercial usefulness and by no other. All this gabble about civilizing and uplifting the benighted barbarians of Cuba and Luzon is mere sound and fury, signifying nothing. Foolishly or wisely, we want these newly acquired Territories, not for any missionary or altruistic purpose, but for the trade, the commerce, the power, and the money there are in them. Why beat about the bush and promise and protest all sorts of things? Why not be honest? It will pay.

As a matter of fact, we are not concerned in the ethical or religious uplifting of the Filipinos. After all, the difference between a breechclout and a starched shirt front is a mere matter of climate and personal opinion. Dishonesty, untruth, crime, and general wickedness are here in our midst—present with us as a part of our daily life and growing with our growth. We need not go to the West Indies or the Philippines in search of material for moral rescue. Our own slums abound with opportunities for missionary zeal. Why not tell the truth and say what is the fact—that we want Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii, and Luzon, together with any other islands in either ocean that may hereafter commend themselves to our appetite, because we believe they will add to our national strength, and because we hope they will some day become purchasers at our bargain counters? We might as well throw off the pious mask and indulge ourselves in a little candor. It will cost us nothing, and it may profit much. At any rate, we shall have the comfort and satisfaction of being honest with ourselves and the privilege of looking into the mirror without blushing.

Many members who otherwise would not consider for a moment the proposition of delegating their authority as members of this body away have lain down on this amendment because the prospect of trade to be opened up with these countries has dazzled their eyes. Suppose for a moment we put our position upon the trade basis. It has been well said that trade can not be permanently profitable unless it is voluntary. We do not have to own a country in order to trade with it. The trade opened up with these people would never reach nor profit the agriculturists of this country. Already the binding-twine trust, the tobacco and sugar trusts, have a death grip on these interests in these countries.

The lives of our young soldiers are being wantonly sacrificed in establishing a condition that will tickle the pockets of a few already millionaires and endanger the interests of our own laboring class.

We took up the cause of Cuba as philanthropists. You know we went down there in the guise of missionaries intending to help the Cubans perpetuate freedom and independence in their own institutions. We made the Cubans a pledge in our declaration of war with Spain—

"That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island, except for the pacification thereof," and asserts its determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people. Does anyone now believe that if the President is given unlimited authority by Congress that he will redeem this pledge? I hope I live in a country whose pledge is yet as sacred as its arm is strong.

We all remember how we qualified and softened our declaration of war with "unctuous piety," and we now all begin to feel that our professions are being put to shame; that there is a force at work unwilling to cut the slender thread that releases little freedom-loving Cuba. If we crush the hope of ultimate freedom in that little Republic, it will be a story of shame and dishonor to this nation. What right have we to force our ultimatum upon them?

The passage of this amendment not only affects Cuba, but it also affects 12,000,000 souls situated thousands of miles from us who are clamoring for freedom and independence, and to whom I sincerely believe our sacred promise was given by our officers and representatives. The Filipinos had fought Spain off and on for 200 years, trying to secure their independence. Do you think they forfeited the opportunity of their independence by the circumstance of our war over Cuba? We asked them to co-operate with us. We were told by them time and again that they were fighting for independence. Their purpose was well known by our generals and at the War Department, and by the President. The President repeatedly declared that we had no title and claimed no right to anything beyond the town of Manila. The American people are bound in honor to see that Cuba and the Philippines secure their independence. But when you talk to the gentlemen on the other side of this House trying to appeal to their lofty patriotism, they talk of the wealth to be acquired, of the commercial possibilities, of the extension of trade. Their very sentences teem with greed—greed for gold.

The amendment which it is proposed to put on the Army appropriation bill is the Spooner bill with two variations. It means, if passed, that the 12,000,000 of people shall be turned over to the unlimited power of one man, and that man the President of the United States, the man who sits at the head of the freest republican form of government ever yet established. They are subject to his will under this amendment. They will be subjects and not citizens of the government he establishes over them under this amendment. It has been practically admitted that this bill is unconstitutional by the other side of the House, but still they intend to pass it. They know that the imposition of our form of government upon a people against their wish is a foul wrong, but still they intend to perpetrate it. Why was it not passed as a bill within itself? Why should it be a rider, excepting that it was the intention to force its passage through with as little outcry as possible? We have heard very little in its defense from the other side. No one man seems willing to defend it. They seem to be relying solely upon the strength of numbers. They intend to pass it. Why? Is it because of the urgent need of our fellow-citizens, the Filipinos? No, it is the urgent need of our financial exploiters, who are anxiously waiting, as Commissioner Taft discloses in his communication to the Secretary of War. The land over there is exceedingly fertile, millions of acres of public land, rich mining prospects, fortunes in the fine timber. Pass it, pass it, so we may slake our thirst.

Mr. SULZER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX].

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois and the gentleman from Iowa cite as a precedent for this action the statute which was passed under Mr. Jefferson's Administration. The fact of the business is that the treaty which was ratified between the United States and France guaranteed to the people who lived in the Territory of Louisiana at that time citizenship, and not only that, but liberty and the rights of property, and the right to be taken into this Union. [Applause on the Democratic side.] And then by the act of Congress it was provided that the nine members of the council who were to be selected should be citizens of the Territory. They were all recognized as citizens. Now, what is the provision of the recent treaty between Spain and the United States? The people of the Spanish possessions which we have acquired are simply recognized as inhabitants, and the status of those inhabitants as citizens is to be fixed by the Congress of the United States.

Now, compare the two treaties—the treaty concluded during Jefferson's Administration and the recent treaty between the United States and Spain. Such a comparison will readily show that the precedent which you claim to follow finds no status in the facts of history.

Mr. SULZER. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. RIDGELY].

[Mr. RIDGELY addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, the adoption of the rule just offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] by the vote of the Republicans in this House is, in my judgment, the greatest outrage on the rights of the Democratic minority ever perpetrated in the history of this legislative body. It seems the minority have no rights here that the ruthless Republican majority are bound to respect. The Democrats are to be gagged, legitimate debate shut off, our protests frustrated, our appeals for justice denied, the rights of humanity trampled on; while the Republicans, intoxicated with power, ride roughshod over our rules, the Constitution, and the sacred guaranties of the Republic. The House of Representatives has ceased to be a deliberative body. It is the mere creature of one man. Let me read the rule prepared and just adopted by the Republicans to force through this House the pernicious and iniquitous legislation against Cuba and the Philippines:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 14017) making appropriations for the Army and without intervening motion to move to concur in the Senate amendments thereto in gross; after two hours' debate (one hour on each side) the previous question shall be considered as ordered on said motion, and a vote then be had thereon without delay or intervening motion.

The adoption of that unjust rule is in violation of the letter and the spirit of the rules of this House. As a member of the minority of this House, I enter my most emphatic protest against it and the outrage its adoption will speedily consummate. We should have at least a week to debate this matter.

What is the purpose of this arbitrary action? What dark deed is to be enacted by virtue of its adoption? Several weeks ago this House passed the Army appropriation bill and sent it to the Senate. By some inscrutable legislative legerdemain the Republicans in the Senate placed on this Army appropriation bill two amendments or riders—one affecting Cuba and the other in regard to the Philippines. Let us see what these two amendments are. Let us examine these two un-American and outrageous riders. The first amendment or rider relates to Cuba, and reads as follows, viz:

That in fulfillment of the declaration contained in the joint resolution approved April 20, 1898, entitled, "For the recognition of the independence of the people of Cuba, demanding that the Government of Spain relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba, and to withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters, and directing the President of the United States to use the land and naval forces of the United States to carry these resolutions into effect," the President is hereby authorized to "leave the government and control of the island of Cuba to its people" so soon as a government shall have been established in said island under a constitution which, either as a part thereof or in an ordinance appended thereto, shall define the future relations of the United States with Cuba, substantially as follows:

I.

That the government of Cuba shall never enter into any treaty or other compact with any foreign power or powers which will impair or tend to impair the independence of Cuba, nor in any manner authorize or permit any foreign power or powers to obtain by colonization or for military or naval purposes or otherwise, lodgment in or control over any portion of said island.

II.

That said government shall not assume or contract any public debt, to pay the interest upon which, and to make reasonable sinking fund provision for the ultimate discharge of which, the ordinary revenues of the island, after defraying the current expenses of government, shall be inadequate.

III.

That the government of Cuba consents that the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty, and for discharging the obligations with respect to Cuba imposed by the treaty of Paris on the United States, now to be assumed and undertaken by the government of Cuba.

IV.

That all acts of the United States in Cuba during its military occupancy thereof are ratified and validated, and all lawful rights acquired thereunder shall be maintained and protected.

V.

That the government of Cuba will execute, and as far as necessary extend, the plans already devised, or other plans to be mutually agreed upon, for the sanitation of the cities of the island, to the end that a recurrence of epidemic and infectious diseases may be prevented, thereby assuring protection to the people and commerce of Cuba, as well as to the commerce of the southern ports of the United States and the people residing therein.

VI.

That the Isle of Pines shall be omitted from the proposed constitutional boundaries of Cuba, the title thereto being left to future adjustment by treaty.

VII.

That to enable the United States to maintain the independence of Cuba, and to protect the people thereof, as well as for its own defense, the government of Cuba will sell or lease to the United States lands necessary for coaling or naval stations at certain specified points, to be agreed upon with the President of the United States.

VIII.

That by way of further assurance the government of Cuba will embody the foregoing provisions in a permanent treaty with the United States.

The second amendment, or rider, relates to the Philippines and reads as follows, viz:

All military, civil, and judicial powers necessary to govern the Philippine Islands, acquired from Spain by the treaties concluded at Paris on the 10th day of December, 1898, and at Washington on the 7th day of November, 1900, shall, until otherwise provided by Congress, be vested in such person and persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct, for the establishment of civil government and for maintaining and protecting the inhabitants of said islands in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion: Provided, That all franchises granted under the authority hereof shall contain a reservation of the right to alter, amend, or repeal the same.

Until a permanent government shall have been established in said archipelago full reports shall be made to Congress on or before the first day of each regular session of all legislative acts and proceedings of the temporary government instituted under the provisions hereof; and full reports of the acts and doings of said government, and as to the condition of the archipelago and of its people, shall be made to the President, including all information which may be useful to the Congress in providing for a more permanent government: Provided, That no sale or lease or other disposition of the public lands or the timber thereon or the mining rights therein shall be made: And provided further, That no franchise shall be granted which is not approved by the President of the United States, and is not in his judgment clearly necessary for the immediate government of the islands and indispensable for the interest of the people thereof, and which can not, without great public mischief, be postponed until the establishment of permanent civil government; and all such franchises shall terminate one year after the establishment of such permanent civil government.

Mr. Speaker, the far-reaching importance of these two riders, hastily put on an appropriation bill in the Senate, in violation of all precedent, is beyond calculation. They go to the very foundation of our Government. They place in the hands of the President unlimited, despotic, and autocratic power. They define and fix an arbitrary procedure and policy that may, and, in my opinion, will, cause endless trouble, enormous expense, and innumerable lives. They hazard interminable war. They present the most important question for wise, just, and deliberate solution and determination that has confronted the American Congress since the civil strife, and we are compelled to vote on them by the adoption of a partisan rule for political purposes, after a meager debate of only two hours—one hour on each side.

If the matter under consideration were not so serious, affecting as it does the lives, the liberties, the property, and the happiness of millions and millions of people under tropic suns, in the Occident and in the Orient—the attitude, the programme, and the procedure of the Republicans would be as absurd as it is Quixotic. This is a most momentous question, and we should have time to deliberate and the right to propose amendments. Under the rule we have neither. The Democratic members are cut off from their rights. They have no choice; no opportunity to give expression to their views. Perhaps we should be thankful that we can yet vote, and let the people of the country know that the Democratic representatives in Congress are to a man opposed to this infamy.

These two vicious riders, that will destroy every vestige of freedom in Cuba and every hope of liberty in the Philippines, were put on the Army bill in the Senate. They were put on in violation of all parliamentary procedure. They could not have been adopted in the first instance in this House. It has been said they were put on in the Senate by some understanding, some trade, some unholy bargain, between the alleged friends of liberty and the imperialistic opponents of freedom, in order to pass other bills and avoid an extra session of Congress. Be this as it may, I know not, although appearances are sometimes quite convincing; but we all know these riders, to trample in the dust in Cuba and the Philippines justice, liberty, and humanity, would never be here if the Democratic Senators had wanted to defeat them. They never could have been adopted in the Senate without the acquiescence of the Democrats there. They are responsible for this situation.

These riders are most despotic, most iniquitous, most unjust, and most inhuman. They portray in burning letters the sordid, greedy, and corrupt spirit of commercialism, which destroys our highest ideals, makes us ashamed of our past, and compels us to bow our heads in humiliation as we witness the present and contemplate the future of our country. They make our great Republic despicable and a byword of reproach. They reveal and unmask the cruel, sordid, treacherous policy of the Administration, and expose to full view the hypocrisy, the perfidy, and the infamy of the Republican party. I am opposed to these riders. They will never pass with my consent or my vote. If Congress enacts them into law, the President will be the most powerful, the most despotic, and the most autocratic potentate on earth. I am opposed to delegating the powers of Congress to the President. If these gradual surrenders of vested constitutional rights and transfers of legislative powers to the Executive continue, the day, in my judgment, is not far distant when we shall cease to be a representative government responsible to the people.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] has said that the provision regarding the Philippines is similar to the resolution enacted by Congress in regard to the temporary government of the Louisiana purchase. I beg to differ with the gentleman. He is sadly in error. To conclusively show the wide and startling difference let me read the act of 1803 regarding the temporary government of Jefferson's Louisiana purchase:

> Until the expiration of the present session of Congress, or unless provision be sooner made for the temporary government of the said territories, all the military, civil, and judicial powers exercised by the officers of the existing government of the same shall be vested in such person and persons, and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct, for maintaining and protecting the inhabitants of Louisiana in the full enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion.

Compare the two. There is no analogy between them. A casual reading of the two acts is sufficient. One is "until the expiration of the present session of Congress." The other is indefinite, and for all desired and practical purposes surrenders absolute and complete power to the President. The Philippine provision in this bill and the act of 1803, relating to the temporary government of Louisiana, are as far apart as the poles. And I say now that if the Republicans are sincere in their present contention they will permit the Democrats to offer as an amendment for the provision under discussion affecting the Philippines a substitute similar to the enactment of 1803 relating to Louisiana. If the other side will permit us to do that, I know and I declare that every Democrat on this side of the House will cheerfully vote for it. I challenge the majority to allow us to do it. Your refusal is an evidence of the insincerity and hypocrisy of your pretensions, and another demonstration of the imperialistic policy of force of the Republican party.

Let me, sir, say again what I have frequently said before on the floor of this House, that I am now, always have been, and always will be, opposed to the cruel, the inhuman, the ruthless, the un-American, and the unchristian conduct of this Administration to the struggling Filipinos, whose only crime is the love of liberty, their hope for freedom, and their aspiration for independence. If we had been true to ourselves, and to the great ideals of American manhood, patriotism, and statesmanship, not a drop of American blood would have been shed in the Philippine Archipelago. Sordid greed has cost us hundreds and hundreds of millions of dollars, and cruel lust for power thousands and thousands of precious lives. And the end is not yet.

How long will this costly war of extermination and subjugation last? Can anyone tell? Will it be the black page of Spain's history over again? I pray not. Sooner than see the Republic destroyed, and the Philippine Islands the tomb of the flower and the youth of America, I would do what I believe Abraham Lincoln would do if he were at the head of the Government to-day—help the Filipinos establish a stable government of their own, a republic fashioned after this Republic, and then say to all the world, "Hands off; any interference with the Filipino republic will be an act unfriendly to the United States."

So much, sir, in regard to the adoption of this partisan, unjust, and arbitrary rule in order to choke off debate, and to my position on the amendment surrendering all legislative power to the President, to perform whatever his autocratic will and despotic purpose may suggest regarding the Philippine Islands.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to say something in regard to the other amendment, or rider—the one relating to Cuba. I have been a friend of the Cuban patriots for years. When I first came to Congress, six years ago, I championed their cause in Congress and out of Congress, in season and out of season. I did all I could to help them throw off the tyrannous yoke of cruel and oppressive Spain. They were then waging a just war to secure their freedom and their independence. My sympathy was all with the Cuban patriots. I knew their oppression; I was familiar with all their suffering, with their long and heroic struggle for liberty and the right to govern themselves.

I introduced in this House the first resolution of sympathy for them, indulging the hope that they would succeed because their cause was just. I introduced in this House the first resolution granting them belligerent rights; the first resolution recognizing their independence, and the first resolution declaring war against Spain. When war was finally declared, I organized in the city of New York a regiment of soldiers and begged the Republican governor of New York, and also the President, to accept it and muster it into the service. They refused—presumably for political reasons. I was willing and anxious to resign my seat in this House to go to the front with my regiment and fight for Cuban independence, but could not get a chance, ostensibly because I was a Democrat. A perusal of the proceedings of this House before, during, and after the Spanish-American war will leave no one in doubt regarding my position on the Cuban question. I wanted to see Cuba free. In the second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress I said:

> My position is well known and unchangeable. Long, long ago I made up my mind. I have never deviated from the first stand I took. I want to see Cuba free. She must be free and independent. The Spaniard and his yellow flag—the emblem of atrocity—must go.
> You know that in all the history of the world no people ever deserved the right of self-government more than the heroic, struggling Cuban patriots. For centuries they have been oppressed, robbed, starved, and murdered by a cruel foreign power. The tyranny of Spain, her refined butcheries, her fiendish brutalities, are the blackest pages in the annals of the world. * * *
> What a sad story the history of poor Cuba tells! For more than three centuries Spain has ruled her with a blood-stained and an iron hand. It has been a thousand times worse than the rule of the Turk. It has been a thousand times worse than the rule of a barbaric military despotism over a conquered and subjected province.
> The history of poor Cuba's trials, her woes, her troubles, and her tribulations never has been written and never will be written. Not half the truth will ever be known. And more the shame!
> Spanish rule in Cuba has been one long, unending, hideous carnival of crime, of public plunder, of rapine, of official robbery, of murder, of starvation, of destitution, of assassination, and of cruel, torturing death—a frightful, big black blot on the pages of civilization; a lasting, burning disgrace to all Christendom; an impudent, imperial challenge, backed by the bayonet, to the sober sense of humanity and the Christian civilization of the world.

And subsequently I said in the same Congress:

> I stand now where I have always stood, where I will stand until the last—for the liberty-loving people of Cuba, who are making and have made as heroic and as gallant a battle for freedom and independence as any people ever made in the history of the world. I want to see them win, and I know they will win if this great Republic, which should stand as a shining light, as a beacon, and as an example for all the other republics of the world and for every people struggling for liberty and independence, will simply do its duty.

That, sir, in substance, was my position then in regard to Cuba. I was for Cuban independence then, and I am for Cuban independence now. I have not changed my views. Nothing has occurred since the signing of the treaty of peace in Paris to make me alter in any way my original opinions. On the contrary, much has happened to confirm and strengthen them. The record is made up. It speaks for itself. We should keep faith. We went to war with Spain to free Cuba, not to annex Cuba; not to free the Cubans from Spanish slavery in order to enforce American despotism. We declared our high moral purpose of intervention to be in the interest of civilization.

We patriotically proclaimed that the war was to be waged for liberty, for freedom, and for humanity, and called all the world to witness our noble intentions and our undying devotion to the fundamental tenets of the fathers as embodied in the immortal Declaration of Independence. As proof of this let me read and again put in the RECORD the resolution of Congress declaring war against Spain, approved by the President on the 20th day of April, 1898:

Joint resolution for the recognition of the independence of the people of Cuba, demanding that the Government of Spain relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba, and to withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters, and directing the President of the United States to use the land and naval forces of the United States to carry these resolutions into effect.

Whereas the abhorrent conditions which have existed for more than three years in the island of Cuba, so near our own borders, have shocked the moral sense of the people of the United States, have been a disgrace to Christian civilization, culminating, as they have, in the destruction of a United States battle ship with 266 of its officers and crew, while on a friendly visit in the harbor of Habana, and can not longer be endured, as has been set forth by the President of the United States in his message to Congress of April 11, 1898, upon which the action of Congress was invited; Therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, First. That the people of the island of Cuba are, and of right ought to be, free and independent.

Second. That it is the duty of the United States to demand, and the Government of the United States does hereby demand, that the Government of Spain at once relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba and withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters.

Third. That the President of the United States be, and he hereby is, directed and empowered to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States, and to call into the actual service of the United States the militia of the several States, to such extent as may be necessary to carry these resolutions into effect.

Fourth. That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
GARRET A. HOBART,
Vice-President of the United States and President of the Senate.

Approved April 20, 1898.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

There is nothing doubtful, nothing ambiguous, about that resolution. It pledged the sacred honor of the Government and the solemn word of our people to drive Spain from Cuba; declared that the Cubans are, and of right ought to be, free and independent; and disclaimed any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island. The question now is, it seems to me, Shall we keep our word or break it? Shall we live up to our sacred promise or abjectly stultify ourselves in order that personal pelf may follow political perfidy?

Let us be honest. We must not forget. We should keep our word. We should fulfill the letter and the spirit of the promise. We should do our duty and give the Cubans absolute freedom and independence. There should be no conditions. Any different policy now, any deviation from our promise of three years ago, will be national dishonor and a stultification that must bring to the cheek of every honest American the blush of shame. Shall the plighted faith of the nation be kept? Americans, read that sinister Republican rider regarding Cuba, attached to this appropriation bill by the servile servants of commercialism in the Senate, in the light of our patriotic declaration of war, and answer! Its adoption here to-day means national dishonor, national repudiation, national shame, and national perfidy.

The vote here to-day, sir, will show that the Republican party has chosen to stand for disgrace and dishonor—for pelf and power; that the representatives of the Democratic party stand for liberty, for loyalty to the principles of the fathers, for freedom, for the fulfillment of the national promise, for the sacred rights of man, for peace and prosperity, for the Constitution, and, above and beyond all, for the traditions and the true glory and destiny of the Republic.

For mankind are one in spirit, and an instinct bears along,
Round the earth's electric circle, the swift flash of right or wrong.
Whether conscious or unconscious, yet Humanity's vast frame
Through its ocean-sundered fibers feels the gush of joy or shame;
In the gain or loss of one race all the rest have equal claim.

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight,
Parts the goats upon the left hand and the sheep upon the right,
And the choice goes by forever 'twixt that darkness and that light.

Mr. HULL. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GIBSON].

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. Speaker, the provisions of this bill in reference to Cuba and the Philippines are wise and salutary both for the people of the United States and for the people of those islands.

First, as to Cuba, the Senate amendment is timely and prudent. While we stand pledged to recognize the independence of Cuba, we do not stand pledged to allow it to become again the seat of disorder, the propagator of the plague, the prey of foreign powers, and the base of attack upon our own country; and in giving Cuba her independence we must couple with the gift such conditions that, while not harming her, will make us safe. We propose that Cuba's independence shall be a shield to protect her and not a sword to hurt us.

Speaking for myself, I feel free to say that when I voted three years ago that the people of Cuba were "free and independent" I did not so vote because I believed it, but because it was embedded in a resolution requiring Spain to leave the island and directing the President of the United States to drive her out if she refused to go; and I, along with many other members of this House, swallowed the bitter with the sweet, voting for what we did not believe, to get what we wanted—that is, to force Spain to leave Cuba.

CUBA MUST BE OUR WARD.

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe the Cubans are fit for self-government, and so I do not want us to turn the island completely over to them until they demonstrate their capacity to rule their island wisely and well, so that life, liberty, property, and the pursuit of happiness shall be secured to all under good laws properly administered.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, if the people of Cuba are wise and prudent, they would be glad to have our Government exercise a sort of mild guardianship for a short time; and the fact that so many of their leaders seem devoid of all gratitude to the United States for the many millions of dollars we have spent in their behalf makes me suspicious of what Cuba's fate may be when wholly committed to their hands.

I want Cuba fairly treated; but I want my own country fairly treated also. What have we done for Cuba? We found her people dying of starvation in prison pens, or slaughtered by a merciless foreign soldiery; and we have driven out these soldiers, opened the prison doors and made every Cuban free, and fed them generously from our own table. We found the Cubans deprived of all voice in their own government, and we have turned their oppressors out of power and given all of the municipal offices to the Cubans themselves.

We found Cuba desolated by fire and sword from one end of the island to the other, and we have brought peace and law and order, and opened to every man full opportunity to honorably and easily earn his own living. In a word, Mr. Speaker, we found Cuba a hell, and we are fast converting it into a paradise.

And shall we have no right to guard this island and see to it that disorder shall not take the place of order, and see to it that the island, by unwise treaties, be not given over to our enemies, and to see to it that the yellow fever does not use its shores as a base from which to invade our country and destroy our people?

This is all that the Senate amendment proposes to do, and if we should let Cuba go out of our hands without guaranties for our own protection, we should be derelict in duty, false to our own people, and deficient in that foresight which belongs to prudent statesmanship.

OUR TREATMENT OF THE PHILIPPINES.

Next, as to the Philippines. The Senate amendment proposes to give the President general authority to govern the Philippine Islands. I do not propose to discuss this amendment in detail. It is sufficient for me to call attention to the fact that it is, in substance, the same as the authority given by Congress to President Jefferson to govern Louisiana, and to President Monroe to govern Florida; and if it was no crime in those Congresses to grant such power, surely it can be no crime in this Congress. Jefferson was the founder of the Democratic party, and James Monroe was one of its great apostles, and yet it was deemed all right in their day to grant them full power to govern Louisiana and Florida, then newly acquired foreign territory.

In order that the Senate amendment may be compared to the law under which Jefferson ruled Louisiana and Monroe ruled Florida, I give all three. The pith of the Senate amendment is as follows:

All military, civil, and judicial powers necessary to govern the Philippine Islands, shall, until otherwise provided by Congress, be vested in such person and persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct, for the establishment of civil government and for maintaining and protecting the inhabitants of said islands in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion: Provided, That all franchises granted under the authority hereof shall contain a reservation of the right to alter, amend, or repeal the same.

The Jefferson law, passed in 1803, is as follows:

That until the expiration of the present session of Congress, unless provision for temporary government of the said territories be sooner made by Congress, all the military, civil, and judicial powers exercised by the officers of the existing (French) government of the same shall be vested in such person and persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct, for maintaining and protecting the inhabitants of Louisiana in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion.

The law under which Monroe ruled Florida, passed in 1821, reads as follows:

All military, civil, and judicial powers exercised by officers of the existing (Spanish) government of the same territories (East and West Florida) shall be vested in such person and persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct.

Now, Mr. Speaker, any impartial man will quickly decide that the Senate amendment is the most liberal of the three; besides the Senate amendment, in addition to the restriction as to franchises which I have quoted, contains a prohibition against the sale or lease of public lands, timber, or mines, none of which were in the Jefferson or Madison laws.

THE PRESIDENT UNJUSTLY CRITICISED.

For the last two years we have heard a great deal of complaint from certain "good people" that the President had no right to govern the Philippines without the authority of Congress. The abuse by these "good people" was not against Congress for not legislating about the Philippines, but against the President for presuming to govern the Philippines without the authority of Congress, as though the inaction of Congress was not equivalent to its consent to the President's course.

It has always seemed to me that these "good people" should have launched their fulminations against Congress for not legislating; but it was the programme of these "good people" to do all they could to break down the President; and so they had sworn in their hearts to abuse McKinley not only for what he had done and had not done, but also to abuse him for all that Congress has done or has not done.

And what is the secret of all this vituperation? McKinley stands as the great champion of American protection, as the chief defender of the gold standard, and as the chief promoter of American prosperity; and the defeated Free Silverites, the baffled free traders, and the disgraced false prophets of calamity and hard times have determined that they will do all they can to destroy our President, and if they can not wholly destroy him, at least mortify and humiliate him—

Which, if not victory, is yet revenge.

Scratch any of these abusers of McKinley, and you will find him either a Free Silverite or a free trader, or a natural-born calamity howler.

Oh, Mr. Speaker, I get tired of listening on the floor of this House and reading in the newspapers this everlasting twaddle about McKinley's "imperialism," coming, as it does, from the lips of the very men who worship Jefferson as a god and Monroe as a saint. Oh, it was all right for Jefferson and Monroe to do what McKinley is now doing, but it is all wrong in McKinley.

Mr. Speaker, I have heretofore said, and now say, that if Bryan had been elected four years ago the Spanish war would have come on all the same, Dewey would have sunk the Spanish fleet in Manila Bay all the same, our Army would now be in the Philippine Islands as it is to-day, and Bryan would be doing there just what McKinley is now doing, and all of these men now abusing McKinley would be praising and glorifying Bryan, and calling him a second Jefferson and a new Monroe; and if any man dared to call Bryan an imperialist he would be in danger of being hung by a mob or burned at the stake.

These fellows who are abusing McKinley are like the fellows who abused Jesus; and when they had the right to choose between Jesus and Barabbas, they all chose Barabbas the robber, and cried out, "Away with Jesus! Crucify him!" And so these Free Silverites, free traders, and calamity howlers cry out, "Away with McKinley! Crucify him! Give us Bryan!"

There is one strange thing about these Democratic politicians—whatever their leaders do is all right, but whatever the Republicans do is all wrong, even when they do the very same thing the Democrats have done. Now, here we are doing our very best to follow in the footsteps of Jefferson and Monroe, those mighty Democrats, as marked out by Democratic Congresses, and yet these latter-day saints of Democracy come along and declare that we are traveling the wrong road.

FORMER PRESIDENTS ABUSED.

In these days of telegraphs, railroads, steamships, and daily newspapers time rapidly becomes ancient, and what took place one hundred years ago is almost as unknown as what took place in Rome two thousand years ago or what took place in Jerusalem three thousand years ago.

How many of the people of my own State recall the fact that when North Carolina ceded the territory now Tennessee to the General Government, George Washington, then President of the United States, appointed William Blount governor, and gave him and two Federal judges legislative, judicial, and executive powers over the new Territory? Indeed, Governor Blount did not always wait for his colleagues, but often, and indeed generally, acted alone. The very first legislative act of the new governor of the new Territory was to create the counties of Knox and Jefferson, now in my district. The act begins thus:

By William Blount, governor in and over the territory of the United States of America south of the River Ohio:

Be it ordained, That two new counties be laid out and established, * * * from and after the 15th of June instant [1792], by the name of Jefferson County and Knox County.

This ordinance fixes the boundaries of these two new counties, establishes local courts, and fixes the times and places for their meeting, and concludes thus:

Done at Knoxville the 11th day of June, in the year of our Lord 1792.
WILLIAM BLOUNT.

By the governor:
DANIEL SMITH, Secretary.

That is the way, Mr. Speaker, that President George Washington and his governor, William Blount, did things one hundred and eight years ago, and yet we find that our liberties survived the awful strain. Mr. Speaker, there were "good men" in that day who called Washington a "king," and charged that he aimed to "usurp the constitutional powers of government," and there were cartoons printed and scattered abroad picturing Washington dressed in kingly robes, with a crown on his head and a scepter in his hand.

Yes, awful things were predicted then of Washington; but the country survived, our liberties remain unimpaired, the Constitution continues in full force, and the blessed liberty of free speech, to abuse and vilify our Presidents and all others in authority, still exists undiminished.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, all of our great Presidents have been charged with violating the Constitution and acting the tyrant. The charge was even made against Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence, the discoverer of the rights of the governed and the inventor of the Democratic party.

And similar charges were made against Jackson, Polk, Lincoln, and Grant—all made by "good people"—and yet our country lives, Washington is honored, Jefferson is honored, Jackson, Polk, Lincoln, and Grant are all honored, the names of these "good people" who made the charges are all forgotten, our liberties remain, our country has grown and prospered, our people are happy and contented, and the God of high heaven seems still to smile upon us and bless us.

And so will it be, Mr. Speaker, in the case of President McKinley. These "good people" who charge him with "imperialism," who declare that he has "violated the Constitution," and who denounce him as a "tyrant" and a "usurper," will all die and be forgotten, as have those who vilified Washington and Jefferson and Jackson and Polk and Lincoln and Grant. Our liberties will continue; our rights will be preserved; our Constitution will be maintained; our country will remain the "land of the free and the home of the brave;" the people of Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines will have been transfigured by the spirit of American liberty and the genius of American civilization; and the baby is now born that will live to see the day when the name of William McKinley will be linked with those of Washington and Lincoln as the three greatest Presidents produced by the great American Republic from its foundation to the close of the nineteenth century, Washington being the great founder of the Republic, Lincoln its great preserver, and McKinley its great expander.

OUR POLICY IN PORTO RICO PROVED WISE.

You remember, Mr. Speaker, the awful hullabaloo raised a year ago against the law we passed imposing a tariff tax on certain goods imported to and exported from Porto Rico, the taxes thus raised to be spent there in lieu of all other taxes. We were charged with having violated the Constitution, with having robbed the Porto Ricans of their lawful right of self-taxation, and with having actually turned down the President himself. These Democrats are a queer set of fellows. They do not want the President turned down unless they do it themselves! McKinley was all wrong in reference to Porto Rican taxation until the Republicans in Congress differed with him on this question, and then, presto, change! McKinley all at once became just exactly right. But McKinley despised their approbation as he despised their opposition. McKinley had the good sense to see that the plan of Congress was better just then than his own, and he magnanimously and patriotically approved our plan.

And what has happened, Mr. Speaker? Our law was found to be a great blessing, the people of Porto Rico approved of it and have prospered under it and want it continued. But the legislature of Porto Rico, elected by the people of the island, have passed a tax law to take the place of our tariff tax law, and now we hear a howl from the people of Porto Rico against any change in the law we passed.

And what are the Democrats now saying? What are these howlers now saying, who had so much to say a year ago about Porto Rico being oppressed? Not a word! They are as silent as dumb men. Their voices have left them. They howl no more. They have been confounded by the great fact now overwhelmingly demonstrated that the law we Republicans passed for the taxation of Porto Rican exports and imports was a most wise and salutary law and has been a great blessing to that beautiful island.

The Porto Rican legislature has passed a law to supersede the law we passed, for our law was only temporary and was to continue only until the Porto Ricans could pass a tax law of their own. This Porto Rican tax law is called the "Hollander bill," and a few days ago a committee of Porto Ricans came to Washington to beg that our law should continue.

PORTO RICANS PREFER CONGRESSIONAL LAW TO THEIR OWN.

I read this account of their mission from the Washington Post of February 25, and call attention to the fact that the Post was hostile to the law we passed. I read:

Messrs. W. Borda and Vicente Balbas, of Porto Rico, members of the commission appointed to protest to President McKinley and Congress against the Hollander revenue bill, and Mr. Freeman Halstead, secretary of the commission, arrived in Washington last night, and are guests at the Arlington. The commission was appointed at a mass meeting held in San Juan February 2 and attended by more than 3,000 Porto Ricans, representing the varied business interests of the island. The commissioners expect to call upon the President to-day or to-morrow, and within a few days will present to the Government a formal protest against the operations of the Hollander bill.

The members of the commission are among the wealthiest and most prominent of Porto Ricans. Mr. Borda is an American citizen, with a legal residence in New York, but has large property interests in the island. Mr. Balbas is also a large property owner, and is editor and proprietor of the Heraldo, the leading paper of the island. Mr. Halstead is an American newspaper man who is at present managing editor of the San Juan News.

"There is no longer any opposition on the island," said Mr. Halstead last night, "to the 15 per cent tariff imposed by Congress upon Porto Rican imports and exports to the United States. The revolution of sentiment with reference to the tariff has been gradual, but it has been complete, and complaints against it are no longer heard. The object of the commission's coming to Washington is to induce the Government to allow the present tariff to remain, instead of having it supplanted by the objectionable Hollander bill. Already, as a result of the operations of the Hollander bill, a large number of tobacco manufactories and distilleries have shut down, throwing more than a thousand men out of employment."

And in like manner, Mr. Speaker, will all of our other laws be found just, wise, and salutary; and before McKinley's next term is out many of the men now howling against him will have another spell of the lockjaw, for they will see, as the world will see, that all of our laws relating to Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands are wise, just, and salutary, promotive of the welfare of those islands, and grand exhibitions of the wisdom, generosity, and magnanimous purposes of the Government of the United States in dealing with them.

EXPANSION OF NATIONS.

It is no uncommon thing to hear a certain class of orators say: "Rome acquired foreign territory and Rome fell." Hence they argue if the United States acquires foreign territory it will fall also. In the first place, Mr. Speaker, if Rome had never acquired foreign territory she never would have been Rome. She would have been nothing but a contemptible conglomeration of insignificant huts on the banks of the Tiber, the prey of the first petty conqueror who had an appetite for such worthless spoil.

It was by the "acquisition of foreign territory" that Rome spread her civilization over the world, and thereby did more for mankind than any other nation of antiquity. It was through imperial Rome that the civil law was impressed on every nation of continental Europe, and through these nations on the whole world. It was through imperial Rome that the Christian religion was enabled to triumph over paganism and become the dominant religion of Europe, and through Europe the dominant religion of the earth.

To say that Rome's downfall grew out of her expansion is to say that a man's downfall is the result of his growth from childhood. Mr. Speaker, these gentlemen who oppose expansion oppose growth. They say growth is a sign of decay and destruction. They remind me of doting mothers who grieve that their baby boys should ever grow up to be "awful men," or their daughters ever marry, not stopping to consider that if such wishes prevailed the whole human race would have come to an end with Adam and Eve!

No doubt some of these "good people" think the children of Israel made a great mistake by crossing the Red Sea, traversing the desert, and fording the Jordan to make war on the Canaanites and conquer their country.

These same "good people," if they are consistent, are bound to grieve because our forefathers crossed the ocean and drove the Indians out of this land.

Look at England! Suppose she had acquired no foreign territory, what would she be to-day? A little fraction of a little island; long ago, in all probability, conquered by France or Spain. But by the acquisition of foreign territory she has spread over nearly one-third of the earth the best civilization, the wisest laws, the truest forms of liberty, and the most exalted religion the world has ever known.

Our own country is the fruit of England's expansion, and if she had never expanded the United States of America would have never existed.

And, Mr. Speaker, if we had never expanded, where would we be to-day as a people? We would still be clinging to the shores of the Atlantic Ocean. The first step our forefathers took after leaving their ships was to "acquire foreign territory;" and every westward step they have taken since has been to "acquire foreign territory." And on and on we have gone, crossing the Blue Ridge Mountains, the Alleghenies, the Smokies, and the Cumberland; then crossing the Mississippi River, then the prairies and the plains, then the Rocky Mountains and the Sierra Nevadas, until at last we reached the Pacific Ocean.

And here we were disposed to rest until the thunder of Dewey's cannon, like the voice of God's angel, called on us to cross the Pacific Ocean and plant our feet on its other shore.

No doubt a plenty of "good people" said it was unwise, inhuman, and unchristian for our forefathers to cross the Atlantic Ocean three hundred years ago and drive out the American Indians and take possession of their country; and if these "good people" had had their way there never would have been any white men over here and never would have been any United States of America, but all of its splendid territory would be to-day as it was when Columbus discovered it—an unbroken wilderness inhabited by unbroken savages—and these howlers and kickers and fault-finders would never have been born.

INCONSISTENCY OF SOUTHERN DEMOCRATS.

There is one thing about some of these "good men" who are charging the Republicans with oppressing the people of the Philippines that strikes me as a little inconsistent. The "good men" to whom I now refer live in those Southern States where the negro vote is practically abolished. I want to know why it is they are such zealous defenders of the rights of yellow and black people who live ten thousand miles away and yet are so hostile to the right of yellow and black people who live in their own States, and are their own neighbors? In the New Testament the question is asked how we can love him whom we have not seen, when we fail to love him whom we have seen.

If I saw these Southern Democrats standing up for the rights of the negro in their own States, then I could believe them when they say they want the black and yellow people of the Philippines to have all the political and civil rights of American freemen. It must be a poor political rule that works one way at home and works another way abroad. That must be a strange sauce that is good for the goose but bad for the gander.

That is an unrighteous kind of charity that has closed ears and closed hands for those who are born and raised our neighbors, but has open ears and open hands for those who live 10,000 miles away. I used to hear it said that "charity begins at home," but now these Democrats want me to believe that charity begins 10,000 miles away from home. That may be Democratic charity, but it is not the sort of charity that St. Paul tells us of; and the great apostle says that though these men speak with the tongues of angels, if they have not this true charity, they "become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." Verily, St. Paul must have foreseen the day when Southern Democrats would rise on the floor of this House and plead for the people of the Philippines, while oppressing their own neighbors. I wonder if some of these Southern Democrats, who so eloquently declare that the people of the Philippines should be given every right and every liberty and every privilege we enjoy, do not hear jingling in their ears, while they plead for those 10,000 miles away and oppress those at home, "You are become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." And verily, Mr. Speaker, we have had a blizzard of "sounding brass" this day on this floor.

FALSE PROPHETS OF EVIL.

"Good men" are sometimes prophets of evil. During our Revolutionary war good men predicted that it would result in the destruction of what few liberties our ancestors then enjoyed. During the formation of our Constitution "good men" predicted that instead of being the shield of liberty it would prove to be the sword of tyranny. When Washington was President some "good men" declared he was no better than a king. And when Jefferson became President some "good men" branded him as an emperor. Some "good men" denounced Andrew Jackson as a tyrant and a usurper. Some "good men" charged that Abraham Lincoln was a despot. Some "good men" predicted that if Grant were elected President he would overturn the Constitution and we would never elect another President.

And now, Mr. Speaker, some of these same "good men" are calling William McKinley an "emperor," and are prophesying that he will destroy our Constitution and rob us of our liberties.

Scientific men say that sometimes the eye is so diseased that everything we see has a sickly, yellow color. So, it would seem, there is a disease of the mind that causes everything to appear dark and foreboding. Persons that have this disease, if they belong to the church, see nothing but hell and damnation in front of the human race; and if they are politicians, see nothing but war, pestilence, famine, and general ruin in the future of their country.

Mr. Speaker, in my day most of these "good men" have been Democrats. Away back in 1860 I heard them declaring, with tears in their eyes and grief in their voices, that the success of the Republican party would ruin our country. During the civil war I heard these "good men" lamenting that our liberties were gone and our rights everlastingly lost. Since the close of the war I have heard these "good men" swear that the "bloated bondholders" were devouring the substance of the people and that starvation would be the sure fate of the poor. A little later on these "good people" made oath that the "robber barons" would soon own everything, and everybody else own nothing. Indeed, only four years ago thousands of these "good men" traveled all over the United States warning the people that the "Gold Bugs" had all conspired to buy up our country and sell it to England.

And now, Mr. Speaker, these same "good men," with voices of lamentation, are predicting that William McKinley and the Republican party, having already devoured the Porto Ricans, bodies, boots, and breeches, are on their way to swallow Cuba and devastate the Philippines.

FALSE PROPHETS PERISH, BUT THE NATION SURVIVES.

When I was a boy there was a religious sect known as the "Millerites," who believed that the world was doomed to come to an end on a certain day, and on that day they assembled themselves together and proclaimed themselves the elect and damned all the balance of mankind.

During the debate here this afternoon, when I saw and heard Democrat after Democrat get up and declare that they were all the good men left on earth to defend the Constitution and preserve liberty, and that William McKinley and the Republicans were defiling the holy places and outraging human rights and massacreing the children of freedom, I was reminded of the "Millerites" and took courage; for, though the "Millerites" scared many old women and young girls, nevertheless the good earth was not destroyed; seedtime and harvest continued, and the "Millerites" became a laughingstock the balance of their lives.

And so, Mr. Speaker, these "good men" of the Democratic party will die as died those other "good men," their predecessors; their prophecies of evil will come to naught, as did the prophecies of the "Millerites" and of those other "good men;" and William McKinley and the Republican party, like Washington and the Federal party, like Lincoln and the Union party, will go on fighting the battles of progress, extending the area of freedom, and carrying the blessings of liberty, law, religion, and science wherever the flag of our country may float and the footsteps of our countrymen are planted.

Mr. HULL. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HAMILTON].

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, the question here involved is not a partisan question. There is no controversy as to whether the Constitution follows the flag, or whether the Constitution extends itself. The question is simply whether it is right to authorize the President to suggest the conditions contained in the Senate amendments to this bill relating to Cuba.

By joint resolution of Congress adopted April 20, 1898, we declared that—

Whereas the abhorrent conditions which have existed for more than three years in the island of Cuba, so near our own borders, have shocked the moral sense of the people of the United States, have been a disgrace to Christian civilization, culminating, as they have, in the destruction of a United States battle ship, with 266 of its officers and crew, while on a friendly visit in the harbor of Habana, and can not longer be endured, as has been set forth by the President of the United States in his message to Congress of April 11, 1898, upon which the action of Congress was invited: Therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, First. That the people of the island of Cuba are, and of right ought to be, free and independent.

Second. That it is the duty of the United States to demand, and the Government of the United States does hereby demand, that the Government of Spain at once relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba and withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters.

Third. That the President of the United States be, and he hereby is, directed and empowered to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States and to call into the actual service of the United States the militia of the several States to such extent as may be necessary to carry these resolutions into effect.

Fourth. That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people

The declaration in this resolution "that the people of the island of Cuba are and of right ought to be free and independent" was not all true.

At the time this resolution was adopted they were not free and independent, but were a colony of Spain in revolt against tyranny of long standing, and the statement that they were then free and independent was not true, but did no harm and is not necessary in determining the relations which now ought to subsist between Cuba and the United States as a result of the war with Spain which followed this resolution.

The essential parts of the declaration contained in the resolution of April 20, 1898, are:

1. That the people of Cuba ought to be free and independent.

2. That the Government of the United States demands that Spain relinquish its authority and government in Cuba and that it quit and vacate Cuba and Cuban waters with its land and naval forces.

3. That the President of the United States is empowered to use the land and naval forces of the United States to execute these resolutions.

4. "That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island, except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination when that is accomplished to leave the government and control of the island to its people."

By these resolutions the Government of the United States voluntarily placed limitations upon its future action respecting the island of Cuba and is estopped, in equity and good conscience, from taking action inconsistent with them.

That is to say, (1) we have declared that the people of Cuba ought to be free and independent.

2. We have disclaimed any intention to claim "sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over the island except for the pacification thereof."

3. And we have asserted our determination when pacification is accomplished "to leave the government and control of the island to its people."

In view of the suggestion now contained in section 6 (relating to the Isle of Pines) of this authorization to the President as to relinquishment of the government and control of the island, the language of the resolution of April 20, 1898, whereby our declaration of intentions is limited to the "island of Cuba" is significant.

We went to war with Spain for the cause of humanity.

So far as I can remember no other war was ever fought prompted by such high and honorable motives.

The war was demanded by our people, with but few exceptions, without regard to politics.

The war which had been raging in Cuba for more than three years was practically a continuation of the revolutions of 1844, 1848, and 1851, and the ten years' war from 1868 to 1878.

Age and sex had not been spared. Every resource of Cuba had been drained to pay for Spanish domination. Justice had become a farce. Highwaymen had plundered where the general government overlooked, and finally, under the administration of General Weyler, the policy of concentration was adopted, whereby thousands of people had been starved to death.

We had for some time been put to great trouble and expense to restrain our own patriotic people from the breach of international law in their sympathy for Cuba.

In the hope of bloodless adjustment the President had urged reasonable concessions by Spain without avail.

Aside from our duty to abate international disorder at our own door, we were under a moral obligation to interfere.

By the Monroe doctrine we had warned other nations against aiding Cuba, and had thereby cut Cuba off from seeking aid elsewhere.

We had reasserted the Monroe doctrine in our party platforms and had reaffirmed the right of this Government "to give that doctrine effect by responding to the appeals of any American state for friendly intervention in case of European encroachment."

We had been specific as to Cuba, and said:

"The Government of Spain having lost control of Cuba and being unable to protect the lives and property of resident American citizens or to comply with its treaty obligations, we believe that the Government of the United States should actively use its influence and good offices to restore peace and give independence to the island."

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

The Monroe doctrine is international law, and nations must be presumed to take notice of international law.

All that has been done by the United States with reference to Cuba has been done subject to the Monroe doctrine, and the question now arises whether what is proposed to be asked by these amendments is within the scope of our rights under the Monroe doctrine.

A brief review of the incidents leading to the declaration of the Monroe doctrine and of the American policy which that doctrine supplemented becomes necessary as a part of this argument.

In 1793, when France declared war with Great Britain and our Government was called upon for the first time to determine what our relations ought to be to the nations of Europe, Washington issued his proclamation of neutrality, for which he was slandered as no President since his time has been slandered.

On his final retirement, in his farewell address, he set forth his reasons for not interfering in the affairs of Europe, and his policy outlined in that address has been the settled policy of this nation ever since.

In Jefferson's inaugural address, March 4, 1801, he declared that the principles which should govern his Administration were "peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations—entangling alliances with none."

He repeated this in his annual message to Congress October 17, 1803.

The policy of Washington of no entangling alliances with foreign nations was afterwards supplemented by the Monroe doctrine.

After the defeat of Napoleon at Waterloo, in 1815, Alexander of Russia, believing that Napoleon's overthrow was a signal illustration of providential interposition in favor of the divine right of kings, invited the Kings of Prussia and Austria to join him in a league, which he called the "Holy Alliance." The expressed purpose of this alliance was that the kings who were parties to it would endeavor to rule their dominions in accordance with the principles of Christianity. The monarchs who joined the alliance soon fell away from its high purpose, if they ever really entertained it. The Kings of France, Spain, Naples, and Sardinia joined the league.

Within two months there grew out of the holy alliance what is known as the quadruple treaty between Russia, Prussia, Austria, and Great Britain, signed at Paris in 1815.

At the signing of this treaty it was agreed that the parties thereto should meet in conference at Aix-la-Chapelle in 1818, and at the Aix-la-Chapelle conference the powers united in a project for the joint regulation of European affairs.

Later and pending another meeting of the powers at Vienna in 1822, Spain being then involved in trouble with her American colonies, Mr. Canning, then minister of England, proposed to Mr. Rush, then representing the United States at London, a joint declaration by England and the United States that "it was impossible to look with indifference upon European intervention in the affairs of the colonies of Spain and to see them acquired by a third power."

Mr. Rush refused to join in this joint declaration, on the theory that such joinder would be inconsistent with the policy of Washington as set forth in his Farewell Address, and thereupon made report to Mr. Monroe.

Mr. Monroe submitted the letters of Mr. Rush to Mr. Jefferson, who replied, saying, among other things, that "this question * * * is the most momentous which has ever been offered to my contemplation since that of independence. That made us a nation; this sets our compass and points the course which we are to steer through the ocean of time opening on us."

In his annual message to Congress December 2, 1823, Mr. Monroe promulgated the Monroe doctrine, the substance of which is contained in three inhibitions:

1. No more European colonies on these continents.

2. No extension of European political systems to any portion of this hemisphere.

3. No European interposition in the affairs of the Spanish-American republics.

The Monroe doctrine has been applied to Cuba in the following instances:

October 25, 1825, Mr. Clay, then Secretary of State, in a communication to Mr. Brown, then American minister to France, referring to a former communication, said:

"It was stated to the French Government that the United States could not see with indifference these islands (Cuba and Porto Rico) passing from Spain to any other European power."

Mr. Calhoun, in a speech in the Senate May 15, 1848, declared it to be the fixed determination of this Government "that if Cuba pass from her (Spain) it shall not be into any other hands but ours."

December 1, 1852, Mr. Everett, then Secretary of State under President Fillmore, declared that the President fully concurred with his predecessors "that the United States could not see with indifference the island of Cuba fall into the possession of any other European government than Spain."

By these amendments we now propose:

That in fulfillment of the declaration contained in the joint resolution approved April 20, 1898, entitled "for the recognition of the independence of the people of Cuba, demanding that the government of Spain relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba, and to withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters, and directing the President of the United States to use the land and naval forces of the United States to carry these resolutions into effect," the President is hereby authorized to "leave the government and control of the island of Cuba to its people" so soon as a government shall have been established in said island under a constitution which, either as a part thereof or in an ordinance appended thereto, shall define the future relations of the United States with Cuba, substantially as follows:

1. That the government of Cuba shall never enter into any treaty or other compact with any foreign power or powers which will impair or tend to impair the independence of Cuba, nor in any manner authorize or permit any foreign power or powers to obtain by colonization or for military or naval purposes or otherwise lodgment in or control over any portion of said island.

2. That said government shall not assume or contract any public debt to pay the interest upon which and to make reasonable sinking-fund provision for the ultimate discharge of which the ordinary revenues of the island, after defraying the current expenses of government, shall be inadequate.

3. That the government of Cuba consents that the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty, and for discharging the obligations with respect to Cuba imposed by the treaty of Paris on the United States, now to be assumed and undertaken by the government of Cuba.

4. That all acts of the United States in Cuba during its military occupancy thereof are ratified and validated, and all lawful rights acquired thereunder shall be maintained and protected.

5. That the government of Cuba will execute and, as far as necessary, extend the plans already devised, or other plans to be mutually agreed upon, for the sanitation of the cities of the island, to the end that a recurrence of epidemic and infectious diseases may be prevented, thereby assuring protection to the people and commerce of Cuba, as well as to the commerce of the Southern ports of the United States and the people residing therein.

6. That the Isle of Pines shall be omitted from the proposed constitutional boundaries of Cuba, the title thereto being left to future adjustment by treaty.

7. That to enable the United States to maintain the independence of Cuba and to protect the people thereof, as well as for its own defense, the government of Cuba will sell or lease to the United Statas lands necessary for coaling or naval stations at certain specified points, to be agreed upon with the President of the United States.

8. That by way of further assurance the government of Cuba will embody the foregoing provisions in a permanent treaty with the United States.

This amendment is simply an authorization to the President "to leave the government and control of the island of Cuba to its people" under certain enumerated conditions.

The question for us to determine is, first, whether these conditions in any way violate our resolution of April 20, 1898, construed in the light of the Monroe doctrine, subject to which that resolution was passed; second, whether they are consonant with the Monroe doctrine.

The Supreme Court of the United States in Neeley vs. Henkel (decided in January, 1901) sums up the situation to that date in these words:

The legislative and executive branches of the Government, by the joint resolution of April 20, 1898, expressly disclaimed any purpose to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over Cuba, "except for the pacification thereof," and asserted the determination of the United States, that object being accomplished, to leave the government and control of Cuba to its own people. All that has been done in relation to Cuba has had that end in view, and, so far as the court is informed by the public history of the relations of this country with that island, nothing has been done inconsistent with the declared object of the war with Spain.

The court then declares the relations of Cuba and the United States and the obligations of the United States to the inhabitants of Cuba growing out of the joint resolution of April 20, 1898, as follows:

As between Spain and the United States—indeed, as between the United States and all foreign nations—Cuba, upon the cessation of hostilities with Spain and after the treaty of Paris, was to be treated as if it were conquered territory. But as between the United States and Cuba, that island is territory held in trust for the inhabitants of Cuba, to whom it rightfully belongs and to whose exclusive control it will be surrendered when a stable government shall have been established by their voluntary action.

The question which must be honestly considered is whether we are complying with our obligations and our duty to the people of Cuba by the terms of this our authorization to the President.

It is proposed—

I.

that the government of Cuba shall never enter into any treaty or other compact with any foreign power or powers which will impair or tend to impair the independence of Cuba, nor in any manner authorize or permit any foreign power or powers to obtain by colonization or for military or naval purposes or otherwise lodgment in or control over any portion of said island.

This section comes clearly within the Monroe doctrine in that it provides:

(1) Against the extension of any European political system to Cuba by binding her not to enter "into any treaty or compact with any foreign power or powers which will impair or tend to impair" her independence.

(2) It provides against permission to any foreign power or powers for "lodgment in or control over any portion" of Cuba by colonization or otherwise.

II.

That said government shall not assume or contract any public debt, to pay the interest upon which, and to make reasonable sinking fund provision for the ultimate discharge of which, the ordinary revenues of the island, after defraying the current expenses of government shall be inadequate.

This simply provides that the island shall not mortgage itself beyond its power of redemption, and so that it may not hereafter pass in whole or in part under the control of any foreign power by the insidious operation of a public debt.

This is a legitimate exercise of the Monroe doctrine as emphasized by our specific declarations regarding Cuba.

It is also a measure of proper protection of Cuba, the propriety of which is emphasized by conditions in Mexico where the import duties of Vera Cruz and Pacific ports are held by Great Britain for interest on a fifty-million dollar loan negotiated in 1826.

The case of Egypt, which is now controlled by Great Britain through the Egyptian debt, is notorious.

Failure of payment of indebtedness for betterments and improvements at maturity to a nation rich enough to make the loan would be followed by seizure of ports and customs.

It is our duty to guard against such seizure and control for the future peace of mankind. Further, it is our duty to guard against such contingencies under our promise, express and implied, to establish a stable government. Such action is also in harmony with our frequent declarations that we could not with indifference see Cuba passing into the possession of any foreign power.

III.

That the government of Cuba consents that the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty, and for discharging the obligations with respect to Cuba imposed by the treaty of Paris on the United States, now to be assumed and undertaken by the government of Cuba.

The treaty of Paris contained the following provision:

ARTICLE I.

Spain relinquishes all claim of sovereignty over and title to Cuba.

And as the island is, upon its evacuation by Spain, to be occupied by the United States, the United States will, so long as such occupation shall last, assume and discharge the obligations that may under international law result from the fact of its occupation, for the protection of life and property.

The language of section 3 emphasizes the beneficent intentions of this Government toward Cuba. We ask that Cuba consent that we exercise the "right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence," and "the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty."

By this request we inferentially guarantee "the preservation of Cuban independence" and stable government, and thereby further inferentially disclaim "any disposition or intention" to take Cuban territory. This section is also pursuant to and in harmony with our disclaimer of "intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island" and our promise of pacification contained in our resolution of April 20, 1898.

Our obligations in regard to stable government do not necessarily cease upon our withdrawal from the island. The first establishment of government in the island of Cuba is necessarily experimental and may utterly fail. The ability of the people of Cuba to govern themselves will be on trial.

A civil war in Cuba might furnish as strong an argument for intervention by us as did the war with Spain, with the further obligation of pacification contained in our resolution of April 20, 1898, superadded. In other words, the announcement of the formation of a government by the people of Cuba does not in itself discharge us from our obligations.

IV.

That all acts of the United States in Cuba during its military occupancy thereof are ratified and validated, and all lawful rights acquired thereunder shall be maintained and protected.

There ought to be no objection to this.

V.

That the government of Cuba will execute, and as far as necessary extend, the plans already devised or other plans to be mutually agreed upon, for the sanitation of the cities of the island, to the end that a recurrence of epidemic and infectious diseases may be prevented, thereby assuring protection to the people and commerce of Cuba, as well as to the commerce of the southern ports of the United States and the people residing therein.

This is a provision for the preservation of the public health of the people of Cuba and of the United States and is proper to be incorporated in a treaty. There is nothing in this proposition restrictive of Cuban independence.

The only restriction proposed is a restriction upon the spread of disease. It is simply proposed that the two governments shall cooperate for the public health of both.

It is a civilized suggestion, which though it may not of right be insisted upon as a condition, and a treaty omitting it might not for that reason fail of ratification, nevertheless it ought to be acceded to by Cuba without demur as being for the common benefit of the people of Cuba and the United States.

VI.

That the Isle of Pines shall be omitted from the proposed constitutional boundaries of Cuba, the title thereto being left to future adjustment by treaty.

The Isle of Pines is 40 miles from the Cuban coast, and as I understand has been omitted by the Cuban constitution already framed from the description of the territorial limits of the government.

Our resolution of April 20, 1898, related to "the island" of Cuba. However, the title to the Isle of Pines is by this section properly "left to future adjustment by treaty."

This island is said to contain about 537,600 acres, much of it swamp and the rest of it rolling, sandy pine lands. By the census of 1899 it had a population of 3,199. It was formerly the resort of pirates and was afterwards made a penal colony. It is of little value to Cuba, but might be of value to us as a supply station in case it should become necessary for us to defend the proposed Nicaragua Canal.

VII.

That to enable the United States to maintain the independence of Cuba, and to protect the people thereof, as well as for its own defense, the government of Cuba will sell or lease to the United States lands necessary for coaling or naval stations at certain specified points, to be agreed upon with the President of the United States.

By this section we propose to the government of Cuba that it sell or lease to us lands for coaling or naval stations to enable us to maintain Cuban independence and to protect the people of Cuba.

By our resolution of April 20, 1898, we assumed the duty of pacification of Cuba. That duty carries with it the duty of aiding the people of Cuba in the establishment of a stable government. With our knowledge of the people of Cuba we can not assume that their first experiment in self-government will be attended with immediate order. Neither can we look into the future and say when they will be able to proceed unaided. Internal disorder would not only invite foreign intervention contrary to our American policy, but would be disastrous to the development and welfare of the people of Cuba.

We prefer to withdraw now and pursuant to our resolution "to leave the government and control of the island to its people," but in so doing it is our duty to be within sufficient hailing distance to aid the government which we have enabled to be organized to succeed and to respond when needed for their protection and the continuance of that order and good government for which we have become responsible not only to Cuba by the resolution of 1898, but to the world by virtue of the Paris treaty. Ours is a continuing obligation from which we can not absolve ourselves at once. If, as stated, in effect, by the Supreme Court, we are the trustees for the people of Cuba, our trust is not fully consummated and our duty is not fully discharged until order is established.

VIII.

That by way of further assurance the government of Cuba will embody the foregoing provisions in a permanent treaty with the United States.

This section simply proposes the reducing of our understanding to writing, so that there shall be no future misunderstanding as to what we have agreed on—no room left for conflict of testimony, difference of construction, or defect of memory.

It is, perhaps, superfluous to speak of gratitude. Among men the very generosity which prompts a favor makes impossible a reminder of reciprocal obligations.

In the light of history since April 1898 it would seem that the people of Cuba ought to hasten to inquire of the United States what return they could make to us for what we have done and would scorn the very appearance of withholding anything which a nation prompted by the motives which animated us in our warfare in their behalf might ask. But sentiments like these seem to find no part in international dealings. The cold and formal outlines of a treaty are never softened by sentiment. All things proceed by rule of action except when driven out of true by partisanship.

We went to war with Spain for a cause unique in history—the cause of humanity—and above the graves of thousands of reconcentrados starved to death by Weyler's order, above the harbor where the Maine lies buried, we are doing our best to raise the monument of Cuba—reorganized, regenerated, and free. We are proceeding as we began—in the cause of humanity.

Mr. HULL. I yield to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD].

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Mr. Speaker, this bill, as the House is compelled to act upon it, is a striking illustration of a most vicious and iniquitous practice in national legislation. An Army bill, which must be passed in order to provide for absolutely necessary expenditures, comes down from the Senate with a large number of amendments which originated in the Senate, and in order to pass the bill under the rule just adopted we are compelled to vote for all of the amendments whether they do or not meet our approval. This is a method invariably adopted for securing the passage of obnoxious measures which otherwise would not meet with the approval of the House. The principal measure is simply used as a vessel to sustain cargoes that otherwise would sink of their own weight.

This bill has two amendments of great moment, of far-reaching consequences, that have never been considered by any committee on the part of the House, and must be accepted after only two hours of debate. One relates to the Philippine Archipelago, one to Cuba. While I have grave doubts as to our constitutional right to delegate legislative power, as is clearly contemplated by the Philippine amendment, I should vote for the bill with this amendment if I could do so without at the same time being obliged to vote for the Cuban amendment, in which I do not believe. The Philippine amendment contemplates a change from military rule to civil rule, and is an advance over existing conditions. It does not add to, but limits executive power.

I am firmly of the opinion that the person or persons that may discharge the duties devolved upon them by this amendment will be restrained and controlled therein by all of the constitutional limitations and guaranties protecting life, liberty, and property. I do not for a moment believe that they can, even if they desired, exercise absolute, arbitrary, autocratic power. We may have occasion to remember that by this amendment we legislate for the Philippines. While I should vote for this amendment if it stood alone, I believe that a form of territorial government following the lines of the territorial governments created for Louisiana in 1804 and Florida in 1822, would, from every consideration, be much more desirable. It would commit us to nothing to which this amendment does not commit us, and it could not fail to be a much more potent influence in securing peace in the archipelago—a consummation certainly most "devoutly to be wished."

The Cuban amendment does not seem to me to be in accord with the solemnly declared and frequently reiterated policy of the Republic relative to Cuba. Beside this, it practically assumes grave responsibilities which do not now exist. The position which the Republic now sustains to Cuba is, I believe, fairly and truthfully stated by the Supreme Court in the opinion in the Neely case, in which the court says unanimously, speaking through Mr. Justice Harlan:

> The legislative and executive branches of the Government, by the joint resolutions of April 20, 1898, expressly disclaimed any purpose to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over Cuba, "except for the pacification thereof," and asserted the determination of the United States, that object being accomplished, to leave the government and control of Cuba to its own people. All that has been done in relation to Cuba has had that end in view; and, so far as the court is informed by the public history of the relations of this court with that island, nothing has been done inconsistent with the declared object of the war with Spain.

Again, giving a perspicuous judicial statement of the clear duty of the United States in this exigency:

> But as between the United States and Cuba, that island is territory held in trust for the inhabitants in Cuba, to whom it rightfully belongs and to whose exclusive control it will be surrendered when a stable government shall have been established by their voluntary action.

The Cuban amendment, which is said to contain our ultimatum to Cuba, does not, in my opinion, contemplate surrendering "exclusive control" of Cuba to the "inhabitants of Cuba," for whom the territory is now "held in trust," "when a stable government shall have been established by their voluntary action;" but, on the contrary, it seems to me that it clearly intends to perpetuate our control over the island and its inhabitants.

In the third section we require Cuba to consent to our right to intervene for the "maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty." This does not in terms require them to consent that we may intervene "for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty," only to maintain "a government adequate" for that purpose; but practically it makes us the judges of the existence of the exigency that justifies our intervention, and the right to intervene for that purpose submits to our control the government which they establish.

It is not a very long step from the right to intervene to the obligation to exercise that right when its exercise is demanded by those in whose interests it may be assumed the right was conceded. No one can tell under what circumstances it might be insisted by foreign capital, to illustrate, that the Cuban government was inadequate to protect property and individual liberty, or when it might be asserted by a foreign government in the interests of the personal or property rights of its citizens residing therein or having relations therewith that the government was inadequate, and we must protect them in that regard. In section V, in case of any change as to sanitation, they have no power to make it except with our consent, thus being clearly subordinate to our control in this particular.

It may be conceded that if we were to exercise control over them, this subject, above all others, would be the one over which it should be exercised.

The desirability or importance of control does not demonstrate the existence of the right when the rights of the parties are derived from their declared purposes. In section seven the purpose for which the coaling or naval stations are to be acquired is stated as follows: "To enable the United States to maintain the independence of Cuba and to protect the people thereof, as well as for its own defense." When we acquire and occupy territory "to protect the people thereof" it is not a strained construction to hold that we are by virtue thereof bound "to protect the people thereof."

This is the principal purpose of any government that may be established "by the inhabitants of Cuba."

Against whom are we "to protect the people thereof," and what occasion is there for protecting "the people thereof" if we maintain, as we insist we wish to do under section three, a "government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty?" What legitimate occasion have we to "protect the people thereof" when there is or ought to be in existence a "free, independent government established by its people" for that very purpose? Are we to protect them against internal disorder, against their own government, or against foreign governments? Evidently the rights to be conceded by section three were not sufficiently broad and comprehensive, and in order to make our control more absolute and complete this extremely general language was added in section seven.

These three sections clearly involve, as it seems to me, a perpetuation of our control instead of a surrender of "exclusive control" to the inhabitants of Cuba, which the Supreme Court has said is the purpose for which we now hold the possession. This amendment goes further than we are required to go, and assumes obligations indefinite, undetermined, far-reaching, much beyond any duties devolved upon us by the treaty. Article XVI of the treaty provides: "It is understood that any obligations assumed in this treaty by the United States with respect to Cuba are limited to the time of its occupancy thereof, but it will, upon the termination of such occupancy, advise any government established in the island to assume the same obligations." It can not be successfully denied, as it seems to me, that this clause in the treaty clearly contemplates that at some time in the near future our occupancy of this island would terminate, and that at that time our obligations with "respect to Cuba" would also terminate, and our only obligation then remaining would be to "advise any government established in the island to assume the same obligations."

Under the ultimatum, however, all of these obligations are not only continued, but they will prove to be very greatly enlarged. We are not to escape the "ills we have," but "fly to others that we know not of."

By this ultimatum we, in effect, assume a protectorate over Cuba. This is a new departure in our national policy, as that is a power which we have never before undertaken to exercise and which it has been insisted was entirely out of the question in connection with the Philippines.

I do not believe a protectorate can be predicated upon the Monroe doctrine, nor do I believe that we can constitutionally exercise such a power. If we can, we can exercise it wherever the Monroe doctrine applies, and it is conceded that applies to the whole continent. Are we to exercise protectorates in time over all the South American governments as occasion may arise? The assumption of such vast responsibilities no one who loves our institutions can contemplate without serious misgivings.

I believe in the sincerity and honesty of the declaration of April 20, 1898, with which we embarked upon the war with Spain. It has been consistently reasserted on many solemn occasions since. The deliberate and emphatic declarations of our peace commissioners during their negotiations, which resulted in the treaty of Paris, in October and November, 1898, six months after the declaration of war, when the frenzy, if any there was, may be assumed to have subsided, fully justify the conclusions of the Supreme Court. Insisting upon the capacity of the Cubans to govern themselves, and repudiating an intimation on the part of the Spanish commissioners that the opposite was true, they said on October 27, 1898:

> The American commissioners are unaware of the ground on which it is asserted in the Spanish memorandum that the United States has been compelled to admit that the Cuban people are as yet unfit for the enjoyment of full liberty and sovereignty. It is true that an intimation of such unfitness was made in the note of the Spanish Government on the 22d of July last. The Government of the United States, in its reply of the 30th of July, declared that it did not share the apprehensions of Spain in this regard, but that it recognized, in the present distracted and prostrate condition of the island, brought about by the wars that waged there, aid and guidance would be necessary. (The treaty of peace between the United States and Spain, pp. 102–103.)

They do not seek to evade this conclusion, as they repeat the declaration on November 9, 1898. (Ibid., p. 143.)

The character of our occupation was clearly stated in the negotiations. Spain insisted that the United States was to receive the sovereignty over Cuba, hold it for the necessary time, and then leave it "at the disposal of the government that may be constituted in Cuba." Our commissioners exercised scrupulous care in repelling the idea that we were to exercise any sovereignty over Cuba, even for a temporary purpose, saying, October 14, 1898:

> The American commissioners understand the Spanish memorandum to maintain that their Government, prior to the war, demanded of Spain, in effect, if not in words, the relinquishment of her sovereignty over Cuba to the United States. * * * The precise words of this demand are "that the Government of Spain at once relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba and Cuban waters," and the demand is accompanied by the declaration that the United States in taking the step "disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination when that is accomplished to leave the government and control of the island to its people, under such free and independent government as they may establish. * * *
> From the demand thus fully set forth in the Spanish memorandum extracts the assertion by the United States of its determination "to leave the government and control of the island to its people;" and, omitting both what precedes and follows, construes that assertion as a demand that such relinquishment must be made through them (the United States). The demand, as a whole, however, carefully and clearly excludes this construction. Not only is the assertion preceded in the same sentence by an express disclaimer on the part of the United States of any disposition or intention to take the sovereignty of the island, but the assertion itself includes an express declaration of a determination to allow the island to remain after pacification "under such free and independent government" as may be established by its people. (Ibid., p. 47.)

A government which we dominate, which is expressly subjected to our control by this ultimatum, which we do not propose to allow established except upon such conditions, can not with any propriety be said to be a "free and independent government established by its people."

The Spanish commissioners still insisted upon our assuming this qualified sovereignty (Ibid., pp. 83–85), and on October 27, 1898, our commissioners squarely denied the claim, saying:

> The American commissioners have never denied that the island of Cuba will, upon its evacuation by the Spanish forces, come into possession of the authorities of the United States; but this possession is to be by no means confounded with the sovereignty of the island, which the United States has long since declared to Spain an intention not to assume. The United States will take possession of the island for the purpose of pacifying it, but not as titular sovereign, and it is not to be charged with proposing to reduce it to the condition of a "desert territory in Africa" merely because it declines to assume the character of such sovereign. (Ibid., p. 98.)

The pure, lofty, and disinterested purpose which inspired all of the acts of the United States throughout was proudly and truthfully stated by our commissioners on October 27, 1898. They said:

> It is not necessary to recite the record of the events which followed that demand (involved in the declaration of war), well known to the members of this commission, and which are now a part of the history of the world. It is true that the enforced relinquishment of Spanish sovereignty will result in the freedom and independence of the island of Cuba, and not in the aggrandizement of the United States. * * * Not having taken up arms for its own advancement, having refrained from acquiring sovereignty over Cuba, the United States now seeks to attain a peace consistent with its ends and purpose in waging war.
> * * * * * * *
> Its relations to Cuba have been those of a people suffering without reward or the hope thereof. (Ibid, p. 107.)

It would be doing great violence to the character for candor and probity of the distinguished men who represented us if we were to assume that they then contemplated that we should take occasion, while carrying out these sublimely disinterested purposes, to aggrandize ourselves by the forcible acquisition of coaling or naval stations for our "own defense."

Further references are unnecessary. There is no discordant note; no intimation or inference that is inconsistent with the purity and sincerity of our holy purpose. The negotiations breathe it in every line and paragraph. We do not stand on equal terms. Cuba is powerless. She is compelled to accept our terms. Every consideration requires us to be consistent, sincere, and generous. We can not afford to aggrandize ourselves. The honor of our country is at stake in the fulfillment of these great purposes, in their letter and in their spirit.

I do not think this history can be brushed out with a wave of the hand on the ground that it was an improvident declaration hysterically made when Congress was at a white heat, responding to a wave of frenzied excitement sweeping over the country. I concede that hasty action is likely to be ill-considered action. I hope the action taken to-day under the pressure of the nearing close of the session and an inevitable special session if this bill fails may not prove to be action taken in haste, of which we may have occasion to repent at our leisure. Nor can it be eliminated, in my judgment, because some statesmen may have an itching palm for Cuba with its wealth.

If it were the purpose of the Cuban amendment—which I do not assert—to impose conditions that would compel the annexation of Cuba, I am not prepared to say that it is not well adapted to produce that result. Such a result, thus accomplished, would humiliate our common country to the last degree. I hope to be able to still cherish the opinion asserted in the following colloquy by a distinguished citizen of Wisconsin in another body:

> Mr. SPOONER. Has the Senator any suspicion in his mind that the pledge made in the resolution passed by Congress as to the temporary character of our occupation in Cuba is not to be kept?
> Mr. HALE. I have.
> Mr. SPOONER. Kept not simply to the letter, but kept in spirit?
> Mr. HALE. I have very grave suspicion, Mr. President.
> Mr. SPOONER. Then, Mr. President, the Senator is a pessimist, beyond any I have ever met.
> Mr. HALE. Now, let me say to the Senator I think there are very powerful influences in this country—I think they are largely located in New York City, I think they are largely speculative and connected with money-making enterprises—that are determined that we shall never give up Cuba. I am profoundly impressed and profoundly depressed by the fact that I find in hundreds of quarters a determination that we shall never withdraw from Cuba, but shall retain her as a possession of the United States.
> Mr. SPOONER. It will never turn out, my friend from Maine, that any man in any country can point to the Teller resolution and say with truth that it was a legislative lie.
> Mr. HALE. I hope so.
> Mr. SPOONER. The Senator need not hope so; he had better know so.
> Mr. HALE. I do not know.
> Mr. SPOONER. Well, he ought to know.

May we all "know." I do not feel at liberty to support this bill with an amendment which is thus at variance with our declared and construed purposes with respect to Cuba.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, has the gentleman from New York [Mr. SULZER] exhausted his time?

The SPEAKER. The time on that side is exhausted.

Mr. HULL. How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. Fourteen minutes.

Mr. HULL. I will occupy three minutes of that time. I hope the Speaker will call me down if I exceed that limit.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa will proceed for three minutes.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, this is probably a bad time for a man to refer to any personal matters; but for the last two days gentlemen in both branches of Congress have aimed to make me the target of their criticism on account a of business enterprise. This was started by William J. Bryan, while a candidate for the Presidency. When the campaign was in progress last year, it was published over my district and my State, and was met there by a full statement of fact, answered by an increased majority. I will say to the gentleman from Tennessee that I am the same man that is connected with the Philippine Lumber Company, and that I have something invested in that enterprise. I will say further to this House that I have not, nor has that company, ever asked one favor of the Government of the United States; and we do not propose to do so. Our dealings there are with men who have titles in fee simple of long standing. The business is entirely legitimate.

And I want to say to this House and the country that whenever the time comes that I am not permitted to invest in a legitimate enterprise I would prefer to leave Congress to being a drone, dependent only on politics for my living. [Applause.] I will say further to the gentleman from Tennessee, and to this House, that while the campaign was on, the company with which I am associated called a halt in their enterprise and notified every one of the stockholders that if Bryan should be elected not one dollar would we invest in the Philippines, but if McKinley should be elected we would invest all the money that we pleased, believing it would have a favorable return by the restoration of order and good government in the Philippines. [Applause on the Republican side; derisive applause on the Democratic side.]

Bryan's election would mean disorder and anarchy in the islands. McKinley's election would mean order and thrift.

Under the one I would not be willing to invest in any legitimate enterprise; under the other the ax and the sawmill would be encouraged, labor benefited, and civilization advanced.

Now, why? Because the one man was trying to run the country on wind and the other believed in legitimate enterprise. [Great confusion in the Hall.] I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair could not hear, owing to the confusion, what the gentleman said.

Mr. HULL. All the time I have—eleven minutes, as I understand.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is recognized for eleven minutes.

Mr. KLUTTZ. I ask that the gentleman's time be extended by unanimous consent.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, it is not at all surprising that the gentleman from Colorado should be perplexed, as he says he is, when he recalls certain language in the Declaration of Independence, and when he remembers some portion of the history of the Republic of a great many years ago. He quoted:

> We believe it to be self-evident that all men were created equal, and endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, and among these life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.
> That all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Mr. Speaker, these sentences were written by Thomas Jefferson, the old apostle of Democracy, and yet when he wrote these sentences he was the owner of more than a score of slaves that he could drive to unrequited toil with the taskmaster's lash. He could sell wife from husband and child from its mother's arms.

Mr. LENTZ. Will the gentleman permit me to interrupt him?

Mr. DALZELL. Let us have the regular order.

Mr. HEPBURN. I do not yield. I remember that when George Washington assembled the tattered patriots of his army to hear read in general orders the Declaration of Independence, as he stood, the cynosure of all eyes, and as his adjutant read, he must have recollected, when these words fell upon his ears, that he was then the largest slaveholder in the United States. But the gentleman from Colorado is not the only man that is perplexed by this language when he attempts the application that he makes.

Does any man suppose that when the fathers of the Republic—when these two distinguished heroes and patriots wrote or listened to this language they gave it the interpretation that men wholly unfit, that men uneducated, that men unaccustomed to self-restraint, that men without capacity for government, inexperienced in government, should govern? No man believes that.

Mr. CARMACK. Will the gentleman permit me?

Mr. HEPBURN. I do not yield. I do not want to be discourteous, but have only ten minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I think that these gentlemen have abused the language of the Declaration of Independence long enough. How sincere are you when you quote these passages, you men who to-day are striving by all your powers to rob American citizens of their right of self-government? [Great applause on the Republican side.]

You Virginians that prate about the Declaration of Independence, that quote Jefferson and Washington, that voice the claim with pride that your political lineage comes from them, and you of Maryland, and you of South Carolina, and you of North Carolina, and you of Alabama, and of Mississippi, what do you mean when you aid or quietly sit by and see men driven from the status of citizenship, citizens so declared by the Constitution, robbed of the power to vote and of all participation in political power? [Loud applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. CARMACK. Do you believe they are violating the Declaration of Independence?

Mr. HEPBURN. I have not time for colloquy.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I should like to ask the gentleman a question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HEPBURN (continuing). I must decline to yield, no matter how interesting to me a political conversation is always with my friend from Mississippi.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi is out of order. The gentleman has declined to yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I understand. I addressed the Chair and requested the gentleman's permission to interrupt him.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman declined to yield in advance.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, this debate has called out from certain gentlemen upon the floor declarations that it seems to me ought to be understood. The American people have the right to demand that it should be understood. One gentleman in connection with members of another deliberative body has used the word "connivance," the word "connive."

Ah, there is something sinister in that word. It is an uncanny word, Mr. Speaker. What does it mean? It means "silent or indirect assent, especially to wrong doing;" "forbearing to notice what one should antagonize;" "passive encouragement or cooperation;" "guilty assent to a wrongful or criminal act during its occurrence."

These are the meanings of that word. Let me explain how and under what circumstances that unseemly word is applied by a distinguished Democrat, who always uses the English language with wonderful correctness—with wonderful vigor; who selects words that convey his exact shade of meaning as perhaps no other English scholar does, or at least of any that I have ever heard. Let us see what it means. In another body there were two or three measures pending, and by perhaps adroit management the Republican managers had placed this bill that we are now considering in precedence of others. What were they? One was the river and harbor bill; one was the bill making appropriations for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition; the third the Army bill now before us.

All through the weeks past we have heard declarations, loud, vigorous, and continuing, that this bill, with its political amendments relating to Cuba and the Philippines—the sum of all infamies, as we were told here and in the other Chamber—could not pass; that there were Senators there that had the power to put a veto upon it; that they intended to exercise that power. All the newspapers have been replete with their declarations of the endurance they would manifest, and the certainty that they in the end would prevent, by the methods we all know they command, the passage of this objectionable bill——

The SPEAKER. It is the duty of the Chair to remind the gentleman from Iowa that commenting upon the action of members of the other House is entirely out of order.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I was trying to comment upon the extraordinary language of the gentleman from Missouri. I want to quote, in the light of what I have said, if I may say it, in the light of your knowledge of conditions. I want to call your attention to this remarkable language of the gentleman. It must have been applied to Democrats; it could not have been applied to Republicans, because Republicans are and have been favorable to this bill; it is their legislation.

Here is the language of the gentleman from Missouri, already referred to by the gentleman from Ohio:

> There is thrust into this Chamber now, by the tyranny of the majority, by the connivance of others who had power and did not use it, a question which can not be considered here, but which is to be settled here. In the closing hours of this session the body which could have prevented, the men who could have barred from this Chamber these great questions, for reasons of their own which I have not time to bring into light, and upon which I do not care now to enter—for reasons of their own, yielding to inducements sufficiently powerful to them and with them, have allowed this measure to come with these amendments to this House.

Ah, Mr. Speaker, how strange is that language coming from the gentleman from Missouri, intense partisan that he is—so prone to censure his political opponent; so prone to sustain his political ally. How intense must be his feelings if he intends to apply this bitter language to his own political associates in another body.

But, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is not content with the language I have quoted. He continues:

> And here, with the representatives of the American people shackled with trades and bargains and connivance—with cringing and bending of the knee that thrift may follow fawning—the rights of the American people are to be frittered away, their Constitution is to be disregarded, the people in the far-away Philippines are to be outraged, the risk of war in Cuba is to be hazarded, and all, all that those subservient enough to do it may register the decrees of imperial majesty here in the United States of America.

Mr. Speaker, am I not right in speaking of the language of the gentleman as remarkable? Have you ever heard its like in this body? Is there another instance in which the gentleman from Missouri or any other gentleman has so lashed his political friends? But even this is not all. Again I quote from the gentleman:

> If I had the time I would be glad to discuss this infamous measure. I would be glad to discuss the infamous procedure, the infamous surrender, the infamous cowardice, the infamous trading and trafficking, the infamous disregard of everything sacred and holy and decent and honorable and glorious in these United States of America. But the time is lacking.
> The people abroad, perhaps, in their day (for their day, I hope, in the good providence of God is coming), the people probably abroad may brand as they deserve and may lash from public places as they ought to do, the recreant men—men in appearance—recreant creatures who are ready now to surrender everything and forego everything that is decent, honorable, and constitutional and right—everything that has tended to make our nation glorious—and who resort willingly to everything that may make it infamous now and in all the hereafter. I commend to the tyrants here, I commend to the sycophants and the traders and the traffickers elsewhere, the plunder that they get.

Mr. Speaker, let me remind you that the intense indignation of the gentleman can not be entertained for his opponents alone. His lance is not leveled at them. When he tells us that the political amendments are placed in the bill "by the connivance of others, who had the power to prevent and did not use it," who does he mean? Surely not the "tyrants of the majority," for he says there "were others."

Oh, Mr. Speaker, how much of uncertainty and doubt the gentleman could have relieved us of if he had only told the House who "the others" were—"the others" who aided in "the infamous procedure" of passing this bill. Who are the men who participated in "the infamous surrender?" Who are the men who exhibited "the infamous cowardice?" Who are the "men who had the power to prevent and failed to use it?" They are not in this House. Here interminable talk is not possible. Here we have rules.

No one in this House has played the bravo and informed the public of their intent to talk this bill to its death—to talk to the end of the session. Here it was known they would not be permitted to so prevent legislation.

Again, here there has been no situation that could justify the gentleman's charge that for a consideration any member could have done or omitted to do anything for an ignoble motive. Here the Army bill did not block the way to other legislation. Here the river and harbor bill and the Louisiana exposition bill, that contained the plums and the plunder, were not impeded by the Army bill; so that the language of the gentleman could not apply to members of this House. He must have intended to apply it to "others." What were the reasons, Mr. Speaker, that influenced "the others?"

Who has received the "plunder?" Who are the men who have taken the bribe—the bribe for failing to do what they might have done? Mr. Speaker, I am afraid we will never know. In fact, the gentleman, under the rules, could not inform us. He has done the best he could. He has told us the criminals are not the "tyrannous majority." He has told us the crime was not committed in this House, but in some other body, where "the others" had the power that they did not use. It could not be here, for here the minority have no power they have not used.

Mr. Speaker, I can conceive the bitter reprehension the gentleman may have for men who will do the things the gentleman has described in such bitter terms, even when they act in obedience to party dictates and to their best convictions of what is right; but I can not conceive the contempt, the unutterable loathing, he must feel for men who do the same things—deserting their party and their convictions and their sense of duty for base and sordid motives—for bribes, for plunder: men who consent that a necessary money bill may be "loaded with infamy," with that which they say is infamous, in order to get it out of the way, in order that they may reach and pass other bills that contain for them that which the gentleman calls "plunder."

And, Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman is right in what he charges, "who shall say him nay?"

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HEPBURN. I ask leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD. [Loud applause on the Republican side.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair will say to the gentleman from Iowa that general leave to extend remarks has been given.

Mr. LENTZ. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. LENTZ. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. LENTZ. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LENTZ. Will it be in order for the chairman of the Military Committee, the gentleman from Iowa, to vote upon this question, in view of the fact that he is interested in continuing the Philippine war.

The SPEAKER. That is not a parliamentary inquiry. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Iowa.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. HAY and others. Yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 161, nays 137, answered "present" 4, not voting 51; as follows:

So the motion was agreed to.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Until further notice:

Mr. WADSWORTH with Mr. LEVY.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH with Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama.

For the balance of the day:

Mr. FARIS with Mr. BELL.

Mr. MUDD with Mr. GASTON.

Mr. METCALF with Mr. DAVEY.

On this vote:

Mr. BULL with Mr. GRIGGS.

Mr. POWER with Mr. CUMMINGS.

During the roll call, after the name of Mr. HULL had been called:

Mr. LENTZ. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Iowa, having admitted that he has an interest in this matter, is not entitled to vote.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has already voted. The point of order is overruled.

The roll call was resumed and concluded.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, there was so much confusion during the call, and the vote being of so much importance, I ask a recapitulation.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it unnecessary—the difference is so great.

Mr. LENTZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LENTZ. I find in the Manual that "where the private interests of a member are concerned in a question" pending before the House "he is to withdraw." Now I make the point of order that, by his own admission, the gentleman from Iowa is interested in this question.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman will also find in the Digest that it is the uniform practice that each gentleman must be the judge of that for himself. The Chair overrules the point of order.

The result of the vote was then announced, as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I present a final conference report on the Indian appropriation bill, and I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the report and that the statement only be read.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, that will be done.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the gentleman from New York if the conferees have attempted to engraft upon the Indian appropriation bill any treaty between the Dawes Commission and the Chickasaw Indians.

Mr. SHERMAN. None whatever.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The conference report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12904) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 51 and 52; that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 45 and 56, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "payments," in line 18 of said amendment, insert "gratuities;" at the end of said amendment, after the word "passed," in line 20, add the following: "Proceedings shall be commenced by petition verified by the attorney for said Indians who appears for and on their behalf, and said case shall have preference and be advanced on the docket of said court; and if said court shall find that said bands preserve their loyalty to the United States, they shall ascertain and state the amount that would be due to said Indians on account of said annuities had said act of Congress of February 16, 1863, not been passed, stating in connection therewith what credits should be charged against said annuities on account of the lands, appropriations, payments, gratuities, or other provisions as hereinbefore stated;" and the Senate agree to the same.

J. S. SHERMAN,
CHARLES CURTIS,
JOHN S. LITTLE,
Managers on the part of the House.

JOHN M. THURSTON,
O. H. PLATT,
R. F. PETTIGREW,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

The House recedes from amendment No. 45, which amendment provides that where the proper officers of the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations fail to appoint town-site commissioners, the Secretary of the Interior may make such appointment.

The House recedes from amendment No. 56, which amendment provides for a closing of the rolls of the Five Civilized Tribes.

The House recedes, with amendment, from amendment No. 62, which amendment refers to the Court of Claims for examination and a report to Congress of its opinion thereon the claims of the Sisseton and Wahpeton band of Indians against the United States.

The Senate recedes from amendment No. 52, which was a provision relating to mineral lands on Executive reservations. The Senate also recedes from amendment No. 51, providing for a further survey of the Gila River, the last amendment being the one in which the House refused to concur on the 20th ultimo.

The conference report was then agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12904) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes.

DANIEL COONAN.

Mr. CAPRON. Mr. Speaker, I present the conference report on the bill (S. 3288) for the relief of Daniel Coonan, and I ask that the reading of the report be omitted and only the statement be read.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the reading of the report will be omitted.

There was no objection.

The report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes between the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3288) for the relief of Daniel Coonan, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of the amendment strike out the word "pensions;" and the House agree to the same.

A. B. CAPRON,
F. C. STEVENS,
THOS. M. JETT,
Managers on the part of the House.

J. C. BURROWS,
F. E. WARREN,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement was read, as follows:

The foregoing act, having passed the Senate, was amended in the House by adding the following proviso: "Provided, That no pay, bounty, pension, or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act."

The Senate disagreed to this House amendment, whereupon a conference was ordered.

The conferees have agreed that the said proviso be stricken out and the following be enacted in lieu thereof: "Provided, That no pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act."

This is the usual proviso adopted for such bills, and is the same as adopted by the House, with the exception that the word "pension" is stricken out.

The conference report was agreed to.

DELINQUENT CHILDREN IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I present the conference report on the bill (H. R. 13067) to enlarge the powers of the courts of the District of Columbia in cases involving delinquent children, and for other purposes, and I ask that the reading of the report be omitted and that the statement only be read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks that the reading of the report be omitted and that the statement only be read. Without objection, that will be done.

There was no objection.

The conference report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13067) to enlarge the powers of the courts of the District of Columbia in cases involving delinquent children, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 3, 5, and 6; and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 4.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of line 1 of said amendment insert "of sufficient financial ability," and in line 3 strike out "willfully and unnecessarily;" and the Senate agree to the same.

J. W. BABCOCK,
JOHN J. JENKINS,
ADOLPH MEYER,
Managers on the part of the House.

JAMES McMILLAN,
WILLIAM P. DILLINGHAM,
RICHARD R. KENNEY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement was read, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of Representatives make the following statement of the result of the conference with the managers on the part of the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments to House bill H. R. 13067:

The conferees agreed upon amendment numbered 1 with an amendment providing that persons amenable to the provisions of this act shall have sufficient financial ability, and also struck out the words "willfully and unlawfully," which were considered objectionable.

The House recedes from the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 3, 5, and 6.

The Senate recedes from amendment numbered 4, the provisions of which were considered too drastic and undesirable, in that it provided that a person failing to obey the orders of the court for the maintenance and support of any child under 14 years of age should be deemed a fugitive from justice and subject to indictment.

The question was taken; and the conference report was agreed to.

PROTECTION OF BIRDS AND GAME IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I also present a conference report on the bill (H. R. 11881) to amend an act entitled "An act for the protection of birds, preservation of game, and for the prevention of its sale during certain closed seasons in the District of Columbia," and I ask that the reading of the report be omitted and the statement be read.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, that will be done.

There was no objection.

The conference report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11881) to amend an act entitled "An act for the protection of birds, preservation of game, and for the prevention of its sale during certain closed seasons in the District of Columbia," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 1, line 11, of the bill, strike out "1st day of February" and insert "15th day of March;" and on page 2, line 13, of the bill, strike out "1st day of February" and insert "15th day of March;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House agree to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2 and 3.

J. W. BABCOCK,
JOHN J. JENKINS,
ADOLPH MEYER,
Managers on the part of the House.

JAMES McMILLAN,
J. H. GALLINGER,
THOMAS S. MARTIN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of Representatives make the following statement of the result of the conference with the managers on the part of the Senate on the disagreeing vote of the two Houses on the amendments to the House bill 11881:

The House agrees to the amendments of the Senate with an amendment providing that the closed season, during which any partridge, otherwise quail, prairie chicken, otherwise pinnated grouse, may not be killed, exposed for sale, or had in possession of any party in the District of Columbia, shall be between the 15th day of March and the 1st day of November in each year, in place of between the 1st day of February and the 1st day of November.

The conference report was agreed to.

DISPOSITION OF LAND IN OKLAHOMA.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the bill (H. R. 12901) to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of land with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendments, with the following amendment:

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

The lands to be opened to settlement and entry under the acts of Congress ratifying said agreements, respectively, shall be so opened by proclamation of the President, and to avoid the contests and conflicting claims which have heretofore resulted from opening similar public lands to settlement and entry, the President's proclamation shall prescribe the manner in which these lands may be settled upon, occupied, and entered by persons entitled thereto under the acts ratifying said agreements, respectively; and no person shall be permitted to settle upon, occupy, or enter any of said lands except as prescribed in such proclamation until after the expiration of sixty days from the time when the same are opened to settlement and entry.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman if this amendment is in print?

Mr. LACEY. It is not.

Mr. McRAE. I wish the gentleman would explain it, and I reserve any point of order there may be against it.

Mr. LACEY. It is desired to make some arrangement to prevent an Oklahoma rush or race. A proposition was prepared by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS], covering some system of drawing, but the details could not be agreed upon. This is a proposition which permits the President, or the Secretary of the Interior by direction of the President, to prepare some method by which that rush may be avoided.

In the previous rushes there was so much fraud, so much conflict that even to-day there are cases pending on file and not disposed of where two or three or more persons absolutely had their entire lives tied up for seven or eight years in a controversy over a piece of land. It is proposed to give the President the power to make some rules and regulations that will prevent that.

Mr. McRAE. What remedy does the gentleman propose?

Mr. LACEY. We do not attempt to define what the regulation shall be. My own idea would be some system of drawing.

Mr. McRAE. The matter is to be referred to the Secretary of the Interior, under the direction of the President, to prepare some system?

Mr. LACEY. Yes. The bill was carefully prepared by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS], but as it was very late in the session it did not secure action in the House.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Has the gentleman stated the only change?

Mr. LACEY. There is one other change—a provision put in by the Secretary of the Interior as to the boundaries of the counties. I do not think that is of much importance.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I would like to know whether the privileges of Union soldiers are fully secured in reference to this land?

Mr. LACEY. The privileges which they have by existing law are fully preserved by the bill.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Then, as I understand, the bill as amended makes no change in that respect.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. LACEY. I ask unanimous consent that a conference with the Senate be requested.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. LACEY, Mr. MONDELL, and Mr. SHAFROTH as conferees on the part of the House.

SHIPMENT OF HORSES, ETC., FOR USE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed:

To the House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State in response to the resolution of the House of Representatives of February 19, 1901, requesting him to furnish that body "all the information in the possession of the State Department relating to the shipment of horses and mules from New Orleans in large numbers for the use of the British army in the war in South Africa."

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, March 1, 1901.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. R. 164. Joint resolution giving the Commissioners of the District of Columbia authority to provide for the public comfort;

S. 6012. An act to provide an American register for the steam yacht May;

S. 5935. An act to authorize the Montgomery and Autauga Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Alabama River near the city of Montgomery, Ala.; and

S. 6054. An act authorizing the Texas and Pacific Railway Company to construct a bridge across Red River, Louisiana.

CLAIMS FOR INDIAN DEPREDATIONS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following veto message of the President of the United States; which was read:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without approval, House bill No. 3204, entitled "An act to refer certain claims for Indian depredations to the Court of Claims."

General relief has been extended to citizens who have lost property by reason of Indian depredations by the act of March 3, 1891, conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine such cases. That act provides for payment for damages growing out of depredations committed by any Indian or Indians belonging to a band, tribe, or nation in amity with the United States, excluding from consideration all claims which originated during the existence of actual hostilities between the United States and the Indian tribe.

In making this discrimination the act of 1891 follows the general principle which has been asserted in all general legislation which has ever been enacted for the payment of claims for property destroyed by Indians. The first act which promised such indemnity, that of May 19, 1796, contained the same restriction, and it was reported in every subsequent general act of Congress dealing with the subject. This policy, which has been clearly manifested from the beginning, is in accord with the recognized principle that a nation is not liable for damage to the private property of its citizens caused by the act of the public enemy. This statute has been thoroughly considered by the Court of Claims and by the Supreme Court and its interpretation fixed, and it has been declared to be in accord not only with the policy of Congress as expressed through the legislation of a century, but with the general principles of international law.

I am informed that the records of the Court of Claims show that the claims of four of the five beneficiaries named in the present bill have been presented to that court under the general law and decided adversely, the court having held that a state of war existed between the United States and the Sioux Indians in the year 1862, when the claims arose. The remaining claim, which originated under the same circumstances and at the same time, would, of course, be subject to the same defense if presented.

The bill provides that these claims shall be sent back to the Court of Claims for trial, according to the principles and rules which governed the commission appointed under the act of of February 16, 1863. That act, which was a special act relating to losses occurring during the hostilities of the previous year, did not, of course, impose the requirement of amity, the claims allowed by the commission being paid out of funds belonging to the hostile Indians sequestered by the statute. The effect of this bill if it became a law would be to provide for the payment out of the Treasury of the United States of these claims, which were not presented for payment out of the Indian funds and which have been rejected by the courts under the general law.

There are many hundreds of cases, aggregating a large amount claimed, which have been filed in the Court of Claims, but which are excluded from its jurisdiction for the same reason which necessitated the dismissal of the petitions filed by these claimants. There is no legal obligation on the part of the United States and no promise, express or implied, for the payment of such claims.

The measure of governmental liability is fulfilled by the passage of the act of March 3, 1891, and the prompt payment of the judgments rendered thereunder. To single out for payment a few claims of this large class, to the exclusion of all others, would, in my judgment, be unjust; and such action would also with reason be cited as a precedent for extending governmental aid in all similar cases.

For the reasons given I am constrained to withhold my approval from the bill.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, March 1, 1901.

Mr. MAHON. I move that the message just read be referred, with the accompanying bill, to the Committee on War Claims, and be ordered to be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

APPOINTMENT AND PAYMENT OF HOUSE EMPLOYEES.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. HEMENWAY, Mr. WARNER, Mr. LONG, Mr. NEWLANDS, and Mr. MADDOX as the committee provided for by House resolution No. 439 to frame and report to the next House a bill to regulate the appointment of and payments to the employees of the House of Representatives.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. ZIEGLER, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to withdraw from the files of the House papers in the cases of Charnton C. Mullen and George W. Hope (Fifty-sixth Congress), no adverse report having been made.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. METCALF, by unanimous consent, obtained leave of absence for this day on account of sickness.

ORDER OF BUSINESS FOR TO-MORROW.

Mr. PAYNE. I ask unanimous consent that the House now take a recess until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning, and that from 9 till 11 o'clock to-morrow it shall be in order only to ask unanimous consent or to move to suspend the rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that the House now take a recess until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning, and that the two hours, from 9 till 11 o'clock, be devoted entirely to matters brought up by unanimous consent or under suspension of the rules. Is there objection?

Mr. HENRY of Mississippi. I want to ask whether that will give the War Claims Committee an opportunity to bring up the resolution sending a number of claims to the Court of Claims?

The SPEAKER. That will depend upon the class of business for which gentlemen are recognized. [Laughter.] The Chair hears no objection to the proposed order; and it is adopted.

The House accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) took a recess until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings of fact in the case of John Beal against the United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a final report of inspection of buildings in this city occupied by the War Department—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting the report of a board of officers recommending the purchase of land for barracks and officers' quarters at Fort Schuyler—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

By Mr. SPALDING: Petition of the Presbyterian churches of Galesburg and Broadlawn, in Traill and Steele counties, N. Dak., for the protection of native races in our islands against intoxicants and opium—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. SIBLEY: Petition of citizens of the Twenty-seventh Congressional district of Pennsylvania, in favor of an amendment to the Constitution against polygamy—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of citizens of Raymilton, Pa., asking for the abolishment of the alcoholic liquor traffic from the continent of Africa—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. SPERRY: Petitions of citizens of Waterbury and East Haven, Conn., and Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Putnam, Conn., for the protection of native races in our islands against intoxicants and opium—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. SULZER: Resolutions of the National Business Men's League of Chicago, Ill., relating to the reclamation and settlement of Government lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. SUTHERLAND: Resolutions of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and of National Business League, held at Chicago, favoring appropriations for surveys, dams, and canals throughout the great West—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, petitions of the Woman's Missionary Society of Nelson, Nebr., and A. L. Hunting and 64 others, of Arapahoe, Nebr., for the prohibition of intoxicating liquors in certain islands—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. TOMPKINS: Petitions of Rev. I. R. Thompson, Rev. W. K. Hall, and certain churches of Newburgh, N. Y., for the protection of native races in our islands against intoxicants and opium—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. WADSWORTH: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Wyoming, N. Y., and of Friends' Church of Batavia, N. Y., favoring the passage of the Gillett bill for the protection of native races in our islands against intoxicants and opium—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. YOUNG: Petition of the National Business League, favoring the reclamation and irrigation of arid lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, March 2, 1901.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. GALLINGER, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Journal will stand approved.

REPAIR OF BARRACKS, MARINE CORPS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of the Navy submitting an estimate of deficiency in the appropriation for "repair of barracks, Marine Corps," for the fiscal year 1901, $17,500. Does the Senator from Iowa desire to have it printed or simply referred?

Mr. ALLISON. It need not be printed. The deficiency appropriation bill will be reported this morning, and the communication may just as well lie on the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will lie on the table.

INDIAN DEPREDATION CLAIMS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Attorney-General, transmitting, in response to the resolution of the 28th ultimo, a list of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims in favor of claimants in Indian depredation cases; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the third annual report of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolutions:

A bill (S. 437) for the relief of Isaac McConnaughay, private, Company H, Fortieth Iowa Infantry Volunteers;

A bill (S. 5698) to extend the time for the completion of a bridge across the Missouri River;

A joint resolution (S. R. 115) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to cause bronze medals to be struck and distributed to certain officers and men who participated in the war with Spain, and for other purposes; and

A joint resolution (S. R. 158) ratifying agreement between Tennessee and Virginia with reference to the boundary line of said States.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12904) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendment No. 1 to the bill (H. R. 12901) to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of lands, etc.; agrees to the amendment of the Senate No. 2 to the bill with an amendment; asks a conference with the Senate thereon, and had appointed Mr. LACEY, Mr. MONDELL, and Mr. SHAFROTH managers at the conference on the part of the House.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. PLATT of New York presented the petition of S. W. Crammond, John Hennesy, and sundry other citizens of New York, praying for the enactment of the so-called Grout bill, to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Association of United Garment Workers of America, praying that the Committee on Education and Labor of the Senate be discharged from the further consideration of the so-called eight-hour bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented petitions of the First Presbyterian, the Trinity Methodist, the Moulton Memorial Baptist, and the Westminster and First Reformed Presbyterian churches, all of Newburg; the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Attica, and of J. C. Phelps, of Jamaica, all in the State of New York, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors, opium, and firearms in the New Hebrides and other islands of the Pacific; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BARD presented the following joint resolution of the legislature of California; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed in the RECORD:

[Telegram.]

SACRAMENTO, CAL., March 1, 1901.

Hon. T. R. BARD, Senator, Washington, D. C.:

Senate joint resolution No. 14 has been adopted by both houses of the California legislature, and, in accordance with instructions, I certify that the following is a true and correct copy of same:

"Senate joint resolution No. 14, inviting the Committee on Rivers and Harbors of the House of Representatives to visit the State of California.

"Resolved by the senate and assembly of the State of California, jointly, That we do extend a cordial invitation to the members of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors of the House of Representatives to visit the State of California at their earliest convenience for the purpose of examining the waterways and harbors of this State. The Pacific slope is about to witness a great industrial development, and California must necessarily be the center of increased progress. The bay of San Francisco and the great rivers that empty into it will in the near future possess such a degree of importance that the whole people of the United States will demand their development as commercial waterways to their fullest capacity. From the fact that we are distant from the seat of Government we have difficulty in making our needs known, and believe that an examination of our rivers and harbors would demonstrate their importance to the country. We pledge to the committee during their sojourn in California a most hearty welcome.

"Resolved, That our Senators be instructed and our Representatives requested to present this invitation to the members of said committee and to extend to them an invitation to visit California on behalf of this State.

"Resolved, That the secretary of the senate be, and he is hereby, requested to transmit a copy of this resolution to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress by telegraph."

F. J. BRANDON, Secretary of Senate.

Mr. SCOTT presented a petition of sundry citizens of Wheeling, W. Va., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors, opium, and firearms in the New Hebrides and other islands of the Pacific; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of 17 citizens of Roslindale, Mass., and a petition of 31 citizens of North Adams, Mass., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented petitions of the congregations of the Hope Baptist, the Fifth Avenue Baptist, and the Riverside Baptist churches, all of New York City, and a petition of the Young People's Christian Unions of the Universalist Church of the United States, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in the New Hebrides and other islands of the Pacific; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SEWELL presented a petition of sundry citizens of Trenton, N. J., and a petition of sundry citizens of Somersetin and Plainfield, N. J., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HOAR presented the petition of Rev. J. W. Fulton and 31 other citizens of Ware, Mass., and the petition of Isaac Jeffries and 56 other citizens of Massachusetts, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FRYE presented the following memorial of the legislature of Wisconsin; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed in the RECORD.

Memorial to Congress for the repeal of that part of the war-revenue act passed by Congress on June 13, 1898, which levies a tax on legacies and distributive shares of personal property.

The memorial of the legislature of Wisconsin to the Congress of the United States respectfully shows that in the opinion of the legislature the imposition of inheritance or succession taxes belongs, except in certain exigencies, to the domain of State taxation; that the emergency of war which may have justified the feature of the national war-revenue act of June 13, 1898, levying a tax on legacies and distributive shares of personal property has now passed away; that many of the States have already adopted, and many more will soon adopt, such inheritance-tax laws, and if such feature of the national act remains in force a large amount of property in the country will be subjected to double taxation, once by the Federal Government and again by the State; and that it is expedient and would be good governmental policy that the part of such national revenue act imposing a tax on legacies and distributive shares be repealed and this feature of taxation be left entirely to the jurisdiction and control of the States. It is the purpose of this memorial, therefore, to respectfully request of Congress the repeal of said feature of the revenue act during the present session.

Resolved, That the governor be, and he is hereby, requested to transmit a copy of this memorial to the President of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and to each of the Senators and Representatives from the State of Wisconsin.

JESSE STONE,
President of the Senate.
GEORGE H. RAY,
Speaker of the Assembly.

Mr. FRYE presented the memorial of E. Torres, president of the municipal council of Guayanilla, P. R., remonstrating against the adoption of certain regulations relative to new police courts in Porto Rico; which was referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico.

SENATOR FROM MONTANA.

Mr. CHANDLER. I present the memorial of Henry R. Knapp, of Helena, Mont., in his own behalf and of members of the Labor Party of that State, remonstrating against the right of Hon. William A. Clark to a seat in the Senate of the United States as a Senator from that State. I move that the memorial lie on the table and that it be printed as a document.

The motion was agreed to.

DANISH WEST INDIES.

Mr. LODGE. I present a paper, being a list of books (with references to periodicals) on the Danish West Indies, prepared by Mr. A. P. C. Griffin, Chief of Division of Bibliography, Library of Congress. I move that the paper be printed and referred to the Committee on the Library.

The motion was agreed to.

PORTO RICO.

Mr. LODGE. I present a paper, being a list of books (with references to periodicals) on Porto Rico, by A. P. C. Griffin, chief of division of bibliography, Library of Congress. I move that the paper be printed and referred to the Committee on the Library.

The motion was agreed to.

AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATIONS.

Mr. PLATT of New York, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives, reported it without amendment; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed from the stereotype plates in the Government Printing Office 6,000 copies of House of Representatives Document No. 338, Fifty-sixth Congress, second session, entitled A Report on the Work and Expenditures of the Agricultural Experiment Stations for the Year ended June 30, 1900; of which 1,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 3,000 copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture; the quality of paper and style of binding to be the same as in the original edition of the publication.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. Amendment numbered 195: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 195, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$9,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 196: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 196, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$11,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 197: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 197, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$9,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 198: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 198, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$11,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 199: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 199, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$7,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 200: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 200, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$9,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 206: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 206, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$161,050;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 223: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 223, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,200;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 224: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 224, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$25,920;" and the Senate agree to the same.

The action taken by the committee of conference and recommended in this report with reference to amendments of the Senate numbered 16, 17, 18, and 19, whereby new matter and certain provisions of law are inserted affecting the officers and employees of the House of Representatives, is based upon the authority expressed in the concurrent resolution of the two Houses, adopted February 27, 1901, and which is as follows:

"Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12291) making appropriations for legislative, executive, and judicial expenses are authorized to include in their report such alterations, changes, and recommendations as they may deem proper with reference to so much of the text of said bill as relates to the officers and employees of the House of Representatives."

EXPENDITURES OF ISTHMIAN CANAL COMMISSION.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask unanimous consent to offer a resolution, which it is necessary to have adopted at once in order to get information for the purpose of informing the Senate in regard to the expenditures of the Isthmian Canal Commission. I will read the resolution that I ask unanimous consent to have adopted:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State is directed to send to the Senate an account, in detail, of the expenditures of the Isthmian Canal Commission, of which Admiral John G. Walker is president, up to date, and what sum, if any, is needed to complete the work of said commission and for what purposes the same is needed.

An appropriation of $75,000, I am informed, has been put by the House on the deficiency appropriation bill. I have had no intimation of it as chairman of that committee, and I do not believe there is a dollar of it just. I want the information from the Secretary of State to enable me to show the facts.

Mr. ALDRICH. I suggest to the Senator from Alabama that it ought to go over to the State Department immediately, because the deficiency appropriation bill is to be considered this morning.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask for the immediate consideration of the resolution.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I should like to have it read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution, if there be no objection, will be received. The Senator from Alabama asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution. It will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. ALLISON. I suggest to the Senator from Alabama that it would be impossible to comply with the resolution in time for the consideration of the item in the deficiency appropriation bill. I have no objection, and I am sure no one will have objection, to a complete and detailed account of the expenditure, but I understand the Secretary of State has written a letter, upon the recommendation of the chairman of this commission, asking for an additional sum, and I have no doubt he has given the reasons for asking it in that letter. It is not in the possession of the Senate; it was sent to the House, I understand; but of course it would be impossible to furnish an account of the detailed expenditures of the commission in time for the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. MORGAN. Well, I will ask for the adoption of the resolution, and if it does not do some good to-day it may hereafter.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I report back from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments the bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes, and I ask that it be taken up now and considered.

Mr. HEITFELD. Will the Senator yield for morning business?

Mr. HALE. After the bill is taken up I will yield.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There will be plenty of time for morning business.

Mr. HALE. I ask that the bill be now considered.

Mr. PETTIGREW. With the understanding that we shall take up morning business immediately after the bill has been concluded.

Mr. HALE. Of course. The Senator must see the importance of getting this bill out of the way.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I have no objection, provided we shall take up the morning business regularly and have time allowed for morning business.

Mr. HALE. That can be done.

Mr. PETTIGREW. With that understanding, I do not object.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. I should like to know what is understood by morning business.

Mr. HALE. The regular routine morning business.

Mr. ALDRICH. Not to include contested questions.

Mr. PETTIGREW. To include resolutions.

Mr. ALDRICH. We can not consider contested resolutions this morning.

Mr. HALE. I hope the Senator from South Dakota will not object and stop the bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. We might as well go on with the bill now.

Mr. TELLER. Let us go on with the appropriation bill.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I wish to understand whether at 1 o'clock we shall be excluded from the consideration of the resolution that I introduced yesterday.

Mr. HALE. I hope there will be unanimous consent that the morning hour may be, if necessary, further extended.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I object.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I object, then, to the consideration of the bill at this time.

Mr. HALE. I move to take up the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CLAY. I did not enter any objection to the request of the Senator from Maine, but I gave notice that I would address the Senate briefly this morning. I desire to state that I shall claim the floor when this bill is completed and the morning business is completed.

Mr. HALE. All right.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Do I understand that the morning business can be thus laid absolutely aside?

Mr. HALE. It can.

Mr. PETTIGREW. By a majority vote of the Senate?

Mr. HALE. It can, by a majority vote, on an appropriation bill.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I wish to say that unless I can get a vote on the resolution I introduced I think we will not facilitate the passage of this bill or any other measure by this motion. The railroads talked out the resolution yesterday morning, talking out the two hours, and I intend to have a vote on it before we adjourn.

Mr. HALE. I shall be out of the way in an hour.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It is one hour and thirty-five minutes until 1 o'clock, when the morning hour will expire.

Mr. ALDRICH. I rise to a question of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. ALDRICH. It is that the motion is not debatable.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Very well; there will be questions that will be debatable in about two minutes; and they will be debated, too.

Mr. HALE. I hope the Senator from Rhode Island will withdraw his objection.

Mr. ALDRICH. I did not make the objection. The Senator from Colorado made the objection.

Mr. HALE. I hope the Senator from Colorado will let me go on with the appropriation bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I am delighted to have the Senator from Maine go on with the bill.

Mr. HALE. Then, I hope the Senator from South Dakota will not stop it, because he is an old member of the Senate and knows how important it is that the bill should now be gotten through and out of the way and into conference.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall protect myself by every possible rule that I can invoke. If it facilitates the passage of this measure to object and to shut us out of the morning hour and prevent a vote upon those resolutions, others can decide whether it will facilitate matters or not.

Mr. HALE. I have no object of that kind.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I apprehend that no one member of the Senate has a right to say that he is going to have a vote on some resolution that he wants to have considered or is going to do some other terrible thing. A member of the Senate may ask protection, but I think it will be quite time for the Senate to have some protection if that is the spirit in which we are to transact our business.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall do nothing that the rules do not permit; neither can I force a vote; but I can invoke the rules.

Mr. HALE. Let us go on with the bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is before the Senate.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I ask that the bill be read in full. I insist on the reading.

Mr. HALE. I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be waived and that the amendments reported by the committee be considered in their order.

Mr. PETTIGREW. To that I object.

Mr. HALE. The Senator has a right to object, but that is the invariable course on appropriation bills. I hope the Senator will not insist on his objection.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall object, Mr. President.

Mr. HALE. If my request is objected to, it will simply take up an hour's time in reading the bill.

Mr. PETTIGREW. We could get a vote on my resolutions certainly in less than an hour.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I call for the regular order.

Mr. HALE. Let the Secretary go on with the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. CULLOM. I desire, by the consent of the Senator having the appropriation bill in charge, to report favorably at this time from the Interstate Commerce Committee House bill 10302, with certain amendments.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I call for the regular order, Mr. President.

Mr. CULLOM. I simply want to get the bill printed as soon as possible.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The regular order is demanded. The Secretary will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Secretary resumed and continued the reading of the bill to the end of the following clause, beginning in line 14, on page 4:

Isthmian Canal Commission: To defray the expenses necessarily incurred in making the investigation authorized by sections 3 and 4 of the river and harbor appropriation act approved March 3, 1899, $75,000.

Mr. MORGAN. I understand that this is an addition to the appropriation of a million dollars made during the last Congress for the Isthmian Canal Commission. They have never reported any account, at least to Congress; no report has been made of their expenditures; and I am astounded at the idea that they could expend a million dollars in this length of time, and that there is now a demand presented here for more. This demand, at least for the sake of respectability, ought to have been notified to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals of this body; but no notice has come and no information has been given, and this proposition is bounced in upon the Senate without the slightest knowledge of what this commission has done or proposes to do.

Mr. HALE. I do not think the Senator understands that this is nothing but the formal reading of the bill.

Mr. MORGAN. I want some information about it.

Mr. HALE. When we come to consider the bill, of course the Senator will then have the opportunity of asking for such information as he may desire; but this is simply the formal reading.

Mr. MORGAN. I understand what it is; but if this provision is passed over it will be taken for granted that it is adopted, unless objection is made to it.

Mr. HALE. Nothing can be done now, except the reading of the bill.

Mr. MORGAN. I do not raise any question for the decision of the Senate now. I merely want the Senator to explain the provision to which I have referred for my information on the subject.

Mr. HALE. When we reach the consideration of the bill and debate is in order, of course it will be explained to the Senator; but it can not be explained now. Under the call of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW], nothing can take place but the formal reading of the bill.

Mr. MORGAN. I have just got a resolution through the Senate asking the Secretary of State to give some information as to this item. The whole business looks to me as if it were surreptitious.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reading of the bill will be resumed.

The reading of the bill was resumed, and continued to the end of line 18, on page 9.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I object to the consideration of the bill, on the ground that it was reported to-day.

Mr. GALLINGER. The objection comes too late, Mr. President.

Mr. COCKRELL. The bill was taken up by unanimous consent.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I asked of the Chair when I objected before if it was in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the Senator's objection?

Mr. PETTIGREW. My objection is that this bill was reported to-day; and I object to its being considered at this time.

Mr. HALE. It is clearly too late now to make the point of order, because I moved to take up the bill. The motion was agreed to, and the Senate has taken it up.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The point of order is good at any time.

Mr. HALE. Not a point of order of that kind.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is up by vote of the Senate for consideration.

Mr. MORGAN. This bill ought not to be proceeded with until it is printed. We have no print of it here.

Mr. HALE. I have taken care of that. The bill has been printed.

Mr. MORGAN. No, sir; I have inquired, and I have been told that there is no copy of it in print here.

Mr. HALE. Senators can get copies; they are here.

Mr. PETTIGREW. We can not get copies.

Mr. HALE. There is no trouble about that. The copies will be furnished Senators, if they are not already provided with them.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will continue the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed, and continued to the end of line 19, on page 15.

Mr. HALE. I withdraw the bill for the present, and will let the morning hour go on.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Reports of committees are in order.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. CULLOM. I am directed by the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10302) to amend an act to promote the safety of employees, etc., by requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, etc., approved March 2, 1893, to report it with amendments.

I ask that the bill be sent to the Government Printer immediately, so that we can get it back with the amendments inserted in it in time for consideration to-day.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Why not consider the bill now?

Mr. CULLOM. It is amended so that Senators could hardly consider it intelligently without having the print before them containing the amendments.

Mr. FAIRBANKS, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5956) to provide for the erection of a public building at Findlay, Ohio, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut, from the Committee on Patents, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5355) for the relief of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, submitted a report thereon, accompanied by a bill (S. 6066) to protect veteran organizations against the fraudulent use of badges or insignia, which was read twice by its title.

Mr. PLATT of New York, from the Committee on Printing, reported an amendment submitted by Mr. LODGE on the 21st ultimo, proposing to appropriate $2,000 for the purchase of the copyright of the publication entitled The Political Register and Congressional Directory, by Ben: Perley Poore, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed, which was agreed to.

LOWER BAND AND KATHLAMET BAND OF CHINOOK INDIANS.

Mr. THURSTON, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom were referred the following bills:

A bill (S. 1941) for the relief of the Lower Band of the Chinook Indians of the State of Washington; and

A bill (S. 2140) for the relief of the Kathlamet Band of the Chinook Indians of the State of Oregon—

reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That Senate bill No. 1941, for the relief of the Lower Band of Chinook Indians of the State of Washington, and Senate bill No. 2140, for the relief of the Kathlamet Band of Chinook Indians of the State of Oregon, now pending in the Senate of the United States, together with all the papers accompanying the same, be, and the same are hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provision of an act entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government," approved March 3, 1883. And the said court shall proceed in accordance with the provisions of said act, and report the same to the Senate in accordance therewith.

ESTATE OF JAMES S. DOUGLASS AND OTHERS.

Mr. TELLER, from the Committee on Claims to whom were referred the following bills:

A bill (S. 5095) for the relief of the estate of James S. Douglass;

A bill (S. 5206) for the relief of George F. Brott; and

A bill (S. 6060) for the relief of Mary E. Brewer—

reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the claims represented by the following bills, to wit, S. 5095, 5206, and 6060, for the relief of the estate of James S. Douglass, deceased; for the relief of George F. Brott, and for the relief of Mary E. Brewer, now pending in the Senate, together with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same are hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," approved March 3, 1887. And the said Court of Claims shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such act, and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

SHIPPING INTERESTS.

Mr. JONES of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by Mr. NELSON on the 28th ultimo, reported it with an amendment, to add on line 8, after the word "Senate," the words "not to exceed two hundred and fifty dollars;" and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Commerce of the Senate be authorized to employ an experienced and competent person skilled in the legislative history of Congress, who shall compile, under the direction of said committee or subcommittee thereof, legislation or proposed legislation relating to the maritime or shipping interests of the United States in chronological order, who shall be paid therefor such compensation, not to exceed $250, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, as may be certified by the Committee on Commerce, subject to the approval of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

ASSISTANT CLERK TO COMMITTEE.

Mr. JONES of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, submitted by Mr. MCMILLAN on the 28th ultimo, reported it without amendment; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the resolution of the Senate, adopted January 18, 1900, authorizing the Committee on the District of Columbia to employ an assistant clerk, be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out the words "during the Fifty-sixth Congress."

PUBLIC LANDS IN HAWAII.

Mr. HANSBROUGH, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That a subcommittee of the Committee on Public Lands, to consist of three members thereof, be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to make an investigation of the laws covering and conditions existing with respect to the public lands in the Territory of Hawaii, and to report by bill or otherwise at the next session of Congress; and for this purpose the subcommittee is authorized to sit during the recess of the Senate, at such times and places as they may deem advisable, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ such stenographic, clerical, and other assistance as may be necessary, the expense of such investigation to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. FAIRBANKS introduced a bill (S. 6067) for the relief of Robert J. Tate; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. SULLIVAN introduced a bill (S. 6068) for the relief of the heirs of Augustus Catchings; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CLAY introduced a bill (S. 6069) for the relief of the Propeller Towboat Company, of Savannah; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

COST OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. FAIRBANKS introduced a bill (S. 6070) increasing the limit of cost of certain public buildings, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. FAIRBANKS subsequently, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom the above bill was referred, reported it without amendment; and the bill was placed upon the Calendar.

CHARLES HURRLE.

On motion of Mr. FORAKER, it was Ordered, That the papers pertaining to the claim of Charles Hurrle (S. 3063, Fifty-sixth Congress) be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, there being no adverse report thereon.

CONSULAR REPORTS.

Mr. LODGE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, requested to transmit to the Senate at the beginning of its next regular session reports from the consular officers of the United States giving an account of each consulate and consular agency, showing its principal industries and exports, the surrounding climatic and social conditions, the general cost of living, and similar information.

PNEUMATIC-TUBE SYSTEM.

Mr. MASON submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads be, and are hereby, authorized and directed to make a full and complete investigation into the merits and utility of the pneumatic-tube system for the transportation of mails in the large cities of the country, including cost of construction, cost of operation, Government ownership, etc., with authority to send for persons and papers and to report their conclusions to the Senate at the earliest practicable moment, the necessary expenses to be paid out of the contingent-expense fund of the Senate.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had, on the 1st instant, approved and signed the following acts and joint resolutions:

An act (S. 3270) for the relief of Nathan S. Jarvis.

CORPORATIONS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there are no further concurrent or other resolutions, the Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted on yesterday by Mr. TILLMAN, as follows:

Resolved, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be directed to report to the Senate the list of persons and corporations in arrears to the District of Columbia for personal taxes to the amount of $472,185.05, as noted in the report of the collector of taxes for the year ended June 30, 1900; and that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be directed to report to the Senate the names of all banks, trust companies, safe deposit companies, railroad companies, gas companies, electric lighting companies, telephone companies, local insurance companies, title insurance companies, market companies, etc., doing business in the District of Columbia, giving the capital (and surplus and undivided profits, if any) of each, and the amount of tax (other than real-estate tax) paid by each to the District of Columbia for the year ended June 30, 1900.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

LETTERS OF JEFFERSON ON CUBAN ANNEXATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] to the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. HANSBROUGH on February 18, 1901, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and he hereby is, directed to send to the Senate copies of letters written by Thomas Jefferson to President Madison and President Monroe concerning the annexation of Cuba.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I understand that the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] is willing to let the resolution pass as originally introduced.

Mr. ALDRICH. I should like to ask the Senator from North Dakota if the letters referred to in the resolution are not included in the Madison Papers and Jefferson Papers already published?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I am not so very sure about that. I should like to have the original papers from the Department.

Mr. ALDRICH. It is not the intention, I trust, of the Senator from North Dakota to ask that the originals be transmitted to the Senate.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. No; I mean copies of the originals.

Mr. ALDRICH. I have no doubt that they are all now in print.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

LIEUT. COL. H. O. S. HEISTAND.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted yesterday by Mr. PETTIGREW, as follows:

Whereas it has been charged in the public prints that Lieut. Col. H. O. S. Heistand, assistant adjutant-general, was in the summer of 1899 engaged in forming a combination for the purpose of controlling the hemp output of the Philippine Islands; and

Whereas it is further stated that on various occasions he represented as associated with him in the progress of such enterprise George D. Meiklejohn, Assistant Secretary of War; James E. Boyd, Assistant Attorney-General; Charles H. Allen, then Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and H. C. Corbin, Adjutant-General; and

Whereas it is further stated that in connection with the formation of such company said Lieut. Col. H. O. S. Heistand, intending to indicate that the tariff duties of the Philippine Islands would be adjusted for its benefit when formed, wrote the following letter:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 31, 1899.

MY DEAR MAJOR HAWKS: Your note of the 26th to hand, and I note with gratification what you say of our prospects and progress. I have sent you a pamphlet showing export duties, etc., as at present arranged. Of course the needs of the future will be met as developments require.

Yours, truly.

H. O. S. HEISTAND.

And

Whereas it is alleged that because of a claim made by Major Hawks upon Lieutenant-Colonel Heistand for compensation for his services in connection with the formation of such company and in part settlement thereof, George D. Meiklejohn, Assistant Secretary of War, guaranteed to Major Hawks a substantial position in the Government service, and did appoint him to the position of customs inspector in the Philippine Islands; and

Whereas shortly after his entry upon service as such inspector, by an order dated before the commencement of said service, said Major Hawks was summarily removed from such position;

Resolved by the Senate of the United States of America, That the Committee on Military Affairs be, and it is hereby, directed to investigate and report to the Senate whether the foregoing statements are true, and particularly if Lieutenant-Colonel Heistand was engaged in such combination and was or was not authorized to represent that other Government officials were so engaged with him, and that tariff duties would be adjusted for their benefit; and also whether the Assistant Secretary of War has used Government positions for the purpose of paying private debts of any officer of the Government, and whether the salary of such position was charged against funds arising from the Philippine Islands; and with full authority to said committee to summon witnesses, administer oaths, and employ a stenographer.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

SAFETY APPLIANCES ON RAILROADS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted yesterday by Mr. PETTIGREW, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Interstate Commerce be discharged from further consideration of H. R. 10302, an act to amend an act to promote the safety of employees, and so forth, by requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, and so forth, approved March 2, 1893.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I think the Committee on Interstate Commerce have reported the bill referred to in the resolution, and I therefore withdraw the resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution is withdrawn.

HOURS OF LABOR ON GOVERNMENT WORK.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted yesterday by Mr. PETTIGREW, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Education and Labor be discharged from the further consideration of H. R. 6882, an act limiting the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon work done for the United States or any Territory or the District of Columbia, thereby securing better products, and for other purposes.

Mr. PETTIGREW and Mr. KYLE addressed the Chair.

Mr. ALDRICH. I hope the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] will allow that resolution to go over until to-morrow morning.

Mr. PETTIGREW. That resolution has been pending for two or three days. I think it ought to be acted upon. It simply asks that the Committee on Education and Labor be discharged from the further consideration of the bill named, which went to that committee on the 23d of last May.

Mr. KYLE. I believe I have the floor, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair intended to recognize and did recognize the other Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW].

Mr. KYLE. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. While the Chair looked at the Senator from South Dakota on his right [Mr. KYLE] he recognized the Senator from South Dakota on his left [Mr. PETTIGREW]. [Laughter.]

Mr. HALE. As the main subject in controversy for the possession of the floor has been got out of the way by the report of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM], I hope the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] will not now insist upon this resolution coming up, because I see clearly it is going to give rise to extended discussion.

Mr. PETTIGREW. If the resolution is going to give rise to protracted debate, I will let it go over until to-morrow.

Mr. HALE. I hope the Senator will do so.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Perhaps my colleague [Mr. KYLE] can tell me whether it is going to give rise to extended discussion or not.

Mr. KYLE. I simply wish to state in a few words the position of the committee.

Mr. ALDRICH. I hope that the resolution will be permitted to go over until to-morrow. It will certainly give rise to considerable discussion.

Mr. CHANDLER. Why not adopt it now?

Mr. HALE. We are not ready to adopt it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Why can not this arrangement be made: Let the resolution go over until the deficiency bill has been disposed of, and then have the resolution taken up at once?

Mr. GALLINGER. Oh, no; we can not do what the Senator from South Dakota requests. We have more important matters.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Very well, Mr. President; I will allow the resolution to go over, retaining its place, if I can have unanimous consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota asks unanimous consent that the resolution go over, retaining its place. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

BONDS OF PIMA COUNTY, ARIZ.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. I wish to call attention to the motion made by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] to reconsider the vote agreeing to the conference report on the bill (H. R. 8068) authorizing the board of supervisors of Pima County, Ariz., to issue fifty-year 5 per cent bonds of Pima County, Ariz., to redeem certain refunded indebtedness of said county.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I withdraw the motion to reconsider.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion to reconsider is withdrawn, and the report stands agreed to.

DISPOSITION OF CERTAIN PUBLIC LANDS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives agreeing to amendment No. 1 of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12901) to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of land, etc., and agreeing to amendment No. 2 with an amendment, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the bill and amendment.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment to the amendment.

Mr. STEWART. What is it? I should like to know what lands are referred to.

Mr. HALE. If this is to take any time, I shall raise the question of consideration, because everything has got out of the way for the appropriation bill. I raise the question of consideration.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. This provision is the usual one in regard to opening lands of that character.

Mr. STEWART. What character?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being made to its consideration, the matter will lie over for the present.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I hope the Senator from Maine will withdraw his objection.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Has the Committee on Public Lands acted on this proposition?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. The Committee on Public Lands has passed on the bill generally and amended it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I know; but the question I wish to put to the Senator is whether the Committee on Public Lands has passed on this amendment?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. It has just come from the House.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I think the Committee on Public Lands ought to pay some attention to it, and it ought not to be disposed of in this way.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being made, the matter will go over.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I move that the Senate disagree to the House amendment to the amendment and accede to the request for a conference.

Mr. HALE. That is right.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. HANSBROUGH, Mr. CARTER, and Mr. HEITFELD were appointed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CANNON, Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts, and Mr. MCRAE managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 3288) for the relief of Daniel Coonan; and

A bill (H. R. 14017) making appropriation for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, and asking a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and agree to the request for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. ALLISON, Mr. HALE, and Mr. COCKRELL were appointed.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. Let us go on with the appropriation bill, Mr. President. When that is done, I will yield the floor.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

Mr. HALE. I renew my request regarding action on the amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with; that it be read for amendment, and that the committee amendments first receive consideration. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The bill has been read down to page 15. The Chair supposes the Senator from Maine proposes to go back now to the beginning and start with the amendments?

Mr. HALE. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is no need of rereading it?

Mr. HALE. No.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The first committee amendment will be stated.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, at the top of page 2, to insert:

To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury on account of the appropriation "Contingent expenses, Executive Office," for the fiscal year 1900, $1,715.82.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, after line 22, to insert:

To reimburse the master and owners of the Russian bark Hans for all losses and damages incurred by reason of the wrongful and illegal arrest and detention of Gustav Isak Dahlberg, the master and principal owner of said bark, by officers of the United States district court for the southern district of Mississippi in 1896, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 21, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of State to pay and distribute all increment and accretions upon the sums reserved by the Department of State from the fund received by the Government of the United States upon the account of the payment of the awards of the late Spanish and American Claims Commission, and to pay and distribute the same pro rata to the claimants, their heirs or assigns, to whom said awards were made as shown by the report of the Secretary of State, transmitted to the President in his message dated February 27, 1888, and printed as Senate Executive Document No. 93, first session Fiftieth Congress, $14,435.50.

The amendment was agreed to.

To enable the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to purchase the entire collection of maps, field notes, records, and other surveying data, of the late H. W. Brewer and the late Charles Wilson, formerly surveyors of Georgetown, as their respective interests may appear, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, after line 12, to insert:

To pay the office of recorder of deeds for reporting real estate transfers and recording deeds for the District of Columbia for the fiscal years 1895 to 1899, inclusive, to be available for the service of the fiscal year 1901, $1,312.53.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to make an inquiry in regard to this amendment. I wish the Senator in charge of the bill would explain why it is necessary to pay that sum of money.

Mr. HALE. Does the Senator raise a question about the amendment?

Mr. MORGAN. I wish information about it.

Mr. HALE. I will send for the papers. The Clerk has them, and meanwhile it may be passed over.

Mr. MORGAN. Is he a salaried officer?

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 27, after line 21, to insert:

For sprinkling, sweeping, and cleaning the streets, avenues, and alleys, and suburban streets, $13,480.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 5, after the word "repairing," to strike out "and;" in the same line, after the word "renewing," to insert "and replacing;" and in line 6, after the word "dollars," to insert "to continue available during the fiscal year 1902;" so as to make the clause read:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, after line 13, to insert:

For amount required for contingent expenses to pay outstanding bills for preparing photographs, models, etc., sent to the International Exposition at Paris, fiscal year 1900, $1,173.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, after line 21, to insert:

That the sum of $80.75, paid for printing, photographic material, etc., for the International Exposition at Paris, 1900, is hereby allowed, and the accounting officers of the United States Treasury are authorized and directed to credit the same in the accounts of C. C. Rogers, disbursing officer, District of Columbia, fiscal year 1900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 29, after line 3, to insert:

The accounting officers of the Treasury are authorized and directed to allow $196.61 in the accounts of the disbursing officers, District of Columbia, for the purchase of bayonets, swords, and other military equipments from the appropriation "Contingent expenses, public schools," fiscal year 1901.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 33, after line 2, to insert:

Garfield Memorial Hospital: For isolating wards for minor contagious diseases, maintenance, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at top of page 34, to insert:

Militia, District of Columbia: For printing and stationery, $150; for expenses of drills and parades, $250; in all $400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Pay Department," on page 37, after line 6, to insert:

For the reimbursement of traveling expenses on account of travel from their homes or the places of original acceptance of offer of employment, and for salary, when on leaves of absence, of contract or acting assistant surgeons employed by the Medical Department of the Army since April 21, 1898, where such traveling expenses or salary may have heretofore been disallowed or deducted on the ground that the terms of the written contracts made with the contract surgeons did not entitle them to the allowances in question, $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary therefor: Provided, That all such claims now pending or that may hereafter be presented for payment shall be settled and allowed, where such claims relate to salary, in accordance with the leave privileges governing in the case of commissioned officers of the Army, and where such claims relate to traveling allowances, as in the case of assistant surgeons of the Army on their first appointment, but the amounts so allowed shall in no case exceed the amounts authorized by the War Department in regulations governing the matter: And provided further, That disbursing officers of the Paymaster's Department of the Army who have already paid or shall hereafter pay accounts for such traveling expenses or for salary during leaves of absence, as above provided, shall be given credit in the settlement of their accounts at the Treasury for all such payments upon the presentation of proper vouchers.

Mr. TILLMAN. Is the amendment of the committee open to general amendment now?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not, under the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. TILLMAN. Is not the amendment we are on now open to amendment?

Mr. HALE. It is a committee amendment.

Mr. TILLMAN. I should think the amendment of which I spoke to the Senator from Maine this morning would come in right there. It has reference to the same matter of payment in the Army, and this is in regard to payment in the Army.

Mr. HALE. I wish the Senator would wait until we get through.

Mr. TILLMAN. Of course, if the Senator desires it, I will wait.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STEWART. I have an amendment to offer to the amendment reported by the committee, but before I offer it I desire to state what it is.

Under the Thurman Act the pay for Government service by the bond-aided railroads was to be retained and credited on the interest due the Government. Nonaided roads, of course, did not come under the Thurman Act. But it was contended here in this Chamber and elsewhere that inasmuch as the stockholders in the Central Pacific were also stockholders in the Southern Pacific, the Government should retain the earnings on those roads and apply it on the debt. The Government did retain it. The Supreme Court held that the United States had no right to retain it. If the Government had had a right to retain it and had retained it it would have offset the interest from the date of service.

When the settlement was made with the Central Pacific it was understood that there would be an adjustment of this matter. It was frequently discussed, and it was contended that, no matter if it was due to the Southern Pacific Company, the Government ought to keep it back until the final settlement. At the final settlement it was understood that the accounts would be brought in and an adjustment would be made.

When the accounting officers came to adjust the accounts, however, they found that there was no law to allow interest as an offset against the interest paid by the company, and consequently they could not be equitably adjusted. If it had been the aided roads it would have applied at 6 per cent, but on nonaided roads the law was defective, and it could not be adjusted. Although the companies were paying 6 per cent to the Government and the money was retained by the Government for this service, it could not be an offset.

The Secretary of the Treasury has made a statement and recommends the allowance of 4 per cent, which the Government allows on judgments. It will not make a complete settlement, because the companies were paying 6 per cent. Remember if the Government had rightfully retained it, it would have allowed 6 per cent; but the Government having no right to retain it, there could not be an adjustment without legal authority to offset interest against interest. The Secretary of the Treasury says the Government pays only 4 per cent on judgments. I have the communication here.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator state where he proposes his amendment?

Mr. STEWART. I propose the amendment on page 38, at the end of line 7.

Mr. HALE. Let it be read.

Mr. STEWART. I will send it to the desk and have it read. I have found no man who suggested that it was unjust and ought not to be done.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. At the end of line 7, on page 38, insert:

And provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to make a settlement of the claims growing out of Government transportation over nonbond-aided lines of the Southern Pacific Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company by crediting against the notes of the Central Pacific Railroad Company held in the Treasury of the United States interest on all of said judgments and allowed claims at 4 per cent per annum, as set forth in his letter to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, dated May 12, 1900.

Mr. HALE. I make the point of order that there is no law for this amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. STEWART. I ask unanimous consent that it may be put on the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada asks unanimous consent that the amendment he proposes may be adopted.

Mr. HALE. I can not consent to that, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. STEWART. I shall then have to appeal to the Senate. I believe it is in order. It is a deficiency, and I propose to put it on the deficiency appropriation bill, and it is in order to settle up matters of this kind on that bill. I ask to have the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury with regard to this matter read on the point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from Nevada to appeal from the decision of the Chair?

Mr. STEWART. I do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada appeals from the decision of the Chair. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. HALE. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine moves to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. HEITFELD. What is the question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada offered an amendment and the Chair ruled the amendment out of order. The Senator can state what the amendment is, if he will.

Mr. STEWART. The amendment proposes to allow the adjustment, as was intended, in the settlement of the claims of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. The Government held back the pay for non-aided roads. The Thurman Act authorized the Government to hold back the pay on bond-aided roads and apply it on the debt. They held it back on the non-aided roads. The Supreme Court held that the Government had no right to hold it back on the non-aided roads, but the Department continued to do it. It was insisted here in the Senate by Senators that it should be done; that it dib not make any difference whether they had a right to do it or not, the stockholders were the same practically in the two companies, and that the Government should retain it until the final settlement.

When they came to the final settlement they found that they could not pay an offset, as it was contended here at that time was the way it should be settled; that it was impossible for the Department to allow interest on the money that they held back wrongfully. If they had held it back rightfully it would have been applied to the interest. When they held it back wrongfully they could not pay the interest. The Secretary of the Treasury explains that, and I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, is this motion debatable?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not, but the Senator from Idaho asked for information as to the amendment, and the Senator from Nevada is undertaking to state what it is.

Mr. STEWART. Nobody questions the justice of the amendment. I have not heard it questioned by anybody. The only question now is a question of order, and the Senator from Maine has moved to lay on the table my appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, let us have the regular order.

Mr. STEWART. There need be no hurry about the regular order; it will not facilitate the passage of this bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is not debatable.

Mr. STEWART. Something will be debated on this bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. Undoubtedly the Senator will talk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maine to lay on the table the appeal taken by the Senator from Nevada from the decision of the Chair.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. STEWART. I ask that the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury be printed as a document, if there be no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. STEWART. And I ask that it be printed in the RECORD, also.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be printed, without objection, in the RECORD, also as a document.

The letter is as follows:

MAY 12, 1900

SIR: The Department is in receipt of your communication of the 30th ultimo, inclosing copy of an amendment offered to the sundry civil bill now pending before your committee, relating to the question of interest upon certain allowed claims for transportation services rendered to the Government over the nonbonded lines of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Company. The amendment proposed provides for interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum upon amounts which became due from the United States to the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company for transportation services rendered to the Government over the lines of these companies for which no subsidy bonds were issued by the United States in aid of their construction.

Replying to your request to be furnished with a statement in as much detail as practicable as to the dates when these claims were settled and allowed by the accounting officers, and also as to such claims as were embraced in the judgments rendered in favor of the companies, I have the honor to state that under the Pacific Railroad acts of 1862 and 1864 one-half of the earnings from Government transportation over the bond-aided roads was required to be applied to the payment of the principal and interest of the subsidy bonds issued by the Government in aid of their construction, and by the act of May 7, 1878, commonly known as the "Thurman Act," the other half of Government transportation earnings over the bond-aided lines was to be withheld and applied to the sinking fund created by said act. Neither of these acts related to the transportation earnings over the nonbonded lines, which, under certain decisions of the Supreme Court, were required to be paid in cash.

The services for which payment was withheld were rendered in most part during the years 1883 to 1896, inclusive. Under various rulings of the accounting officers, payments for these services being withheld, suit was commenced by the Central Pacific Railroad Company in the Court of Claims in November, 1885, for recovery of amounts then due and for further amounts accruing for similar services. This case was decided in favor of the company, and, on appeal by the Government, was affirmed by the Supreme Court.

After the spring of 1885 the transportation services for the Government over the nonaided lines of the Central Pacific Railroad Company were rendered by the Southern Pacific Company as lessee of these lines, and as compensation for such services was also withheld, suit was commenced by the Southern Pacific Company in the Court of Claims therefor, and judgment was rendered in favor of the company in January, 1893, for $1,824,336.44. The question as to withholding payment having already been decided by the Supreme Court, as above stated, no appeal was taken by the Government.

The Second Comptroller, in a decision rendered in August, 1865, says: "With reference to the order of the late Secretary of the Treasury of January 12, 1884 (directing that all balances ascertained by the accounting officers to be due for these services should be certified without suggestion as to the mode of payment, but should be held in abeyance for the future disposition of Congress), it is difficult to see how it can longer be upheld. It was evidently intended only to be temporary in its operation, and to anticipate that some explanatory or remedial legislation by Congress would be had; but two sessions have since passed and that body had manifested no disposition to further legislate upon the subject. Under this order an approximate estimate shows that over $900,000 are now held in suspense, having been neither paid to the company nor credited to them under the Thurman Act. It is clear that the Government can not properly refuse to act at all in the matter. It should either pay this money over to the company or else it should be covered into the Treasury and invested and applied as required by the act of 1878."

The following is a summary of the amounts of interest on the various allowed claims computed at 4 per cent:

1. Interest on claims embraced in judgments of the Court of Claims for the periods from the respective dates of rendition of such judgments to the respective dates of payment thereof.	$640,041.89
2. Balance of interest, exclusive of amount stated in foregoing, on all claims from the respective dates of certifications by the accounting officers to the respective dates of payment thereof.	856,048.52
Total amount of interest	1,496,090.41

Credit for these claims and judgments, amounting to $1,162,939.43, was allowed in settlement agreement entered into with the company by the United States February 1, 1899, but, in the absence of express authority of law, the amounts of interest as herein stated were not allowed.

I inclose herewith a statement showing somewhat in detail the amounts of interest on claims embraced in each judgment and the interest on allowed claims separately. These judgments and claims are all reported in Senate Document No. 34, Fifty-fourth Congress, second session, and Senate Document No. 236, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.

I have also had prepared a statement showing by date, number, and amount each allowed claim, and the date, number, and amount of each judgment, with the interest computed at 4 per cent thereon from the respective dates of settlement by the accounting officers to the dates of payment thereof, which I will take pleasure in forwarding to the committee should it so desire.

Respectfully,

L. J. GAGE, Secretary.

Hon. W. B. ALLISON,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations, United States Senate.

Statement showing amounts of interest at 4 per cent per annum on claims allowed by the accounting officers for transportation services rendered for the United States by the Central Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Company over lines in aid of the construction of which no subsidy bonds were issued by the United States.

SENATOR FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

Mr. MONEY (at 1 o'clock p. m.). Mr. President, yesterday I gave notice that at 1 o'clock to-day I would make some remarks in reply to the speech of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. PRITCHARD]. I find myself this morning physically unable to proceed with the speech, and I therefore will not go on, as I had intended. Later on, if the condition of public business will permit me to do so, I will take advantage of the courtesy of the Senate to submit some remarks, but I will not do so if the business shall occupy the time.

GENERAL DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

The reading of the bill was continued.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head "naval establishment," page 51, line 11, to insert:

For pay, Marine Corps, 1898 and 1899, $6,561.57.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 51, line 19, after the word "hundred," to strike out "seven hundred and eighty-nine dollars and ninety-seven" and insert "two thousand one hundred and forty-two dollars and eighty;" so as to make the clause read:

For transportation, recruiting, and contingent, Bureau of Navigation, 1900, $2,142.80.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 51, line 23, after the word "hundred," to strike out "sixty thousand two hundred and ninety-four dollars and sixty-three" and insert "sixty-one thousand one hundred and three dollars and eighty-nine;" so as to make the clause read:

For equipment of vessels, Bureau of Equipment, 1900, $61,103.89.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 52, line 2, after the word "thousand," to strike out "eight hundred and eighty-three dollars and thirty-two" and insert "nine hundred and forty-five dollars and forty-two;" so as to make the clause read:

For Medical Department, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, 1900, $3,945.42.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 52, after line 4, to insert:

For contingent, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, $133.70.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead of "General account of advances, naval establishment," on page 52, line 21, before the word "cents," to strike out "four thousand eight hundred and eighty-three dollars and seventeen," and insert "thirteen thousand eight hundred and two dollars and sixty-three," so as to read:

In all, $213,802.63.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 55, after line 13, to insert:

To pay voucher in favor of James A. McMahon on account of naval training station, California, $814.95.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 56, line 15, after the word "cents," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That the transportation to their homes, if residents of the United States, of enlisted men and apprentices discharged on medical survey; and the transportation to the place of enlistment, if residents of the United States, of enlisted men and apprentices discharged on account of expiration of enlistment, shall hereafter be chargeable to the appropriation "Transportation, recruiting, and contingent."

So as to make the clause read:

To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury on account of the appropriation "Transportation, recruiting, and contingent, Bureau of Navigation," for the fiscal year 1900, $939.66: Provided, That the transportation to their homes, if residents of the United States, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 58, line 17, to increase the appropriations for the Bureau of Equipment from $1,000,000 to $1,350,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 58, line 25, after the word "hundred," to strike out "fourteen thousand four hundred and sixty dollars and ninety-six" and insert "fifteen thousand two hundred and seventy dollars and twenty-two;" so as to make the clause read:

To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury on account of the appropriation "Equipment of vessels, Bureau of Equipment," for the fiscal year 1900, $15,270.22.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 59, after line 19, to insert:

To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury on account of the appropriation for "Medical department, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery," fiscal year 1900, $62.10.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 65, after line 20, to insert:

For improvements and repairs to buildings, sewerage, plumbing, prison cells, lights, and other necessary expenses, marine barracks, navy-yard, New York, $17,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head "Department of the Interior," page 67, line 20, before the word "hundred," to strike out "four" and insert "five;" in line 21, before the word "hundred," to strike out "eight" and insert "nine;" and on page 68, line 2, after the word "two," to insert:

The Public Printer is hereby authorized to print, on the requisition of the Secretary of the Interior, 5,000 copies of the connected and separate United States and other maps prepared in the General Land Office, for sale by the Interior Department under the laws and regulations now in force.

So as to make the clause read:

Of the whole number of United States maps procured under the appropriation made for the fiscal year 1899, for connected and separate United States and other maps prepared in the General Land Office, there shall be delivered, in addition to the number now required by law, 5,500 copies to the Senate and 10,830 copies to the House of Representatives for distribution; and the appropriation of $14,840 for connected and separate United States and other maps made for the fiscal year 1901 is hereby made available for expenditure during the fiscal year 1902. The Public Printer is hereby authorized to print, on the requisition of the Secretary of the Interior, 5,000 copies of the connected and separate United States and other maps prepared in the General Land Office, for sale by the Interior Department under the laws and regulations now in force.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 70, after line 2, to insert:

For repairs in Senate restaurant, regilding frames of Moran paintings, and for fire extinguishers for the Senate folding rooms and Maltby Building, $1,394.50.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 76, after line 14, to insert:

Classification of certain mineral lands in Montana and Idaho: To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury on account of the appropriation "Classification of certain mineral lands in Montana and Idaho," for the fiscal year 1900, $74.17.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 77, after line 23, to insert:

To pay Chapman and Bannister, deputy surveyors, amount due and unpaid for surveys under contract No. 146, $2,106.06.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 78, after line 2, to insert:

To pay F. W. Pettigrew amount due and unpaid on contract for surveys of public lands, No. 132, of July 12, 1897, $383.33.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 78, after line 23, to insert:

Fort Sherman abandoned military reservation: To pay salary of the custodian of the Fort Sherman abandoned military reservation, Idaho, from March 1 to June 30, 1901, at the rate of $480 per annum, $161.30.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 80, to insert:

To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury on account of the appropriation "Geological Survey" (mineral resources), for the fiscal year 1900, $33.11.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 81, line 24, before the word "dollars," to strike out "six hundred" and insert "eight hundred and fifty;" so as to make the clause read:

For service of officers, at $15 per month each, and privates, at $10 per month each, of Indian police, to be employed in maintaining order and prohibiting illegal traffic in liquor on the several Indian reservations and within the Territory of Alaska, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior; for the purchase of equipments and for the purchase of rations for policemen at nonration agencies, for the fiscal year 1900, $850.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 82, line 3, before the word "dollars," to strike out "three hundred and thirty-nine" and insert "four hundred and fifty-nine;" so as to make the clause read:

To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury on account of the appropriation "Pay of Indian police," for the fiscal year 1900, $459.80.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 96, line 18, before the word "cents," to strike out "thirty-eight dollars and twenty-five" and insert "sixty-seven dollars and fifty;" so as to make the clause read:

Prosecution of crimes: To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury on account of the appropriation "Prosecution of crimes" for the fiscal year 1900, $467.50.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "United States courts," page 99, after line 10, to strike out:

That witnesses in misdemeanor and civil cases before the United States commissioners' courts in the Indian Territory shall be entitled to 3 cents a mile, for each mile actually and necessarily traveled, in going to and returning from said court; and witnesses subpœnaed in behalf of the United States shall be paid on the order of the commissioner, as in felony cases. When a witness is subpœnaed and in attendance upon said court in more than one case at the same term, only one travel fee and one per diem compensation shall be allowed for attendance, and the same shall be taxed in the case first disposed of, after which the per diem attendance only shall be taxed in the other cases in the order in which they are disposed of.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 99, after line 23, to insert:

That for all services rendered by United States marshals for the several districts of the Indian Territory and their respective deputies the fees and compensation provided by section 829 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, shall be taxed and allowed, and the field deputy marshals shall receive compensation in accordance with section 11 of the act approved May 28, 1896, and all deductions and disallowances made under a decision of the Comptroller of the Treasury in re United States Marshal Hammer, dated October 12, 1900, shall be allowed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 100, after line 11, to insert:

That witnesses at preliminary examinations before United States commissioners and witnesses before the district courts in the Indian Territory shall be entitled to the fees prescribed in section 828 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, except as provided in section 850 of said statutes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head "Legislative," page 103, after line 18, to insert:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 111, after line 5, to insert:

To pay William A. Watson, special messenger, authorized in the resolution adopted by the House of Representatives February 7, 1900, at the rate of $1,200 per annum, from March 4, 1901, to June 30, 1902, inclusive, $1,593.30.

To pay George C. Randall, B. W. Armstrong, John W. Herndon, J. M. McKay, and F. B. Lyon each a sum equal to two months' pay at the rate of compensation respectively received by them January 1, 1901, for extra services rendered in the folding room under resolution of the House No. 253, $1,133.32.

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire the Senator in charge of the bill to make some explanation as to why the Senate has added amendments referring to House employees and House affairs.

Mr. HALE. It always happens, particularly on this bill, that there are certain matters which have not reached the House and have not been matured, and when we get a report from the Committee on Accounts of the House and the Committee on Appropriations of the House, asking us to put on their matters, we put them on.

Mr. COCKRELL. That is what I wanted to know. It was only done at the special request of the House Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. HALE. Certainly; otherwise we never lift a hand in regard to House matters.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Maine to line 16, page 111, where the words "nine hundred and one" appear. Should it not be "nineteen hundred and one?"

Mr. HALE. Yes; let that amendment be made.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. On page 111, after line 20, I move to insert what I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 111, after line 20, it is proposed to insert:

Library of Congress: That the appropriation of $2,000 heretofore made in the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill for special temporary and miscellaneous service, at the discretion of the Librarian of Congress, shall be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 113, line 6, after the word "in," to strike out "House Document No. 65" and insert "Senate Document No. 189;" and in line 9, before the word "dollars," to strike out "eighty-two thousand two hundred and eleven" and insert "four hundred and twenty thousand three hundred and thirty-two;" so as to read:

For payment of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims in Indian depredation cases, certified to Congress at its present session in Senate Document No. 189, $420,332, etc.

Mr. HALE. In line 7, after the word "eighty-nine," I move to insert the word "and" and then a blank for the number to be inserted in conference.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I move, in line 9, to strike out "$420,332," and insert "$435,728."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head, on page 114, line 9, after the word "fifty-four," to insert "and Senate Document No. 211;" and in line 11, before the word "cents," to strike out "four hundred and forty-nine thousand five hundred and seventy-four dollars and seventy-nine" and insert "seven hundred and fifty-nine thousand four hundred and ninety-four dollars and sixty-seven;" so as to read:

For the payment of the judgments rendered by the Court of Claims, reported to Congress at its present session in House Document No. 354 and Senate Document No. 211, $759,494.67, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 115, to insert:

That the sum or sums appropriated to be paid to the administrator of Peter C. Brooks, deceased, in the act of Congress approved March 3, 1899, entitled "An act for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, and commonly known as the Bowman Act, and for other purposes," be paid Charles F. Adams as the administrator of said estate; but the amount thus appropriated shall not be paid until the Court of Claims shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury that the administrator of said estate represents the next of kin of the said Peter C. Brooks, and the court which granted the administration shall have certified that said administrator has given adequate security for the legal disbursement of the amounts.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 115, line 23, after the word "sixty-seven," to insert "and Senate Document No. 192;" and in line 25, after the word "appealed," to strike out "two thousand two hundred and seventy-seven dollars and ten" and insert "three thousand and fifty-two dollars and seventy;" so as to make the clause read:

For payment of the final judgments and decrees, including costs of suit, which have been rendered under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," certified to Congress at its present session by the Attorney-General in House Document No. 367 and Senate Document No. 192, and which have not been appealed, $3,052.70, together with such additional sum as may be necessary to pay interest on the respective judgments at the rate of 4 per cent per annum from the date thereof until the time this appropriation is made.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 116, after line 8, to insert:

For payment of interest at 4 per cent per annum on the final judgment against the United States in favor of Patrick Henry Winston, rendered by the circuit court of the United States for the district of Washington, on the 1st day of October, 1894, under and by virtue of jurisdiction conferred by the act of Congress approved March 3, 1877, $406.26.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 125, after line 2, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 3. That for the payment of the following claims, certified to be due by the several accounting officers of the Treasury Department under appropriations, the balances of which have been exhausted or carried to the surplus fund under the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874, and under appropriations heretofore treated as permanent, being for the service of the fiscal year 1898, and prior years, unless otherwise stated, and which have been certified to Congress under section 2 of the act of July 7, 1884, as fully set forth in Senate Document No. —, Fifty-sixth Congress, second session, there is appropriated as follows:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine desire to fill the blank in line 14, on page 125?

Mr. HALE. Yes; I move to insert the words "two hundred and twelve."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was concluded.

Mr. STEWART obtained the floor.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator from Nevada wait a moment until certain committee amendments can be adopted? Will he restrain his impatience for a moment?

Mr. STEWART. I desire to make an appeal.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On page 27 there is an amendment which was passed over, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 27, after line 12, it is proposed to insert:

To pay the office of recorder of deeds for reporting real estate transfers and recording deeds for the District of Columbia for the fiscal years 1895 to 1899, inclusive, to be available for the service of the fiscal year 1901, $1,315.50.

Mr. HALE. The objection to that has been withdrawn. Let it be agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment on page 27 will be agreed to.

Mr. HALE. On page 36, after the word "dollars," in line 10, I move to insert the words "to be available until expended."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I think that disposes of the committee amendments, and I trust Senators will allow the bill to go through now without further amending it.

Mr. MORGAN. I called the attention of the Senator from Maine——

Mr. HALE. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] has an amendment to offer.

Mr. GALLINGER. I offer the amendment I send to the desk.

Mr. MORGAN. I call the attention of the Senator from Maine to the part of the text of the bill to which I referred. I wish to get some information now, if I can, about the Isthmian Canal Commission on page 4.

Mr. HALE. What is the item?

Mr. MORGAN. The item is as follows:

To defray the expenses necessarily incurred in making the investigation authorized by sections 3 and 4 of the river and harbor appropriation act, approved March 3, 1899, $75,000.

I want to know why that is in the bill?

Mr. HALE. I sent for the papers, and I send them to the Senator from Alabama. Let the paragraph be passed for the moment and let the Senator look at them.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have sent an amendment to the desk to which the Senator from Maine does not object. It has been reported favorably from the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 34, after line 8, insert:

That of the unexpended balance of the appropriation for repairs to the Aqueduct Bridge, District of Columbia, the sum of $1,465 may be used, under the direction of the Secretary of War, for the temporary protection of said bridge, and the further sum of $3,000 may be used for obtaining plans and estimates for rebuilding said bridge, the said amounts to be immediately available.

Mr. HALE. That does not cause any new appropriation, and is reported by the committee, I understand.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is right.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAWLINS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 99, after line 5, insert:

The accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby authorized and directed to reopen and restate the accounts of H. G. McMillan, D. C. Dunbar, C. H. McClure, and K. S. Boreman and settle them in accordance with the provisions of the act approved January 19, 1901, entitled "An act relating to the accounts of United States marshals and clerks of the district courts of the Territory of Utah."

Mr. HALE. There is no objection to the accounts being examined. There is no appropriation involved.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SPOONER. I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk, to be inserted at any appropriate place in the bill. I have not a copy of the bill.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert:

To pay to Francis Bloodgood, of Milwaukee, Wis., balance of a judgment rendered in his favor in the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Wisconsin, for services rendered as United States commissioner, $610.

Mr. HALE. Is that the Wisconsin matter which was before the court, where a judgment had been rendered?

Mr. SPOONER. It is.

Mr. HALE. That is right. I think that is the end of it.

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator will pardon me a moment, I should like the attention of the Senate for not over five minutes upon this subject. I want to state the case just as it is.

Mr. HALE. I do not object to the amendment.

Mr. SPOONER. But I want to state the case. I know the Senator does not object to it. If the Senate thinks this provision ought not to be inserted, I do not wish to have it inserted, and it will not take me more than two or three minutes.

The claimant here was a United States commissioner for a great many years, and is now. He had been paid at certain rates for his services as a court commissioner in criminal cases for many years. At last his fee bill, if I may so call it, was challenged by the Department of Justice in part. Under the Tucker Act he brought suit in the United States court for the eastern district of Wisconsin against the Government for the amount of $2,036.20. Of course it was unquestioned that the court had jurisdiction. The Government, by the United States district attorney, appeared in the cause and contested it, and the court entered a judgment in behalf of the plaintiff for the amount of $2,036.20 principal, and $7.20 costs. That was April 24, 1893, and copies of the entry of judgment were served on the United States district attorney and the clerk of the court April 24, 1893.

The time for the Government to appeal expired October 24, 1893, and the judgment, therefore, without any fault of the plaintiff, became absolute against the Government.

The Supreme Court of the United States four months later, on an appeal from a decision in another part of the country, rendered a decision which, if it had been rendered on an appeal from this judgment, would have reduced the judgment $610.

Mr. COCKRELL. To $610?

Mr. SPOONER. No; $610. That was six months after the right to appeal from the decision in this case had expired. Congress appropriated to him the amount of the judgment less the $610, which he accepted under protest, and this amendment is to pay him the balance. Of course as between ordinary parties, litigants in court, there could be no question about it. The right of the Government and this plaintiff was fixed. His right to the $2,000 was res adjudicata, and he asks this $610.

That is the case. If the Senate thinks that he is entitled to it, then this amendment ought to be adopted.

Mr. HALE. Let us have a vote of the Senate upon it.

Mr. STEWART. Does the Senator think it is equitable?

Mr. SPOONER. Equitable? If the Government had appealed he would not be allowed it. The Government did not appeal. The Government brought it into its own court, contested the matter with him, and had its day in court.

Mr. HALE. And lost its right to appeal.

Mr. SPOONER. And lost, without any fault of his, its right to appeal. Technically he would be entitled to it; but I want to submit the whole case to the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. It is as plain a case of a citizen of the United States being morally, legally, and equitably entitled to this money as could be made. If he had lost his case and had not appealed, and then afterwards the principal had been settled otherwise in a later case, we would never have made up those cases. The claims have come again and again from the Finance Committee, and we have always referred those cases.

Mr. COCKRELL. My understanding is just the reverse. We have an immense claim now pending here, barred by limitation, and the claimants come in and say certainly it must be paid; the limitation must not cut them off.

Mr. HOAR. A limitation is a different thing from a judgment.

Mr. COCKRELL. I know a number of cases in the Court of Claims that have been paid where the parties did not have the right.

Mr. WOLCOTT. As I understand the proposition of the Senator from Wisconsin, if the Government had done its duty and appealed, this man would not have received the $610.

Mr. HOAR. Perhaps it thought it was not worth while to appeal in so small a sum.

Mr. WOLCOTT. If we have a Government official who would not think it was worth while to appeal from an unjust judgment of $610, he ought not to serve the Government long; and if the Government did not appeal, and the judgment became absolute, and our accounting officers refused to pay it because the decisions of the Supreme Court show he is not entitled to it, it is difficult for me to perceive what equities there are. There may be a legal technical right, but there are certainly no equities in his behalf.

Mr. SPOONER. I have stated the case as it is, so that the Senate is in possession of the question.

Mr. HALE. I do not want to go into it further.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. I offer an amendment to come in under the judgment of the Court of Claims.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the amendment just adopted insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to the administrator of the estate of Philip C. Rowe, of Massachusetts, the sum of $13,200, for the use of said Rowe's invention by the United States of an improvement in pistons for pumps by the Navy Department during the years between 1865 and 1882.

Mr. HALE. This is a pure claim. I must raise the point of order.

Mr. LODGE. Of course if the Senator raises the point of order it is the end of it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. LODGE. I offer another amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts offers an amendment, which will be read.

The SECRETARY. Insert the following:

That the sum of $2,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to purchase from the estate of Mrs. Ben: Perley Poore the copyright of the publication entitled "The Political Register and Congressional Directory," by Ben: Perley Poore.

Mr. HALE. Is that estimated for or is it reported from any committee?

Mr. LODGE. It is reported from the Committee on Printing.

Mr. HALE. Reported favorably?

Mr. LODGE. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. DANIEL. I should like to have some explanation of the amendment—what it is the Government is to buy and what we are to give for it.

Mr. LODGE. I understand it is to enable the Government to reprint the Political Register and Congressional Directory which was published originally by Ben: Perley Poore. Its matter has become entirely out of date; that is, it wants to be brought up to date. It is a very valuable register.

Mr. DANIEL. I should like to know the value of the document to the Government. What is the use of it?

Mr. LODGE. It is to get rid of his right, so that the Government can bring his register up to date.

Mr. HALE. It is the Congressional Directory, continuing for years and showing the committee service, etc., of members of Congress in both branches from the beginning, and this is for the Government to buy the right and then to continue to bring it down to the present time. The amendment was reported favorably by the Committee on Printing; so it is not subject to a point of order.

Mr. DANIEL. What is the Government to pay for it?

Mr. HALE. Two thousand dollars.

Mr. LODGE. Yes, $2,000.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It has grown to be a sort of habit here that men who are employed by committees, or employed otherwise by the Government, will do a lot of work of this sort and ask to have it printed, and then come in afterwards with claims against the Government for having it done. Was this work done by Mr. Poore while he was clerk of one of the committees of the Senate and in pursuance of his duties as such clerk?

Mr. LODGE. Of course, as the Senator knows, Major Poore died a great many years ago.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I know.

Mr. LODGE. He was clerk of the Committee on Printing, I believe.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I know he was.

Mr. LODGE. At the time, I mean, of this work. He received nothing from the Government. He did the work at his own risk and copyrighted it, and got his return, whatever it was, from the sale. The book is an extremely useful one, and there is no way to bring it up or reissue it, except by extinguishing this copyright. Whether the copyright is worth $2,000 or not, I do not pretend to judge. I have not looked into the figures at all, but I do think it would be well to continue the publication.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It seems to me there ought to be somebody here to show that this work is worth $2,000 to the Government before the Senate is asked to pay $2,000 for it.

Mr. HALE. Every Senator can judge for himself whether it is worth something to have it brought down to the present day. It is a handy book for reference.

Mr. COCKRELL. Does that include pay for bringing it down to date?

Mr. LODGE. No; it is to extinguish the copyright. The Government can not print this Register and Directory while the copyright exists.

Mr. COCKRELL. There are two or three other publications almost like this one of Poore's. I think there is another one, and Lanham has one also.

Mr. HOAR. That is very much older than Poore's.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is older than Poore's. Then another one simply gives biographic sketches.

Mr. LODGE. Those are simply sketches, I think, more in the nature of a dictionary, and this is a register such as we have partially in our Manual.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not see why Congress could not have a similar work from the foundation of the Government to this time prepared without paying anybody for a copyright for anything that is to go into it. Nearly all of the information has been printed in the Congressional Directory.

Mr. LODGE. I have no desire to take the time of the Senate in debating it. I have stated the case. That is all I want.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I wish to ask what is the nature of this work? Is it practically a compilation of what is in the Congressional Directory?

Mr. LODGE. Oh, no; not at all. It goes back to the beginning of the Government, and it shows every man who has held an office under the Government, and just what places he has held. It is a dictionary of the entire Government of the United States. It has no relation to the Congressional Directory.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I move to insert the following:

For reimbursing G. A. Lieber, of Jamestown, N. Dak., late deputy collector of internal revenue for the district of Nebraska, for excess of expenses over allowances from August 1, 1894, to August 31, 1898, $264.90.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CLAY. I have an amendment on the table that I desire to have taken up and acted upon. It is an amendment in print. I will make a short statement, and I think the Senator in charge of the bill will agree to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read.

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay Wood & Bond, undertakers, of Macon, Ga., for services and expenses in connection with the funeral and burial of the late Senator A. H. Colquitt, $552.50.

Mr. CLAY. I desire to state that my constituents think that this bill ought to be paid in full in every item of it, but the Committee on Appropriations do not think so, and I feel bound to accept their judgment. They say to me that they will accept the amendment provided that I will cut it to $276.25, and I am willing that the amendment shall be amended by striking out the amount named and inserting "$276.25."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Georgia modifies his amendment by reducing the amount as stated.

Mr. HALE. What is the amount now fixed in the amendment?

Mr. CLAY. Two hundred and seventy-six dollars and twenty-five cents. I cut it in two. It is divided by half.

Mr. HALE. That is right.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CLAY. In order to show that the claim is just and correct, I ask leave to insert in the RECORD three affidavits.

There being no objection, the affidavits were ordered to be inserted in the RECORD, as follows:

GEORGIA, Bibb County:

Personally appeared before me W. H. Ross, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he received a telegram from Hon. R. J. Bright, Sergeant-at-Arms United States Senate, instructing him to have suitable preparations made for the burial and funeral ceremonies of the late Senator Alfred H. Colquitt.

In obedience to said telegram deponent procured the services of Wood & Bond, undertakers, at Macon, Ga., giving them instructions to make all proper preparations and to attend to all details and furnish all necessary materials for his funeral, everything to be in keeping with his high station and the regard in which he was held by the people.

These instructions included the furnishing of the hearse, the preparation of the grave, the payment of the city of Macon bill for interment, according to its ordinance, the furnishing of a large number of carriages, the flower designs and decorations for the casket, the hearse, and the church, and the personal attention of the undertaker and several assistants.

WM. H. ROSS.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 27th day of October, 1898.

CHAS. G. WILBOURN,
Notary Public, Bibb County, Ga.

GEORGIA, Bibb County:

Personally appeared before me A. L. Wood, a member of the former firm of Wood & Bond, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

That he no longer has any pecuniary interest in the bill of Wood & Bond vs. The United States Senate for the funeral expenses of the late Senator Alfred H. Colquitt.

Deponent says that the charges in said bill are in every respect reasonable, and were charged at such low figures that it left a very small margin for profits.

The charge of $25 for the hearse from depot to church, and the further charge of $25 for the hearse from the church to the cemetery, are in every respect reasonable. There were four horses harnessed to the hearse, each horse being especially selected as a match for the other three, which of itself made them more expensive. There was a uniformed footman to each horse, and the decoration of the hearse was very expensive. For reasons stated later on, said hearse was in use from 10 o'clock a. m. to 6 p. m., and could not be used by Wood & Bond, causing them the expense of hiring other hearses for other funerals under their management.

The city bill of interment of $41.50 is the actual amount of cash paid out to the city of Macon according to its ordinances.

The $10 for the chestnut box that inclosed the coffin on the train was placed in the grave, and was bought by deponent at this regular price.

The two items for the personal attention of the undertaker and his three associates, amounting to $55, are in every respect reasonable. Deponent went from Macon to Atlanta the day before the funeral, in order to meet the corpse there and take charge of it. He had to make a personal examination and see that it was in proper condition, and was compelled besides his railroad fare and hotel bill to incur other expenses in Atlanta. He came from Atlanta to Macon with the corpse the day of the funeral, and was busy until 6 p. m. in connection with the funeral. The day before the funeral his three assistants were busy in making local arrangements for the funeral. The decoration of the church, the decoration of the hearse, the procuring of the carriages, the supervising of the digging of the grave and preparing the vault, the procuring of the four horses for the hearse, the procuring of singers, the notifying of various committees, and numerous other details that were necessary for the funeral to be conducted in a proper manner in keeping with the dignity and position of the deceased kept all three of the assistants busy on the day of the funeral and the day preceding.

The item of $336 for 42 carriages is entirely just and reasonable. Acting upon the instructions of Maj. William H. Ross and the telegram received from the Hon. B. W. Layton, deponent ordered the 42 carriages charged for, and would have procured more if the city had contained them. The charge of $8 per carriage is just and reasonable, because those carriages were in use from 10 a. m. until 6 p. m. on the day of the funeral.

The funeral was to have taken place at 11 o'clock a. m., but by reason of Mr. B. W. Layton's allowing the body to lie in state in the capitol in Atlanta, and some delay to the train bringing the body to Macon, the train did not arrive here until after 1 o'clock p. m., and the funeral was held at 3 o'clock instead of 11. In the meantime everything was held in waiting. The services were very long, and it was fully 6 o'clock, and perhaps later, before these carriages were discharged. The usual price for a carriage in this city is $5 for a funeral lasting two or three hours, but, as above stated, these carriages were used from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m., and the additional charges had to be paid by Wood & Bond. The carriages could not be discharged when it was learned that the train was late, because no one knew how soon the train would arrive, nor at what hour those in authority would decide to have the funeral. In addition to this, if the carriages had once been discharged, it would have been impossible to have gotten them together again. The Sergeant-at-Arms allows pay for only seven carriages at $3.50 each. More than seven carriages were occupied by the Congressional escort. By Mr. Layton's orders only two Senators were placed in a carriage, as he objected to any Senator riding backwards.

In addition to this large escort, the numerous members of the family occupied several other carriages, and some of the carriages had to be crowded in order to make room for the members of the supreme court of the State of Georgia. No friends or other persons, except the Congressional escort, the members of the family, and the members of the supreme court of the State of Georgia, rode in these carriages, and the friends and a large number of prominent men of this State were compelled to go to the cemetery on the street cars. There was not enough carriages as it was, and there was considerable complaint on that score.

A. L. WOOD.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 28th day of October, 1896.
[SEAL.] W. W. WRIGLEY,
Notary Public, Bibb County, Ga.

GEORGIA, Bibb County:

Personally appeared before me, L. H. Burghard, an undertaker in the city of Macon, Ga., who, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That he is in no way interested in the claim of Wood & Bond for the funeral expenses of the late Senator Alfred H. Colquitt.

At the time of said funeral deponent was employed as the general manager and funeral director for said Wood & Bond, but that said funeral was personally managed by and under the direction of Mr. A. L. Wood, one of the members of the firm. Deponent and two other competent men assisted Mr. Wood in the details of said funeral, said details being very numerous, troublesome, and difficult to manage, and kept all three of said assistants employed during the whole of the day of the funeral and most of the day preceding the funeral. Deponent remembers the circumstances of said funeral clearly, and states that $50 was a reasonable charge for the use of the hearse on that occasion. The decorations of the hearse, like the decorations of the church, were very elaborate and expensive. The hearse was drawn by four of the finest horses in the city, and were specially selected as being matches for each other. They were handsomely housed, and each attended by a footman in uniform. The bill paid to the city is the usual bill that has to be paid for each funeral in accordance with the city ordinance. There were 42 carriages used at said funeral, and they did not suffice to carry all the distinguished people to the church and to the cemetery.

This number might have been sufficient but for the fact that the assistant sergeant-at-arms gave me instructions to not allow but two members of the delegation from Washington to ride in a carriage. I had all the members of the various Georgia delegations (such as the supreme court, etc.) to ride four in a carriage, but there were many distinguished Georgians and friends of the deceased, and some relatives, who could not be seated in the carriages, and were compelled to go on street cars or make other arrangements. There were a great number of complaints on this score.

The hearse and all the carriages were in service from about 10 a. m. to about 6 p. m., the long delay being on account of the late arrival of the train and consequent changes in the programme.

The usual charge for the carriage for an ordinary funeral, lasting about two hours, is $5.

L. H. BURGHARD.

C. D. PEAVY,
Notary Public, Bibb County, Ga.

GEORGIA, Bibb County:

In person appeared G. M. Davis, one of the firm of G. M. Davis & Son, liverymen, of Macon, Ga., who, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That the said firm furnished for Wood & Bond nearly all the carriages used at the funeral ceremonies of the late Senator Alfred H. Colquitt. The regular price for each carriage at a funeral was at that time $4. The carriages are not generally used more than two hours, but on this occasion they were in use from about 10 o'clock a. m. to 6 p. m. This extra time was caused by the fact that the remains were expected to arrive on the train about 10 o'clock a. m. and the services at the church were to begin at 11 a. m., but the train arrived several hours late and the services were held at the church about 3 p. m. We charged Wood & Bond double price for each carriage we furnished. Under Maj. W. H. Ross's instructions carriages had to be furnished for the Congressional escort and other distinguished bodies of men, making it necessary to get nearly all the carriages in Macon, including some private carriages. About forty carriages were procured, but that was not enough, and there was complaint on that score.

Deponent has no interest in this matter, as Wood & Bond paid him long ago.

GEORGIA, Bibb County:

Personally appears before me D. A. Keating, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he was the city sexton of the city of Macon at the time of the funeral of Senator A. H. Colquitt; that according to the ordinances of the said city of Macon deponent charged and received from the undertakers, Wood & Bond, the sum of $41.50 for fees, material, work, etc., for the burial and grave of said Senator Colquitt. The items of said account were as follows:

For brick and masonry	$29.00
For supplying center and measurements	2.50
For interment fee	10.00

The regular charge for a citizen of Macon is $5, and an extra fee of $5 is charged for all nonresidents, making the interment fee in this case $10, as charged.

Said sum of money was actually paid to me by said Wood & Bond, and there was no way for them to avoid it, as, under the ordinances, this money is paid cash for the nonresidents before a permit for burial is issued.

CHAS. L. DASHER,
Notary Public, Bibb County, Ga.

Mr. STEWART. I again appeal to the Senator from Maine to withdraw his objection to the amendment that I offered for the adjustment with the Central Pacific Railroad Company. I call his attention to the fact that this matter was in charge of the late Senator Gear. He reported it favorably on two occasions and had an amendment pending at the time of his death.

Mr. HALE. Very well. If it has been reported by a committee let the Senate vote upon it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did not understand to what amendment the Senator from Nevada referred.

Mr. STEWART. It is the amendment I offered a while ago.

Mr. HALE. It is the amendment the Senator offered and I raised the point of order that it had not been reported by a committee. The Senator now says it has been reported by a committee, and let the Senate vote upon it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. At the end of line 7, page 38, insert:

And provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to make settlement of the claims growing out of the Government transportation over nonbond-aided lines of the Southern Pacific Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company by crediting against the notes of the Central Pacific Railroad Company held in the Treasury of the United States interest on all of said judgment and allowed claims at 4 per cent per annum, as set forth in his letter to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, dated May 12, 1900.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I offer the amendment I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert the following:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives to pay the officers and employees of the Senate and House, borne on the annual and general rolls on the 1st day of March, 1901, including the Capitol police, the official reporters of the Senate and of the House, and W. A. Smith, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD clerk, for extra service during the Fifty-sixth Congress, a sum equal to one month's pay at the compensation then paid them by law, the same to be immediately available.

Mr. HALE. I do not suppose there is any power given from heaven or among men to stop this amendment. Therefore I shall not attempt to stop it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLEN. On page 54, line 15, I move to insert what I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 54, line 15, insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Henry T. Clarke the sum of $5,500, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the value and rent of buildings on the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 2, township 13, range 13, Sarpy County, Nebr., from February 9, 1890, to December 9, 1900, at $480 per year, being for the use of buildings on said land acquired by the United States by condemnation proceedings in the suit against Henry Zurcher in accordance with a proposition made by Henry T. Clarke to the Secretary of War July 29, 1889, which said proposition was for the sale of lands to the United States in Fort Omaha, now Fort Crook, by which proposition all said buildings were retained by Henry T. Clarke, and for the value of said buildings, $5,500. That the said sum of $5,500 is to be accepted and received by Henry T. Clarke in full of all claims and demands on account of said buildings and for the rental thereof, the title of said buildings to remain in the United States.

Mr. HALE. Has the Senator put in the clause that it shall be in full?

Mr. ALLEN. I think it is in the amendment. If not, let it be amended by inserting that it shall be in full.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. It is in.

Mr. HALE. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] says that it is in. I was not listening.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. It is in the latter part of the amendment.

The Secretary read as follows:

In full of all claims and demands on account of said buildings and for the rental thereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. THURSTON. I ask unanimous consent to insert directly after the last amendment what I send to the desk, and I will state in a moment the reason for it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska asks unanimous consent to insert after the amendment just adopted what will be read by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. On page 54, line 14, after the amendment just adopted, insert:

For the relief of Rasmussen & Strehlow, contractors on Government work, on account of damages done to the main Government building at the Pan-American Exposition grounds, by the cyclonic storm of September 12, 1900, $15,000, the same to be immediately available.

Mr. HALE. This is a claim, Mr. President.

Mr. THURSTON. I appeal to the Senator to let this go on the bill. I admit it is a claim, but there are circumstances of peculiar hardship.

These contractors reside in my town. They took the contract to erect the building at the Buffalo Exposition. A cyclone came along and destroyed their work when it was partly completed. The Treasury Department, through its architect, has filed a statement, and a bill of this character has been reported favorably in the House, under which the Government officials say that the contractors ought not to stand this loss; that under the plans of the building it was no fault of theirs. The loss was very much more. The Architect of the Treasury recommends the allowance of $15,000.

Mr. HALE. Let the Senator ask unanimous consent.

Mr. THURSTON. That is what I have asked. I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. President, no ground has been stated why the Government should pay a man for the act of God any more than it should pay everybody else in the country where misfortunes have happened to them. If the Senator wants to try the point of law in the Court of Claims, I would not object to his constituent being heard. But he has stated no——

Mr. THURSTON. The Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department says as follows:

A cyclonic storm materially damaged the main building at the Pan-American Exposition grounds at Buffalo N. Y.; that such damage was not on account of any carelessness of the contractors, as the construction provided that the building be of very temporary character—and it was unreasonable to expect the contractors to provide such form of construction as would resist the violence of such unusual storm.

That was the Government plan—

Two representatives from this office, immediately after the damage, made a careful estimate of the cost of replacing the damaged portion, and fixed the sum at $15,000. This office has received a written proposition from the contractors to accept such sum in full for the damage sustained. As it is doubtless an obligation of the Government to reimburse the contractors for the loss, I recommend that the attention of Congress be called to the matter, and that it be requested to appropriate $15,000 to reimburse the contractors, Rasmussen & Strehlow, for the loss sustained by them on account of damage caused by the cyclone referred to.

Mr. DANIEL. That is no legal opinion.

Mr. THURSTON. This is a very deserving case, and if there is not paid now this sum of $15,000, there will probably be a claim for a much larger sum appearing before Congress at every session.

Mr. DANIEL. If the Government owes this gentleman much more it ought to pay him much more, and if a legal ground is shown why it should be paid I will vote to pay it. But no ground has been assigned in any statement of the Senator from Nebraska showing the liability of the Government to pay for storms that sweep away the property of individuals.

Mr. HALE. If this gives rise to debate I must make a point of order against it.

Mr. DANIEL. If the Senator proposes to refer this matter to a judicial tribunal I will vote to do it, so that if I am mistaken in my opinion they may correct me, but as far as I see it it is a mere request that the Government shall pay contractors because a storm destroyed their property. It was not the fault of the Government of the United States that the storm came, any more than it was not their fault. It is a matter without fault.

Mr. HALE. Does the Senator object to this?

Mr. DANIEL. I should object to it in this form, but I do not wish to impede a trial of the matter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia objects.

Mr. MALLORY. I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 18, after line 16, it is proposed to insert:

For hoisting apparatus for public building at Pensacola, Fla., $6,500.

Mr. HALE. Is that estimated for by the Treasury Department?

Mr. MALLORY. No, sir.

Mr. HALE. Then I make the point of order on the amendment.

Mr. MALLORY. The Supervising Architect of the Treasury has recommended it, but the Department itself does not, so far as I know.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is obliged to sustain the point of order.

Mr. MALLORY. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may be adopted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida asks unanimous consent that the amendment may be added to the bill. The Chair hears no objection, and the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. MORGAN. On page 4, under the heading "Isthmian Canal Commission," I move to strike out from line 14 to line 18, inclusive. I have submitted the matter to the Senator in charge of the bill. I wish that provision to go out of the bill, so that the conferees may have an opportunity to get all the facts in regard to it.

Mr. HALE. I have no objection to the matter being thrown into conference.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama moves to strike out, on page 4, the clause from line 14 to line 18, inclusive, which will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Isthmian Canal Commission: To defray the expenses necessarily incurred in making the investigation authorized by sections 3 and 4 of the river and harbor appropriation act approved March 3, 1899, $75,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Alabama.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I wish the Senator from Alabama would please send me the papers in this case.

Mr. MORGAN. I shall do so.

Mr. HALE. The papers may be needed in conference.

Mr. MORGAN. I offer an amendment to which I want to call the attention of the Senator in charge of the bill. It is to pay William Colen, an old colored man, who has been at work in the Capitol grounds, $720 for injuries which he sustained under the circumstances which I will state. He is an old, faithful man, whom I happen to know here, and have known for the last fifteen or twenty years. He has worked a great deal in the public grounds here, and, as I say, is very faithful. He is a very competent old man and is very poor. While engaged in the work here, in the line of his duty, an embankment fell upon him and broke his legs and some bones about his body, I believe, and so injured him that he was unfit for duty for a long time; in fact, he is hardly able to get around the grounds now.

I think this a very meritorious matter and that the Senate should vote him this appropriation. It is to cover the time when he has been under the care of a doctor and has been lying at his house. During that time he has had scarcely the means of existence, and pretty nearly starved; in fact, he would have done so if it had not been for charity. He received this injury entirely without his fault. He was digging under some embankment, which fell upon him and broke him to pieces very badly. I hope the Senate will adopt the amendment.

Mr. HALE. The committee had several cases of this kind and rejected them all on the ground that they are claims.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, I know something of this matter, and it certainly is a very meritorious claim. It is a very small amount which is proposed to be paid to this old and faithful man who has been at work here around the Capitol. Without his own fault he got injured. He was laid up and has been sick for a long time; in fact, he is in such a condition now that he has hardly recovered from the injuries he received. This is a small matter of only $720, and it seems to me we ought to give it to him. We give sums of $5,000 here and nothing is said about them. I think we might be equally generous in this very meritorious case. I hope the amendment will be put on the bill by the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN].

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator from Alabama put the amendment in writing and send it to the desk?

Mr. MORGAN. It was in writing, and referred by the Senate to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert:

To compensate William Colen, laborer, for loss of time and expenses while in the service of the Senate, by the caving of an embankment, $720.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, what became of the point of order I raised on that amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was not aware that the point of order was raised.

Mr. HALE. I raised the point of order. I stated we had several cases of this kind, and that the committee had rejected them because they were pure claims. I made the point.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would be compelled to sustain the point of order if raised.

Mr. MORGAN. The Senate adopted the amendment, and of course the Senator can not raise the point of order now.

Mr. BATE. Not at all. It is too late now.

Mr. HALE. I raised the point of order.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President——

Mr. BATE. I should like to know what was done about the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]. Was the point of order insisted on?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair sustained the point of order.

Mr. BATE. I appeal to the Senate that the amendment may be adopted by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama be added to the bill. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 86, at the end of line 17, it is proposed to insert:

To pay T. C. Marson for services as superintendent of construction at the Indian school at Flandreau, S. Dak., for services caused by contractor's failure to complete the buildings within the time specified in the contract, forty-three days, at $5 per day, $215.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETTUS. I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Alabama will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert the following:

For the relief of Agnes and Maria De Leon, as shown in House bill 2619 and Senate report on that bill, No. 1619, $1,600.

Mr. HALE. Let us have a vote on that amendment, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Alabama.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MORGAN. I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Alabama will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert the following:

That out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated there be paid to the heirs of Margaret Kennedy, the widow and sole executrix of John Kennedy, deceased, the sum of $10,476, less any sum heretofore paid her in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act for the relief of Margaret Kennedy," approved October 19, 1888: Provided, That the amount herein provided to be so paid to said Margaret Kennedy is to be in full compensation for all claim or demand of said Margaret Kennedy as the executrix of John Kennedy, deceased, or of the claim or demand of the heirs or representatives of said John Kennedy by reason of timber, fences, fruit trees, and other property taken and used by the Army of the United States during the late war of the rebellion from the farm of said John Kennedy, in the District of Columbia, being the farm on which Fort Sedgwick was erected.

Mr. HALE. I make the point of order on that amendment that it is a claim.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is obliged to sustain the point of order made by the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE.]

Mr. MORGAN. I ask leave to put a report in the RECORD from the Committee on Claims relative to that matter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

The report referred to is as follows:

This is a bill to pay the heirs of Margaret Kennedy, widow and sole executrix of the late John Kennedy, $10,476, less the amount paid her in pursuance of an act heretofore passed.

This bill, or one similar to it, was favorably reported to the House from the Committee on Claims on the 28th of January, 1891, and it was passed by the Senate on the 10th of May, 1891.

In the Fiftieth Congress a bill was passed directing the Quartermaster-General to ascertain "the value of all timber, fences, and fruit trees on the farm of John Kennedy, deceased, in the District of Columbia, upon which Fort Sedgwick was erected, taken and used by the Government for firewood and in the construction of said fort." The Quartermaster-General stated the value, which amounted in gross to $1,378.44, and this amount was paid.

The items given are 200 cords of wood; whereas the fact is there were 900 cords of wood taken, which, at $10 a cord, would amount to $9,000; 1,936 rails, 200 fruit trees, and timber for the fort. The wood is valued at $2 a cord, the fruit trees at $4 each, and the fence rails at 4 cents each, which would not pay for cutting and splitting, the timber for the fort at the gross sum of $101.

The farm was the sole property of the late John Kennedy. It was stripped of all that made it valuable, it was occupied during the pleasure of the Army, the owner was deprived of its use and income, and it was left in a condition that greatly depreciated its value. At that time firewood was worth $10 a cord; the timber, as it stood, was worth much more, for it gave value to the farm, and no one in the possession of such property would have consented to its indiscriminate destruction at any price. Four cents each for fence rails does not cover the cost of splitting, and they were the more valuable at that time, inasmuch as wire fencing was not then, as now, in general use. Four dollars each for 200 fruit trees did not bear any comparison to their value, estimating their planting and care and their past and future product. No man would consent to have his fruit trees swept from his farm if the despoiler would offer ten times their value.

The committee submits that the sum paid the widow is not by any means adequate; that the Government, in appropriating what she would not have voluntarily parted with and in its occupancy and use of the place, has incurred an amount of indebtedness which in justice it should satisfy.

The bill is reported favorably, with a recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. TILLMAN. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk, to be inserted on page 38, after line 7.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 38, after line 7, it is proposed to insert:

That all officers and enlisted men of volunteers, war with Spain, who served honestly and faithfully and were honorably discharged for any cause after August 12, 1898, date of the protocol, shall be allowed the extra pay provided by act of January 12, 1899, entitled "An act granting extra pay to officers and enlisted men of United States volunteers," provided such officers and enlisted men shall produce satisfactory evidence showing they were not placed on furlough prior to their discharge, and provided the same has not already been paid: Provided further, That any overpayment or other indebtedness to the United States on account of the service of any officer or enlisted man shall be deducted from the extra pay allowed.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I desire to ask why it is necessary to insert the words "honestly and faithfully?"

Mr. TILLMAN. I have copied the exact language of the two previous acts on the same subject.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. But that does not make it valid.

Mr. HALE. If this amendment gives rise to any debate, I shall have to make the point of order that it is legislation.

Mr. DANIEL. I wish to ask a question about the amendment.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am ready to explain the amendment; but the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], who has examined it, has agreed to let it go in. I am perfectly willing to give a very clear and cogent reason why it should go in and remain in.

Mr. DANIEL. I desire simply to ask a question about it.

Mr. TILLMAN. Very well.

Mr. DANIEL. What does the amendment mean by saying "they were not placed on furlough?" Does that mean that an officer or an enlisted man who had a furlough shall not receive the benefit of this legislation?

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] will listen to me—I am going to address myself to the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], but I should like the attention of the Senator from Maine.

Mr. HALE. If this amendment takes up two minutes, I shall raise the point of order that it is legislation, as, of course, it is; and the Senator can take his chances of a vote on the amendment. He may do so, if he desires; but I do not wish to interfere longer than I can possibly help with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. CLAY], who has been waiting here in the kindest way to deliver some remarks.

Mr. TILLMAN. I was going to put some documents in the RECORD, and to say nothing about the amendment; but I am asked a question by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], and I can not help making an explanation.

Mr. DANIEL. The Senate is entitled to information on the subjects which come before it. I am not willing to vote in the dark in the closing days of the session.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. HALE. The Senator from Virginia is right; and I raise the point of order on the amendment that it is general legislation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, you will have to hear me on it again. The Senator from Maine will not gain anything by cutting me off now. I am either going to be heard here and now or some time else.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No debate on the matter is in order under the rules of the Senate if objected to. Debate must proceed by unanimous consent.

Mr. TILLMAN. When the bill gets into the Senate I can offer the same amendment, and I can get my hearing then. So it is not worth while to try to shut me off in this way. I know the amendment will go out of the bill if I make the Senator from Maine a little cross, but I am going to have justice and equality done here to these officers, or try at least. I will answer the question of the Senator from Virginia now or hereafter.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President——

Mr. TILLMAN. If I had not been asked the question by the Senator from Virginia, I would merely ask to insert in the RECORD the papers which I hold in my hand and let the Senator from Maine take that as the basis of acting on this amendment in conference; but the Senator from Virginia insinuates that I am putting something wrong in here in the dark.

Mr. DANIEL. I insinuate nothing. I had no reference whatever to the Senator.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am glad the Senator did not have. I will proceed to answer the question.

Mr. DANIEL. I have a right to know what we are voting on, whether it is an amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina or anyone else.

Mr. TILLMAN. And the Senator from South Carolina is very anxious to give the Senator from Virginia the information, but he was denied the opportunity, when he was about to give the explanation, by the Senator from Maine raising the point of order on the amendment.

The Senator from Virginia has said he does not want to vote in the dark. When we have all been voting in the dark here, I do not see why, when I am anxious to give light, I should be cut off.

Mr. HALE. I hope the Senator will be as brief as possible. He knows how I am situated and how important it is to pass this bill at the earliest moment.

Mr. TILLMAN. I know that, and I have been anxious to facilitate the passage of the bill. I tried to get the amendment on in committee, but the chairman said he would rather have me put it on in the Senate.

I will simply say that on the 12th of January, 1899, Congress passed an act by which officers and men who served in the Spanish war outside of the United States received two months' extra pay, and those who served in the United States received one month's extra pay, unless they had had furloughs a month before muster out. The War Department construed that in a way that caused injustice, so that in the last appropriation act for the Army, approved on the 26th of May, 1900, an additional provision was inserted which sought to clarify the law and give these officers their just dues. Under that amendment all of the claims for the extra month's pay have been settled except a very few, possibly five hundred.

to me saying that his claim had been turned down. I thereupon went to the Auditor for the War Department, and he explained to me that the reason it was turned down was because the War Department itself had changed the basis of judgment on the 22d of last December. All claims from May until December were admitted, provided parole evidence was presented that the officer had not had a furlough. The claim of which I am speaking was rejected because the War Department, or Colonel Ainsworth, rather, now claims that the authority for granting these men furlough was not competent, and the consequence is that every other officer, so far as I know, of that regiment has had this extra month's pay but this one, and the reason is that the War Department has changed its view and has had new light as to what the law meant. The rule in use now was not in use from May to December, 1900, and has only recently been adopted.

I have the letter of the Auditor for the War Department explaining the matter, and also the two acts, one the original act granting the extra month's pay, and the amendment to it, both of which have been construed away by the Auditor for the War Department in his anxiety to protect the Government. I am simply asking that we construe it back, and let every man get the same rights that every other man has already had. I desire to have the letter of the Auditor, together with the original act and the amendment, printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

The papers referred to are as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF AUDITOR FOR THE WAR DEPARTMENT.
Washington, February 27, 1901.

SIR: Referring to your verbal inquiry in the case of Capt. A. D. Hoke, of the First South Carolina Volunteers, relative to the disallowance of his claim for extra pay under the act of January 12, 1899, as amended by the act of May 26, 1900, I have to advise you that the action of this office in determining the rights of officers to extra pay under the acts above referred to depends upon whether the officers were on leave of absence or on waiting orders during the period their organizations were on furlough under General Order 130, of 1898. The laws providing for extra pay directed the payment thereof in lieu of granting furloughs and leaves of absence, and it has been held since the laws were passed that officers or men who received a substantial part of the furlough or leave of absence which was granted to their organization under the provisions of the General Order 130 above mentioned were not entitled to extra pay. The question as to whether officers were on duty or on leave or on waiting orders during the period the organization was on furlough is a military one, to be determined by the War Department, and it is upon the record and evidence in each case that action has been taken by this office. It may be said that in the case of Captain Hoke, the Chief of the Record and Pension Office, under date of January 16, 1901, reported to this office that nothing had been found of record showing that this officer was retained on duty or performed duty by direction of competent authority during any portion of the furlough period of his command.

It may be proper to add that prior to December 22, 1900, the War Department seems to have taken into consideration affidavits and other evidence furnished that officers were held to duty during the furlough period of their command in determining their status for that period, and in such cases as the War Department reported that the officers were held to duty during the furlough period, extra pay was allowed by this office if the other conditions of the act were complied with, but since December 22, 1900, the War Department seems to give no consideration to parole evidence showing that officers were retained on duty during the period the organization was on furlough or waiting orders under the provisions of G. O., 130, of 1898, and amendments.

Respectfully,

F. E. RITTMAN, Auditor.

Hon. B. R. TILLMAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

An act granting extra pay to officers and enlisted men of United States Volunteers.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in lieu of granting leaves of absence and furloughs to officers and enlisted men belonging to companies and regiments of United States Volunteers prior to muster out of the service, all officers and enlisted men belonging to volunteer organizations hereafter mustered out of the service who have served honestly and faithfully beyond the limits of the United States shall be paid two months' extra pay on muster out and discharge from the service, and all officers and enlisted men belonging to organizations hereafter mustered out of the service who have served honestly and faithfully within the limits of the United States shall be paid one month's extra pay on muster out and discharge from the service, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That the discharge of all officers and enlisted men from the volunteer service of the United States shall, as far as practicable, take effect on the date of the muster out of the organization to which they belong, and that regiments and other independent organizations shall be mustered out at camps within the limits of the United States, or at the rendezvous of the State, regiment, or independent organization.

SEC. 2. That officers who at any time were accountable or responsible for public property shall be required, before final payment is made to them on discharge from the service, to obtain certificates of nonindebtedness to the United States from only such of the bureaus of the War Department to which the property for which they were accountable or responsible pertains, and the certificate from the chief of the division of bookkeeping and warrants, Treasury Department, and such certificates, accompanied by the affidavits of officers, of nonaccountability or nonresponsibility to other bureaus of the War Department, certified to by the commanding officer of the regiment or independent organization, shall warrant their final payment: Provided, That officers who have not been responsible at any time for public property shall be required to make affidavit of that fact, certified to by their commanding officers, which shall be accepted as sufficient evidence to warrant their final payment on their discharge from the service: Provided further, That mustering officers are empowered to administer oaths in all matters pertaining to the muster out of volunteers.

Approved, January 12, 1899.

That the act approved January 12, 1899, granting "extra pay to officers and enlisted men of the United States Volunteers," shall extend to all volunteer officers of the general staff who have not received waiting orders pay prior to discharge, at the rate of one month to those who did not serve beyond the limits of the United States, and two months to those who served beyond the limits of the United States; and officers and enlisted men of volunteer organizations, who have served honestly and faithfully in the Volunteer Army of the United States during the war with Spain and have been honorably discharged without furlough, or by reason of their services being no longer required, or at any time by reason of wounds received, or disability contracted in the service and in the line of duty, and who have not received the extra pay granted in said act or in subsequent acts of Congress supplemental thereto. And this act shall be deemed to apply to officers of volunteers who resigned and enlisted men of volunteers who were discharged upon their own applications subsequent to the issue of orders for the muster out of their organizations and prior to the dates of muster out.

Approved, May 26, 1900.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CARTER. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After line 15, on page 86, it is proposed to insert:

To pay James R. Goss, of Billings, Mont., for legal services rendered by him in 1898, in defending two Indian policemen and the interpreter of the Crow Agency, Mont., charged with assault in the local courts of said State, $150.

Mr. HALE. I make the point of order on that amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order is sustained.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 1632) to amend "An act authorizing certain officers of the Navy and Marine Corps to administer oaths," approved January 25, 1895; and

A bill (S. 3489) authorizing and empowering the Secretary of War to grant the right of way for and the right to operate and maintain a line of railroad through the Fort Ontario Military Reservation, in the State of New York, to the Oswego and Rome Railroad Company.

The message also announced that the House had passed with amendments the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (S. 425) for the relief of John M. Davis; and

A bill (S. 4787) to authorize the appointment of Thomas Lutz Stitt as an officer in the Navy.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 13436) to authorize the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Monongahela River; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 11881) to amend the acts for the protection of birds, game, and fish in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 12904) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 13067) to enlarge the powers of the courts of the District of Columbia in cases involving delinquent children, and for other purposes.

EXCLUSION OF CHINESE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill from the House of Representatives, to which he calls the attention of the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. The bill will be read by its title.

The bill (H. R. 12665) supplementary to an act entitled "An act to prohibit the coming of Chinese persons into the United States," approved May 5, 1892, and fixing the compensation of commissioners in such cases, was read twice by its title.

Mr. LODGE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that it may be retained upon the table until we can examine it. We had a similar measure up before the Appropriations Committee this morning, and there was very serious objection to it. I will look at it, and then the Senator can call it up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will lie on the table for the present.

Mr. LODGE subsequently said: Mr. President, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] has withdrawn his objection to the bill which was laid before the Senate a few moments ago.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have withdrawn my objection, and ask to have it taken up.

Mr. LODGE. And I ask unanimous consent that the bill be acted upon at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill referred to by him. The bill will be read in full for the information of the Senate, subject to objection.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be lawful for the district attorney of the district in which any Chinese person may be arrested for being found unlawfully within the United States, or having unlawfully entered the United States, to designate the United States commissioner within such district before whom such Chinese person shall be taken for hearing.

SEC. 2. That a United States commissioner shall be entitled to receive a fee of $5 for hearing and deciding a case arising under the Chinese-exclusion laws.

SEC. 3. That no warrant of arrest for violations of the Chinese-exclusion laws shall be issued by United States commissioners excepting upon the sworn complaint of a United States district attorney, assistant United States district attorney, collector, deputy collector, or inspector of customs, immigration inspector, United States marshal, or deputy United States marshal, or Chinese inspector, unless the issuing of such warrant of arrest shall first be approved or requested in writing by the United States district attorney of the district in which issued.

SEC. 4. That this act shall take effect immediately.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN M. DAVIS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 425) for the relief of John M. Davis, which were, in line 4, after the word "revoke," to strike out "and set aside;" in the same line, to strike out the word "General;" in the same line, to strike out all after the word "order" down to and including the word "court-martial," in line 8; and in line 12, after the word "sixty-five," to insert:

Provided, That no pay, bounty, or other allowances shall be paid or become due or payable by reason of or on account of the passage of this act after April 9, 1865.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT FOR ALASKA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 5573) to amend section 203 of Title III of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes," to which he calls the attention of the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER]. The amendments of the House of Representatives will be read.

The Secretary read the amendments of the House of Representatives, as follows:

"Fifty per cent of all license moneys provided for by said act of Congress approved March 3, 1899, and any amendments made thereto, that may hereafter be paid for business carried on outside incorporated towns in the district of Alaska, and covered into the Treasury of the United States, shall be set aside to be expended, so far as may be deemed necessary by the Secretary of the Interior within his discretion and under his direction, for school purposes outside incorporated towns in said district of Alaska."

Mr. CARTER. I move that the Senate disagree to the amendments of the House and ask for a committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. SHOUP, Mr. CARTER, and Mr. BATE were appointed.

DEPOSITARIES OF PUBLIC MONEY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill from the House of Representatives, which will be read by its title.

The bill (H. R. 13195) to amend section 5153 of the Revised Statutes of the United States was read twice by its title.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, the Committee on Finance have informally considered that bill. It is a bill of public interest, and I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to its consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill. It will be read in full for the information of the Senate, subject to objection.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5153 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5153. All national banking associations, designated for that purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be depositaries of public money, except receipts from customs, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary, but receipts derived from duties on imports in Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands, and other islands under the jurisdiction of the United States may be deposited in such depositaries subject to such regulations; and such depositaries may also be employed as financial agents of the Government; and they shall perform all such reasonable duties as depositaries of public moneys and financial agents of the Government as may be required of them. The Secretary of the Treasury shall require the associations thus designated to give satisfactory security, by the deposit of United States bonds and otherwise, for the safe-keeping and prompt payment of the public money deposited with them, and for the faithful performance of their duties as financial agents of the Government. And every association so designated as receiver or depositary of the public money shall take and receive at par all of the national currency bills, by whatever association issued, which have been paid into the Government for internal revenue or for loans or stocks."

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, this is a House bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is a House bill.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It has just come over from the other House?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It has just come over.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I object to its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LODGE. I ask permission to have printed in the RECORD two letters, one from the Attorney-General and the other from the Secretary of the Treasury, in regard to the bill which has just been passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, that order will be made.

The letters referred to are as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, D. C., March 2, 1901.

SIR: The House of Representatives bill (H. R. 12665) supplementary to the Chinese exclusion laws passed the House this morning without amendment, I believe. I inclose a copy of the bill and of the House report thereon. I urgently request that it may be called up in the Senate at once, and that favorable action be obtained.

Although other pending Chinese legislation, which I regard as of the utmost importance to the Government and entirely just to the Chinese, may fail at this session, I trust there will be no doubt of the passage of the present bill, because in the existing state of the law and the rulings thereon by the Comptroller of the Treasury, unless the right of United States commissioners to compensation in Chinese cases is made definite, the Government will be powerless to enforce the Chinese exclusion laws in any case arising before a United States commissioner. I can not well express my conviction on this subject too strongly.

Very respectfully,

JOHN W. GRIGGS,
Attorney-General.

Hon. GEORGE F. HOAR,
Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, United States Senate.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, February 28, 1901.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose copy of a telegram dated the 27th instant, received from Chinese Inspector Izard, in regard to the hearing of cases of Chinese arrested for being unlawfully in this country. It will be seen from the said telegram that, under existing circumstances, it will be impossible to have cases heard and decided by United States commissioners and that, as a result, Chinamen arrested for having entered the United States in violation of law will, after brief detention, be liberated.

This action on the part of the commissioners is the result of a decision by the Comptroller of the Treasury, to the effect that there is no fund available, either in the hands of this Department or the Department of Justice, from which fees may be paid to United States commissioners for hearing and deciding such cases. I regard the matter as one of extreme exigency, and I have, therefore, the honor to request that you recognize Mr. RAY of New York on bill H. R. 12665 (Report No. 2156).

Respectfully,

L. J. GAGE,
Secretary.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 2936) authorizing the appointment of James A. Hutton to a captaincy of infantry in the United States Army;

A bill (S. 3283) for the relief of Isaac R. Dunkelberger; and

A bill (S. 5052) to extend the privileges of the seventh section of the immediate transportation act to Fall River, Mass.

The message also announced that the House had passed, with amendments, the bill (S. 5573) to amend section 203 of Title III of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes;" in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 12665) supplementary to an act entitled "An act to prohibit the coming of Chinese persons into the United States," approved May 5, 1892, and fixing the compensation of commissioners in such cases;

A bill (H. R. 13195) to amend section 5153 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; and

A bill (H. R. 13947) increasing the limit of cost of certain public buildings, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution instructing the Secretary of War to send to the House of Representatives information as to the information and recommendations contained in the supplemental report of the Missouri River Commission as to river improvements at St. Joseph, Mo.; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

LIMIT OF COST OF CERTAIN PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the bill (H. R. 13947) increasing the limit of cost of certain public buildings, and for other purposes; which was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That to enable the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to give effect to and execute the provisions of existing legislation authorizing the purchase of sites and the erection thereon of public buildings in the several cities hereinafter enumerated, the limit of cost heretofore fixed by Congress therefor be, and the same is hereby, increased, respectively, as follows, and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to enter into contracts for the completion of each of said buildings within its respective limit of cost, including site, hereby fixed:

United States post-office and court-house at Aberdeen, S. Dak., from $87,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Abilene, Tex., from $75,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Boise, Idaho, from $200,000 to $250,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Elmira, N. Y., from $185,000 to $232,000; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to expend not to exceed $7,000 for the acquisition of additional land for the enlargement of the site heretofore acquired.

United States post-office and court-house at Creston, Iowa, from $50,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Elizabeth City, N. C., from $50,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Fergus Falls, Minn., from $75,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office at Fitchburg, Mass., from $100,000 to $125,000.

United States post-office at Freeport, Ill., from $75,000 to $85,000.

United States post office and court-house at Helena, Mont., from $300,000 to $350,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Jamestown, N. Y., from $75,000 to $115,000.

United States post-office at Janesville, Wis., from $50,000 to $75,000.

United States post-office at Joliet, Ill., from $100,000 to $130,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Joplin, Mo., from $50,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office at Hot Springs, Ark., from $78,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office at Lawrence, Mass., from $100,000 to $135,000; and the limit of cost of site is hereby fixed at $40,000.

United States post-office at Leadville, Colo., from $50,000 to $75,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Lockport, N. Y., from $50,000 to $105,000.

United States post-office and custom-house at Newport, Vt., from $50,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and custom-house at Newport News, Va., from $100,000 to $200,000.

United States post-office at Norwich, Conn., from $100,000 to $110,000; and the limit of cost of site is hereby fixed at $35,000.

United States post-office at Rome, N. Y., from $50,000 to $70,000.

United States post-office at St. Cloud, Minn., from $50,000 to $68,000.

United States post-office, court-house, and custom-house at St. Paul, Minn., from $1,050,000 to $1,150,000.

United States post-office, custom-house, and court-house at Salt Lake City, Utah, from $300,000 to $500,000.

United States post-office, court-house, and custom-house at Seattle, Wash., from $300,000 to $750,000; and the limit of cost of site is hereby fixed at $200,000.

United States post-office, court-house, and custom-house at Tampa, Fla., from $250,000 to $325,000.

United States post-office at Wilkesbarre, Pa., from $125,000 to $150,000; and the limit of cost of site is hereby fixed at $40,000.

United States post-office at Winston, N. C., from $50,000 to $60,000.

United States post-office at Oskaloosa, Iowa, from $50,000 to $66,000.

United States post-office at Bristol, Tenn., from $50,000 to $55,000.

United States post-office at Carrollton, Ky., from $25,000 to $30,000.

United States post-office and court house at Columbus, Ga., from $156,000 to $159,000.

United States court-house, post-office, and custom-house at Dubuque, Iowa, increasing limit of cost and improving and enlarging building as authorized by act of March 2, 1899, from $100,000 to $110,000.

United States post-office, court-house, and custom-house at Indianapolis, Ind., from $1,900,100 to $2,200,100.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I ask for the present consideration of the bill. There is upon the Calendar a Senate bill identical with it, reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. This is a bill of great importance, and I ask for its present consideration.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Let us know a little something about the bill. Where is the bill on the Calendar?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. The Senate bill is No. 6070. I do not know the number of the House bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I do not object to the bill, but I desire some explanation of it. When it is before the Senate I should like to have some explanation.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I should like to inquire whether there are any public buildings, which have already been authorized, where the limit of cost is not raised in this bill; and, if so, why there is discrimination, and as to some buildings the limit of cost is raised and as to the others it is not raised?

I know there is no use in opposing this bill. It is like these other bills that come here—omnibus bills. There is so much in them for different States that the whole goes, when, if they were brought here on separate bills they would be carefully considered and very likely rejected. I wish to know whether all buildings which have heretofore been authorized are included in the pending bill; and, if not, why some buildings are confined to the cost that was in the bill originally authorizing them and these other buildings are increased in cost?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Mr. President, all the buildings heretofore authorized are not included in the increase proposed in this bill. The increases proposed in it are based upon the recommendations of the Treasury Department. Those that are set forth here are regarded, in the opinion of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department, as needing immediate consideration. In short, these are the most urgent cases. There are other buildings heretofore authorized by law, the limit of the cost of which will probably have to be increased hereafter.

As the Senator from Connecticut very well knows, the demands upon the present Congress for appropriations are heavy and numerous. It is impossible to include in any bill all the demands that are made. It is impossible to provide for all the public works or all the public buildings which are important, and for which sooner or later increased appropriations must be made.

The Treasury Department and the committees having in charge public buildings have thought that this bill included in a fair way a reasonable proportion of the buildings that are authorized under existing law. There are no bills passed at this session of Congress, or during this Congress, which are embodied in the pending bill.

The buildings that are included in this bill are those which have been authorized by the last Congress or by preceding Congresses. The bill that is before us has passed the House. The Senator from Connecticut very well knows that in the present state of the public business in the Congress it is impossible to modify or amend the bill that is before us without defeating it absolutely. I hope there will be no objection to its favorable consideration.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Mr. President, this bill, I understand, increases the cost of public buildings which have been heretofore authorized, and which are included in this bill, something over $2,000,000. If the same ratio of increase is applied to other public buildings which have already been authorized but are not included in the pending bill, it will amount to as much more, I think, or something over $4,000,000. It has all to be paid for by the Government of the United States. I will not say that this business of granting public buildings has come to be outrageous—for I know that public buildings are needed in very many places—but it has come to involve so large a sum of money to the Treasury of the United States that I think Congress ought to go slowly in authorizing new public buildings, as well as in increasing the cost of those already authorized.

Mr. VEST. Will the Senator from Connecticut permit me to interject one remark as to a matter which seems to have escaped his attention? We are informed by the Architect of the Treasury, and besides it is well known without any official information, that since these buildings were authorized and these estimates as to cost were made the price of building materials has gone up from 35 to 45 or 50 per cent, and it is absolutely necessary to make these increased appropriations or else accept the other alternative of abandoning these buildings, many of which are above the second story and must be finished or left to decay. Besides that, in some of the Western States the price of sites has gone up. For a great many of these buildings the sites are not estimated for especially, but are left in the general appropriation. For instance, in Seattle there has been an enormous increase in real estate values, and where the site that is necessary for the public building could have been bought at the time the estimate was made for forty or fifty thousand dollars, it will now take seventy-five or a hundred thousand dollars.

Without any further argument the Senator from Connecticut, a perfectly fair and just man, can see how, without any mismanagement or miscalculation on the part of the officials, this bill is absolutely necessary.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Very possibly; and yet when an application comes here for a public building the anxiety to get it is such that the cost of the building is very much limited, and the bill is passed here on the supposition, if not upon the contract, that the building is only to cost the amount which is specified in the bill which authorizes its construction; and no sooner has the bill passed, with an understanding on the part of the Senate and the House when it is passed that it shall be limited to a hundred thousand or five hundred thousand or a million dollars, than there come applications to increase the limit of cost. That is not fair to the Senate. It is not fair to the House.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. May I ask the Senator from Connecticut a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PERKINS in the chair). Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Certainly.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I wish to ask the Senator whether he is now addressing his remarks to the case of Norwich, Conn.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Oh, well, I am glad that question is asked. I would sooner Norwich, Conn., should never have a building than that this bill should pass here; and the increase is $10,000, if I remember, in Norwich, Conn., on a hundred thousand dollar building, and the increase at Indianapolis is four or five hundred thousand dollars on a million and nine hundred thousand dollar building. No argumentum ad hominem applies to me in this matter. I am trying to look out for the public interest and the public Treasury, and when our friends tell us hereafter that this is a billion-dollar Congress I want it to be known that I lifted my voice against this $2,200,000 increase in public buildings.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President, it strikes me that it is a little late in the Congress for the Senator from Connecticut to raise his voice against the enormous expenditures which have been provided for by this Congress. He has not taken offense at over $750,000,000, but when it comes to providing public buildings that are necessary in every portion of the land, all at once he has an attack of economy.

I wish to call the attention of the Senate to one particular item in this bill. Four years ago there was passed by Congress, both by the Senate and the House, a bill appropriating $75,000 for a court-house and post-office in Cumberland. In the State of Maryland there is to-day only one public building which the Government of the United States has ever erected. We had the temerity to come and ask Congress for $75,000 to begin a public building in the second largest city in that State.

Four years ago it was appropriated, first in the bill, afterwards in the appropriation bill. The site for the building was purchased for $20,000. That left $55,000 to erect a court-house and post-office in a city of 20,000 inhabitants. The authorities in the Architect's office said it would not do to begin the building there with $55,000 remaining, and it is for that reason we ask $50,000 more. The bill was passed a year ago by the Senate, and it should pass now. I merely cite this as one of the incidents of this matter. We are entitled to have this building. The public necessities require it, and I for one hope that it will be permitted to go through; and I believe that Indianapolis and other cities have the same just claims that we have. I therefore insist that in all justice and fairness this measure ought to pass.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I do not choose to defend myself particularly against not having resisted appropriations. I think I may say, though, without egotism, that one appropriation bill carries $5,000,000 less than it would have carried if it had not been for the efforts of myself and my colleagues on the committee.

Mr. KYLE. Mr. President, I favor the passage of this bill because I believe the Government of the United States should carry out its contracts with the people. This a straight and flat contract between the Government and citizens of these several towns for which appropriations for buildings were made during the last Congress. The first building upon the list relates to my own town, that of Aberdeen, S. Dak., the appropriation for that city being $87,000. We supposed that the matter was settled and that the contract would be let a year ago. In order to save the money for the building proper, our citizens subscribed money from their own pockets for the purpose of assisting in the purchase of a site. They paid from their pockets several thousand dollars, which, added to the sum the Government appropriated for the site, enabled them to secure a tract of ground within one block of the center of the city. This, Mr. President, was done upon the part of the people of our town with the understanding, certainly, that the Government would carry out its contract.

But we were informed by the Architect of the Treasury that it was absolutely impossible to carry out the contract, in view of the advance in the price of material. In other words, that $87,000 would not erect a building large enough for the purposes required. We are not by this bill asking an appropriation for a new public building, but for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the law enacted last Congress. These are not new public buildings, and in all fairness to the parties who assisted in the purchase of sites the bill ought to be passed.

In my judgment this sum should be increased according, to the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury, to $150,000. This sum is necessary to erect a building to house the United States court, the post-office, and the United States land office. But I recognize that this bill must pass as it came to us from the House. To amend it is to send it to conference and ultimate defeat. We at Aberdeen will take the $100,000 and do the best we can with it, trusting that the Architect of the Treasury will so arrange the plans that the building can be enlarged without destroying the symmetry.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, no Senator on this floor fails to sympathize with the suggestions of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT]. The appropriations have reached a point calculated to challenge the attention of the country and the serious consideration of every member of either branch of Congress. It is known to those who figure upon the appropriation bills in the respective committees of this body that the most strenuous efforts have been made to keep down the appropriations at the present session of Congress; but, through a combination of circumstances, it happens that the appropriations of this year are unusually large. It is difficult now to conceive where any serious decrease could have been entertained.

It is true that we might have left off the sum of five millions appropriated for the great exposition to be held beyond the Mississippi River, at St. Louis; but it is questionable whether, omitting any reference to the law requiring that we do that, it would have been sound public policy to have discouraged that great exposition. It is intended to commemorate one of the greatest events in American history—the acquisition of a territory which was subsequently carved into many imperial States, some of them of greater extent and resources than many of the first-class powers of Europe. Five million dollars, however, was appropriated for the exposition at St. Louis.

In conjunction with the operations of the Army and Navy, large appropriations have been absolutely necessary. I think the pension appropriations of this session are larger than ever before.

Mr. GALLINGER. They are just the same.

Mr. CARTER. About the same.

Mr. GALLINGER. Just the same.

Mr. CARTER. But the number of private pension bills that have been passed as a charge upon the public Treasury for a number of years to come will be found greater, I think, in this Congress than during any previous Congress.

We are now about to close the Congress, and I do not think we can make a record for economy by indulging in the most unfortunate class of economy that can be indulged in by Congress, to wit, the construction of ill-fitted and inadequate public buildings at points where Congress has heretofore authorized the construction of buildings. Each and every building included within this list is to be constructed either as a fit and proper public building for the place or as an inadequate and unsatisfactory structure.

The conditions rendering these appropriations necessary we all understand. At the time the estimate was made for each building a certain amount of floor space was figured out as indispensable for the accommodation of the United States officers at the places designated. Subsequent to the passage of these various public building bills it is known that the prices of all classes of materials and rates of wages and all the elements entering into the cost of public buildings have materially and very rapidly increased, so that when bids were called for for the erection of the buildings such as were contemplated when the acts were passed the prospective contractors submitted bids in each and every case in excess of the limit fixed by law. It is for the purpose of meeting this unexpected and unusual condition that these increases are now to be made if the Senate shall adopt this bill.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Will the Senator from Montana permit me?

Mr. CARTER. Certainly.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Suppose there is a further increase in materials and labor, are we to have another bill increasing the limit of cost?

Mr. CARTER. We have ascertained through the proper agency of the Government that the buildings originally designed can be constructed for the amounts named in these respective items. The figures, I think, have been computed and arranged with care, and contracts will be promptly let after the passage of the bill. I know of cases that have come under my personal observation where repeated advertisement has failed to bring forth bids within the limit allowed by the law. The Architect of the Treasury is driven to the situation either to have the limit in each case extended or else to modify the plans, producing in each case the same amount of floor space, but omitting the necessary and essential fireproof features of each building. I believe there is not a building in the list which will not yield to the Government something in the neighborhood of 4 per cent per annum on the money invested.

In many cases the sites have been contributed freely or for a nominal consideration by the cities or the communities in which the buildings are to be erected. I know that one building, to be erected in the city of Butte, in the State of Montana, is to be erected upon a building site sold to the United States for the sum of $1, which could be sold in the open market to-day for one-half the total amount the building is to cost. The sites, upon the average, have been purchased at much less than the current value of real estate in the vicinities where the proposed building is to be erected.

Where the United States can preserve its records in fireproof vaults and have adequate and commodious quarters and can erect a building upon such conditions as will yield to the United States an income upon its money invested of more than 4 per cent, it is wise and economical and sound policy to erect the building instead of having, as occurs in most instances in this schedule, the public records of the United States left subject to destruction by fire at any moment that fire may occur.

Mr. PETTUS obtained the floor.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Will the Senator from Alabama yield to me for a moment that I may make a statement following the one just made by the Senator from Montana?

Mr. PETTUS. I will yield to the Senator from Indiana provided I can have leave to say a word after he has concluded.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Upon calling up this bill, I did not deem it necessary to consume the time of the Senate in any elaborate statement with respect to it. I supposed the necessity for it was so generally recognized by the Senate that it would be unnecessary to go into any very extensive account of the reasons why the bill should pass.

All the bill is designed to accomplish is to increase the limit of cost of certain buildings the erection of which has heretofore been authorized by law. The increase to which the Senator refers is the increased limit of cost and not the increased amount of appropriation that will be necessary at this session of Congress. In round figures, the increase of the limit amounts to $2,259,000. This is much less than the amount recommended by the Treasury Department as necessary to construct the buildings authorized in a manner adequate for the public service.

Mr. HOAR. Can the Senator state what percentage, or about what percentage, that is of the total cost of the buildings?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I do not have that computation at hand, and I am unable to advise the Senator.

Mr. HOAR. I should judge, from a hasty glance, it is not over 12 or 15 per cent.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. It may not be over 12 or 15 per cent; but as I have said before, I do not have any computation before me from which I can now answer. The increase in the limit is due largely to the increase in the cost of material and labor which has occurred during the last few years, and since the original acts were passed by Congress.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Will the Senator from Indiana allow me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I do, with pleasure.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I take at random, "United States custom-house and post-office at Brunswick, Ga., from $50,000 to $100,000." Has the cost of materials doubled?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. In some places the increased cost is because of the increased costs of sites as well as the increased cost of labor and material. I think, Mr. President, I am not ungenerous when I say——

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Does the Senator think that at Elizabeth City, N. C., the cost of site and materials together has increased so that the amount is to be doubled from $50,000 to $100,000?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Mr. President, I did not say that the increased limit is due alone to the increased cost of material and labor.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. And site.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Yes; in some cases the increase is necessary because of the increased cost of site. The Senator himself knows how difficult it is to estimate accurately the cost of sites for public buildings where it is necessary to condemn them and have the damages awarded by juries. The increased limit in some cases is due also to a change in the architect's designs from what they originally contemplated, as the Senator from Montana has said.

Mr. CLAY. I desire to ask the Senator whether it is not true that the architects in the Treasury Department have made careful investigations in regard to each one of these items, and that they have made reports stating that these increases are necessary, and if it is not true that all the items contained in this bill have been recommended by the Treasury Department?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I am very glad the Senator has asked the question. In answer I will say that these increases have been recommended after careful examination by the Treasury Department. Not only that, Mr. President, but the Treasury Department recommends that the increase shall be $1,471,000 more than the amount that is embraced in this bill.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Certainly; I yield with pleasure.

Mr. QUARLES. I should like to inquire of my distinguished friend whether it is not true, in three instances named in the bill where the increases seem to be the largest, that we are now called upon to provide for courts that were not estimated for when the original appropriation was made and provision for courts is required now, whereas originally we were only supposed to take care of post-offices?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. The Senator's statement is in accordance with the facts. The Senator from Connecticut referred to the Indianapolis increase of $400,000. That is not accurate. The increase there is $500,000. Not only that, Mr. President, but the Treasury Department, after a careful investigation, recommended that the increase should be $500,000, but the committee, upon my motion, reduced the amount so recommended to $300,000.

It is well to bear in mind that while the limit of cost upon these buildings is increased in the amount, in round numbers, of $2,259,000, the amount of the increased appropriation for the coming fiscal year will be only $473,000, and the residue of the increase, if it shall become necessary to expend so much, will be appropriated and expended during the next two, three, four, five, and six years.

Mr. President, when the expenditure contemplated by this bill is made, and I invite the attention of the Senator from Connecticut to my statement, there will be a saving to the United States Government of thousands and tens of thousands of dollars now paid out for the rent of inadequate accommodations for the public business. It were money well invested for the Government to construct buildings in several important commercial centers of the United States that are not contemplated even in this bill.

I append a statement showing the location of buildings, present limit, limit proposed by pending bill, and the amount needed to complete them according to the Treasury estimate.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, this is about as good a place as I can find to put into the RECORD a small scrap of legislative history.

Four years ago, about that time, the Senate was gracious enough to pass a bill for a public building in Alabama in the town in which I live. That bill went to the south [indicating], and it stayed in the south. At the next session, in the Fifty-fifth Congress, the Senate was gracious enough to put the building of that small house on an appropriation bill, and that went into the third branch of the Legislative Assembly and died there. At the beginning of the present Congress, in the first session, about a year ago or more, the Senate passed another bill for building that same house in that same town, and that bill went south [indicating], and it never came back. And neither one of those bills, although they remained a year, ever had the slightest consideration of any sort whatever there.

Mr. President, there are some people whose vision is so affected by the heat of the sun that they can not see that far at all. Those gentlemen so affected do not reside in the Senate or stay here, but they live in the south.

I wanted to put this much of legislative history into this amendment. Why, a little fragment cut off of one of these bills would have built that house—just a small fragment. But we live too near the sun.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President——

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Massachusetts to yield a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. HOAR. Very well.

ORDER FOR RECESS.

Mr. ALLISON. I think the business of the session is such that for the convenience of Senators we should now make arrangement practically for a recess to-day and to-morrow. Therefore I ask unanimous consent that at half past 5 this afternoon the Senate shall take a recess until 8, and that at half past 10 this evening the Senate shall take a further recess until 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the Senate shall take a recess from half past 5 this evening until 8 o'clock, and that at half past 10 this evening a further recess shall be taken until 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and such is the order of the Senate.

LIMIT OF COST OF CERTAIN PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 13947) increasing the limit of cost of certain public buildings.

Mr. HOAR. It seems to me, Mr. President, that the criticism which the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] makes on this bill is a criticism on all human experience. Here is a bill which requires from 12 to 15 per cent of increase out of several millions over the original estimates for buildings, occasioned in considerable part, as has been suggested by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. QUARLES], because they have ordered, since the orignal estimates, that provision for court-houses shall be included.

Now, did ever a man in his life build a dwelling house or a block of stores, or any other considerable building, without an increase of at least 12 or 15 per cent over his original estimate? New conveniences are thought of, not thought of when the building was designed, which have got to be put in later, at much larger cost. There are changes in wages, changes in prices, and oversights. There is one public building—that is our Library here—which is regarded as almost a miracle among such buildings, because the architects built it from the original estimate and turned a few thousand dollars back into the Treasury out of six or seven millions of dollars.

Of course if the Senator from Connecticut had undertaken to build one of these buildings himself, after getting the best architectural advice he could get, he would be a much less wise man than he is—and we know he is a very wise man—if he did not say to himself, "As a matter of course there will be 10 or 15 per cent at least more than that that I shall have to provide for before I get through."

We are having a large annual expenditure, and I think there are some luxuries we might leave off, to the entire satisfaction of the people. I can tell the Senator how to cut off more than $100,000,000 of the annual expenditures. Stop taxes on bank checks; stop taxes on successions; stop taxes on beer. Just stop the Philippine war. Bring your troops home and put yourself on a peace basis, and we shall not be pinched and irritated and sore and trembling all over the frame by reason of disagreeable taxation or large expenditure.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I intended to move an amendment to this bill because there is an error in it, but the Senator who has it in charge assures me that if I should do so, and succeed, very probably the bill would not pass at all, and I do not desire to interfere with the passage of the bill.

We have an appropriation of $50,000 for a public building at Leadville, Colo. The Department made an estimate that they could not build a building there for less than $117,500. On a careful revision of that statement they found that it would require $125,000, and they so recommended.

Now, this bill increases the appropriation for the post-office building at Leadville, Colo., from $50,000 to $75,000, when it should be $125,000. If I could knock out that and not have any advance at all on the limit, I would prefer to do that, but to do it would probably embarrass this bill.

I therefore simply want the RECORD to show that we have not consented to a limit of $75,000 when the Department was insisting that it should be $125,000, I make this statement with no intention to embarrass the bill, but in the hope that the committee will at the next session relieve us.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Mr. President, the statement made by the Senator from Colorado is quite accurate. There has been an error in that instance. It was not made, however, by the committee.

Mr. TELLER. It was not made by our committee. It was made by the House, I suppose—probably in copying the bill in the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is in the Senate in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment. If there be no amendment, it will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. President, I have an amendment sent to me by a member of the House to perfect the bill. I will offer it, anyhow:

For the purchase of contiguous ground for the extension of the United States court-house, post-office, and custom-house at Atlanta, Ga., $175,000.

I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I appreciate the zeal of the Senator from Georgia in endeavoring to secure the increase he has proposed by his amendment. I regret to say that it would be impossible for the committee to accept the amendment. If the Senator persists in it I will have to move to lay the amendment on the table; but I hope he will withdraw it.

Mr. CLAY. I exceedingly regret that the Senator will not accept it. I succeeded in passing the bill through the Senate. It is in the House, and I have not been able to get action there. If the Senator will not accept it I can not, of course, help it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is withdrawn.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DEPOSITARIES OF PUBLIC MONEY.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator from South Dakota has withdrawn his objection to House bill 13195, to amend section 5153 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and I report back the bill from the Committee on Finance without amendment and ask that it may be read and put upon its passage.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has been read.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I understand that a unanimous consent has been given which will prevent us from having another morning hour during this session of Congress. Am I correct?

Mr. ALDRICH. If the Senator from South Dakota desires to get a vote upon the resolution to discharge the Committee on Education and Labor from a certain bill, I suppose there will be no objection to that course. I certainly have none.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am the victim of a unanimous consent agreement under those circumstances.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The information given the Chair, who was not present when the unanimous consent agreement was made, was that at half past 5 o'clock to-day the Senate takes a recess until 8 o'clock, and at half past 10 it takes a further recess until 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. If the Senate should adjourn at the close of the business of the Senate after meeting to-morrow there would be a morning hour on Monday, if the Chair has stated the unanimous consent agreement correctly.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. HOAR. Unless there were an affirmative vote of the Senate changing the hour of meeting, is not this the last legislative day? Monday is the 4th of March, and our authority ends on the 3d of March under the Constitution.

The hours of Monday forenoon are only in our contemplation the hours of the previous day. We will not have adjourned. We are on the last day of the session now, without any unanimous consent, as I understand it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is correct in h[illegible] statement.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I wish to say that to-day, when I consented that the morning hour should be abolished and that the resolution should not come up to be voted upon, it was clearly, universally understood that I should have a vote upon the resolution.

Mr. HOAR. That is true.

Mr. ALDRICH (to Mr. PETTIGREW). Ask for unanimous consent.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I think that is equivalent to a unanimous consent.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to say just one thing further, because it is an important matter for us all to understand. As I understand it, the last day of this Congress began at 11 o'clock this morning, and up to 12 o'clock on Monday next, if we sit so long, we shall be engaged on that day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks the Senator is correct in his statement.

Mr. PETTIGREW. That can only be possible in view of the fact that we do make the day continual by taking a recess. Otherwise we have until the 3d of March always, and to-morrow noon will begin the 3d of March.

Mr. HOAR. The 3d of March is Sunday, and it is a dies non.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota asks unanimous consent that he may have a vote on his resolution at some time. At what time does the Senator indicate?

Several SENATORS. What resolution?

Mr. ALDRICH. It is the resolution to discharge the Committee on Education and Labor from the eight-hour bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. SEWELL. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Jersey objects.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Then I will object to the consideration of the bill now pending.

Mr. ALDRICH. I can hardly see how the Senator can——

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yielded my right in the morning hour this morning to finish the deficiency appropriation bill with the understanding that I should have an opportunity, and I am not to be cheated out of it.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 13436) to authorize the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Monongahela River, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

DEPARTMENTAL EMPLOYEES.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following communication from the Secretary of the Interior; which was read, and ordered to lie on the table and be printed:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, March 2, 1901.

SIR: Acknowledging receipt of a resolution of the Senate of February 25, 1901, calling for the age, the salary, and the length of service of each employee in Washington and elsewhere, I have to say that to collect and compile this information for the Interior Department—a total of about 15,000 persons—will make a large amount of work, which will require several months and much correspondence, and for which an appropriation for additional clerks will be necessary.

The three different items asked for will render intelligible grouping very difficult, and will almost necessitate a separate showing for each person.

Very respectfully,

E. A. HITCHCOCK, Secretary.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

THE OLEOMARGARINE BILL.

Mr. PLATT of New York. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the concurrent resolution submitted by Mr. PROCTOR on the 1st instant, to report it without amendment, and I ask for its present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution, which was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 30,000 copies of the hearings before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and the House Committee on Agriculture, together with the briefs submitted relating to House bill No. 3717, 20,000 copies of which shall be for the use of the House and 10,000 copies for the use of the Senate. The usual number shall not be printed.

Mr. MONEY. I simply want to understand the order about printing the hearings and report of what is known as the Grout oleomargarine bill. Does it include all of the hearings and the majority report and the minority views?

Mr. COCKRELL. Let us ascertain exactly what it does include. Let the resolution be again read.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. MONEY. I move to amend the resolution by adding the words "including the majority report and the minority views."

The amendment was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution as amended was agreed to.

COMMITTEE ON PACIFIC ISLANDS AND PORTO RICO.

Mr. FORAKER submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico, or any subcommittee thereof, is hereby authorized and required to visit Porto Rico during the recess of Congress for the purpose of investigating and inquiring into conditions existing there and bearing upon the relations of the United States with Porto Rico and its duty to the people thereof; and that the expenses of said committee or subcommittee, including necessary assistance, be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, upon vouchers signed by the chairman of the committee.

PROPOSED CONSIDERATION OF UNOBJECTED HOUSE BILLS.

Mr. CLAY obtained the floor.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator from Georgia kindly yield to me to make a request?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. CLAY. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I have been importuned by a great many Senators to request that at the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. CLAY] the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected House bills on the Calendar. I think that may take the remainder of the afternoon, until half past 5 o'clock, and as my colleague [Mr. CHANDLER] has given notice that he will speak at 8 o'clock, possibly I may be able to coax a few minutes out of him this evening, if we shall not before that time have quite gone through with the Calendar. I think it will not take more than an hour or an hour and a quarter.

Mr. CLAY. I desire to say to the Senator from New Hampshire that I shall not occupy over fifteen or twenty minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the speech of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. CLAY] the unobjected House bills on the Calendar may be considered. Is there objection?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota objects.

RIVER IMPROVEMENTS AT ST. JOSEPH, MO.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives; which was read:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Secretary of War is hereby instructed to send to the House of Representatives information as to the information and recommendation contained in the supplemental report of the Missouri River Commission as to river improvements at St. Joseph, Mo.

Mr. VEST. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The concurrent resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

NICARAGUA CANAL BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the bill (S. 1783) to provide for the construction of an interoceanic canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, on which the Senator from Georgia [Mr. CLAY] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. President, I desire to make a few remarks on the importance of the early construction of the Nicaraguan Canal. The bill has already passed the House, is now in the Senate, and can be taken up and passed in thirty minutes, and to longer delay the construction of this great waterway is inexcusable and indefensible. There is little new that can be said upon the value and importance of the construction of this canal. For years our Government has given the most careful investigation to this subject, and we all know that the facts are undisputed that its construction is both practicable and feasible.

The question of a waterway connecting the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans so that ships can pass from one ocean to the other, we all know to be of vast importance. Nature was not much disappointed in her efforts to make a strait between the two oceans at Nicaragua, in Central America. While she failed to complete this job she placed within the reasonable capacity of men the means of such connection. Engineer after engineer, under the instructions of the Government, have demonstrated that the route is practicable and can be made successful, and every investigation that has been made confirms this indisputable fact. If we can trust to the judgment of those skilled in civil engineering and who have been untiring in their efforts to locate a route to connect the two oceans by means of a waterway, then it may be assumed as a fact, an indisputable fact, that the Nicaraguan route is both feasible and practicable, and after its completion it will be profitable. These fact are confirmed by the recent commission, whose report we all have had the opportunity of examining.

This route will begin at Greytown, on the Atlantic Ocean, and end at Brito, on the Pacific. The total distance from port to port will be 169.448 miles. While the entire length of this canal will be a little over 169 miles, 121 miles of this distance is unimpeded navigation in the river San Juan and Lake Nicaragua, and 21 miles through basins, making a total of 142 miles in which ships can travel with little or no restriction. This leaves only about 21 miles of actual excavation. This canal, it is estimated, on the average, will accommodate from thirty-two to forty vessels per day, or about twelve thousand annually, which will give a tonnage equal to about 20,440,000 per year. In order to appreciate the importance of this great enterprise it is essential that we have some idea of the geography of the world and what distances will be saved to commerce both in our own country and with foreign countries. We know that transportation by water is always considerably cheaper than transportation by rail, and we know that the shorter the routes from one important port in our country to another the cheaper we can convey the products of farm and factory from one port to another.

We know that London at the present time is the commercial center of the world. Later on I propose to take the figures and facts given us by the distinguished senior Senator from Alabama and demonstrate why this is true. I shall show that by the construction of this canal the advantages which London now enjoys in the distances from that great metropolis to the leading commercial ports of the world will be transferred to the United States. Before, however, I attempt to do so I desire to present to the Senate the advantages which we will enjoy at home in trading with our own people by the construction of this great waterway.

We know now that in order to reach New York from San Francisco by water we must travel 14,840 miles, and that so soon as this canal is constructed and put in operation the distance will be reduced to 4,907 miles, a clear saving of 9,933 miles. The distance from New York to Hongkong, by Cape Horn, is 18,180 miles; cut the canal and the distance is reduced to 10,983 miles, a clear saving each trip of 7,197 miles. We have acquired and now own the Hawaiian Islands, out in the middle of the ocean. The distance from New York to these islands by the present water route is 14,230 miles; cut the canal and the distance is reduced to 6,417 miles, a saving of 7,813 miles. The distance from New Orleans by water to San Francisco, by way of Cape Horn, is 13,776 miles; when this waterway is constructed, connecting the two oceans, the distance is reduced to 4,107 miles, a saving of 9,669 miles. The distance from Mobile, Ala., to San Francisco is 13,763 miles; cut this canal and the distance is reduced to 4,120 miles, a saving of 9,643 miles. The distance from Savannah, in my own State, to San Francisco, is 13,289 miles; dig this canal and the distance is reduced to 4,366 miles, a saving of 8,923 miles. The distance from Galveston, Tex., to San Francisco is 13,892 miles; cut the canal and this distance is reduced to 4,230 miles, a clear saving of 9,662 miles.

The distance from Charleston to San Francisco is 13,260 miles; cut the canal and the distance is only 4,389 miles, a clear saving of 8,871 miles. Trace if you will the route which a ship must follow to pass from our Atlantic and Gulf seaports to any one of the harbors on the Pacific within the boundary of the United States. We can scarcely realize the enormous distance which a ship must travel to make a journey, leaving San Francisco, on the Pacific, to reach Boston or New York, on the Atlantic. We must travel along the coast of Central and South America, around Cape Horn, then sail back by the coast of Central America. Before we will have reached New York we will have traveled a distance of nearly 15,000 miles; when, as I have said before, if this waterway had been made, connecting the two oceans in Central America, the same trip could have been made by traveling less than 5,000 miles. It is only necessary to observe this new route between our Atlantic and Gulf ports and those upon our western shores, the route by Central America, to fully realize the advantages to accrue to our country by the construction of this waterway joining the two oceans in Central America.

How we can any longer afford to permit a gap to exist between our eastern and western coasts that is 13,000 miles in length I can not understand, and how our Republican friends on the other side of the Chamber can any longer postpone action on this important legislation, so necessary to the building up of the commerce of our country, I do not believe they can explain or justify. How they can any longer permit our Pacific States to pay one-half of the value of their wheat and lumber exported to Europe in cost of transportation I do not understand.

Who will justify the Republican party in longer postponing this great enterprise, which, as has often been said, will bring into the utmost possible near communication the eastern and western shores of North America, and in like manner into the utmost possible short communication the eastern and western shores of South America, and which will bring the western shores of South America into direct communication with the eastern shore of North America and the eastern shores of South America into direct communication with the western shores of North America, thus making that passage of the Isthmus the key and common gateway of communication between the republics that now substantially occupy the whole habitable parts of North and South America?

A canal which, when built and completed, will furnish for ages ample waterway convenience and security for the fleets of all nations that may pass through it from ocean to ocean. Speaking of the construction and completion of this canal, Mr. Harvey said when the locks and dams have taken form Lake Nicaragua will become a central rendezvous for fleets engaged in the commerce of the world. Electric lights will render the dark canyons of the "divides" and the entire route of the canal as possible by night as by day, and by the far-reaching wires the telegraph will convey dispatches from every section of the noble waterway to the commercial centers of both hemispheres. It is astonishing to me that any political party claiming to represent the most intelligent thought and the best interests of the American people should hesitate, procrastinate, and defeat legislation of paramount importance in developing and maintaining our commercial supremacy.

First, let us consider the benefit to accrue to the American people by putting our eastern and western coasts in direct communication with each other by the shortest practical route. Let us endeavor to give to our merchants and our farmers cheap transportation by water; then an immediate benefit will accrue to them in finding a market for our goods and wares. Let us put our Pacific coast in touch with European markets by the shortest and most practicable routes. Let us use every reasonable and just means to cheapen the cost of transportation of farm products and manufactured goods to the markets of the world. Let us give to the continental lines of railroads competition in carrying freights; then you reach the farmer, merchant, and manufacturer and benefit the American people.

It is an undisputed fact that so soon as this waterway is completed the entire Pacific coast trade will be put in direct connection with European markets by the cheapest possible transportation. Later on in my argument I will present to the Senate the benefits which will accrue to the Southern States by reason of the construction of this canal. The South is rapidly developing and will become at no distant day a great manufacturing section. The South, instead of manufacturing 20 per cent of the cotton crop, I predict will in the near future manufacture 75 per cent of the crop, and we expect to ship these goods to the markets of the world. We want cheap transportation by the most direct and shortest route to enable us to meet competition. The people of the South do not want the Government to give them anything. All we want is to be able to compete with other sections, and then we will work out our industrial problems.

A distinguished Senator said to me a few days ago that it had always been a mystery to him why Great Britain, a little island containing less than 90,000 square miles of territory, should control the markets of the world; that it was a mystery to him why Liverpool was the commercial center of the world, controlling and manipulating the sale and manufacture of cotton. But the distinguished Senator said that he had at last been able to solve the problem, and he has solved it well. In a report which Senator MORGAN, as chairman of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, presented to the Senate on January 3, 1901, report No. 1337, part No. 6, he presents facts which are startling to me and which deserve consideration at the hands of the statesmen of the country endeavoring to shape and mold the policy of the nation.

It is a fact which can not be disputed, and which any intelligent man knows to be true, that in developing commerce the cost of transportation is a very important element. If one city or nation has a shorter route and consequently a cheaper one to convey freight than another, the city or nation at a disadvantage can never compete with their rivals enjoying a superior advantage. This fact solves the problem why England to-day enjoys commercial supremacy over any nation in the world—a supremacy which some day will be transferred to the United States. If wise and thoughtful statesmanship shall direct the policy of this nation, that supremacy, at no distant day in the future, will be ours. The distinguished Senator and the committee of which he is chairman tell us that all the seacoasts of the world, except about one-tenth part of their length, are nearer to Liverpool than they are to New York by the usual route of sea travel.

This committee tells us the length of sea voyages from New York and from Liverpool to all the points of importance, based on the charts of the Bureau of Navigation, of the Navy Department. In making these calculations, they take 18 of the leading seaports of the world. They then give the distance from Liverpool to these different seaports; also the distances from New York to these important points, showing a great advantage in favor of Liverpool. I do not know when I have found a subject of more importance and discussed in a more intelligent way than is presented by this committee. The 18 ports of the world which they have selected are as follows:

Yokohama, Tientsin, Kinchoo, Shanghai, Hongkong, Bombay, Calcutta, Singapore, Colombo, Manila, Melbourne, Auckland, San Francisco, Panama, Honolulu, Valparaiso, and Cape Town. We all know that these eighteen important ports had an enormous business and trade with Liverpool and New York, and that commercial points situated between them furnish a very important commerce to both places. The common mind will readily grasp the proposition that if vessels, in passing from Liverpool to each of these ports through the Suez Canal, travel a shorter distance than vessels sailing from New York to the same points, then freight can be conveyed cheaper to these points from Great Britain than from the United States.

Say, for instance, that eighteen vessels were to leave Liverpool on to-morrow morning, loaded with the products of Great Britain, one vessel going to each of these ports; and, at the same time, eighteen vessels were to leave New York, with American products, going to the same ports. Now, if the route from Liverpool was shorter and cheaper than the route from New York to the same places, evidently the United States could not compete with Great Britain in conveying goods to foreign markets. The distinguished Senator from Alabama tells us that eighteen vessels passing from Liverpool to each of these ports above named, through the Suez Canal, would sail 110,329 miles; that these same vessels, sailing from New York to the same ports, would cover a distance of 130,168 miles. This would be a difference in favor of Liverpool of 19,839 miles. The distinguished Senator also tells us that if the same ships made the voyage to the same ports by the way of the Cape of Good Hope the distance from Liverpool would be 135,000 miles, and the distance from New York would be 136,647 miles.

On page 7 of this report I find a most interesting and instructive table, which, to my mind, solves the reason why Great Britain has made such wonderful strides in controlling and directing the commerce of the world. I have just pointed out the fact that the distance from Liverpool to these eighteen ports of the world, by existing routes, is shorter by nearly 20,000 miles than from New York to the same ports. Now, what will be the result in the event of the construction of the Nicaraguan Canal? Take the facts and figures of the distinguished Senator from Alabama. This new route will reverse the entire situation in favor of the United States by 32,051 miles. The Senator from Alabama tells us that when this canal is constructed the distance from Liverpool to Honolulu will be by the Nicaraguan route 9,165 miles, and that the distance from New York to the same point, by the same route, will be 11,507 miles.

The distinguished Senator tells us that the distance from Liverpool to Manila by the Nicaraguan route will be 14,008 miles, and from New York to the same point will be 11,260 miles. The Senator tells us that the cutting of the canal will throw the advantage of shorter lines of travel in favor of New York, that now exists in favor of Liverpool, by at least 21 per cent. I desire to insert, as a part of my remarks, the table prepared by the distinguished Senator, which I regard of supreme importance, which table is as follows:

Distance from Liverpool via Nicaraguan Canal to—

	Miles.
Honolulu	9,165
Manila	14,008
San Francisco	13,685
Shanghai	13,685
Calcutta	17,197
Melbourne	12,753
Auckland	11,433
Hongkong	13,731
Yokohama	12,611
Kinchoo	14,255
Valparaiso	7,935
Tientsin	14,349
Singapore	15,171
Total distance	163,948

Now, to show the comparison, we will take the same table furnished by the same Senator giving the distances from New York via the Nicaraguan Canal route to—

	Miles.
Manila	11,260
San Francisco	4,107
Shanghai	10,937
Calcutta	14,449
Melbourne	10,065
Auckland	8,685
Hongkong	10,983
Yokohama	9,863
Valparaiso	5,187
Honolulu	6,417
Kinchoo	11,507
Singapore	12,423
Tientsin	11,001
Total distance	128,224

These figures show a difference of 21 per cent in favor of New York by the Nicaraguan Canal route, while the difference against New York in favor of Liverpool, by the present route, to the several ports mentioned was largely in favor of Liverpool.

These distances, by the Suez Canal, in favor of Liverpool, have undoubtedly operated seriously to the disadvantage of American commerce; and so long as these distances continue to favor the commerce of Great Britain we can not expect American commerce to receive its share of the world's trade, and there can be no justification for failure or delay on the part of the Republican party in removing the barrier which inflicts these burdens and disadvantages on our commerce. The distinguished Senator from Alabama, in the very able report prepared by him and now printed as a Senate document, tells us with great force that if that isthmian barrier is to remain we can never have ships of sufficient number or speed to overcome the average length of more than 4,000 miles in favor of Liverpool on each voyage to and from our Atlantic and Pacific ports.

He truthfully tells us that no legislative expedient can save New York from the competition of Liverpool with a shorter line of navigation to the same ports to which New York must trade. His logic is sound and his argument, I trust, may have sufficient force to arouse the conscience of our friends on the other side of the Chamber, and to lead them to see the interests of the American people and to advance and protect American interests. Is it possible that our friends will longer neglect this important work and suffer this little strip of land to separate the two great oceans and continue to inflict irreparable loss on American trade?

New York is a great distributing point, where American products, both of the farm and factory, are shipped to all parts of the world. They go from the south, east, north, and west to all ports of the world, and when these ports can be reached from New York by the shortest practicable routes cheap transportation will follow, resulting in greatly benefiting the American people. It is astonishing to me how any political party conversant with the situation can longer wait for the construction and completion of this great waterway.

Well did the Committee on Interoceanic Canals tell us that the Nicaraguan Canal is an indispensable factor in American commerce, because it will shorten the route of our travel, and is the only possible way to meet the advantages that have fallen to Liverpool by her geographical situation. When I study the geography of the world, and remember that at the point where this canal is to be constructed for the passage of ships between the two oceans the strip of land that separates the two oceans is so small, and the canal can be cut through it with so little expense to the Government, taking into consideration its importance to commerce, I am astonished that the American people have submitted to delay so long in demanding legislative action providing for its construction.

I appeal to the national chairman of the party in power to come to the support of the bill providing for the construction of this waterway which means so much to American commerce. Does the distinguished Senator from Ohio recognize that this great waterway is of more importance to the people of the United States and to American commerce than his ship-subsidy scheme? Does the Senator recognize that the construction of this canal will give us a shorter and cheaper transportation to the markets of the world? Does the distinguished Senator recognize that when the canal is completed the United States can send her products of the farm and factory to the markets of all countries with much cheaper freight rates than we can enjoy to-day?

Does the distinguished Senator recognize that when this advantage is transferred from Great Britain to us that New York City will become the great distributing point of the world, and the advantages which Liverpool enjoys to-day will be transferred to New York, and that every section of our common country will be the recipient of this advantage which New York enjoys? I again, with all the earnestness of my nature, appeal to the distinguished Senator from Ohio to lend us his influence in securing this important legislation before Congress adjourns. Will not the Senator for one day forget his ship-subsidy scheme and unite with us in giving to the country a waterway that will be a blessing to the American commerce?

I appeal to the Senator from Ohio because I know the influence which he exerts among his party associates. I realize that a word from him would mean success to this great enterprise.

Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Ohio, chairman of his party, has achieved a national victory of which he should be proud. Will the Senator lend his influence to an enterprise of incalculable and untold benefit to the American people? Is it possible that my appeal to the Senator will be in vain? If the Senator will but speak a word, we all know his party will gladly heed. We all know the influence which he exerts among his party associates. We all know that he largely shapes and molds the policy of his party. We know the influence he has exerted in keeping before the Senate this ship-subsidy scheme, which has consumed so much of the time of the Senate.

A few words, Mr. President, in behalf of this important enterprise, speaking from a Southern standpoint.

Mr. President, the arguments which I have so far advanced in favor of the early construction of the Nicaragua Canal apply largely to the entire country, and now I desire to advance a few reasons from a Southern standpoint why this important, great waterway should be completed at an early day. Before I do so, Mr. President, I desire to insert as a part of my remarks an article written by Mr. Cuyler Smith, of Atlanta, and published in the Atlanta Constitution of January 27, 1901, which gives the wonderful development of the manufacture or raw cotton in my own State.

This article is headed—

PROGRESS OF GEORGIA IN VARIOUS TEXTILE ARTS.

[By T. Cuyler Smith.]

In the annual report of The Textile World, of Boston, Mass., the publishers, Messrs. Guild & Lord, have made an accurate estimate of the past year's industrial progress of Georgia in the textile arts. Their figures are substantially correct, and give the Empire State of the South a splendid standing in the mighty march of industrial progress that is now being entered into by all the States, and more especially the Southern. On September 1 The Constitution printed a review of the progress in mill building in Georgia, in which the first accurate list of the new cotton mills was given to the public. In this list it was stated that Georgia had built during 1900 38 new cotton mills, with 278,000 spindles and 4,710 looms, with an annual consumption of 200,000 bales of cotton. These mills represented an investment of $5,000,000, more than 75 per cent of which was home capital. The average grade of goods was in cloth, sheetings and duck; in yarns, 12s and 20s.

Care was given to show the exact progress of the work on these various factories, most of which have begun operations since that date. In this list Georgia led in the total number of new mills built and came second in the list of the largest number of spindles and looms installed. It is well to note that The Constitution's article stated that nearly all of the new mills were of the "expansion" kind, with either capacity in their buildings for double the looms and spindles installed or drawn to double by adding to the mill building, which was usually left unfinished at one end. The accuracy of this has been proven by subsequent development, as, for instance, at Pelham, Dublin, and Hawkinsville. According to The Textile World, we have four new mills at Atlanta, all in operation at this time; two at Eatonton, while only one is noted at Griffin, the Spalding, when there are two in that progressive industrial center—the Spalding and the Rushton. At Columbus only one is reported, yet there are two out on the river operated by the power from the new electrical development now nearing completion. All the other towns are down as having one mill each.

In somewhat reduced form The Textile World's report is as follows:

Name and location.	Capital.	Product.	Looms.	Spindles.
Atlanta, Elizabeth Cotton Mills.	$100,000	Hosiery yarns		5,000
Atlanta, Gate City Cotton Mills.	100,000	do		5,000
Atlanta, Piedmont Cotton Mills.	60,000	Warp yarns 14-2		2,500
Atlanta, Scottdale Mills		Export sheetings	300	10,000

Totals (36 mills)	2,820,000		3,291	210,536

In addition to this list I add the following mills and the figures thereto, which raises the total number of mills, looms, and spindles all to our industrial credit during the past twelve months. The importance of having these figures correct can not be overestimated, as both capital and spinners are largely influenced in their selection of locations for investment and mill building by such publications.

Location and name.	Capital.	Product.	Looms.	Spindles.
Griffin, Rushton Cotton Mills	$100,000	Sheeting and drills.	200	5,000
Thomaston, Thomaston Cotton Mills.	100,000	4-yard sheetings.	175	6,600
Jefferson, Jefferson Cotton Mills.	80,000	Sheetings	80	3,000
Greensboro, Mary-Lelia Cotton Mills.	100,000	4-yard sheetings.	160	5,000
Hogansville, Hogansville Mfg. Co.	80,000	Heavy duck	100	5,000
Juliette, Glover Mfg. Co	70,000	Yarns		2,040
Carrollton, Mandeville Mfg. Co.	100,000	Yarns and sheeting.	200	6,000
Pelham, Pelham Mfg. Co	100,000	Sheeting	160	5,000
Cedartown, Standard Cotton Mills.	100,000	Carded hosiery yarns.		10,000
Thomaston, John E. Smith Mfg. Co.	60,000	Hosiery yarns		2,500
Newnan, Newnan Cotton Mills.	150,000	Fine yarns		3,000
Total (12 mills)	1,040,000		1,135	58,140

Recapitulation of both my estimate and that of the Textile World, combined:

New mills	48
Capital invested	$3,860,000
Spindles	268,676
Looms	4,406

I have just returned from a tour of inspection of the new mills and find them all of the latest type, both in construction and equipment. They are in the hands of superintendents of ability and experience. The management is composed of the most progressive business men of the towns, men who have made a success of their individual business, and while they lack experience in cotton manufacturing, yet their character is such that they insure the success of any enterprise they may undertake. They have bought their first year's supply of cotton at low prices and carefully selected the staple, so I do not think their products will suffer by comparison with the output of the older mills. These new mills are light, perfectly ventilated, and as clean and neat as can be, presenting an admirable appearance in every respect.

The operatives' cottages are usually of the modern four-room type, clean, sanitary, and far enough apart to make the mill villages healthy. Generally there is a small plat of ground around each which will admit of small gardens. The idea of painting them different colors tends to beautify these serried rows of houses and give a homelike individuality to each. Company stores are not installed save where the mill is some distance from town. It has been claimed that we can not get enough operatives for these new mills. There never was a greater error, and I learn that there are from four to five applications for every possible place in the mills, coming not only from the country people of the vicinity, but from former residents of the county who have moved to other mill towns, acquired skill in their work, and are now anxious to return to their homes and work in the new mill.

Regarding the outlook for new mills in 1901-2, I think that the number proposed does not exceed a dozen, and the number that will be actually built will scarcely reach that figure. Our people seem disposed to go slow in this matter and learn more about the markets for their products before making any more goods. Expansion of the new mills may be looked for inside of two years, so we will have some 100,000 spindles more before the opening of our textile exposition, which is talked of by all these spinners, of both the new and old mills, who applaud the idea as one calculated to benefit their business as well as induce other spinners to locate among us, declaring, with a total absence of the "dog in the manger" spirit, "We want more cotton mills in Georgia, whether we build them or not."

I also desire to insert, as a part of my remarks, the leading parts of a most instructive and interesting address delivered by Hon. W. A. Hemphill, of Georgia, in Chicago on February 4, 1901, and published in the Atlanta Constitution of that date. Mr. Hemphill is one of the leading business men of Georgia and has made a remarkable record in developing the resources of the South:

NORTH AND SOUTH AS THEY ARE NOW UNITED—BRILLIANT ADDRESS OF HON. W. A. HEMPHILL, OF ATLANTA—GEORGIA JOURNALIST DISCOURSES ON THE GREAT PROGRESS MADE BY HIS SECTION OF THE COUNTRY DURING THE LAST TWENTY YEARS, AND PLEDGES HIS SECTION TO TAKE A LEADING POSITION IN THE PROGRESS AND INDUSTRIAL ADVANCE OF THE COUNTRY—GROWTH REMINDS ONE OF ALADDIN'S LAMP.

Hon. W. A. Hemphill, of Atlanta, prepared an address recently for delivery at the meeting of the National Business League in Chicago, which had so much of interest to the Northern business men that the Commercial reproduces some portions of it.

It is by far the most eloquent and able plea for the new South which has been delivered since the famous speech of Henry W. Grady. Mr. Hemphill is president of the Atlanta Constitution Company, of which he was the founder.

The address is a pledge of the South to the march of advancement in which the North and West are now engaged. Among the bright parts of the address were the following:

"In the great commercial and industrial struggle of this country the enterprising and industrious North has rushed forward and placed the standard of progress, of trade, of manufacture, and finance far to the front. We do not ask you to bring back the standard to us.

"The command has been given, and the South is rushing eagerly to the front, and, it seems, from the wonderful progress that has already been made, she will not only reach the standard, but will help carry it forward until the commerce and trade of the world is captured.

SOUTH TWENTY YEARS AGO.

"Twenty years ago Henry Grady told about the burial of a Confederate soldier in Pickens County, Ga. They buried him in the midst of a marble quarry; they cut through solid marble to make his grave, and yet a little tombstone they put above him was from Vermont. They buried him in the midst of a pine forest, and yet the pine coffin was imported from Cincinnati.

"They buried him within touch of an iron mine, and yet the nails in his coffin and the iron in the shovel that dug his grave were imported from Pittsburg. They buried him by the side of the best sheep-grazing country on earth, and yet the wool in the coffin bands and the coffin bands themselves were brought from the North.

"The South didn't furnish a thing on earth for that funeral but the corpse and the hole in the ground.

"Gentlemen, that has all been marked by a wonderful change and great improvement. In that section there are hundreds of cotton and woolen mills, the products of which have been shipped to the uttermost parts of the world. There are shoe factories almost in sight of that soldier's grave. The iron ore on that mountain side has been converted into pig iron and shipped in hundred carload lots to Pittsburg.

"The timber that gave shade to the humble grave has been cut down and manufactured into coffins for other sections and other people.

"And more wonderful still is the history of that marble quarry in which his grave was cut. A million-dollar Chicago company was organized to develop it. Almost within sound of my voice millions have been spent in marble decorations taken from its precious depths. The marble for the Corcoran Gallery of Art at Washington came from it.

CONTRAST WITH THE PAST.

"Behold the contrast!

"On the day that Grant and Lee met at Appomattox there was a barren waste to the south of them.

"Property valued at nearly $6,000,000,000 four years before was completely destroyed.

"Not a single business enterprise was in existence.

"From Appomattox hopeless and defeated men wended their weary way, on foot and heartbroken, to the Carolinas, to Georgia, Tennessee, and Kentucky, farther west to Alabama, Mississippi, and south to Florida; across the Mississippi to Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas.

"For fifteen years the people remained hopeless; aliens and the ignorant ruled, and $3,000,000,000 of debt was added. So the case stood in 1880.

COTTON KING OF THE SOUTH.

"There were then in existence 180 cotton mills. The sound of rejuvenation was made by Atlanta in the Cotton Exposition of 1881. Soon the mills doubled, and to-day they number, including those in actual course of erection, 700.

"The story of the spindle age will be best explained. In 1883 there were in the South 800,000 spindles, crossing the 2,000,000 mark in 1893, and reaching 3,987,735 one year ago, with 2,000,000 spindles under contract to-day.

"With this attraction of manufacturing possibilities came the great revival in the price of cotton. This year we have sold for $500,000,000 a crop which two years ago we had to sell for less than $250,000,000.

WHAT MANUFACTURING DOES.

"What will manufacturing do for the South? The crop this year was worth $500,000,000. In manufacturing the first turn into plain brown sheetings doubles the value of the product, making it $1,000,000,000. Raised one grade more in quality the value doubles again, going to $2,000,000,000. Gentlemen, I am talking billions now, not millions.

"In this we are fighting the commercial battle of America. On a hot July day in the early sixties I pulled the lanyard which opened the Confederate artillery fire on Gettysburg, and never felt more American than I did at that moment. The scene changes, and, in God's providence, different conditions prevail, and I stand here to tell you that I am now engaged in America's battle for commercial supremacy."

THE GREAT IRON PRODUCTS.

Mr. Hemphill told of the recent utterances of the English statesmen, Lord Rosebery and Joseph Chamberlain, upon the victories of American manufacturers:

"I could tell you a wonderful story of the progress in the product of pig iron in the South. This has increased since 1880 from 397,301 tons to nearly 3,000,000 tons.

"The South was a pioneer in this industry. In evidence of this there were 12 furnaces in full blast in Bartow County, Ga., prior to the civil war.

"The coal fields of the South cover 60,000 square miles, seven times as large as those of Great Britain—more than those of Russia, Great Britain, Germany, and Belgium combined.

"Another wonderful product of the South is its timber. It is about equal in value to that of the balance of the Union. The golden Georgia pine has made for itself a national reputation.

"In nothing does the South show its great advancement more than in railroad building.

"In 1880 the railroad mileage was 19,170 miles; in 1890, 41,384 miles; in 1900, 49,627 miles."

The discoveries of oil wells in Texas and the great growth of the cotton seed, mineral, animal, and vegetable products of the South were also commented upon.

"It would seem that Aladdin's lamp had found a resting place here. The South is, indeed, a land where the mocking bird sings its sweetest notes, where the magnolia blooms in its perennial beauty. It is a land where the rivers flow to the sea, where the mountains are filled with precious metals.

"The soils of its fields are as fertile as those of the ancient land of Goshen. Its men are brave and true, and its women are as fair and beautiful as any the sun ever shone upon.

"Gentlemen, I would not take one star from the diadem that intellectual and manufacturing New England so proudly wears.

LIKE ALADDIN'S MAGIC LAMP.

"I would not have the great financial central section of this country lose one jewel from its beautiful crown. I would not have the great western section of these United States, which has been so well called the 'granary of the world,' lose one sheaf from the golden wreath of her wealth and beauty.

"The hope of my life has been—and I rejoice to-night in its glad fruition—to see not only the great sections of our beloved country crowned with these beautiful diadems of prosperity and wealth, but above all, my heart is made glad and my pulse beats with joy to see one jeweled crown uniting and blessing all, and the jewels in that united crown furnished by the South as bright and lustrous and as valuable as the jewels furnished by any other section of this great Republic."

I hold in my hand an article written by Mr. Barrett, our former minister to Siam, important to the development of the South and to the entire country. I deem it consistent with the line of argument which I am now presenting in favor of the early construction of this canal to quote the leading features of this important paper. Mr. Barrett says:

Does the South appreciate her opportunity in the Far East? Does she realize that the mighty markets of Asia's millions await her best efforts at exploitation? If not, she should. The Far East is not reserved for our Pacific coast alone, not for the manufacturing cities of our Atlantic seaboard only, not for the exclusive control of Europe; no, not by any means, but for the South of the United States as well, provided the opportunity is seized before it is too late.

Some parts of the South and some Southerners, more enterprising than their competitors, are already at work; and, if they are reading what I write, can doubtless foretell my proposition. The average Southerner, however, will be skeptical in accepting my suggestion, that this particular portion of the United States has any particular interest in the Far East.

To get to my point, King Cotton can tell the story.

The Far East wants the South's cotton; it wants a lot of it. It wants it now, and it wants a lot of it. It wants it now, and in years it will want twenty times what it demands now.

There are nearly 500,000,000 inhabitants of these lands—far surpassing the United States in area—whose shores are washed by the Pacific, and are directly across the sea from our Western coast.

The demands of these millions, though small individually, are vast in the aggregate, and are increasing with great rapidity—even more rapidly than the chief experts in commerce and trade have dared prophesy in their wildest moments of hypothetical reasoning—and still China is hardly awake yet. When she does move, look out for her. It will be like an avalanche.

Of this half billion population, 350,000,000 wear almost nothing but cotton clothing and use nothing but cotton materials for the hundred and one other uses that cotton is put to. * * * It is noticeable that the demand for cotton goods of all kinds has increased during the last few years far more rapidly than the population, and that sales are on an ascending scale, which means a brilliant future for the trade in cotton goods and raw cotton.

The supply of raw cotton in China is so small, compared to the total consumption of cotton goods, that it could never meet the demand if supplies from other lands, like India, Egypt, and America, were cut off. It is true that China even exports cotton, but that goes only to Japan, and simply for manufacture, to be shipped back as cotton yarn or piece goods. Then, again, cotton growing is not a science in China, while the soil and sun do not seem to suit it like our own favored Dixie's warmth and fertility. The product of 1 acre of good cotton land in the United States will equal that of 5 to 10 in China. The time may come when China's millions will learn how to grow all their cotton in China's numberless acres, but that day is so far distant as not to discourage the planters and manufacturers of the South in exploiting these Asiatic markets. And mind, please, I have only spoken of China. Japan can never supply her own mills with the raw product, now over 100 in number and being added to every year. Eastern Siberia, Korea, Formosa, Cochin China, Siam, Straits Settlements, Java, Borneo, and the Philippines are great purchasers of cotton goods, and even if mills should be started in their cities the raw product must still be imported.

The tendency of the Far East, illustrated by the development of cotton manufacturing in Japan with headquarters at Osaka, and by the working and construction of numerous mills at Shanghai and other points in China, is to supply the market on the spot with the finished product instead of depending entirely on Europe and America. So the demand for raw cotton in Japan and China has suddenly jumped ahead into considerable proportion; and now comes the question: Can and will the South meet this demand and so provide herself with a vast new market, eventually free herself from absolute reliance on those of Europe and home, and making her great staple an increased source of wealth to every cotton-producing State, and hence collectively to the entire South?

The field is not one to be controlled without competition. Far from it. The cotton merchants of India, China, and Egypt are making a vigorous effort to supply the Far Eastern demand. Egypt counts on her near route by the Suez Canal and her cheap labor to eventually rule the market, while India and China contend that they have even a greater advantage in both these respects; but there are certain conditions favorable to American cotton, which, if followed up properly, will more than counterbalance the nearness and cheapness of Indian, Chinese, and Egyptian supplies. One is the quality of American cotton. Both the Japanese and the Chinese manufacturers distinctly prefer it. It is manufactured more easily and seems to make more and better cloth. Then, when placed on the market, the buyers prefer both the yarn and the cloth made from it.

The only serious difficulty in the way of American cotton is the price, which is made high solely by the freight rates from the South to Japan and China. I have visited every cotton manufactory of any importance in these two countries, and wherever I found them using Indian, Chinese, or Egyptian cotton the managers frankly told me that they would buy American cotton exclusively if the combined rail and steamer charges were not often prohibitive. The American cotton now shipped to the Far East is consumed by mills which have a special market, but they represent a small proportion of the total. In short, were freight rates favorable and did the Southern exporters push the market, American cotton would monopolize the supply for the mills of trans-Pacific lands. What then remains to be done?

The supreme advantage to be gained, which will, with "one fell stroke," accomplish the end desired, is the early construction and operation of the Nicaragua Canal. Unless that waterway is dug I can not see how the South can ever win permanently even a fair share of this mighty Pacific trade, and that is the opinion of nearly all experts in the Far East whom I have consulted. A trans-Isthmian canal is the key to the trans-Pacific. The long rail haul from the South to the Pacific seaboard will always keep the delivered cost of American cotton just beyond the point of general and successful competition. Dig the canal, and a large fleet of steamers will carry cotton in bulk from all Southern ports to the Far East for the same rate that is now charged from San Francisco to Kobe and Shanghai. As this statement is read I can imagine a skeptical look on many faces and an insinuation that I am indulging in exaggeration.

Let us see. In the first place, the rates charged by steamers crossing the Pacific are equal to or greater than those charged by steamers from the Mediterranean going a greater distance, and not much less than the through rates from London, Liverpool, Hamburg, Bremen, and Amsterdam, thus showing that there is yet a large margin on the Pacific route that can be taken off if necessary.

In the second place, I desire to lay before the planters and exporters of the South two most important statements made to me, respectively, by leading stockholders of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, Japan's great navigation company, and the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company, England's chief foreign line, which two companies combined control more steamers than any other three, barring one German and one French system, in the world.

The representative of the former said to me that the moment the Nicaragua Canal was opened this company would put on a fleet of at least 10 large steamers to run from Japan and China to the leading ports of the South, the principal object of which would be to carry cotton. In order to have outward cargoes they might touch en route at San Francisco, and then possibly on the Atlantic side, go on to Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston, but their chief destination would be the Southern ports, like Galveston, New Orleans, Mobile, Tampa, Charleston, Savannah, and Norfolk. He said this plan had been carefully considered by the company, and in expressing surprise that the United States had not already dug the canal, added with pride: "If Japan controlled the opportunity or concession, the canal would have been completed and opened to the world's traffic before this."

The representative of the Peninsular and Oriental informed me, almost in a confidential way, that his company had long considered the revolution of the trade of the world that would be accomplished by the construction of the isthmian canal, and intended to put on a special line of large carriers to run practically around the world via the southern ports of the United States and through the canal to Asia, in order to carry the cotton of the South to Japan and China. From the latter they would take cargoes via Suez to Europe, from Europe to America, and so on. Certainly both these are practical schemes, while they show the importance of the South's opportunity in the Pacific. Both authorities told me that their steamers would carry cotton from Southern ports to Japan and China at competitive rates with other sources of supply, and less than those now charged from San Francisco, Portland, and Seattle to Yokohama, Kobe, and Shanghai.

In conclusion, therefore, I would appeal to the South to look carefully to the Far East, to prepare to supply its demands and vigorously meet competition; to send capable and untiring agents to deal directly with Asiatic buyers, to sell at the lowest prices possible for the successful introduction of cotton; to place samples on exhibition in the principal markets; to urge the construction of a Pacific cable and the annexation of Hawaii; to try in the meantime to make railway and steamship companies to quote the lowest rates possible in order that she may keep what little hold she already has, and finally, and above all other considerations, bend her energies for the immediate construction of the Nicaragua Canal.

The Far East, with uncounted millions to clothe and feed, and with wealth to pay for such clothes and food, invites the United States to supply her wants. The Pacific coast is awakening to the knowledge that she can supply the food in the form of flour. Will the South realize that she can supply the clothes in the form of cotton?

The South's great opportunity to win new markets for her chief staple lies in the trans-Pacific lands. Will she seize the opportunity?

Mr. Barrett has demonstrated by the arguments which he has presented that he is thoroughly conversant with the situation, and the facts are conclusive that unless this waterway is dug he can not see how the South is to win permanently a fair share of this trade. Exporters have found to their sorrow that the long rail haul from the South to the Pacific seaboard will always keep the cost of American cotton and cotton goods beyond the point of general and successful competition.

I believe that it is true, as he says, that when this canal is completed a large fleet of steamers will carry our manufactured cotton goods from all Southern ports to the Far East for the same rates that are now charged from San Francisco to Shanghai. The South now produces 10,000,000 bales of cotton, and the time will come when we will treble this production. We not only produce three-fourths of the cotton of the world, but we expect at no distant day to manufacture 75 per cent of the crop.

There is no legislation that I deem of so much importance to the section which I have the honor in part to represent as this great waterway, which will give us an outlet to the markets of the world and which will put our Southern ports in connection with the leading ports of the world.

To longer delay the construction of this great waterway is to neglect and disregard the interests of the American people.

I introduce the joint resolution which I send to the desk, and ask that it may be referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution submitted by the Senator from Georgia will be read.

The Secretary read the joint resolution (S. R. 166) to complete the agreement entered into with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica in regard to future negotiations for the construction of an interoceanic canal by way of Lake Nicaragua, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States is authorized by law to complete the agreement entered into by him with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica in the words following:

"Protocol of an agreement between the Governments of the United States and of Costa Rica in regard to future negotiations for the construction of an interoceanic canal by way of Lake Nicaragua.

"It is agreed between the two Governments that when the President of the United States is authorized by law to acquire control of such portion of the territory now belonging to Costa Rica as may be desirable and necessary on which to construct and protect a canal of depth and capacity sufficient for the passage of vessels of the greatest tonnage and draft now in use from a point near San Juan del Norte, on the Caribbean Sea, via Lake Nicaragua, to Brito, on the Pacific Ocean, they mutually engage to enter into negotiations with each other to settle the plan and the agreements, in detail, found necessary to accomplish the construction and to provide for the ownership and control of the proposed canal.

"As preliminary to such future negotiations it is forthwith agreed that the course of said canal and the terminals thereof shall be the same that were stated in a treaty signed by the plenipotentiaries of the United States and Great Britain on February 5, 1900, and now pending in the Senate of the United States for confirmation, and that the provisions of the same shall be adhered to by the United States and Costa Rica."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. At the request of the Senator from Georgia the resolution will be referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 4171) to amend "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine-Hospital Service," approved February 15, 1893; and

A bill (S. 5351) to provide an American register for the barkentine J. C. Pfluger, of San Francisco, Cal.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate No. 2 to the bill (H. R. 12901) to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of lands, etc.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 5280) to continue the publication of the Supplement to the Revised Statutes;

A bill (H. R. 7603) to correct the military record of James A. Somerville;

A bill (H. R. 12175) to correct the military record of Harrison Clark;

A bill (H. R. 12807) for the relief of James M. Stradling;

A bill (H. R. 13396) to amend section 5546 of the Revised Statutes;

A bill (H. R. 13776) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to deliver to the mayor and city council of Baltimore, Md., Ionic columns;

A bill (H. R. 13973) to amend section 14 of the act approved June 29, 1898, entitled "An act to provide for the construction of a bridge across the Niagara River;"

A bill (H. R. 14138) to authorize the Pigeon River Improvement, Slide, and Boom Company, of Minnesota, to enter upon the Grand Portage Indian Reservation and improve the Pigeon River at what is known as the Cascades of said river;

A bill (H. R. 14228) to authorize the city of Nashville, Tenn., to construct a free public bridge across the Cumberland River within the corporate limits of said city;

A bill (H. R. 14260) to amend an act entitled "An act to constitute a new division of the eastern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for the holding of terms of court at Sherman, Tex., and for the appointment of a clerk for said court, and for other purposes," approved February 19, 1901;

A bill (H. R. 14309) for the reward of enlisted men of the Navy or Marine Corps; and

A bill (H. R. 14093) to authorize the Paris, Choctaw, and Little Rock Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across Red River, in the State of Texas.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 8068) authorizing the board of supervisors of Pima County, Ariz., to issue fifty-year 4 per cent bonds of Pima County, Ariz., to redeem certain bonded indebtedness of said county; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

UNLAWFUL TRADE RESTRAINTS AND MONOPOLIES.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 2413, in pursuance of a notice I gave the Senate yesterday, being a resolution to discharge the Committee on the Judiciary from the further consideration of what is known as the anti-trust bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. After the resolution is taken up, I wish to present a privileged question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas asks the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the resolution which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. JONES of Arkansas on February 16, 1901, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 10539) to amend an act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July 2, 1890, and that the Senate proceed to consider the same.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I present a privileged question.

Mr. ALDRICH. Has any request been made in regard to the resolution which has just been read?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I have moved that the Senate proceed to its consideration.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I present a privileged question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state his privileged question.

Mr. CHANDLER. There is a bill on the table which has been sent over from the House of Representatives, which I ask may be laid before the Senate.

THOMAS LUTZ STITT.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4787) to authorize the appointment of Thomas Lutz Stitt as an officer in the Navy. The Secretary will read the amendments.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, can the Senator take me off the floor to have a bill read?

Mr. CHANDLER. I do not take the Senator off the floor. I present a privileged question, to be disposed of while the Senator's motion is pending.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the amendments of the House of Representatives to Senate bill 4787.

The Secretary read as follows:

Page 1, line 5, after "Navy," insert "as ensign."

Page 1, line 8, strike out "on" and insert "at;" and in the same line, after "the," insert "foot of the."

Mr. CHANDLER. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

UNLAWFUL TRADE RESTRAINTS AND MONOPOLIES.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] has moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution which has been read.

Mr. ALDRICH. I rise to a question of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island will state his question of order.

Mr. ALDRICH. The motion made by the Senator from Arkansas is not now in order; it is not in order after 2 o'clock. I ask that Rule IX may be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read Rule IX.

The Secretary read as follows:

RULE IX.

ORDER OF BUSINESS (CONTINUED).

Immediately after the consideration of cases not objected to upon the Calendar is completed, and not later than 2 o'clock, if there shall be no special orders for that time, the Calendar of General Orders shall be taken up and proceeded with in its order, beginning with the first subject on the Calendar next after the last subject disposed of in proceeding with the Calendar; and in such case the following motions shall be in order at any time as privileged motions, save as against a motion to adjourn, or to proceed to the consideration of executive business, or questions of privilege, to wit:

First. A motion to proceed to the consideration of an appropriation or revenue bill.

Second. A motion to proceed to the consideration of any other bill on the Calendar, which motion shall not be open to amendment.

Third. A motion to pass over the pending subject, which, if carried, shall have the effect to leave such subject without prejudice in its place on the Calendar.

Fourth. A motion to place such subject at the foot of the Calendar.

Each of the foregoing motions shall be decided without debate and shall have precedence in the order above named, and may be submitted as in the nature and with all the rights of questions of order.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, the motion made by the Senator from Arkansas is not included in the motions which can be made after 2 o'clock, and I submit that his motion is not now in order.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I did not hear the Senator from Rhode Island very well; but this is not the morning hour, and Rule IX applies to business in the morning hour. It is entirely competent for the Senate to take up any measure on the Calendar at any time, by a vote of the Senate, after 2 o'clock, and to proceed with it.

Mr. ALDRICH. This is not the morning hour, and Rule IX applies to what motions can be made after the morning hour, and applies to nothing else. The Senator is mistaken in his understanding of the rule.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I have never before heard the point made that the Senate can not take from the Calendar, by a vote of the Senate, anything it chooses, and consider it.

Mr. ALDRICH. It can take up anything on the Calendar; but this bill is not on the Calendar.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. This proposition is on the Calendar. It is Order of Business No. 2413, that being a resolution.

Mr. ALDRICH. The resolution may be on the Calendar; but the rule reads: "A motion to proceed to the consideration of any bill on the Calendar."

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. My motion was to proceed to the consideration of that resolution, which is on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair overrules the point of order.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Commerce:

A bill (H. R. 13973) to amend section 147, act approved June 29, 1898, entitled "An act to provide for the construction of a bridge across Niagara River;"

A bill (H. R. 14138) to authorize the Pigeon River Improvement, Slide, and Boom Company, of Minnesota, to enter upon the Grand Portage Indian Reservation and improve the Pigeon River at what is known as the cascades of said river;

A bill (H. R. 14093) to authorize the Paris, Choctaw and Little Rock Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across Red River in the State of Texas; and

A bill (H. R. 14228) to authorize the city of Nashville, Tenn., to construct a free public bridge across the Cumberland River within the corporate limits of said city.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

A bill (H. R. 7603) to correct the military record of James A. Somerville;

A bill (H. R. 12175) to correct the military record of Harrison Clark; and

A bill (H. R. 12807) for the relief of James M. Stradling.

The bill (H. R. 5280) to continue the publication of the Supplement to the Revised Statutes was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on the Revision of the Laws of the United States.

The bill (H. R. 13396) to amend section 5546 of the Revised Statutes was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CARTER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Montana moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I hope the Senate will vote that down and give me a vote on the resolution.

Mr. TELLER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. PRITCHARD]. In his absence I withhold my vote. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY]. I should like to ask the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] if he knows how his colleague would vote on this proposition.

Mr. BATE. No, sir; I do not.

Mr. SPOONER. I have a pair with the Senator's colleague. If I was at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea." I understand the Senator from Tennessee would vote "nay."

Mr. TILLMAN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. THURSTON], who is absent. I will have to withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. TILLMAN. I suggest to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] that we transfer our pairs, leaving the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY] paired with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. THURSTON], and he and I vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. BURROWS. I am paired with the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY].

The result was announced—yeas 40, nays 29; as follows:

YEAS—40.

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After fifty minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until 8 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The Senate reassembled at 8 o'clock p. m.

CORRESPONDENCE RELATIVE TO GUNNER CHARLES MORGAN.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting, in response to the resolution of the 28th ultimo, copies of the letter of Gunner Morgan, gunner in the United States Navy, addressed to Admiral W. T. Sampson in the month of February, 1901, asking for a recommendation to the Secretary of the Navy for promotion to the office of ensign in the Navy, together with Admiral Sampson's indorsement thereon, and other letters and communications on the subject; which, with the accompanying papers, was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

SENATOR FROM MONTANA.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to kindly lay before the Senate Senate resolution 284, Order of Business 1038.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution referred to by the Senator from New Hampshire, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution reported by Mr. CHANDLER from the Committee on Privileges and Elections April 23, 1900, as follows:

Resolved, That William A. Clark was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the Senate of the United States by the legislature of the State of Montana.

Mr. ALLEN. I suggest the absence of a quorum, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the absentees.

The Secretary called the names of absent Senators.

After some little delay, the following Senators having answered to their names:

Allen,	Dillingham,	Kyle,	Proctor,
Allison,	Fairbanks,	Lindsay,	Scott,
Bate,	Foster,	Mallory,	Simon,
Berry,	Frye,	Money,	Spooner,
Beveridge,	Gallinger,	Morgan,	Stewart,

Clapp,	Jones, Ark.	Platt, Conn.	Wolcott.
Cockrell,	Kean,	Platt, N. Y.
Deboe,	Kenney,	Pritchard,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Forty-six Senators have responded to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. CHANDLER. I offer an amendment to the resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the resolution by striking out all after the first word "Resolved" and inserting:

That William A. Clark, who recently occupied a seat in the Senate under color of an election by the legislature of the State of Montana, made on the 28th day of January, 1899, and who vacated said seat on the 15th day of May, 1900, during the pendency in the Senate of a resolution unanimously reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections declaring that he was not duly and legally elected, based upon a report asserting that said election was null and void on account of briberies, attempted briberies, and corrupt practices by the agents of said William A. Clark, with knowledge of which he was chargeable, is hereby declared to have been personally responsible for said offenses, and also in connection therewith of gross violations of the statute of said State of Montana, which limits the expenditures of candidates for the office of United States Senator and requires returns to be made of all expenditures in political canvasses within said State.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President——

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, ex-Senator William A. Clark——

Mr. PETTUS. I desire to ask the Senator from New Hampshire simply a question. I ask whether the substitute which he has offered is offered by the authority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections or on his own responsibility?

Mr. CHANDLER. On my own responsibility, Mr. President.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I desire to raise the question of order against the resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas will state his question of order.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The resolution relates to nothing that is pending in the Senate. It is a matter of past history; it has no relation to anything that can be considered by the Senate, and it seems to me that it ought not to be in order.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, the resolution is on the Calendar of the Senate, and the Senate might pass it if it wants to do so. I will relieve the perturbed soul of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] by saying that, having offered an amendment to the resolution, after I have made my remarks I shall not ask to have a vote.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It seems to me the sole purpose of this resolution is to attack a man who is not a member of the Senate; who is not present; who has no opportunity to defend himself.

Mr. CHANDLER. That is a question of taste and not of order, Mr. President, and I will be responsible for my remarks.

Several SENATORS. Go on!

Mr. MORGAN. I object that it is not a question of taste, but that it is a question of order,

Mr. CHANDLER. I will wait, of course, for the question of order to be decided, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire gave notice on yesterday that he would address the Senate at 8 o'clock this evening, and the Chair would not feel at liberty to interfere with a courtesy that never has been refused to any Senator within his knowledge.

Mr. MORGAN. That notice was given upon a resolution that had been reported from a committee and was on the Calendar. The resolution offered here now the Senator avows is his own personal, private matter, and I suppose it might be taken in the nature of a personal and private accusation.

Mr. CHANDLER. I propose to address the Senate on public matters.

Mr. MORGAN. I suppose this will lead to a Chinese decapitation. That is about the way of it.

Mr. CHANDLER. Not of myself, Mr. President.

Mr. MORGAN. It is the decapitation of a man before you try him.

Mr. CHANDLER. Not of myself.

Mr. President, ex-Senator William A. Clark, in a carefully written speech read by him in Helena, Mont., on the evening of January 16, 1901, after his nomination for election as United States Senator, which speech was published far and wide in the newspapers of the country, saw fit to allude to me by name as having been—in connection with the investigation during the first session of the present Congress into the legality of his election as United States Senator by the legislature of Montana on January 28, 1899—"the principal factor, prosecutor, and persecutor."

He also made the following statement:

It is a matter of world-wide notoriety that in all of the proceedings of that committee, which was composed almost exclusively of lawyers and constituted one of the highest judicial tribunals of the land, there was an utter disregard of all legal methods in the admission of testimony and in the treatment of witnesses and their examination.

As attempted proof of the correctness of this sweeping arraignment, he also said:

Hearsay statements of the grossest character were admitted without stint or restriction in behalf of the prosecution by the distinguished chairman, in spite of the continual and forcible protests of the counsel for the defense, as well as those of some of the members of the committee, who afterwards alluded to the remarkable conduct of the chairman in a minority report submitted by them.

Then came a characterization of my conduct as chairman of the committee:

Indeed, the whole proceedings were denounced by hundreds of eminent lawyers familiar with them as being unworthy of even a police court, and the record of the high-handed, vicious, and browbeating tactics exercised by the chairman of the committee will ever remain a stigma and disgrace in the annals of the Senate as judged by all fair minded men.

Next, the ex-Senator rejoiced over my failure to receive reelection from the legislature of New Hampshire, and boasted of his own renomination in words as follows:

It is gratifying to learn that he has, in his recent effort to be returned to the Senate, been repudiated by the caucus of his own party by an overwhelming majority, and not a single vote was cast for him yesterday in the legislature of New Hampshire, a rebuke more stinging, but not more emphatic, than that recently pronounced by the people of Montana. The disposition of this man and that of myself by the people of our respective States is a striking illustration of that theory which has been aptly termed "the irony of fate."

The foregoing uncalled-for and unwarranted, vindictive and exultant assault upon me justifies, even requires, suitable notice from me before I retire from the Senate, which Mr. Clark on the 4th of March will attempt to again enter under what I charge was an unlawful and corrupt election.

It is first to be remarked that no single word has been uttered by me in this Senate in debate on the merits of Senator Clark's case. My statements and comments are contained only in the two Senate reports—that on April 23, 1900, No. 1052, and the supplemental report, No. 1052, on June 5, 1900. In these reports, written by me, there is not a single harsh or vituperative word, nor has any such word been spoken by me outside these reports or outside the Senate Chamber. When Mr. Clark, on May 11, vacated his seat without waiting for the action of the Senate upon the resolution reported by the committee, which declared that he was not legally elected, because his pretended election was null and void on account of briberies and violations of the laws of Montana, I said nothing in debate even in reply to his lengthy speech of withdrawal.

I had no desire, as the Senate was to be purged of his presence, to add the least humiliation to his pitiful exit.

Most of the averments made by him in his speech of withdrawal are denied in the supplemental report of June 5. Nothing shown by the reports, or by anything ever said or done by me anywhere, justifies his assertion, deliberately made in Montana on January 16, that I was a prosecutor or persecutor, or resorted to high-handed or browbeating tactics, or that there was in connection with the inquiry which drove him from the Senate any disregard of legal methods, or that hearsay evidence was admitted without stint or restriction.

These formidable charges are without any reasonable justification. The report that Senator Clark's election was null and void by reason of bribery was the unanimous action of the nine members of the committee, without distinction of party; and of the character and standing of the eight members besides myself I will shortly speak more at length. The criticisms of two members of the committee, Senators PETTUS and HARRIS, concerning the methods adopted by the majority of the committee, were fully answered in the supplemental report of June 5, which was concurred in by all the members except those two. By this supplemental report it is clearly shown—

(1) That no hearsay testimony was received except after deliberate decision by the committee for the purpose of ascertaining what additional witnesses it might be necessary to summon, as stated by the chairman on page 432 of the report, as follows:

"The CHAIRMAN. It would only be admissible as laying the foundation for sending for other witnesses."

(2) That no single finding of the committee was based upon hearsay testimony.

It must be further borne in mind by all impartial persons that in all inquiries ordered by Congress there is always something done by the committees in addition and anterior to the decisions which are at the last made by them, based on the facts which they believe they have ascertained; that something else besides decision is investigation. The members of the committee are investigators. It is their duty to give all their powers and faculties to searching for and recording the truth. After the testimony is taken they assume the function of judges and seek to reach just opinions and conclusions, to be reported by them to the body which has directed them to make the inquiry.

If this union of functions, that of investigation in the first place and that of decision and recommendation in the second place, is a wrong practice, Congress is to be blamed and not the chairman or any member of a Congressional investigating committee. There was in this inquiry absolutely nothing unusual or erroneous in the methods or the conduct of the chairman or of any other member of the committee.

The result unanimously reported by the committee was as follows:

Resolved, That William A. Clark was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the Senate of the United States by the legislature of the State of Montana.

The decision to report the foregoing resolution was based upon the finding of the committee, as follows:

The finding of the committee is that the election to the Senate of William A. Clark, of Montana, is null and void on account of briberies, attempted briberies, and corrupt practices by his agents, and of violations of the laws of Montana defining and punishing crimes against the elective franchise.

After the submission of the resolution to the Senate, and while it was upon the Calendar awaiting action, Senator Clark vacated his seat and left the Senate without allowing an opportunity for a decision upon the merits of the case against him or of the merits of his defense, if he had any defense. This departure of his, notwithstanding his farewell speech of many denials and of fault-finding with the committee, is an admission of the substantial truth of the finding of fact made by the committee and of the justice of the resolution unanimously reported.

Words of denial, complaint, and reproach were to be expected from the fleeing Senator. Naturally he would not have a good opinion of the law and facts which condemned him. But the confession made by him through his acts can not be avoided. If he had not felt that he was a guilty man, he would have awaited the issue of debate and decision, and would have endeavored to convince the Senate of his innocence of wrongdoing. His flight in the face of the deliberate accusations made against him by the committee fixed upon him a stigma of criminality which can never be blotted out.

I ask the Senate and the country to consider who were the persons who made against William A. Clark the accusations contained in the report of the committee.

Senator WILLIAM A. HARRIS, of Kansas, is a Virginian by birth, of gallant military service, great experience as a skillful engineer, once engaged in the construction of a portion of the Union Pacific Railroad; an agriculturist of repute; a citizen of unimpeachable honor and integrity. He served in the House of Representatives for one term, and has been a member of the Senate four years. His character throughout his whole life stands unsullied by any weakness or unworthiness. Was he induced by the chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections to make, against his own judgment, a decision that the Senatorial election of William A. Clark was null and void for bribery?

Senator EDMUND W. PETTUS, of Alabama, has had, perhaps with one exception, the longest and most distinguished career of any member of the committee. He became a lawyer in his youth, was an officer in the Mexican war, a judge before the civil war, a major when he entered that war, and at its close a brigadier-general. Although possessing in the highest degree the respect and confidence of all the people of Alabama, yet he always refused to hold political office until he was chosen to this Senate four years ago. His integrity, his intellectual strength, his independence of thought and action, never have been impeached during the whole course of his prolonged life. Did the chairman unduly influence his decision against the validity of the election of Senator Clark?

Senator THOMAS B. TURLEY, of Tennessee, became a lawyer at an early age, served as a soldier during the civil war, and has practiced law all his life. He never held any civil office until he came to the Senate in 1897. Probably no Senator in this body has a clearer or sounder idea what is correct practice in judicial or semijudicial inquiry, or what is a just judicial conclusion. Doubtless he is as little likely as any Senator who ever served in this Chamber to be influenced to a decision against his well-considered judgment upon any question pending before him. Did the chairman substitute his own opinion in the Montana case for the real opinion of this Senator?

Senator DONELSON CAFFERY, of Louisiana, was educated as a lawyer, served in the Southern army, after the war practiced law, has been a member of a constitutional convention and of the senate in his own State, and has been a United States Senator since 1893. Those who know that Senator as well as do all his present associates will consider him as perhaps the last man in this Senate to tolerate or yield to pressure upon him to adopt an opinion of the correctness of which he was unconvinced. Did the chairman of the committee force him to the adoption of the positive conclusions which he expressed at the end of the Montana investigation?

Senator LOUIS E. MCCOMAS, of Maryland, received a college education, was admitted to the bar in 1868, practiced law until 1892, was a member of the House of Representatives during four Congresses, became an associate justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia in 1892, and took his seat in this Senate in 1899. The accuracy of his legal knowledge and the value of his legal judgments have been asserted, to my knowledge, by the ablest lawyers in the Senate. Did the chairman succeed in imposing his opinion in the Montana case upon the learned Senator from Maryland?

Senator J. C. PRITCHARD, of North Carolina, was a newspaper editor in his youth and afterwards a lawyer; was repeatedly a member of the North Carolina legislature; has always been prominent in the political life of his State, and entered this Senate in 1897. Although the youngest member of the committee, no one who knows his mental strength and force will dare to say that he accepted the judgment of any other person for his own in the decision which he made as to the weight of the evidence in the Montana case.

Senator J. C. BURROWS, of Michigan, is a lawyer by profession; served in the Union army; has been a prosecuting attorney in his home county; served as a Representative in eight Congresses; became United States Senator in 1895, and has been once reelected. His legal experience and his long familiarity with semijudicial questions arising in Congressional service make him as sure as any Senator in this body to reach and to adhere to his own conclusions upon all questions before the Committee on Privileges and Elections, of which he will soon be chairman. Was he induced by the present chairman to make a decision in the Montana case against his own deliberate judgment?

Senator GEORGE F. HOAR'S legal attainments, judicial temper, and conscientious desire for right official action no more need description from me than do the well-known events of his long and honorable career as a lawyer and as a legislator during four terms in the House of Representatives and as a United States Senator since 1877. Like all the other members of the committee, he gave unremitting attention during the many weeks of the investigation, participated actively in the interlocutory conferences and decisions of the committee, and supported without hesitation every act of the committee during the course of its proceedings. Did the chairman of the committee, or any of his suggestions, have the slightest influence in forming the opinion given by the Senator from Massachusetts, that Senator Clark's election was null and void by reason of proven briberies, attempted briberies, and violations of the Montana statutes?

Ex-Senator Clark and some of his friends have been persistent ever since the 10th day of April, 1900, in attributing to the chairman of the committee an influence in bringing about a decision adverse to Mr. Clark which the chairman never possessed. The decision was carefully and deliberately made by the whole committee, and is to-day adhered to by everyone of them. It would, indeed, be a cause of pride in me if I could think that I had such influence over my friendly associates upon the committee as that which is ascribed to me; but the notion is a mistaken one, and Senator Clark stands arraigned before the country of the crimes charged against him, not by the chairman of the committee alone, but by everyone of the eight other members—distinguished and honored and honorable and impartial Senators, my association with whom I shall always consider as among the most helpful and pleasant experiences of my life.

Mr. President, if the character throughout this country of the foregoing Senators is not sufficient to stamp the accusations as true which Senator Clark did not venture to meet in this Senate, let us consider the facts as they appear from the testimony and the report. In order to understand the conditions in Montana on January 28, 1899, when Mr. Clark was chosen Senator, it is necessary to consider the political history of the State from its admission ten years before. Mr. Clark was then a rich man and has grown richer ever since through fortunate mining enterprises, his property being variously estimated as from fifty to seventy-five millions. His son, Charles W. Clark, his active and ever-present agent in all his political adventures, swore before the committee that he personally had an annual income of $250,000, which would make him worth at least $5,000,000. From 1889 to 1899 Mr. Clark's connection with politics was mainly the spending of vast quantities of his money in corrupting and attempting to control the politics of Montana.

There are six chapters in the history of his pursuit of a United States Senatorship. The first was in 1889–90, when there were two legislatures and the Democratic legislature elected him and Mr. Maginnis as his colleague, and the Republican legislature elected Messrs. Sanders and Powers, who were admitted to their seats in the Senate. The second was in 1892–93, when the legislature was so close that no Senators were elected.

The third was in 1894–95, when the legislature was Republican and Senator CARTER was chosen, Mr. Clark being the Democratic candidate before the legislature. The fourth was in 1898–99, when Mr. Clark was elected, but abandoned his seat at the close of the recent Senatorial inquiry. The fifth was in 1900, when Lieutenant-Governor Spriggs undertook to appoint Mr. Clark as Senator to fill the vacancy which existed after he left the Chamber. The sixth was in 1900–1901, as the result of which he was elected on January 16, 1901.

CHAPTER I.

Mr. Clark had been a candidate for Delegate in 1888 and was defeated by Mr. CARTER by 5,126 plurality. The election in 1889 was the first after the State was admitted into the Union, and ex-Governor Hauser has testified that in connection with this election the big four, so-called, consisting of himself and Senator Clark and two others, gave as first contributions $40,000 each. The result of the election was very close. A Democratic governor was chosen by 576 plurality, a Republican lieutenant-governor by 1,566, a Republican secretary of state by 1,755, and Mr. CARTER, Republican, Congressman, over Mr. Maginnis, by 1,648.

The Republicans organized a legislature with 38 Republican members present and 32 Democratic members entitled to admission. The Democrats organized a legislature of 37 Democrats. The Democratic legislature was created by means of members from Silver Bow County, which the Democrats claimed to have carried by a small majority, created by counting the votes at precint No. 34, which were returned 3 Republican, 171 Democratic. The Republicans claimed that these votes were cast by workmen on a railroad who had no right to vote and were mainly unnaturalized citizens. The history of this case is fully reported in the records of the Senate of the first session Fifty-first Congress, Taft's Senate Election Cases, page 631, and as the result of a contest Messrs. Wilbur F. Sanders and Thomas C. Power were, on April 16, 1890, admitted against the claims of Messrs. William A. Clark and Martin Maginnis.

CHAPTER II.

Mr. Clark's next effort was in 1892 and 1893. President Harrison carried the State by about 1,300 majority—18,851 against 17,581 for Mr. Cleveland. The Republican candidates for governor and Representative in Congress were elected by smaller majorities, but the Republicans, owing to the expenditure of money by Senator Clark, failed to carry the legislature, which had 33 Republican members, 35 Democratic members, and 3 members of the Populist party. The Democrats and Populists were unable to agree upon a United States Senator, and although Senator Clark was a persistent candidate, voted for in the legislature many weeks, there was a failure to elect.

CHAPTER III.

The next candidacy of Mr. Clark was after the election of 1894, when the Republicans carried the State overwhelmingly, there being 57 Republican members as against 25 for all others, Senators CARTER and Mantle being elected without a contest.

CHAPTER IV.

Mr. Clark's fourth candidacy for the Senate was in 1898–99, his election being that which has been recently investigated by the Senate, with facts disclosed as follows:

THE PREPARATION.

In the summer of 1898, after Mr. Clark had consulted with Governor Hauser and other supporters, a committee of his friends was created outside the State committee of the Democratic party, which was in the hands of persons not favorable to him; this, his committee, being organized for the purpose of controlling the politics of the State and securing the legislature to meet in January, 1899. This committee consisted of his son, Charles W. Clark, William McDermott, and A. J. Davidson, agent.

Charles W. Clark was made treasurer, and the assistants of the committee were John B. Wellcome, Walter M. Bickford, A. J. Steele, John S. M. Neill, Frank E. Corbett, E. L. Whitmore, and Walter Cooper. To this committee Senator Clark gave unlimited authority to expend money which he agreed to furnish, an estimate, however, being made that at least $35,000 would be necessary to secure the State convention, and that $75,000 might be needed to secure the State legislature.

The story of this plan for unlimited expenditure was told on oath unblushingly and boldly by Governor Hauser and Mr. Clark.

THE EXPENDITURES.

In the canvass which ensued the approximate expenditures admitted by the various members of his committee and their assistants were as follows: By Charles W. Clark, $25,000; by McDermott, $22,000; by Davidson, agent, $22,000; by Wellcome, $25,000; by Steele, $11,000; by Corbett, $5,000; by Whitmore, $4,000; by Cooper, $2,900, mainly furnished by Charles W. Clark; and the amount of these expenditures Senator Clark himself paid to his son. The advances and payments made by Senator Clark to his committee and agents, as admitted by him, amounted to about $139,000, of which sum Charles W. Clark received from him on August 12, 1898, $35,000; October 17, $20,000; November 23, $40,000, and February 13, 1900, $20,592; and in addition to this $139,000 Senator Clark paid $5,000 to McDermott, one of his agents; $5,000 to Wellcome, his attorney, and $5,000 to E. C. Day, a member of the legislature.

THE PURCHASE OF M'LAUGHLIN.

In December, 1898, Senator Clark began negotiations with one H. W. McLaughlin, a member of the legislature, for the purchase of his wood lots and sawmills, and on the 9th day of December bought all Mr. McLaughlin's property for the sum of $24,684, paying $10,000 down, and on the 12th of March paid him $8,000 cash and $8,684 in stock of a new lumber company to which the property was transferred, which lumber company employed Mr. McLaughlin as its agent, with a salary of $200 per month.

THE PURCHASE OF WOODS.

On December 31, 1898, Mr. Walter M. Bickford received from Mr. Charles W. Clark five $1,000 bills and four $500 bills, and went to Missoula for the purpose of purchasing a supposed indebtedness on account of his ranch of one E. P. Woods, a member of the legislature, but, not succeeding in meeting Mr. Woods, he returned the money to Mr. Charles W. Clark. In February, 1899, Mr. Massena Bullard paid to Mr. Kemper the amount due upon the ranch and a deed was made running to Mrs. Woods, which was not recorded, but in January, 1900, the property having been sold to other persons for $9,750, the deed to Mrs. Woods was destroyed and new deeds made to the new purchasers.

Senator Clark knew of Mr. Bickford's attempts to purchase the indebtedness which Woods owed, and the correspondence shows that the object was to secure Mr. Woods's vote for Senator Clark. Mr. Bickford testified: "In pursuance of that letter (the letter of November 21 from one Ector) and of the invitation which I at that time received, I made arrangements to obtain, for the purpose of using it to prevent the indebtedness of Mr. Woods going into the hands of Mr. Daly's friends, the sum of $7,000 with which to take up that indebtedness." On November 12, 1898, Mrs. Woods mortgaged their sheep and cattle for $1,000, payable in one year, and on April 22, 1899, paid the mortgage debt. Mr. Woods has left Montana and gone to New Mexico.

THE CORRUPTING OF TIERNEY, EVERSOLE, AND SHOVLIN.

Mr. W. E. Tierney was senator and W. C. Eversole and Michael Shovlin were representatives from Broadwater County. Mr. Tierney voted for Mr. Clark on the first ballot, and Eversole and Shovlin came over on the sixth. Mr. Tierney was a dealer in general merchandise in three small firms—Miss A. M. Darcy & Co., Tierney & Co., and Eversole & Co.—which had moderate capital and were in debt. After the legislature adjourned, on March 3, Mr. Shovlin deposited $8,500 in the Montana National Bank. Eversole, who had in fact been only a clerk, bought out Mr. Tierney, paying him $1,600 in cash and a credit with his new firm of $3,000.

On June 1 Mr. Tierney organized the State Bank of Townsend with a capital stock of $25,000, of which he took $5,800. Mr. Shovlin took $1,000 and Mr. Eversole $1,000, nearly all the $25,000 passing through Mr. Tierney's hands in currency. His $5,800 he says he took from the money drawer in a safe in the office of Miss Darcy & Co., but whence this $5,800 came he did not show by any writing whatever.

THE PURCHASE OF WARNER.

Mr. E. L. Whitmore, the confidential agent and employee of Mr. Charles W. Clark, purchased of D. G. Warner, a member of the legislature, certain lots in the town of Boulder, Jefferson County, and a small ranch near by and took the deed in his own name, paying the amount of $7,500 in bank bills in Helena in the first week of January, 1899, the deed being recorded February 1, 1899. Mr. Warner left Montana and went to California.

THE CORRUPTING OF H. H. GARR.

Mr. H. H. Garr, member of the legislature, lodged a package during the session with Mr. Peeler, of the bank of Kalispell. After the legislature adjourned he obtained the package, went to his home, and in the name of Miss Wickham, his wife's aunt, a milliner, who had lived with him for seven years, purchased a ranch for $3,500, for which he paid in currency, including a thousand-dollar bill, which money he said he obtained from his wife's aunt, believing she had accumulated and kept it in a box in her room in his house.

Mr. Garr had been a poor man, with little or no property, earning sometimes $50 or $75 a month as a notary public, sometimes nothing. He had in cash $75 or $80 when elected, and borrowed $25 to go to Helena with. His wife's aunt paid board in the family at the rate of $2.50 a week. He had no previous knowledge of how she had accumulated this money. Mr. Steele had obtained interviews with him before the legislature met, with a view to securing his vote, and after his arrival he figured in the Whiteside exposure.

THE CORRUPTING OF GEIGER.

Mr. John H. Geiger was a Republican who, after Mr. Whiteside's exposure, was seated in the legislature as a senator, in place of Mr. Whiteside, on the 26th day of January, by the votes of the Republicans and the Democratic supporters of Senator Clark, on the ground that his name on a few of his ballots had been marked at the wrong end, and on the 28th Mr. Geiger voted for Senator Clark. He was a man with no regular occupation, was entirely without means, and a borrower of small sums. During the session of the legislature he received and carried home with him $3,600. After accounting for one or two petty sums, he claims that he obtained this money by faro gambling and through $1,100 in bills which he found in his room and believed came in connection with some bills pending in the legislature which Mr. John B. Wellcome was carrying through as attorney.

THE PAYMENT TO FINE.

Mr. B. F. Fine, a member of the legislature, and a mining operator with no property, in May after it had adjourned, in pursuance of an agreement made during the session by Senator Clark after his election as Senator, received $2,000 from Senator Clark's bankers, and since that date has received other moneys, making the sum of $5,000 in all, which has been all his earnings since his nomination, his only business being the hunting up of testimony to disbar or impeach Mr. W. A. Clark, of Madison County, one of the principal witnesses against Senator Clark, to do which no steps have yet been taken.

THE PURCHASE OF BYWATER.

Mr. Stephen Bywater, a Republican, 30 years of age, and a railroad conductor, voted for Mr. Clark for the first time on the eighteenth ballot, when he was elected. On the 3d day of March, immediately after the legislature adjourned, he deposited in the Montana National Bank $15,000. He accounts for it by saying that he brought from Kalispell, his home, $6,000, which he kept with him during the whole session of the legislature, and by saying that he received on March 3 $9,000 from his brother for the purchase of stock in a mining company in British Columbia, but he produced no writing in confirmation of his statement as to either the $6,000 or the $9,000.

THE PAYMENT TO LAWYER E. C. DAY.

Mr. E. C. Day was Senator Clark's candidate for speaker and was defeated in the Democratic caucus, receiving 25 votes against 30 votes for Mr. Stiff. Mr. Day was the leader of Mr. Clark's forces in the legislature during all the ballotings after the second. On February 13 Senator Clark personally wrote a letter directing that $5,000 should be given to Mr. Day for his services in the legislature and as a retainer as counsel in the future. This amount was received by Mr. Day through Mr. Wellcome and Mr. Davidson on the 3d day of March, the day after the legislature adjourned.

Mr. Day testified that the services for which he received the $5,000 were as follows: "I had acted as the manager, you might say, or leader of his forces upon the floor of the house. I attended to keeping a quorum present and seeing that friends of his were sent for that were not present at roll call, and made motions and attended to the ordinary parliamentary—perhaps you would call it—procedure of his friends in that body." Later Mr. Day received from Charles W. Clark $2,000 as fees in the Wellcome proceedings and $1,000 in two suits brought by Mr. Whiteside against the Butte Miner and the Helena Independent.

In reference to this case of Mr. E. C. Day, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that Senator Clark endeavored deliberately, while on oath, to deceive the committee when he testified before the committee, in answer to questions, as follows (page 1828):

Mr. FAULKNER. Please state to the committee, if you have the information, all the items of political expenditure made by you from the 1st day of August, 1898, to the 1st day of September, 1899.

Senator CLARK. I have a schedule of all the payments made by me for political purposes during that time.

Mr. FAULKNER. That is what I ask for.

Senator Clark produces the papers.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. Chairman, shall I read this?

The CHAIRMAN. I think you had better do so, Senator Clark. Yes.

Senator CLARK (reading). "Disbursements made by W. A. Clark for political purposes from August 1, 1898, to September 1, 1899. August 12, 1898, C. W. Clark, $35,000; October 17, 1898, C. W. Clark, $20,000; October 20, 1898, Walter Cooper, $200. I am somewhat in doubt as to that being for political purposes, and I would like the privilege of recalling it if I find I am mistaken about it."

And so Senator Clark went on with all the items, closing with—

"July 31, 1899, C. W. Clark, $950. I have not added this up to get the total of it, but that can be done."

There was not included in this statement a sum of $5,000 which had been paid to Mr. William McDermott, as Mr. McDermott had testified.

The testimony proceeds, page 1829:

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Clark, was the $5,000 which was given to William McDermott paid by you or by somebody else?

Senator CLARK. It was paid by me, but that was simply a gift, and I did not put it down because I did not consider it was for any political purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you think it was for?

Senator CLARK. Mr. McDermott had been a very warm personal friend of mine for many years. He never would accept any compensation for anything. He spent about eight months of his time, when he began to organize the State down to the end of the disbarment proceedings, without any compensation, of course losing time; and I urged upon him, against his own inclination, the acceptance of $5,000, which I thought was a very small compensation for the work which this man had done for me.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, you may mention any other donations of a like character which you made during that period in addition to these payments which you have made, and the donation of $5,000 to William McDermott.

Senator CLARK. I made a donation to Mr. John B. Wellcome for the same reason.

The CHAIRMAN. How much?

Senator CLARK. Five thousand dollars; and a donation to Mr. E. C. Day, who had done a great deal of work for me, and was a warm and steadfast friend, and was retained to attend to any political work that we might have to do. He has been in my employ more or less ever since.

The CHAIRMAN. How much did you give him?

Senator CLARK. Five thousand dollars.

The CHAIRMAN. These are all you remember, are they?

Senator CLARK. Those are all that I can remember; yes, sir; those three donations.

Senator BURROWS. Are those on that paper?

Senator CLARK. They are not on that paper.

The CHAIRMAN. If they were political they would go on the end of it.

Senator CLARK. Yes, sir; I would not consider them political at all, because it was entirely apart from and after my election to the Senate, and had nothing to do with it, except as to the work they performed. I did not consider that political or I should have put it down.

It is perfectly clear from the foregoing facts that Senator Clark meant, if possible, to conceal from the committee the fact that he had paid his principal floor manager in the legislature $5,000 for his services. The fact never had been known before by anyone except the parties to the transaction. The pretense used as an excuse for not disclosing the payment to Mr. Day as a part of the statement of all Mr. Clark's payments for political purposes, namely, that the payments to McDermott, Wellcome, and Day were not political, is utterly absurd.

THE CORRUPTING OF BEASLEY.

Mr. W. W. Beasley, a Republican representative, first voted for Senator Clark on the eighteenth ballot, when he was chosen, and that night or the next night he left Helena for St. Paul, having in his possession about $5,000 in currency, at least $1,000 of which was a thousand-dollar bill. He claimed that he had taken this money with him to Helena and carried it in his vest pocket during the whole session. By no writing did he show whence he received it or what he did with it. He claimed that he kept the money with him because he was in embarrassed circumstances in the sheep business and was afraid of lawsuits. When he was elected he owed a board bill of nearly $400, and while in Helena took out a life-insurance policy and gave a note for the premium. All the time he had a bank account in the Thomas Cruse Savings Bank at Helena.

Upon the foregoing admitted and undisputed facts, with their attendant circumstances standing alone, the committee reported that they made their finding that Senator Clark's pretended election was null and void on account of briberies, attempted briberies, and corrupt practices, of which he was to be charged with knowledge. He had received 54 votes and there were 39 against him, leaving him an apparent majority of 15. If he obtained through illegal and corrupt practices 8 votes which would otherwise have been cast against him, he was not legally elected. More than this number of votes, the committee found from all the evidence, was thus obtained. The committee also stated that their judgment was strengthened by many additional facts outlined in their report, some of which I will now narrate:

THE $30,000 DEPOSITED FOR STATE SENATORS CLARK, MYERS, AND WHITESIDE, AND FOR REPRESENTATIVE GARR.

The case of W. A. Clark, State senator from Madison County, is one of those embraced in the Whiteside exposure. Mr. Clark and Mr. Whiteside testified that Mr. Wellcome placed $10,000 in an envelope and handed it to Mr. Whiteside, Mr. Clark's initials being written by the latter on the back of the envelope, the amount to be delivered to Mr. Clark in case he voted for Senator Clark. This money was part of the $30,000 produced by Mr. Whiteside before the legislative committee.

State Senator H. L. Myers testified that in like manner $10,000 was placed in an envelope, upon the back of which he wrote his initials, and the package was retained by Mr. Whiteside to be delivered to him in case he voted for Mr. Clark. Mr. Whiteside testified that the $10,000 was furnished by Mr. Wellcome. Mr. M. L. Hewett testified that Mr. Charles W. Clark authorized the payment of $10,000 to Myers.

As to Representative H. H. Garr, Mr. Whiteside testified that in like manner $5,000 was furnished him by Mr. Wellcome for Mr. Garr and placed in an envelope, on the back of which Mr. Garr wrote his initials, Mr. Whiteside retaining the package as in the other two cases. Mr. Garr admits seeing the money and writing his name upon the back of the envelope, but says it was for purposes of identification, and that he did not know what the transaction meant.

Mr. Whiteside, who was a State senator, testified that in like manner $5,000 was given to him by Mr. Wellcome as part of $10,000 which he was to receive for his vote for Senator Clark, which he placed in an envelope and later produced before the legislative committee. The lapse of time only confirms my conviction that Mr. Whiteside's testimony was substantially true in all particulars. I know when the legislature met Mr. Clark had the utmost confidence in Mr. Whiteside and refused to have his faith in him in any way impaired. The bank bills which constituted the $30,000 were nearly all $1,000 bills, and the evidence showed that Mr. Clark's committee was in possession of numerous $1,000 bills.

The five $1,000 bills and four $500 bills which Mr. Bickford took from C. W. Clark and carried to Missoula on December 31, in connection with the E. P. Woods transaction, were returned to Mr. C. W. Clark on January 1, and during the ensuing week, when the alleged briberies were attempted, large sums in currency were in the hands of Mr. C. W. Clark and Mr. Wellcome, including various $1,000 bills.

Mr. C. W. Clark, on January 3, had brought to him by a Mr. Hirshfield $9,000 in currency, in which were three $1,000 bills, and from this $9,000, or the money returned by Mr. Bickford, he gave Mr. Wellcome three or four $1,000 bills. On December 28 Mr. Wellcome drew from bank $10,000, of which he says one, two, three, four, or five were $1,000 bills, and he carried them in the inside pocket of his vest until he used them. There were on the 3d or 4th of January three $1,000 bills and eight $500 bills in the possession of Mr. Whitmore, Mr. Charles W. Clark's confidential agent in the purchase of D. G. Warner's property.

Concerning the bringing of the $1,000 bills from Butte to Helena, Mr. Whiteside, before the grand jury (p. 14), said:

Mr. Wellcome said they had hustled for large-sized bills, but that the old man (referring to W. A. Clark) was coming from Butte that evening and that he would bring a supply. When he did come, that night, in one of those cases the money was paid over.

This statement is also alluded to on pages 177, 185, and 215 of the testimony before the committee. On page 202 of the testimony before the committee this appears:

Senator MCCOMAS. I should like to ask one question of the witness. You have detailed this transaction between Mr. Wellcome and Senator Clark, of Madison, and in the room of Senator Clark, of Butte, United States Senator. How long prior thereto had you last seen Senator Clark, of Butte?

Mr. WHITESIDE. As I remember it now, I had seen him in the evening, a few hours before that, as he came into the hotel with a valise in his hand, if I remember rightly.

THE APPROACH TO THE SUPREME COURT.

The undisputed facts are as follows:

Proceedings having been instituted against John B. Wellcome for the purpose of securing his disbarment for attempted bribery in connection with Senator Clark's election, it appears that on August 5, 1899, after a preliminary decision by the supreme court that the court had jurisdiction, one Dr. William Treacy, a Republican advocate of Senator Clark, at Helena, approached Mr. Justice William H. Hunt, one of the three members of the supreme court, being his family physician, bearing a proposition which he said was from a party in town that Judge Hunt could have $100,000 if the court would dismiss the proceedings against Mr. Wellcome, and he advised Judge Hunt to accept the amount.

This proposition was first mentioned to Judge Hunt about noon. At half past 10 in the forenoon a special train had arrived from Butte bringing Charles W. Clark, Frank E. Corbett, and E. L. Whitmore, who went to the Helena Club, where, during the day, they saw Mr. John S. M. Neill, Mr. Davidson, Mr. Steele, Mr. Steve Carpenter, and Mr. Thomas Miller. They said they came to see Mr. B. Platt Carpenter, to induce him to put in an answer for Wellcome in the proceedings pending, and they returned in their special train to Butte in the afternoon, after Mr. Corbett had also had an interview with Mr. Justice Pigott, narratives of which were given to the committee by both parties thereto.

On three occasions Dr. Treacy approached Attorney-General C. B. Nolan, who was in charge of the proceedings against Mr. Wellcome, and proposed to him to accept $100,000 and dismiss the proceedings.

During the pendency of the proceedings against Mr. Wellcome Rev. A. B. Martin, president of a school at Great Falls, Mont., in which Senator Clark and Chief Justice Brantley were trustees, visited the chief justice with a letter in his hand dated October 7, 1899, from Senator Clark, wherein the latter urged him to see the chief justice and endeavor to prevent the disbarment of "that splendid man," John B. Wellcome.

THE MONTANA CORRUPT PRACTICES ACT.

Now, I wish to call earnest attention to a point which has not been hitherto sufficiently considered by the Senate and the country, and to which, I believe, controlling instead of partial weight should have been given by the Committee on Privileges and Elections in the late investigation. In the legislature of 1895, by which the present Senator CARTER was chosen, the State of Montana, in order to protect her people against such corruptions as had characterized the campaigns in that State prior to that date, passed a stringent law against corrupt practices in elections which law would have protected the State against the corruptions of 1888 and 1889 if it had been obeyed, and certainly would have prevented the corruptions of 1900 and 1901 if the law had been properly regarded and enforced by the present Senate, and Senator Clark's seat had been vacated when he appeared before the committee and admitted that he had deliberately defied that law by the expenditure of a vast sum of money, contrary to its provisions, and that he and his agents had willfully refused to make any returns as required by the law.

This Montana law of February 25, 1895, limited in purpose and amount the political expenditures which could be made in any election, either by a political committee or a candidate, especially naming a candidate for United States Senator, who could not give more than $1,000 to any one committee in one county and could not pay more than $1,000 for his personal expenses in lawful ways specified, and provided that every political committee should make a public return of its expenditures, stating from whom every dollar was received and to whom every dollar was paid, and that every person acting otherwise than under a political committee should make a similar public return, and further provided a fine and imprisonment against persons omitting to make the return required by law.

A concise but correct and complete analysis of this law of 1895 is as follows:

The Montana Penal Code, in Title IV, headed "Crimes against the elective franchise," in section 85 of the act of February 25, 1895, provides that no person, to aid in his election to a public office, shall, directly or indirectly, by himself or through another person, expend or promise to expend any money or other valuable thing, except, as later provided, "for personal expenses and to a political committee."

Section 86 provides that a candidate may pay—

(1) His own personal expenses for traveling and purposes properly incidental to traveling.
(2) For sending out special publications giving his position and views.
(3) For stationery and postage, telegraph and telephone and other public messenger service, and other petty personal expenses. "And in no other case whatever" shall the total sum for his own personal expenses as authorized exceed the sum of $1,000 by any candidate for United States Senator.

Section 87 provides that a candidate may pay money to a political committee, not exceeding $1,000 by a candidate for United States Senator, nor to more than one committee in any county.

Section 88 applies the term "political committee" to "any combination of persons" who shall aid a party, principle, or candidate, and every such committee or combination must have a treasurer, who shall keep its accounts.

Section 90 requires every treasurer to file his account within thirty days after an election, stating in detail his receipts and expenditures.

Section 91 requires every person who, acting otherwise than under the authority of a committee, expends money to file such a statement as is required of a treasurer "in the county in which he is a legal voter."

Section 98 requires every statement to be made on oath.

Section 104 punishes violations of sections 90 and 91 by fine not exceeding $1,000 and imprisonment for not more than three months.

After the passage in 1895 of this law punishing crimes against the elective franchise there was no serious occasion to test its provisions until 1898. In 1896 the coalition of the Silver Republicans with the Democrats made the State overwhelmingly Democratic, the plurality for Mr. Bryan being 32,043, and for Mr. Hartman, the Bryan Congressman, 24,503. In 1898, when Senator Clark renewed his canvass for the United States Senate, and his friends determined to directly disregard the law, he had no right to expend more than $1,000 through his one committee, nor more than $1,000 for his own personal expenses.

The failure to comply with the law is stated in the report in two separate paragraphs, the first as follows:

None of the members of his committee or their assistants made the sworn returns required by law, nor did Senator Clark himself make any return.

The second statement is made thus:

He expended a sum vastly in excess of the limit provided by law, and failed to render any return; and no such return was made by the aforesaid persons acting in his behalf.

On the other hand, returns were made, as appears in the book of testimony, by the Republican State committee of expenditures of $4,291.31, by the Democratic State committee of $9,161.49, by the Silver Republican State committee of $1,708.25, by the People's Party State committee of $1,193.50, by the Silverbow County Democratic committee of $10,005.06, by the Silverbow County Silver Republican committee of $1,453.05.

Mr. Marcus Daly testified that he contributed to the State committee $4,500, to the Silverbow County committee $2,500, to the Deer Lodge County committee $500, to the Missoula County committee $250; making his total contributions $7,750. Mr. Daly was not a candidate and has never been a candidate for any office. Mr. W. G. Conrad, who was the principal opposing Democratic candidate for United States Senator against Mr. Clark, swore that he contributed to the State and various county committees between $5,000 and $10,000, not over $1,000 to any one committee, and after the election he spent between $200 and $300 outside of hotel bills; but paid no money in aid of his candidacy for Senator.

In view of the foregoing precise and stringent provisions of the Montana corrupt practices act, which had been carefully drawn and deliberately passed in order to prevent Senator William A. Clark from corrupting the elections of the State, the moment it appeared before the Committee on Privileges and Elections that Senator Clark, who had the right to spend only $1,000 for personal expenses, and not exceeding $1,000 in each county in the State, which would have made at the most $25,000, not only by his own admission expended over $150,000 and made no return whatever, and that his chosen committee had made no return, the committee should have considered the case as ended, and should have reported to the Senate that, no matter what the apparent result in the legislature was, Senator Clark had not been chosen Senator in accordance with the laws of the State of Montana.

The committee should have treated the failure of Senator Clark and his committee to make returns under the statute as conclusive evidence of corruption and should have made a report that his apparent election was null and void. This view of the law I will not enlarge upon, but submit it with the utmost confidence to the lawyers of the Senate as a sound position which could have been safely adopted by the Senate and ought to govern in every case of such a nature. It is this:

That the Senate and the committee are not bound to go forward and make a long and weary investigation in order to test the truth of allegations of corruption when the truth or the falsity of the charges may be instantly apparent if the indispensable returns of expenditures are made in obedience to the law of the State.

CHAPTER V.

The fifth effort of Senator Clark to obtain admission to the Senate was under an appointment from Lieutenant-Governor Spriggs. It will be remembered by the Senators that Senator Clark, after delivering a valedictory, abandoned his seat on May 15, 1900. He had sent to Montana a resignation with a blank date, which was held by his son Charles, to be deposited with Lieutenant-Governor Spriggs whenever the conspirators should be informed that Governor Robert B. Smith had been enticed out of the State, so that the lieutenant-governor could lawfully act. Senator Clark carefully timed his farewell speech and his departure from the Senate according to the plans of his Montana coadjutors.

Governor Smith was induced by Thomas Hinds, one of Senator Clark's employees, to go to California on legal business. At the right moment Lieutenant-Governor Spriggs was recalled from Sioux Falls, where he had gone to attend a Populist convention. Shortly before or shortly after Senator Clark delivered his parting oration his resignation was dated and handed to the lieutenant-governor, and the latter signed an appointment of Mr. Clark as Senator to fill the vacancy which it was learned by telegraph he had endeavored to create by retiring from the Senate. Governor Smith, learning of the deceit which had been practiced upon him, hastened back to Montana, and on May 18, 1900, appointed Martin Maginnis to fill the vacant seat in the Senate, and the governor also sent to the President of the Senate a telegram, as follows:

BUTTE, MONT., May 18, 1900.

SIR: This will inform you and the Senate of the United States that, on account of collusion and fraud by Hon. W. A. Clark in resigning and securing an appointment to the Senate by the lieutenant-governor, I have this day disregarded and revoked said appointment by the lieutenant-governor and have this day appointed Hon. Martin Maginnis, of Montana, United States Senator to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Hon. W. A. Clark. His credentials will be forwarded in due course.

ROBT. B. SMITH,
Governor of Montana.

Hon. WILLIAM P. FRYE,
President of the United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

The two certificates of appointment, one by Lieutenant-Governor Spriggs of Mr. Clark and the other by Governor Smith of Mr. Maginnis, were presented to the Senate, and an effort has been made by the Committee on Privileges and Elections at the present session to secure an investigation into the truthfulness of the allegations made by Governor Smith in the foregoing telegram and also into the question of the legality of Mr. Clark's appointment, but all efforts to secure authority to make an investigation has been resisted by Senatorial friends of Senator Clark, and he has never appeared here to claim his seat under the appointment of the lieutenant-governor.

CHAPTER VI.

Such being the strange political history of Mr. Clark's five advances toward the United States Senate prior to the summer of 1900, and of his brief sojourn therein, let us consider the events which have since transpired—his sixth attempt. He had ended his fourth effort of money spending to further his political ambitions by obtaining an illegal and corrupt temporary lodgment in the Senate and by running away from it in disgrace and dishonor, not daring to meet open debate upon the issue between himself and the committee upon the floor of the Senate, either himself or through any Senators who were willing to espouse his cause.

He had not ventured to appear to claim his seat under the appointment given by Lieutenant-Governor Spriggs after Governor Robert B. Smith had been, by a trick of Mr. Clark's agent, Thomas Hinds, enticed out of the State. But he still possessed his enormous wealth, and he and his agents had learned how to be cunning in its expenditure—what methods to avoid and what methods to adopt and pursue. What has he accomplished since? On this point pains have been taken to keep me carefully advised. On the evening of November 6 I received the following telegram:

BUTTE, MONT., November 6, 1900.

W. E. CHANDLER, Concord, N. H.:
Montana is vindicated to-night.

WILLIAM A. CLARK, Jr.

Since that date I have received the following telegram:

BUTTE, MONT., January 16, 1901.

Our people congratulate themselves over the general result, both in New Hampshire and Montana. How does it suit you?

BUTTE COMMITTEE.

On the 11th day of January, 1901, the Helena Independent published the information that I had failed of a renomination as Senator in New Hampshire under the heading, "One scoundrel is disposed of."

If it appeared that Mr. Neill was a man of independent means, it would be reasonable to suppose that he told the truth when he said that he spent his own money in an effort to elect Mr. Clark to the Senate, but the records of the Comptroller of the Currency's office show just the opposite to be the fact. Between the time he made the supposed disbursements out of his own funds for Mr. Clark and the time he testified to that effect Neill, as shown by the records of the Comptroller's office, made a settlement for $1,000 of a large claim due and owing from him to the Merchants' National Bank of Helena. That bank was in the hands of a receiver. Neill was one of its debtors to the amount of about $70,000.

He settled with the receiver of the bank, the receiver states, by threatening to go through bankruptcy unless the thousand dollars should be accepted in full settlement. He said to the receiver that his expenses of going through bankruptcy would be about $1,000, and that he would pay that amount to the receiver instead of paying it for his expenses in the bankruptcy process. He made his settlement upon the ground that he was an insolvent man and entitled to the benefit of the bankruptcy act. He had received in principal and interest $70,000 of the money of the depositors in that bank. He paid back $1,000.

This Helena Independent is the newspaper of John S. M. Neill, who was one of Senator Clark's agents in corrupting the legislature of 1899, whose paper was then mortgaged to Senator Clark for $25,000, and who, as the agent of Senator Clark, on the evening of August 4, 1899, telephoned from Helena to Frank E. Corbett, in Butte, to come over to Helena because he believed that they could do business with the supreme court. Senator Clark is as much morally responsible for the heading in Mr. Neill's paper as if he had written it himself.

Mr. Neill also had a record as surveyor-general in Montana. Mr. A. R. Greene, inspector of the General Land Office, on May 7, 1898, made a report to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, supplemental to a prior report of June 3, 1897, concerning the administration of the surveyor-general's office at Helena, under Mr. Neill. The report is lengthy. It sets out that—

Surveyor-General Neill rendered no equivalent service to the Government for the salary he received and neglected his duties in the most scandalous manner. He also deliberately entered upon and throughout his term maintained a policy of speculation and fraud in the management of his office. * * * Almost every account I have examined is tainted with the odor of corruption.

Then follow the details through many pages. The conclusion is as follows:

Summing up the matter, I conclude that the following amount, unlawfully expended for unnecessary clerk hire and obtained on fictitious and forged vouchers, should be charged back to John S. M. Neill:

Clerk hire	$16,023.91
Contingent fund, as itemized on pages 41 and 42 of inspector's report.	566.60
Total	16,590.51

Neill has had his day. It is time the Government was reimbursed for the funds he has absorbed. I recommend that John S. M. Neill be prosecuted on his bond for the amounts above shown to have been wrongfully taken and that criminal proceedings be instituted against him and Edward D. Neill and Samuel McMurran for making false certificates, for fraud, and forgery. As they have been confederates in crime, so they should be companions in prison.

Very respectfully,

A. R. GREENE, Inspector.

Proceeding further to inquire how Senator Clark has secured another election to the Senate as the result of his sixth attempt, upon which he will seek to enter this body on Monday next, it is first to be said that it is notorious throughout Montana that his expenditures, or those of his son, Charles W. Clark, in connection with this new election, far exceed those made in 1898 and 1899. Then, after comparatively moderate expenditures before the State election, he went on to corrupt the legislature after that election. He was personally solicitous to know exactly how his money was expended, and his curiosity in this regard enabled the committee to report that he is to be charged with knowledge of the acts done in his behalf by his committee and his agents in conducting his canvass.

Governor Hauser, on page 1402, explains this trait of Mr. Clark:

He is a close business man and he does not like to let go, and campaigning in that country is very expensive.

He further says, on page 1405:

He is a close man, and does not like to take politicians' words.

Senator Clark and his son, Charles W. Clark, having learned a lesson through the recent investigation, adopted a different method in 1900. This time Senator Clark corrupted the politics of the State and the voters in the counties of the State prior to the State election by the expenditure, as I charge, of about $1,000,000. Before doing this, three fundamental rules of action were agreed to.

First rule. That Charles W. Clark, nominally, and not William A. Clark, openly, should furnish the money and make the expenditures, and that the latter should endeavor to be able, in case of investigation, to swear that he knew very little concerning the facts.

Second rule. That the expenditures should be made, as far as possible, before the November State election, and to as slight an extent as possible after that election. The complaint had been made of Mr. Clark in the previous contest that he had been too niggardly prior to election and that this course had made it exceedingly expensive for him after the election, and had also led him in his search after votes to enter into Whiteside's trap. Therefore the foregoing rules were deliberately adopted and have been, so far as possible, followed in the expenditure of the $1,000,000 used in Mr. Clark's present attempt to enter the Senate.

Third rule. That no returns of expenditures should be made under the Montana corrupt practices act by Mr. William A. Clark or Mr. Charles W. Clark; that the expeditures to be made by the regular committees and reported under the law should be kept at a low figure, and that the larger expenditures should be so made that returns thereof might be omitted with impunity.

Thus guarded, the work went on regularly. The first step was the capture of the regular organization of the Democratic party, whose convention was to nominate delegates to the Kansas City convention. This was shamelessly done by sending to the State convention a bogus delegation from Silverbow County.

The Independent Democrats held a new State convention and two delegations went to Kansas City. Mr. Clark and his delegates were accompanied by brass bands and gangs of roughs, and he secured the recognition of his delegation by the Bryan convention. The contributions which he then and afterwards promised to make and did make to the Democratic national committee can easily be ascertained if the Senate deems it necessary. There are rumors that $300,000 was promised and only $100,000 was paid.

Next begun the purchase of newspapers. The Helena Herald, the only Republican daily paper at the capital, was bought, and, while nominally published during the canvass as a Republican organ, it was in fact a most deadly enemy of the Republican party. The Great Falls Tribune was bought; the Libby News was bought; sundry other small papers were bought, and many newspaper editors and publishers were employed legitimately and illegitimately. The Democratic State committee, which had a majority of Independent Democrats upon it, had to be captured, and was captured by the use of money.

Attempts were made to seize the county organizations and to control the county conventions, not only to elect delegates to the convention to choose delegates to Kansas City, but also to control the county conventions to nominate officers and members of the legislature. There was no limit to the expenditures made for these purposes. The Republican organizations continued to be the objects of Mr. Clark's pursuit—and persistent and corrupt efforts were made to secure control of the Republican conventions in Silverbow County. The Republican chairman was told to name his own price, and five members of the committee succumbed to money brought by Mr. Charles W. Clark from his country place near Deweys Flats.

The Labor party and its candidates and committee were obstacles in the way of Mr. Clark's success, and so their influence was corruptly secured. To the best of my knowledge and belief the Labor candidate for governor and all the other Labor nominees, except the candidate for superintendent of public instruction, were induced to withdraw by the use of money; and the Democratic candidate for superintendent of public instruction was in like manner induced to withdraw in favor of the Labor nominee for that office. These expenditures were about $15,000. Next came the expenditures in carrying on the canvass before the people. It was a carnival of noise, drunkenness, gambling, and corruption of all sorts. Governor Hauser has described the Montana methods on page 1408, and he said he thought over a million dollars was expended in the fight over the attempted removal of the capital from Helena to Anaconda.

Called upon to specify what the methods were, he said that working the saloons and the bosses was a very common thing; that the gamblers had "considerable influence with the fellows around them. It is pretty nice to get the saloons." "If you get them on your side it is quite an element."

As in 1899, so in 1900. Sums of money were carefully apportioned out as the expenses of carrying the counties, and furnished, sometimes to the county committees, but inasmuch as those committees might feel called upon to make returns under the statute, oftener to private committees in the counties, who spent the money, but who, not admitting themselves to be committees, any more than did Senator Clark's corruption committee in 1889, went on to spend the money but made no returns. It has been estimated by good judges that the allowances to the counties, taking the whole State through, of sums sent out by Mr. Charles W. Clark, or his agents, amounted to $8 each for 60,000 voters, reaching nearly half a million dollars.

After these expenditures were made, with the apparent result that the complexion of the legislature was as follows: Republicans, 32; Clark Democrats, 38; Independent Democrats, 9; Labor Party men, 9; Populists, 6; it was not thought by Senator Clark that it would be necessary for him to make any considerable payments of money which he might be obliged to admit before a Senatorial committee. Obstacles, however, arose. A gang of men elected by corruption never cease to make demands.

A movement was made to prevent the election as speaker of the house of Mr. Frank E. Corbett, Mr. Clark's attorney and one of his chief corruptionists and manager of the attempt in 1898 to corrupt the supreme court in favor of John B. Wellcome. These obstructions to Mr. Corbett's selection were removed, the scruples of five men were overcome, and Mr. Corbett was elected, I charge, as the result of an expenditure by Mr. Clark's agents of about $40,000, and Mr. Clark was finally elected United States Senator.

There never was in history such a cunningly contrived and adroitly carried out attempt to corrupt a whole State by the use of money without stint as that made by William A. Clark and Charles W. Clark in this sixth attempt to secure for the former his seat in the Senate and his apparent vindication from the stigma which prior transactions had placed upon him.

Now, I call the attention of the Senate to the returns to the county treasurers which have been made in connection with the State election of 1900 and the Senatorial election on January 16, 1901. More than thirty days have elapsed since that date, and all the returns should be in.

The first return is that of the treasurer of the Democratic county committee of Silverbow. Under the law we are entitled to know exactly who contributed the money and exactly the persons to whom it was paid. This says:

RECEIPTS.

October 1. Subscriptions, assessments, etc., $29,986.

EXPENDITURES.

October 1 to December 1, 1900. Stationery, stamps, office expenses, office salaries, renting of headquarters, photographs, banners, bill posting, bill distribution. livery and band wagons, registration checkers, checkers on election day, hall rent, music, speakers, etc., census takers, badges, printing, $29,986.

There is not a name in the whole return, and it is not a return which in any way complies with the law.

The next is the return of the Independent Democratic county committee, which gives the names of the contributors and the expenditures.

The next is the return of the treasurer of the Republican county committee of Silverbow, which gives the names of the contributors and the expenditures.

The next is the return of the Democratic State central committee.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 30th day of November, A. D. 1900.

[NOTARIAL SEAL.] W. H. DIKINSON,
Notary Public in and for Lewis and Clarke County, Mont.

Filed December 6, 1900.

T. S. HOGAN, Secretary of State.

Now, here we see the return made, after expenditures by Mr. Clark, in my belief amounting to a million dollars in the whole campaign. The receipts are given as $24,880. The expenditures are given as $24,777.71.

The only evidence of any contribution by Senator Clark or any member of his family in the whole canvass is in the above return. C. W. Clark, $2,500; C. W. Clark, $8,500; J. K. Clark, $1,000; J. K. Clark, $5,000; W. A. Clark, jr., $1,000; making $18,000 in all.

Mr. President, there are all the returns that have been made under the Montana statute, in a campaign where it is notorious that thousands, even hundreds of thousands, of dollars were expended by Mr. Clark and his agents; and no man in his sober senses can contend that there has not been a gross, deliberate, and willful violation of the Montana statute.

If Senator Clark expended one dollar in the canvass the law required that a return should be made, while, for all that the returns show, Senator Clark has neither directly or indirectly expended one dollar.

The situation therefore is this: An opulent mine owner, possessing $50,000,000 and upwards, conceived the desire to be a United States Senator, and for years pursued his object through large expenditures of money used to control the legislature of his State. The people of his State became aroused to his corruptions and the legislature passed a most stringent corrupt practices act, forbidding a candidate for United States Senator to spend more than $1,000 for personal expenses, or to spend more than $1,000 through any one county committee, and requiring all candidates and committees to make sworn returns of their expenditures, and punished them by fine and imprisonment for not making such returns.

The mine owner continued his pursuit of the Senatorship, and at last appeared to claim a seat through an election by a small majority in a legislature which it was alleged he had corrupted. A committee of the Senate unanimously reported that the charge was true; that the pretended election was null and void; that he had expended large sums of money to obtain this election, and that neither he nor his committee had made any returns of their expenditures as required by the law.

Without waiting for the action of the Senate he retired from his seat and began a new canvass for another election. He spent vast sums of money in his contest and appears again in the Senate with a certificate of election. It also appears that he has made no returns under the law of his State; that the only returns by the committees of his party are of the payment of comparatively insignificant sums, while it is notorious that expenditures have been made of tens of thousands of his money. There has been, in fact, another deliberate and defiant disobedience of the corrupt-practices act.

The question is whether this person who has once secured an election to the Senate by corrupt expenditures, of which he made no return, thus standing guilty of a double offense which has prevented his taking his seat, and who has undoubtedly obtained another election by the lavish use of money, and has again made no return, shall be admitted as a Senator.

My answer is that it is palpable that he has not been elected in accordance with the laws of his State. The presumption, through his failure to make returns, is overwhelming under the circumstances that he has obtained his election by corrupt expenditures and that he has no right to his seat until he removes that presumption by evidence on his part.

Moreover, it is a question whether, even if now honestly elected, he is not an unfit person to be allowed to remain a Senator, and whether he should not, therefore, be excluded from the body.

Article 2, section 4, of the Constitution is as follows:

> The President, Vice-President, and all civil officers of the United States shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

While technically that provision of the Constitution does not apply to a Senator of the United States, it would be most astonishing if a Senator could be admitted to this body who had been once in fact convicted before the Senate and the country of bribery.

Mr. President, it has seemed to me to be my duty to submit an estimate, made up from the best information which I can obtain—evidence of record and from other sources—of Senator Clark's expenditures in his six pursuits of the Senatorship.

First, in 1889 and 1890, $40,000 was his first subscription, as testified to by Governor Hauser, and it is reasonable to presume that there were additional expenditures made. Governor Hauser said (p. 1408) "that did not begin to pay what we had to pay in the early part of the campaign. The expense of registering the vote is enormous." A reasonable estimate as to Mr. Clark's total expenditures in his first Senatorial venture is	$150,000
Second, in 1892 and 1893. The best estimate I can make places Senator Clark's expenditures by which he carried the legislature Democratic notwithstanding President Harrison was elected and the Republican State ticket, is $250,000; and there was probably expended by Mr. H. L. Frank, Mr. Clark's disbursing agent at that time and now his candidate before the Montana legislature for the short-term Senatorship, not less than $50,000, a moderate estimate of Mr. Clark's expenses in this canvass being	300,000
Third, in 1894 and 1895, when the Republican legislature chose Senator CARTER and the corrupt practices act was passed. A fair estimate of Senator Clark's expenditures during the whole campaign is	50,000
Fourth, in 1898 and 1899. Mr. Clark's payments, admitted before the committee, were over $150,000. His additional expenditures made to newspapers and in other directions doubtless were not less than $150,000 more, making his total expenses for that campaign not less than	300,000
The Whiteside $1,000 bills are not included in the above estimate, amounting to	30,000
Fifth, the Spriggs appointment. The cost of this we were not permitted to ascertain by Senatorial inquiry.
Sixth, in 1900 and 1901, a careful estimate is as follows: Newspapers: The purchase of the Helena Herald, the only Republican daily paper, $100,000; Great Falls Tribune, purchase price and expenses of improving the plant and carrying on the paper, $100,000; the Libby News and other small papers purchased and subsidized, $50,000; free distribution of the Butte Miner, $25,000; miscellaneous payments to newspaper agents, $25,000; making for newspapers	300,000
Expense of controlling the Democratic State committee	68,000
Expense of preliminary canvass of the various counties	24,000
Expenses of the bolting State convention which elected delegates to the Kansas City Democratic national convention	26,000
Special train to Kansas City and other expenses connected with the train	15,000
Disbursements at Kansas City, including contributions from the first to the last to the Democratic national committee	114,000
Expenses of second round of county conventions to nominate county officers and members of the legislature, 20 counties at $4,000 each and 4 smaller counties at $3,000 each	83,000
Expenses connected with efforts to break down the Republican county organization and secure the control of the Republican convention in Silver Bow County, including money furnished by Charles W. Clark for 5 members of the committee; in all	65,000
Distribution of money for election purposes among the counties—to individuals, candidates, and county committees, at an average of $8 for 60,000 voters	480,000
Expense of securing the withdrawal of the Labor candidates, including the amounts paid to other candidates to withdraw and their committees to cooperate, and also for inducing a Democratic candidate for one office to withdraw, according to memorandum furnished to me from Montana	14,850
Amounts paid in securing control of the organization of the legislature and in connection with the election of Corbett as speaker	40,000
Making in all, for the 6 attempts, expenditures of not less than	2,059,850

Mr. President, it is not a pleasant duty to myself and to the Senate which I have thus performed by narrating imperfectly but at some length the six attempts made by Senator Clark to obtain an enduring title to the office of United States Senator. That such enormous sums of money as have been expended should be corruptly poured out in persistent attempts by a man of enormous wealth to reach high power in the Government is startling to the world and is ominous of vast evil to the country.

Other great dangers to the Republic in connection with contested elections may perhaps be readily overcome as the people become enlightened and alarmed in their presence. Violence and fraud being exposed may be counteracted, and the Government of the people may be preserved, but the expenditure of enormous sums of money in the corrupt control of elections may possibly go forward unchecked until the downfall of pure government shall be accomplished. This is the greatest danger which menaces us with the opening century.

There is even a more deadly form of political corruption than the expenditure of vast sums of money by millionaires like Mr. Clark; that is, the payment of moneys for election purposes directly from the treasuries of corporations. This form of raising campaign moneys was not known six years ago. It is a product of very recent years. There is need of little exposition from me to show what a menace it is to popular suffrage and government by the people.

Usually such contributions have been prevented because the directors of corporations were divided in politics and neither side would consent to political contributions from the treasuries of the companies; but when it so happened that all the directors in huge corporations became of one political faith these contributions were made, because it was simpler and easier and more equitable, it was argued, to take the money from all the stockholders than to impose the burden of the large payments upon the heavier stockholders alone. Thus so large a control of the politics of the country by money agencies, and especially by vast money contributions from corporation treasuries, has come to pass and threatens the life of the Republican party and even the stability of the Government.

There is a bill reported unanimously by the Committee on Privileges and Elections on February 7, 1901 (S. 5849), now on the Calendar of the Senate, which ought to be passed without objection by both Houses of Congress, in order to ward off a growing evil in this country of such deadly portent. The language of the bill is as follows:

That it shall be unlawful for any national bank, or any corporation engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, or any corporation organized by authority of any laws of Congress, to make a money contribution in connection with any election to any political office. It shall also be unlawful for any corporation whatever to make a money contribution in connection with any election at which a Representative in Congress is to be voted for or with any election or attempted election of a United States Senator. Every corporation which shall make any contribution in violation of the foregoing provisions shall be subject to a fine not exceeding $5,000, and every officer, stockholder, director, or employee of any corporation who shall consent to any contribution by the corporation in violation of the foregoing provisions shall be subject to a fine of not exceeding $1,000.

The members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections in this Congress can not be reproached with any failure of duty in connection with the important questions committed to them by the Senate. Whether the members of the next Senate can avoid allowing Mr. Clark to again enter what has been called the most distinguished legislative body on earth, it is not for me to determine. Is it possible, where such a man has once corrupted a legislature and been driven from the Senate for his briberies, that the same man can make a second attempt and corrupt and bribe a whole constituency by the expenditure of a million of dollars in all the ways which cunning and crime can devise, continuing to openly defy a special law of the State made to fit his case, and can return to a Senate and find it powerless to again redress the wrong and once more relieve Montana from her shame and degradation? Is it possible that the only remedy is that suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts in his address delivered before the legislature of his State on February 12, 1901, in acknowledgment of his reelection, as follows:

SENATOR HOAR'S OPINION.

"A greater danger still, which I think we shall find means to deal with, is the corrupt use of money to carry elections or to get high office or influence legislation. Of this we have had some most disgraceful recent examples. These things can not always be proved so that their object is defeated, even if the men who have done them not only do not deny them but boast of them. One remedy must be found in an aroused and indignant public opinion. The millionaire who would corrupt a great State to get a great office must be made to feel that his success will bring with it neither joy nor honor. Let public contempt and scorn blast him. Let him be avoided as one with a leprosy. We shall not, probably, revive the ignominious punishments of the past.

"But if they are ever revived, let him be their first victim. The whipping post, the branding on the forehead, the cropping of the ears, the scourging at the cart's tail, are light punishments for the rich man who would debauch a State, whether it be an old State with an honorable history or a young and pure State in the beginning of its history. If we can not apply them literally and physically, let the aroused public sentiment of his countrymen pillory and brand and scourge the infamous offender. Leave him to his infamy. Let him be an outcast from the companionship of freemen.

"Give him a cloak to hide him in,
And leave him alone with his shame and sin."

Mr. President, on Monday next will come the sequel to the foregoing six chapters in the Senatorial candidacies of William A. Clark. He may again enter the Senate, and if he does he can make reply to these remarks of mine, and I shall not be here to make rejoinder. He will stand up before the Vice-President—if the Senate shall permit—and will make oath faithfully to perform the duties of the office (which has cost him $2,000,000) in company with WILLIAM P. FRYE, GEORGE F. HOAR, and SHELBY M. CULLOM, with JOHN T. MORGAN, AUGUSTUS O. BACON, and BENJAMIN R. TILLMAN, and with other Republicans and Democrats whose elections did not cost one of them so much as $200.

His castle in Dupont Circle he will decorate with statues and paintings which are among the marvels of modern art, in the presence of which his fellow-Senators, with their families and the élite of Washington society, will eat, drink, and be merry. The most observed picture to be seen in the gallery, painted by a competent artist, will be that of a man with a mute inquiry on his face, holding in his hand two papers, and every guest will see that one paper is a certificate and the other an expense account—in 1890, $150,000; in 1893, $300,000; in 1895, $50,000; in 1899, $330,000; in 1900 $1,230,000; and that this is his agonizing inquiry: Is it worth all this and all besides which I have parted with and lost?

This is a true picture which not all the pigments which millions can buy, nor all the painters whom money can hire, will be able to obliterate, and the title thereof will not be "One scoundrel disposed of," but, if the Senate shall permit, it will be one—one—one—Montana gentleman not disposed of. [Applause in the galleries.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The galleries must remember that applause is not permitted under the rules of the Senate, and it must not be repeated.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask leave to annex to my remarks the report of the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, that request will be granted.

The report is as follows:

THE MONTANA ELECTION CASE.

This case was referred to the committee on December 4, 1899, upon a memorial, dated February 25, 1899, signed by 27 members of the legislative assembly of Montana, and upon a later memorial signed by Robert B. Smith, governor of Montana; T. E. Collins, state treasurer; Henry C. Stiff, speaker of the house of representatives, of the sixth legislative assembly of Montana; A. J. CAMPBELL, member of Congress from Montana, and Charles S. Hartman, ex-Representative in Congress from Montana.

On December 7, 1899, the Senate directed the committee to investigate the right of W. A. Clark to a seat as Senator from Montana and authorized the sending for persons and papers. The committee began consideration of the case January 5, 1900, and hearings were held on January 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 17, 19, 20, 22, 23, 29, 30, and 31; February 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, and 28; March 1 and 2; April 3, 5, and 6; and the finding of the committee was made April 10, 1900.

FINDING OF THE COMMITTEE.

The finding of the committee is that the election to the Senate of William A. Clark, of Montana, is null and void on account of briberies, attempted briberies, and corrupt practices by his agents, and of violations of the laws of Montana defining and punishing crimes against the elective franchise.

THE ADMITTED OR UNDISPUTED FACTS.

This finding is made in view of certain admitted or undisputed facts, with their attendant circumstances, appearing in the testimony taken by the committee, as follows:

I.

Prior to 1895 the elections in Montana were accompanied by enormous expenditures of money, unquestionably involving widespread belief that extensive corruption was resorted to in all elections. Ex-Governor Hauser, a witness called by Senator Clark in his defense, testified that at the first State election the Big Four, so called, consisting of Senator W. A. Clark, Mr. Broadwater, Mr. Marcus Daly, and himself, as first contributions gave $40,000 each; and he also estimated that the expenditures made in connection with the contest to determine whether Anaconda or Helena should be the capital of the State were upward of $1,000,000. Senator Clark said he spent over $100,000 in that contest.

II.

On February 25, 1895, Montana undertook to protect herself against corruption in elections and passed a law relative to crimes against the elective franchise, which limited in purpose and amount the political expenditures which could be made in any election, either by a political committee or a candidate, especially naming a candidate for United States Senator, who could not give more than $1,000 to any one committee in one county and could not pay more than $1,000 for his personal expenses in lawful ways specified, and provided that every political committee should make a public return of its expenditures, stating from whom every dollar was received and to whom every dollar was paid, and that every person acting otherwise than under a political committee should make a similar public return; and further provided a fine and imprisonment against persons omitting to make the return required by law.

III.

Senator Clark has been constantly a candidate for office. He was a candidate for Congress in 1888 and defeated. In 1890 there were two legislatures in Montana. He was elected United States Senator by the Democratic legislature, but was not seated. He was again a candidate for the Senate in 1893, but there was no election. In 1895 he was voted for as the Democratic candidate, but Senator Carter was elected.

In the summer of 1898, after he had consulted with Governor Hauser and other supporters, including at that time Mr. A. J. CAMPBELL, a committee of his friends was created outside the State committee of the Democratic party, which was in the hands of persons not favorable to him; this, his committee, being organized for the purpose of controlling the politics of the State and securing the legislature to meet in January, 1899. This committee consisted of his son, Charles W. Clark, William McDermott, and A. J. Davidson, agent.

Charles W. Clark was made treasurer, and the assistants of the committee were John B. Wellcome, Walter M. Bickford, A. J. Steele, John S. M. Neill, Frank E. Corbett, E. L. Whitmore, and Walter Cooper. To this committee Senator Clark gave unlimited authority to expend money which he agreed to furnish; an estimate, however, being made that at least $35,000 would be necessary to secure the State convention, and that $75,000 might be needed to secure the State legislature.

IV.

In the canvass which ensued the approximate expenditures admitted by the various members of his committee and their assistants were as follows: By Charles W. Clark, $25,000; by McDermott, $22,000; by Davidson, agent, $22,300; by Wellcome, $25,000; by Steele, $11,000; by Corbett, $5,000; by Whitmore, $4,600; by Cooper, $2,900, mainly furnished by Charles W. Clark; and the amount of these expenditures Senator Clark himself paid to his son.

The advances and payments made by Senator Clark to his committee and agents, as admitted by him, amounted to about $139,000, of which sum Charles W. Clark received from him on August 12, 1898, $35,000; October 17, $20,000; November 23, $40,000, and February 13, 1900, $20,592; and in addition to this $139,000 Senator Clark paid $5,000 to McDermott, one of his agents; $5,000 to Wellcome, his attorney, and $5,000 to E. C. Day, a member of the legislature.

V.

None of the members of his committee or their assistants made the sworn returns required by law, nor did Senator Clark himself make any return.

VI.

In December, 1898, Senator Clark began negotiations with one H. W. McLaughlin, a member of the legislature, for the purchase of his wood lots and sawmills, and on the 9th day of December bought all Mr. McLaughlin's property for the sum of $24,684, paying $10,000 down, and on the 12th of March paid him $6,000 cash and $8,684 in stock of a new lumber company to which the property was transferred, which lumber company employed Mr. McLaughlin as its agent, with a salary of $200 per month.

VII.

On December 31, 1898, Mr. Walter M. Bickford received from Mr. Charles W. Clark five $1,000 bills and four $500 bills, and went to Missoula for the purpose of purchasing a supposed indebtedness on account of his ranch of one E. P. Woods, a member of the legislature, but, not succeeding in meeting Mr. Woods, he returned the money to Mr. Charles W. Clark. In February, 1899, Mr. Massena Bullard paid to Mr. Kemper the amount due upon the ranch and a deed was made running to Mrs. Woods, which was not recorded, but in January, 1900, the property having been sold to other persons for $9,750, the deed to Mrs. Woods was destroyed and new deeds made to the new purchasers.

Senator Clark knew of Mr. Bickford's attempts to purchase the indebtedness which Woods owed, and the correspondence shows that the object was to secure Mr. Woods's vote for Senator Clark. Mr. Bickford testified: "In pursuance of that letter (the letter of November 21 from one Ector) and of the invitation which I at that time received, I made arrangements to obtain, for the purpose of using it to prevent the indebtedness of Mr. Woods going into the hands of Mr. Daly's friends, the sum of $7,000 with which to take up that indebtedness." On November 12, 1898, Mrs. Woods mortgaged their sheep and cattle for $1,000, payable in one year, and on April 22, 1899, paid the mortgage debt. Mr. Woods has left Montana and gone to New Mexico.

VIII.

Mr. W. E. Tierney was senator and W. C. Eversole and Michael Shovlin were representatives from Broadwater County. Mr. Tierney voted for Mr. Clark on the first ballot, and Eversole and Shovlin came over on the sixth. Mr. Tierney was a dealer in general merchandise in three small firms—Miss A. M. Darcy & Co., Tierney & Co., and Eversole & Co.—which had moderate capital and were in debt. After the legislature adjourned, on March 3, Mr. Shovlin deposited $8,500 in the Montana National Bank. Eversole, who had in fact been only a clerk, bought out Mr. Tierney, paying him $1,600 in cash and a credit with his new firm of $3,000.

On June 1 Mr. Tierney organized the State Bank of Townsend with a capital stock of $25,000, of which he took $5,800. Mr. Shovlin took $1,000 and Mr. Eversole $1,000, nearly all the $25,000 passing through Mr. Tierney's hands in currency. His $5,800 he says he took from the money drawer in a safe in the office of Miss Darcy & Co., but whence this $5,800 came he did not show by any writing whatever.

IX.

Mr. E. L. Whitmore, the confidential agent and employee of Mr. Charles W. Clark, purchased of D. G. Warner, a member of the legislature, certain lots in the town of Boulder, Jefferson County, and a small ranch near by, and took the deed in his own name, paying the amount of $7,500 in bank bills in Helena in the first week of January, 1899, the deed being recorded February 1, 1899. Mr. Warner has left Montana and gone to California.

X.

Mr. H. H. Garr, member of the legislature, lodged a package during the session with Mr. Peeler, of the bank of Kalispell. After the legislature adjourned he obtained the package, went to his home, and in the name of Miss Wickham, his wife's aunt, a milliner, who had lived with him for seven years, purchased a ranch for $3,500, for which he paid in currency, including a thousand-dollar bill, which money he said he obtained from his wife's aunt, believing she had accumulated and kept it in a box in her room in his house.

Mr. Garr had been a poor man, with little or no property, earning sometimes $50 or $75 a month as a notary public, sometimes nothing. He had in cash $75 or $80 when elected, and borrowed $25 to go to Helena with. His wife's aunt paid board in the family at the rate of $2.50 a week. He had no previous knowledge of how she had accumulated this money. Mr. Steele had obtained interviews with him before the legislature met, with a view to securing his vote, and after his arrival he figured in the Whiteside exposure.

XI.

Mr. John H. Geiger was a Republican who, after Mr. Whiteside's exposure, was seated in the legislature as a senator, in place of Mr. Whiteside, on the 26th day of January, by the votes of the Republicans and the Democratic supporters of Senator Clark, on the ground that his name on a few of his ballots had been marked at the wrong end, and on the 28th Mr. Geiger voted for Senator Clark.

He was a man with no regular occupation, was entirely without means, and a borrower of small sums. During the session of the legislature he received and carried home with him $3,600. After accounting for one or two petty sums, he claims that he obtained this money by faro gambling and through $1,100 in bills which he found in his room and believed came in connection with some bills pending in the legislature which Mr. John B. Wellcome was carrying through as attorney.

XII.

Mr. B. F. Fine, a member of the legislature, and a mining operator with no property, in May after it had adjourned, in pursuance of an agreement made during the session by Senator Clark after his election as Senator, received $2,000 from Senator Clark's bankers, and since that date has received other moneys, making the sum of $5,000 in all, which has been all his earnings since his nomination, his only business being the hunting up of testimony to disbar or impeach Mr. W. A. Clark, of Madison County, one of the principal witnesses against Senator Clark, to do which no steps have yet been taken.

XIII.

Mr. Stephen Bywater, a Republican, 30 years of age, and a railroad conductor, voted for Mr. Clark for the first time on the eighteenth ballot, when he was elected. On the 3d day of March, immediately after the legislature adjourned, he deposited in the Montana National Bank $15,000.

He accounts for it by saying that he brought from Kalispell, his home, $6,000 in currency, which he kept with him during the whole session of the legislature, and by saying that he received on March 3 $9,000 from his brother for the purchase of stock in a mining company in British Columbia, but he produced no writing in confirmation of his statement as to either the $6,000 or the $9,000. He did produce a prospectus and letter showing that there was such a mining company and that he was its president, and a Mr. Peeler, a broker, with whom Mr. Bywater kept an account, testified that Mr. Bywater also kept a package of money not included in the bank account.

XIV.

Mr. E. C. Day was Senator Clark's candidate for speaker and was defeated in the Democratic caucus, receiving 25 votes against 30 votes for Mr. Stiff. Mr. Day was the leader of Mr. Clark's forces in the legislature during all the ballotings after the second. On February 13 Senator Clark personally wrote a letter directing that $5,000 should be given to Mr. Day for his services in the legislature and as a retainer as counsel in the future. This amount was received by Mr. Day through Mr. Wellcome and Mr. Davidson on the 3d day of March, the day after the legislature adjourned.

Mr. Day testified that the services for which he received the $5,000 were as follows: "I had acted as the manager, you might say, or leader of his forces upon the floor of the house. I attended to keeping a quorum present and seeing that friends of his were sent for that were not present at roll call, and made motions and attended to the ordinary parliamentary—perhaps you would call it—procedure of his friends in that body." Later, Mr. Day received from Charles W. Clark $2,000 as fees in the Wellcome proceedings and $1,000 in two suits brought by Mr. Whiteside against the Butte Miner and the Helena Independent.

XV.

Mr. W. W. Beasley, a Republican representative, first voted for Senator Clark on the eighteenth ballot, when he was chosen, and that night or the next night he left Helena for St. Paul, having in his possession about $5,000 in currency, at least $1,000 of which was a thousand-dollar bill.

He claimed that he had taken this money with him to Helena and carried it in his vest pocket during the whole session. By no writing did he show whence he received it or what he did with it. He claimed that he kept the money with him because he was in embarrassed circumstances in the sheep business and was afraid of law suits. When he was elected he owed a board bill of nearly $400, and while in Helena took out a life-insurance policy and gave a note for the premium. All the time he had a bank account in the Thomas Cruse Savings Bank at Helena.

ADDITIONAL STRENGTHENING FACTS.

While the findings of the committee are justified by the foregoing admitted and undisputed facts, with their attendant circumstances standing alone, those facts are strengthened by additional facts, including various unsuccessful attempts to secure votes by offers of money, which, although denied, are found by the majority of the committee to be sustained by the preponderance of the testimony. It would unnecessarily incumber and extend this report to attempt to give these additional facts in detail.

THE WHITESIDE $30,000 INCIDENT.

In addition to these unsuccessful attempts at bribery, certain other alleged attempts will be narrated, because there is difference of opinion in the committee concerning them. They are as follows:

The case of W. A. Clark, State senator from Madison County, is one of those embraced in the Whiteside exposure. Mr. Clark and Mr. Whiteside testified that Mr. Wellcome placed $10,000 in an envelope and handed it to Mr. Whiteside, Mr. Clark's initials being written by the latter on the back of the envelope, the amount to be delivered to Mr. Clark in case he voted for Senator Clark. This money was part of the $30,000 produced by Mr. Whiteside before the legislative committee. Mr. Wellcome denied these statements.

State Senator H. L. Myers testified that in like manner $10,000 was placed in an envelope, upon the back of which he wrote his initials, and the package was retained by Mr. Whiteside to be delivered to him in case he voted for Mr. Clark. Mr. Whiteside testified that the $10,000 was furnished by Mr. Wellcome. Mr. M. L. Hewett testified that Mr. Charles W. Clark authorized the payment of $10,000 to Myers. Prior to the session of the legislature Mr. Charles W. Clark had, as shown by a letter signed by him, sent $500 to Mr. Myers as a retainer as counsel for the Bridger Coal Company, which Mr. Myers did not accept. But Mr. Clark denied the statement made by Mr. Hewett, and Mr. Wellcome denied the statement of Mr. Whiteside.

As to Representative H. H. Garr, Mr. Whiteside testified that in like manner $5,000 was furnished him by Mr. Wellcome for Mr. Garr and placed in an envelope, on the back of which Mr. Garr wrote his initials, Mr. Whiteside retaining the package as in the other two cases. Mr. Garr admits seeing the money and writing his name upon the back of the envelope, but says it was for purposes of identification, and that he did not know what the transaction meant. Mr. Wellcome denied these statements.

Mr. Whiteside, who was a State senator, testified that in like manner $5,000 was given to him by Mr. Wellcome as part of $10,000 which he was to receive for his vote for Senator Clark, which he placed in an envelope and later produced before the legislative committee. Mr. Wellcome denied these statements.

It is in connection with these last four cases of attempted bribery—those of Messrs. Clark of Madison, Myers, Garr, and Whiteside—that the controversy concerning Senator Clark's election has been largely maintained from the beginning.

The reasons why a majority of the committee find that, on the whole, the statements of Messrs. Clark of Madison, Myers, and Whiteside are true, notwithstanding the denials of Mr. Wellcome and others, may be briefly stated. The three accusers undoubtedly occupied the position of detectives, who willfully deceived the parties with whom they were dealing and against whom they made charges. On the other hand, the parties against whom they testified and who make the denials are charged with crimes to which, if guilty, they would be quite certain to add the offense of false swearing.

The majority of the committee, under all the circumstances appearing, are not willing to consider the situation as one of equilibrium between the detectives on the one hand and the alleged lawbreakers on the other. If Messrs. Clark of Madison, Myers, and Whiteside testified falsely, they must have contemplated in the beginning a conspiracy of the basest character, to be followed up by perjury of the worse sort, and they must have intended to pass through ordeals in the course of the investigations which would be made to which it can not be inferred they were willing to subject themselves merely to prevent Senator Clark from becoming a United States Senator.

THE ALLEGED DALY CONSPIRACY.

In the opinion of the majority, there was no affirmative disproof produced by Senator Clark at any time showing that the facts in connection with the $30,000 exposure were not true. The charge that the accusations and the exposure resulted from a conspiracy formed and carried forward by Mr. Marcus Daly was a necessity of Mr. Clark's canvass and defense. But Mr. Daly and Mr. Conrad and others who were suspected of conspiracy denied all knowledge of the $30,000, of which $27,000 was in $1,000 bills, which had been produced by Mr. Whiteside as the money furnished by Mr. Wellcome in the attempted briberies.

No $1,000 bills were shown to have been in the hands of any of the alleged Daly conspirators. On the other hand, the five $1,000 bills and four $500 bills which Mr. Bickford took from C. W. Clark and carried to Missoula on December 31, in connection with the E. P. Woods transaction, were returned to Mr. Clark on January 1, and during the ensuing week, when the alleged briberies were attempted, large sums in currency were in the hands of Mr. C. W. Clark and Mr. Wellcome, including various $1,000 bills.

Mr. Clark, on January 3, had brought to him by a Mr. Hirshfield $9,000 in currency, in which were three $1,000 bills, and from this $9,000, or the money returned by Mr. Bickford, he gave Mr. Wellcome three or four $1,000 bills. On December 28 Mr. Wellcome drew from bank $10,000, of which he says one, two, three, four, or five were $1,000 bills, and he carried them in the inside pocket of his vest until he used them. There were on the 3d or 4th of January three $1,000 bills and eight $500 bills in the possession of Mr. Whitmore, Mr. Charles W. Clark's confidential agent in the purchase of D. G. Warner's property. Charles W. Clark testified that his income was $250,000 per year.

In connection with the consideration of these last four cases of attempted bribery—of Clark, of Madison, Myers, Garr, and Whiteside—it is important to state, in view of the difference of opinion in the committee concerning the credibility of Messrs. Clark, of Madison, Myers, and Whiteside, that the whole committee find that if all the testimony concerning the $30,000 and all the testimony of Mr. Whiteside and Mr. Clark, of Madison, were laid aside there would still remain sufficient evidence in the case to lead the committee to find, as they do, that Mr. Clark's election is void. From the briberies which have been established the majority of the committee feel justified in finding that there were other successes in procuring, by corrupt practices, the votes of members of the legislature, where the facts naturally can not be directly proved.

THE CONDUCT OF THE REPUBLICAN LEGISLATORS.

The conduct of the Republican members of the legislature who, on the 28th day of January, left their Republican candidate and voted for Senator Clark and gave him his election, in the opinion of the majority of the committee, calls for special criticism. Senator Clark, beginning with 7 votes on January 10, had carried his votes up to 41 on the 27th of January. Mr. Conrad, beginning with 36 votes, had, on the 27th, 29 votes, and until that day his natural strength of over 30 votes had not been impaired from the beginning. There was an absolute deadlock and no possibility of the election of a Democrat without the aid of the Republicans.

On January 28, on the second ballot, Mr. Clark's vote was carried from 41 up to 54. Mr. Conrad's went down from 30 to 27, but only one of his supporters, Mr. Moran, voted for Senator Clark. Four Republicans, McKay, Worden, Hedges, and Lindsay, voted for the Republican candidate, Mr. Marshall, for whom they had first voted on January 10.

Eleven Republicans—Messrs. Geiger, Hobson, Mitchell, Phillips, Beasley, Bywater, Ingersoll, Jaqueth, Long, Magee, and Marcyes—went over to Senator Clark and gave him the election.

It is difficult to account for these Republican votes for Senator Clark. Senator Clark's candidacy had been tainted on the 10th of January by the Whiteside exposure. The facts exposed had not been disproved on January 28. It is true that a grand jury, composed of six persons, had reported that while there was evidence tending to show that money had been used it would not, in their judgment, warrant a conviction by a trial jury; but no other fact impugning the testimony of Messrs. Whiteside, Clark of Madison, and Myers had then appeared.

The reasons given for the Republican votes for Mr. Clark seem to be pretenses and covers. Mr. Clark, who had been negotiating with Mr. Hobson, the leader of the Republicans, wrote a letter on the 16th of January, in which he declared himself to be in favor of a tariff on Montana products. Some of the Republicans said there ought not to be a deadlock, and that it would be better to have a Democratic Senator than a vacancy.

No one pretends that any effort was made to bring about the election of any other Democrat than Mr. Clark, against whose agents the charges of bribery had been made. The committee do not say that the votes of all the 11 Republicans were improperly secured, but that those of Mr. Geiger, Mr. Beasley, and Mr. Bywater were, has already been found. The circumstances of suspicion against the others are numerous.

Senator S. S. Hobson is mainly responsible for the action of the Republican members. He was the chairman of their caucus and the leader in the Clark movement. He early began negotiations with Mr. Clark, and the latter's written promise that he would be an independent tariff Democrat was addressed to Mr. Hobson under the date of January 16.

Mr. Hobson was a man of moderate means. When he was elected he owed $22,000 or $23,000 to the Fergus County Bank, of which he was president. This he paid in May, 1899, and went East and to Europe about the time Senator Clark went; and when in connection with the Fergus County Bank he feared some manifestation of indignation at his course from ex-Senator T. C. Power, Senator Clark, in accordance with a promise he had made soon after his election, promptly purchased the $46,000 of the bank stock which Mr. Power owned and took a transfer thereof, which has not been recorded on the books of the bank.

In the face of all the facts tending to impeach the conduct of so many of the Republican members, and of the evident political reasons why they should not have contributed their votes to the election of Senator Clark, a Democrat, under charges of corruption, the finding that Senator Clark's election was obtained by corrupt practices, in the opinion of the majority, is much strengthened by the action of the 11 Republicans who, on the 28th day of January, abandoned their own party and thus strangely elected a Democratic Senator.

THE DISOBEDIENCE OF THE MONTANA LAW CONCERNING CRIMES AGAINST THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE.

The direct violations by Senator Clark and his committee and agents of the provisions of the Montana laws before stated are of the first importance in connection with the conclusions reached by the committee. The citizens and legislature of Montana in 1895, conscious of the discredit into which the State had fallen by the enormous expenditure of money in previous elections, made an earnest and legitimate effort to prevent corruption in politics in the future, and the act of February 25, 1895, was passed and incorporated into the penal code of that year.

RECITAL OF THE SUBSTANCE OF THE LAW.

A concise but correct and complete analysis of this law of 1895 is as follows:

The Montana Penal Code, in Title IV, headed "Crimes against the elective franchise," in section 85 of the act of February 25, 1895, provides that no person, to aid in his election to a public office, shall, directly or indirectly, by himself or through another person, expend or promise to expend any money or other valuable thing, except, as later provided, "for personal expenses and to a political committee."

Section 86 provides that a candidate may pay—

1. "His own personal expenses for traveling and purposes properly incidental to traveling.

2. "For sending out special publications giving his position and views.

3. "For stationery and postage, telegraph and telephone and other public messenger service, and other petty personal expenses. 'And in no other case whatever' shall the total sum for his own personal expenses as authorized exceed the sum of $1,000 by any candidate for United States Senator."

Section 87 provides that a candidate may pay money to a political committee, not exceeding $1,000 by a candidate for United States Senator, nor to more than one committee in any county.

Section 88 applies the term "political committee" to "any combination of persons" who shall aid a party, principle, or candidate, and every such committee or combination must have a treasurer who shall keep its accounts.

Section 90 requires every treasurer to file his account within thirty days after an election, stating in detail his receipts and expenditures.

Section 91 requires every person who, acting otherwise than under the authority of a committee, expends money, to file such a statement as is required of a treasurer "in the county in which he is a legal voter."

Section 98 requires every statement to be made on oath.

Section 104 punishes violations of sections 90 and 91 by fine not exceeding $1,000 and imprisonment for not more than three months.

After the passage, in 1895, of this law punishing crimes against the elective franchise, there was no serious occasion to test its provisions until 1898. In 1896 the coalition of the Silver Republicans with the Democrats made the State overwhelmingly Democratic, the plurality for Mr. Bryan being 32,043, and for Mr. Hartman, the Bryan Congressman, 24,563. In 1898, when Senator Clark renewed his canvass for the United States Senate, and his friends determined to directly disregard the law, he had no right to expend more than $1,000 through his one committee, nor more than $1,000 for his own personal expenses.

He expended a sum vastly in excess of the limit provided by law, and failed to render any return; and no such return was made by the aforesaid persons acting in his behalf. This failure to make return was with full knowledge of the fact that it was widely charged and widely believed that the election had been accomplished by bribery and the corrupt expenditure of money on a very large scale. He also, in June, 1899, with full knowledge of this belief and these charges, but in accordance with what he testified was his custom, destroyed all his checks, including those for his expenditures in his canvass, and was unable to give any full and satisfactory vouchers for the money so expended by him and his agents.

The committee find the case proved without relying upon such destruction of checks, failure to render accounts, and disregard of the legal limit of expenditure. But they furnish to the committee strong additional reasons for believing the other evidence, which seems to them to establish the corruption charged.

On the other hand, returns were made, as appears in the book of testimony, by the Republican State committee of expenditures of $4,291.31, by the Democratic State committee of $9,161.49, by the Silver Republican State committee of $1,708.25, by the People's Party State committee of $1,193.50, by the Silverbow County Democratic committee of $10,005.06, by the Silverbow County Silver Republican committee of $1,453.05.

Mr. Marcus Daly testified that he contributed to the State committee $4,500, to the Silverbow County committee $2,500, to the Deer Lodge County committee $500, to the Missoula County committee $250, making his total contributions $7,750. Mr. Daly was not a candidate, and has never been a candidate, for any office. Mr. W. G. Conrad, who was the principal opposing Democratic candidate for United States Senator against Mr. Clark, swore that he contributed to the State and various county committees between $5,000 and $10,000, not over $1,000 to any one committee, and after the election he spent between $200 and $300 outside of hotel bills; but paid no money in aid of his candidacy for Senator.

QUESTIONS OF LAW INVOLVED IN THE CASE.

In justifying the finding of the committee it is not necessary to discuss any doubtful questions of law.

(1) It is clear that if by bribery or corrupt practices on the part of the friends of a candidate who are conducting his canvass votes are obtained for him without which he would not have had a majority his election should be annulled, although proof is lacking that he knew of the bribery or corrupt practices. (Pomeroy's case, Taft Elec. Cases, 330; Caldwell's case, 334; Clayton's case, 348; Ingalls's case, 596; Payne's case, 604, 609, 610; Minority report, 616.)

(2) It seems to have been admitted that if the person elected clearly participated in any one act of bribery or attempted bribery he should be deprived of his office, although the result of the election was not thereby changed. (Pomeroy's case, Taft Elec. Cases, 330; where Mr. Pomeroy had 84 votes against 25.)

According to the law as understood by the committee, Senator Clark can not be permitted to retain his seat. He received 54 votes and there were 39 against him, leaving him an apparent majority of 15. If he obtained through illegal and corrupt practices 8 votes which would otherwise have been cast against him, he was not legally elected. More than this number of votes, the committee find from all the evidence, was thus obtained.

It is also a reasonable conclusion upon the whole case that Senator Clark is fairly to be charged with knowledge of the acts done in his behalf by his committee and his agents conducting his canvass. He arrived in Helena from Butte on January 4 and remained there until after his election on January 28 and was in constant conference with his committee and agents.

REJECTED TESTIMONY—CRITICISM OF THE PROSECUTORS.

There has been much testimony received by the committee which has not proved of substantial value. Many of the witnesses were unreliable, having made contradictory statements and having apparently sought to obtain from both sides of the controversy money for testifying.

Much criticism has been made of the contestants, especially of Mr. A. J. CAMPBELL, a member of the House of Representatives and an active prosecutor of the charges against Senator Clark. Some members of the committee can not refrain from expressing their disapproval of many of the methods pursued by Mr. CAMPBELL and Mr. Whiteside in the prosecution of the charges against Senator Clark, and they do not approve of the actions of Mr. Daly in agreeing to furnish an unlimited amount of money to carry on the prosecution.

It appears from the evidence that Mr. CAMPBELL, among other things, made a suggestion in a letter to a detective employed by him indicating that he wished the detective to obtain information from some member of the grand jury of one of the counties in Montana; and, further, that his stenographer or secretary gave several hundred dollars to two persons who made affidavits bearing on matters involved in this prosecution, the drafts for which sum Mr. CAMPLELL paid. It also appears that Mr. CAMPBELL, in the course of the prosecution, participated in opening a letter written by Mr. Bickford to one Jesse B. Root.

It further appears that Mr. CAMPBELL was one of the committee of friends consulted by Senator Clark in the summer of 1898 at the opening of the canvass, and that he was nominated for Congress at the Democratic convention held that year by the supporters of Senator Clark, as well as other members of the convention. In June, 1899, Mr. CAMPBELL became the attorney for a corporation in which Marcus Daly was largely interested.

While it is true that bribery can never be proved by the testimony of the briber nor of the person bribed, and that it is almost always necessary to obtain the required information from go-betweens or persons who have explored the field and made reports backward and forward as to the probability of obtaining results by bribery, yet some members of the committee believe that this does not justify the character of acts which are proved and established against Mr. CAMPBELL. Some members of the committee, however, do not join in any criticisms of Mr. CAMPBELL and Mr. Daly.

These go-betweens who were employed by Mr. CAMPBELL testified before the committee, most of them in the last instance, in behalf of Senator Clark. Some of their statements were true and some false.

The testimony of these persons, where they had made conflicting statements, has not been regarded by the committee unless corroborated, as the testimony of accomplices and detectives ought always to be corroborated. These witnesses, whose conduct has occasioned comment, had all been originally employed by Senator Clark or his committee or his friends. They are as follows:

One Z. T. Cason was retained by Senator Clark personally to endeavor to secure the vote of Representative Marcyes, and after the election was over, in a letter dated February 3, 1899, Senator Clark sent him $500. Cason testified before the supreme court and before this committee that he was authorized by Senator Clark to offer $10,000 to Mr. Marcyes. Later, getting into communication with Mr. Jesse B. Root, who was Mr. John B. Wellcome's law partner, he received $1,500 from him, and in consideration thereof signed a letter drafted by Root, dated December 8, 1899, saying that his previous statement was untrue, and then went to Baker City, Oreg., where he remained under an assumed name until he was caught by the subpœna of this committee.

One Benjamin Hill, during the Senatorial contest, was a supporter of Senator Clark, and was paid by Senator Clark's clerk $350. He later met Whiteside and agreed to get evidence against Senator Clark, and told him what he now says was a "pack of damn lies," and he also entered into communication with Mr. CAMPBELL. On June 30, 1899, he made a long affidavit against Senator Clark, which he now testifies was wholly false. He subsequently revealed to Senator Clark's counsel what he claimed to be the whole story. He was paid $610 by Mr. Wellcome and appears to have received from the prosecutors about $1,500.

One L. L. Wright went to Helena to work for Senator Clark, and received from Mr. A. J. Steele $240. Later he engaged, through Benjamin Hill, to get evidence for the prosecution against Senator Clark, and on the 3d of November, 1899, he made an affidavit for the contestants, which he testified before the committee was false. He received $250 from Benjamin Hill, which appears to have come from the prosecutors.

One Thomas T. Lyon went to Helena, at the request of Mr. Wellcome, to serve Mr. Clark. Mr. Wellcome gave him $250. Later, in company with Benjamin Hill, he engaged with CAMPBELL to furnish evidence against Mr. Clark, and said that CAMPBELL agreed to give him $5,000, which Mr. CAMPBELL denies. Later he told his story to Charles W. Clark, and on November 29, 1899, made an affidavit for the Clark side. He received from that side $250 and received from Mr. CAMPBELL $300. He told Mr. Henry G. Rickerts that he had received from the Clark side $2,000, which he had deposited in his wife's name.

William F. Rector's testimony was considered by the committee entirely unreliable. So was that of E. L. P. Ector, except where he was corroborated, as he was upon the important parts of his evidence by Senator Clark and Mr. Bickford and by his correspondence with those two gentlemen.

THE APPROACH TO THE SUPREME COURT.

The majority of the committee think that the transactions connected with the judges of the supreme court of Montana need special consideration. The undisputed facts are as follows:

I.

Proceedings having been instituted against John B. Wellcome for the purpose of securing his disbarment for attempted bribery in connection with Senator Clark's election, it appears that on August 5, 1899, after a preliminary decision by the supreme court that the court had jurisdiction, one Dr. William Treacy, a Republican advocate of Senator Clark, at Helena, approached Mr. Justice William H. Hunt, one of the three members of the supreme court, being his family physician, bearing a proposition which he said was from a party in town that Judge Hunt could have $100,000 if the court would dismiss the proceedings against Mr. Wellcome, and he advised Judge Hunt to accept the amount.

This proposition was first mentioned to Judge Hunt about noon. At half past 10 in the forenoon a special train had arrived from Butte bringing Charles W. Clark, Frank A. Corbett, and E. L. Whitmore, who went to the Helena Club, where, during the day, they saw Mr. John S. M. Neill, Mr. Davidson, Mr. Steele, Mr. Steve Carpenter, and Mr. Thomas Miller. They said they came to see Mr. B. Platt Carpenter, to induce him to put in an answer for Wellcome in the proceedings pending, and they returned in their special train to Butte in the afternoon, after Mr. Corbett had also had an interview with Mr. Justice Pigott, narratives of which were given to the committee by both parties thereto.

[Mr. Justice Pigott testified that Mr. Corbett told him that he had come over on the special train because Mr. Neill on the previous night telephoned to Butte that it had been ascertained that a deal could be had with the supreme court; that he, Mr. Corbett, condemned such a movement, had a mortgage of $24,000 on Mr. Neill's newspaper, and would foreclose it if Mr. Neill made any such attempt. All this Mr. Corbett denied.]

II.

On three occasions Dr. Treacy approached Attorney-General C. B. Nolan, who was in charge of the proceedings against Mr. Wellcome, and proposed to him to accept $100,000 and dismiss the proceedings.

III.

During the pendency of the proceedings against Mr, Wellcome, Rev. A. B. Martin, president of a school at Great Falls, Mont., in which Senator Clark and Chief Justice Brantley were trustees, visited the chief justice with a letter in his hand dated October 7, 1899, from Senator Clark, wherein the latter urged him to see the chief justice and endeavor to prevent the disbarment of "that splendid man," John B. Wellcome.

Upon the foregoing undisputed facts and other facts which are controverted, a majority of the committee believe that Senator Clark's agents, in their desperation on account of the decision of the court to take jurisdiction in the Wellcome case, attempted an improper approach to the judges of the court and to Attorney-General Nolan, which fact can not but have a certain influence in the consideration of the other acts of those agents in connection with the Senatorial election. A minority of the committee, however, believe that the transactions were res inter alios acta, and that the evidence does not sufficiently bring home to Senator Clark or his agents any improper attempt to influence the court or the attorney-general.

PROMPT ACTION SUGGESTED.

This briefest possible summary of the material facts in a case whose hearings have covered over three months, from January 5 to April 10, 1900, and whose record requires 2,687 pages, has extended to great length, and the committee will not present any general considerations in this report. The Senate should, as a duty to itself and to the country, demonstrate by its action in this case that seats in the United States Senate procured as Senator Clark's has been procured can not be retained by the deliberate judgment of the Senate.

The Senate also owes a duty to the people of Montana who, conscious of the bad repute into which the State had fallen by reason of vast expenditures of money in connection with its elections, manifested such a public sentiment that the legislature of 1895 passed a statute which, if obeyed, would have redeemed the State from its bad name. For the direct and gross violations of that statute and the consequent discredit which continues to rest upon the State, Montana has a right to expect a prompt and decisive remedy from the action of the Senate upon the report of this committee.

The committee report and unanimously recommend the adoption by the Senate of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That William A. Clark was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the Senate of the United States by the legislature of the State of Montana."

MONTANA ELECTION LAWS DEFINING AND PUNISHING "CRIMES AGAINST THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE."

[Portions of the act of February 25, 1895, being sections of the penal code of 1895.]

SEC. 83. No person shall, in order to aid or promote his own nomination as a candidate for public office, by a caucus, convention, or nomination paper, directly or indirectly, by himself or through another person, or by a political committee, give, pay, expend, or contribute, or promise to give, pay, expend, or contribute, any money or other valuable thing, except for personal expenses, as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 85. No person shall, in order to aid or promote his own election to a public office, directly or indirectly, by himself or through another person, give, pay, expend, or contribute any money or other valuable thing, except as hereinafter provided for personal expenses and to a political committee.

SEC. 86. A candidate for nomination or for election to a public office, and any other person, may incur and pay, in connection with such nomination or election, his own personal expenses for traveling and purposes properly incidental to traveling; for writing, printing, and preparing for transmission any letter, circular, or other publication which is not issued at regular intervals, whereby he may make known his own position or views upon public or other questions; for stationery and postage; for telegraph, telephone, and other public messenger service, and for other petty personal expenses; but all such expenses shall be limited to those which are directly incurred and paid by him, and by him alone; and every person shall be required to include such personal expenses in any statement which may be required of him under this act. And in no other case whatever shall the total sum paid, or agreed to be paid, by any candidate for his own personal expenses, as authorized by this act, exceed the sum of $1,000 by any candidate for United States Senator, for Congress, or for any State office; nor shall such personal expenses exceed the sum of $100 by any candidate for a county or other office.

SEC. 87. A person who is nominated as a candidate for public office by a caucus, convention, or nomination paper, and any person who shall, with his own assent, be voted for public office, may make a voluntary payment of money or a voluntary or unconditional promise of payment of money to a political committee as hereinafter defined for the promotion of the principles of the party which the committee represents and for the general purposes of the committee. But in no case, by direct or indirect voluntary contribution, shall such total aggregate voluntary payments exceed the sum of $1,000 by any candidate for the United States Senate, for Congress, or for State offices; nor shall such total aggregate voluntary payments exceed the sum of $50 by any candidate for member of the State legislature, or $100 for any county or other office within the State, nor the sum of $100 by any candidate for any other office: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to authorize or permit any candidate to make such payment to more than one committee or person, acting otherwise than under the authority or in behalf of a political committee, in any county.

SEC. 88. The term "political committee," under the provisions of this act, shall apply to every committee or combination of persons who shall aid or promote the success or defeat of any political party or principle in a public election, or shall aid or take part in the nomination, election, or defeat of a candidate for public office. Every such committee shall have a treasurer, who is a legal voter of the State, and shall cause to be kept by him detailed accounts of all money and the equivalent of money which shall be received by or promised to the committee, or any person acting under its authority or in its behalf, and of all such expenditures, disbursements, or promises of payment or disbursement which shall be made by the committee or any person acting under its authority or in its behalf; and no person acting under the authority or in the behalf of such committee shall receive any money or equivalent of money, or expend or disburse the same, until the committee has chosen a treasurer to keep its accounts, as herein provided.

SEC. 89. A person who, acting under the authority or in behalf of a political committee, shall receive any money or equivalent of money, or promise of the same, or shall expend any money or its equivalent, or shall incur any liability to pay money or its equivalent, shall at any time thereafter, on demand of the treasurer of such committee, and in any event within fourteen days after such receipt, expenditure, promise, or liability, give to such treasurer a detailed account of the same, with all vouchers required by this act; and such account shall constitute a part of the accounts and records of such treasurer.

SEC. 90. The treasurer of every political committee which shall receive or expend or disburse any money, or equivalent of money, or incur any liability to pay money, in connection with any election, if the aggregate of such receipts or of such expenditures, disbursements, and liabilities shall exceed $10, shall, within thirty days after such election, file a statement setting forth all the receipts, expenditures, disbursements, and liabilities of the committee, and of every officer and other person acting under its authority or in its behalf. Such statement shall include the amount in each case received, the name of the person or committee from whom it was received, and the date of its receipt, and shall also include the amount of every expenditure or disbursement, the name of the person or committee to whom the expenditure or disbursement was made, and the date of every such expenditure or disbursement, and shall clearly state the purpose for which it was expended or disbursed. The statement shall also give the date and amount of every existing unfulfilled promise or liability, both to and from such committee, remaining uncanceled and in force at the time the statement is made, with the name of the person or committee to or from whom the unfulfilled promise or liability exists, and clearly state the purpose for which the promise or liability was made or incurred.

SEC. 91. Every person who, acting otherwise than under the authority or in behalf of a political committee having a treasurer, as hereinbefore provided, receives money or the equivalent of money, or expends or disburses or promises to expend or disburse money or its equivalent, to an amount exceeding $10 for the purpose of aiding or promoting the success or defeat of a political party candidate or principle in a public election, or of aiding or taking part in the nomination, election, or defeat of a candidate for public office, shall file such statement as is herein required to be filed by a treasurer of a political committee in the county in which he is a legal voter, and shall be subject to all the requirements of this act, the same as a political committee and the treasurer thereof; but no person other than a legal voter of the State shall receive, expend, or disburse any money or equivalent of money, or promise to expend or disburse the same, for either of the purposes above named, except for personal expenses, as herein provided, or under the authority or in behalf of a political committee.

SEC. 92. No person shall, directly or indirectly, by himself or through another person, make a payment or promise of payment to a political committee, or to an officer or other person acting under its authority or in its behalf, in any other than his own name; nor shall such committee, officer, or other person knowingly receive a payment or promise of payment, or enter or cause the same to be entered in the accounts or records of such committee, in any other name than that of the person by whom such payment or promise of payment is made.

SEC. 94. The statement required by this act to be filed by the treasurer of a political committee shall be filed with the clerk of the county in which the treasurer is a legal voter, except that, in case a political committee has its headquarters in some other town or city than that in which the treasurer is a legal voter, the treasurer shall file the statement required of him with the clerk of the county in which such headquarters are maintained at the time of the election to which such statement relates. A statement relating to any other than a municipal election shall be filed in duplicate, and one copy shall be forthwith forwarded by the county clerk receiving the same to the secretary of state, by whom it shall be placed on file.

SEC. 95. The supreme court and the district court shall have full equity powers to compel any person who fails to file a statement as required by this act, or who files a statement which does not conform to the provisions of this act in respect to sufficiency in detail, conformity to the truth, or otherwise, to comply with the provisions of this act by filing such a statement as is required, and shall compel such compliance upon the petition of any candidate voted for or of any five persons qualified to vote at the election on account of which the expenditures, or a part thereof, were or are alleged to have been made.

No such petition shall be brought later than sixty days after such election against anyone who has filed his account within the thirty days required, excepting that a petition may be brought within thirty days of any payment which was not stated in the statement so filed. Proceedings under this section shall be advanced upon the dockets of said courts, if requested by either party, so that they may be tried and decided with as little delay as possible. No petition brought under this act shall be withdrawn or discontinued without the consent of the attorney-general.

SEC. 96. No person called to testify in any proceedings under the preceding section shall be liable to criminal prosecution under this act or otherwise for any matters or causes in respect of which he shall be examined or to which his testimony shall relate, except to prosecution for perjury committed in such testimony.

SEC. 97. If any statements which are filed under this act shall apparently fail to be in conformity with the requirements thereof, it shall be the duty of the clerk with whom any such statement is filed forthwith to notify the person making the same of such failure, and to request him to amend and correct the same.

SEC. 98. Every person making a statement required by this act shall make oath that the same is in all respects correct and true, to the best of his knowledge and belief.

SEC. 99. All statements which are filed in accordance with the provisions of this act shall be preserved for not less than fifteen months from the time of the election to which they relate, and shall, during that period, be open to public inspection.

SEC. 102. Every payment in respect of any expense incurred, which is to be accounted for under this act, shall be vouched for by a receipted bill stating the particulars of expenses, and every voucher, receipt, or account required by this act shall be preserved for at least six months from the election to which it relates.

SEC. 103. This act shall apply to all public elections, whether for officers or upon questions to be submitted to the people, except elections of township officers, and shall apply to caucuses and conventions for the nomination of candidates to be voted for at such elections, and to nomination papers for the nomination of candidates to be voted for at such elections, except that sections 83, 85, and 92 of this act shall not apply to the proprietors and publishers of publications issued at regular intervals in respect to the ordinary and regular conduct of business as such proprietors and publishers.

SEC. 104. Whoever shall violate any of the provisions of sections 83, 84, 85, 88, 89, 93, 94, 98, 99, and 102 of this act shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than three months. Whoever shall violate any of the provisions of sections 90, 91, and 92 of this act shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 and by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than three months.

VIEWS OF THE MINORITY.

VIEWS OF TWO MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE ON PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS, IN THE CASE OF W. A. CLARK, NOW SITTING AS A SENATOR FROM MONTANA.

We agreed and still agree to the resolution reported by the committee through its chairman. That resolution was adopted by the committee itself. But the report is merely the writing of the chairman with the aid of one other member, and never was submitted to any meeting of the committee, and therefore can not be considered as the words of the committee.

It is true that we saw and read that report, by the grace of the chairman, and dissented from many parts thereof, and gave the chairman notice of such dissent, when the chairman informed us that we were not bound by the wording of the report.

It was our misfortune not to agree with a majority of the committee in the general conduct of the investigaton of this case. We believed that in this important inquiry the committee was bound by, and ought to act on, the ordinary rules of evidence.

And in this contention we merely followed another member of the committee who is one of our great lawyers and who is fresh from a long service as a nisi prius judge under Federal authority. That great lawyer, in gentle but forceful language, admonished us of the great danger of disregarding the common rules of evidence established by great judges through the centuries and known to all lawyers. But it was said the committee was not a court and had a right to receive "hearsay" evidence in order to get on the track of better evidence. And we did receive it constantly, and in great volumes.

We tried merely to discharge our duties as members of this committee, and as judges in this most important cause. The chairman, however, left the committee little to do. The committee made an order at the beginning appointing the chairman and another member to determine what witnesses should be summoned, and the two did determine that matter at first; but the chairman kindly relieved the other member of that labor, and determined that matter for the committee.

This report of the chairman declares that, as to many matters stated separately, some members of the committee think or believe one way and some think or believe another way. So we preferred to state our individual findings for ourselves.

It is our opinion, from the evidence, that the friends of Senator Clark illegally and improperly used large amounts of money and thereby caused the election, and that this election is not valid, but under the law of the land is void, and therefore we agree to the resolution reported by the chairman.

We consider it our duty to call attention to the general features of this case. There were in Montana two factions in the Democratic party. Marcus Daly was considered the head of one faction and W. A. Clark was considered the head of the other.

In the summer of 1898 there was a meeting of "Clark men," as they were called, to consider political matters, concerning the general election to be held in November of that year.

Mr. A. J. CAMPBELL was invited and attended that meeting, which was held privately. It was agreed at that meeting to try to elect a legislature of Democrats of their own faction of the party, or not of the Daly faction. And W. A. Clark agreed to pay the expenses. And large sums of money were sent out, by the three men who acted as a committee, to various counties. A Democratic convention was held in September. And at that convention A. J. CAMPBELL was chosen its president, with the aid of all the Clark men."

And at the same convention A. J. CAMPBELL was nominated for Congress with the same aid; and in November, 1898, he was elected to Congress with the same aid. So, to the extent named, Mr. CAMPBELL got the benefit of that private meeting of which he was a member, and the benefit of the money sent out by the committee to the executive committees in various counties.

Mr. CAMPBELL was a well-known opponent of the Daly faction prior to and in 1898.

The witness Whiteside had been employed by one of Marcus Daly's corporations as a contractor to build a large house prior to 1898. A. J. CAMPBELL was employed for the first time in the summer of 1898 to do one piece of work as a lawyer for one of Daly's corporations.

The evidence tends to show that Whiteside was unfriendly to W. A. Clark, and that he made a threat to "explode a bomb" if Clark became a candidate for the Senate; and that about the same day Marcus Daly, in New York, made a threat "to run W. A. Clark and his family out of the State of Montana."

On or about the 15th day of December, 1898, A. J. CAMPBELL and Whiteside met. Whiteside called on Mr. CAMPBELL in his office to obtain the advice of Mr. CAMPBELL, and informed Mr. CAMPBELL of his plan to act with Mr. Clark's friends and secure Mr. Clark's confidence and then betray and destroy him. Mr. CAMPBELL had no difficulty in advising Whiteside as to how he could best betray and destroy his friend, W. A. Clark. That interview was private, and all we know of it is what the parties have consented to give us; but we learn of them that Mr. CAMPBELL gave to Whiteside advice full of grim, blunt wisdom.

After Mr. CAMPBELL had heard the plan to entrap and betray his friend, he told Whiteside, in substance, "Do not rely on your own evidence to prove the charges." Thus CAMPBELL and Whiteside became united in a common cause, in December, 1898. And from that time Whiteside had the benefit of CAMPBELL'S advice. And Whiteside, if you credit his account of himself, acted well and naturally the part of spy and traitor, and did "explode a bomb."

After the legislature adjourned Mr. CAMPBELL, with Marcus Daly's money, went into the business of buying newspapers and hiring editors and set them to work. He also became actively engaged in the business of hiring detectives with Daly's money. Among other hard cases he employed one Benjamin Hill and set him to hunting up evidence against his friend. And Mr. CAMPBELL gives a graphic account of how Hill brought to his office a sealed letter from Bickford to Roote, and how he caused Hill to open the letter for CAMPBELL to read. And, after reading, it was interesting to hear Mr. CAMPBELL describe how the letter was carefully resealed and sent on by Hill to its destination.

Mr. CAMPBELL sent his man Hill, with his clerk, Mr. Little, to get certain affidavits. The affidavits were obtained, and the men who made them received about $100 each for their pay from Mr. Little and about $150 more for each out of checks drawn by Little on CAMPBELL and paid by him out of Daly's money. Mr. CAMPBELL stated this matter composedly, and, though he did not justify what was done, as he did the opening and reading of a sealed letter, he stated that he assumed the responsibility for the transaction. The man Hill, for hunting up witnesses and buying and making affidavits, received from Mr. CAMPBELL about $1,500 out of Daly's money, according to the evidence.

Mr. CAMPBELL became Daly's agent to disburse money without limit as to amount, and he disbursed it in that way. And in 1899 Mr. CAMPBELL was employed by a corporation controlled by Mr. Daly at a salary of $5,000 per annum.

When last heard from Mr. CAMPBELL had disbursed about $40,000 of Daly's money in this case, and had incurred liabilities for fees to eminent counsel, amounts not named, and still had power to go on spending without limit as to amount. He conducted this case as leading counsel, and became also one of the principal witnesses, but other counsel made the arguments.

Mr. CAMPBELL employed many detectives or spies and paid them most liberally with Daly's money; and he wrote divers letters to his professional detective, L. D. McLean. In one of them he says:

"It is hinted this morning that there were some matters being investigated by the grand jury which might implicate myself, Fred Whiteside, or, perhaps, W. A. Clark, of Virginia City. It is a mere rumor, and I don't believe there is anything in it at all. It may be it has something to do with elections last fall, which will probably not implicate me, but might implicate some of the so called Daly people. * * * Perhaps you had better get a list of the grand jury and find some fellow that you can 'jolly' a little."

Attorney-General Nolan claimed and received the combined assistance of Messrs. CAMPBELL and Whiteside. He attended before the grand jury and examined witnesses concerning this case and took notes of the testimony in shorthand and afterwards wrote out his notes—not in the words of the witnesses, but the substance in narrative form; and afterwards he attached this so-called evidence before the grand jury to the information which he filed in the supreme court against Wellcome; and to aid CAMPBELL and Whiteside in their search after evidence the attorney-general wrote a formal letter to Mr. A. J. CAMPBELL, promising immunity from prosecution and the governor's pardon to any and all witnesses who would testify about bribery of legislators.

This so-called evidence before the grand jury was much used in this case, and Attorney-General Nolan was examined as a witness before the committee as to matters relevant and irrelevant. He could not be induced to see the slightest impropriety in his disclosure of the secrets of the grand jury, or in this wholesale promise of pardons specially given for the use of Mr. CAMPBELL in the work in which he was then engaged. This attorney-general came to Washington, took an active part in the prosecution and in suggesting witnesses, and on the witness stand could not conceal his bias.

A large part of the evidence taken by the committee and submitted to the Senate is irrelevant to the matter of inquiry. Take as a sample the matter of what is called the attempt to bribe the supreme court and the attorney general. This transaction, so far as we are informed, occurred six or seven months after the Senatorial election; no fact proved connects Mr. Clark with any part of that transaction. Dr. Treacy had no sort of connection, directly or indirectly, with Mr. Clark; and if he had, there was no connection between the election in January and the supreme judges in the fall of that year.

You can not lawfully charge a man with one crime and prove that he committed that crime by proving that he did commit another crime. The Constitution provides that the accused must "be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation." No mention of the judges of the supreme court of Montana was made in the charges against Mr. Clark. All of that evidence was nothing more than what lawyers call "coloring matter." And it was admitted against the protest of the Senator from Maryland and others.

And in the conduct of this case much other mere "coloring matter" was received as evidence.

In the report made for the committee there are several curious statements of a part of the evidence as to the thing stated. For example, it is stated that Senator Clark, in June, 1899, destroyed the checks which he had drawn on his bank. But the report fails to state that for years past it was his habit to destroy his checks when his account was rendered by the bank and examined. And the report failed to state that the committee had the bank account of Mr. Clark during all the time in which it was charged that money had been illegally used.

And there is another feature of that report which should be noticed. Statements are made as facts which are based only on the testimony of a witness of doubtful credit, and that testimony plainly contradicted.

The only proposition for which we contend is, that this is a judicial case, and a committee of the Senate ought to consider and report it as judges.

E. W. PETTUS.
W. A. HARRIS.

[Senate Report No. 1052, part 2, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session.]

MONTANA SENATORIAL ELECTION.

The Committee on Privileges and Elections on April 23, 1900, made a report to the Senate (No. 1052) unanimously recommending the adoption by the Senate of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That William A. Clark was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the Senate of the United States by the legislature of the State of Montana."

The committee also reported the findings and reasons leading to their recommendation. Two members of the committee submitted on the same day certain views of the minority which, while agreeing to the resolution reported by the committee, condemned some alleged methods adopted by the committee and criticised some alleged acts of the chairman. These views of the minority were not seen by the majority until after the report was printed, but the text of the principal report had been seen by the two members of the committee, and some changes had been made therein in deference to their suggestions.

On the 15th day of May Senator Clark addressed the Senate on a question of privilege, and, after making a lengthy statement, informed the Senate that on the 11th day of May he had notified the governor of Montana that he resigned as Senator; and after making his address Mr. Clark retired from the Senate. His statement contained various criticisms of the report which had been made by the committee.

Upon an examination of the criticisms made by Senator Clark and those made in the additional views of the two members, a majority of the committee make up a supplemental report, as follows:

The distinct criticisms made by Mr. Clark on May 15 of the report of the committee are not serious in their character, and it is fortunate that they were made because they may be taken as being all the criticisms which the party most at interest can claim can justly be made. The correctness of all other statements made by the committee not criticised by Senator Clark may be taken to be admitted by him. All his statements will not be now reviewed, but some of them should be noticed by the committee.

He complains that the method of procedure of the committee was unfair and nonjudicial, and that testimony was received contrary to the established rules of evidence, hearsay and irrelevant testimony, and that the case was like the Dreyfus case, where there was a constant presumption of guilt instead of innocence.

The answers to this complaint are simple.

(1) That no such testimony was received except after deliberate decision by the committee for the purpose of ascertaining what additional witnesses it might be necessary to summon, as stated by the chairman on page 432 of the testimony, as follows:

"The CHAIRMAN. It would only be admissible as laying the foundation for sending for other witnesses."

(2) That no single finding of the committee has been based upon hearsay testimony.

The finding of the whole committee that the election was null and void was based upon the admitted or undisputed facts with their attendant circumstances, and no facts are recited in the report of the committee beyond the admitted and undisputed facts except in those cases where any denial of those facts is distinctly recited.

The methods of procedure were in no case unfair, but were such as ordinarily prevail in investigations like this.

The presumption of innocence was at no time disregarded, and findings unfavorable to Mr. Clark was made as a court or jury would have made them upon a full and fair consideration of all the facts in the case.

He denies the conclusion of the committee that a sufficient number of legislators were corrupted to change the result of the election.

This criticism is merely the complaint that the committee differed in opinion from him and his eminent counsel, and made findings contrary to their desires.

He complains that stress was laid by the committee upon the comparative financial condition of two or three legislators before and after the Senatorial contest, and asserts that their explanations of the circumstances would have been received, the presumption being that if their financial condition was better that result happened honestly.

The answer to this complaint is that while such is the ordinary presumption, the many facts in this case overcome that presumption, in the opinion of the committee, and that there were not, as Mr. Clark now asserts, satisfactory explanations of the circumstances.

Speaking particularly of the facts which the committee claim are "admitted or undisputed," he refers to the statement made by the committee that he had been constantly a candidate for office. He does not deny the fact stated by the committee, but proceeds to distinctly admit it. The statement was not made as the "leading part" of the third subdivision of the committee's report, but only as preliminary to the statement in such third subdivision that Senator Clark, being a candidate for Senator, organized a Clark committee and gave that committee unlimited authority to make political expenditures from money which he agreed to furnish and which was estimated at not less than $110,000.

He continues to claim that he was not a candidate for Senator until December, 1898, and defies anyone to show the contrary. The contrary is easily shown by statements of his own committee. Mr. Hauser states that he was a candidate, and Mr. Davidson states that he was a candidate. The whole sum and substance of the movement of himself and friends were only to make Mr. Clark a United States Senator, and his money was furnished and expended for that purpose.

He complains that testimony was excluded concerning the character of Mr. Daly's efforts to defeat him when he was a candidate for Senator in 1893, and he read in the Senate a long ex parte affidavit of George E. McGrath. It appears that this affidavit was made February 19, 1900, concerning transactions which Mr. McGrath said he knew about in 1893, and which were never previously put on paper. The committee properly declined to retry the contest of 1893.

He also complains that testimony was excluded of Folk and wife as to an attempt by Mr. Whiteside to bribe Mr. Folk with an offer of $1,000 to give him access to the ballots connected with Mr. Whiteside's own election to the State senate. The committee on due consideration twice decided to reject this evidence as raising a collateral issue the trial and decision of which might lead to an interminable investigation. It may be added, however, that the chairman of the committee on both occasions was in favor of receiving the evidence, however much the incidental inquiry might delay the case.

He denies the averment that he early began negotiations with Mr. Hobson, the Republican leader, saying of this averment: "Not one statement of which is sustained by the testimony."

The statement of the committee was based partly upon the fact that the so-called "Whiteside exposure" took place January 10, and that on January 15 Senator Clark wrote a letter to Senator Hobson declaring himself to be a protectionist, and there was no dispute that this letter was written in order to secure through Senator Hobson Republican votes for Mr. Clark for Senator.

He also denies that he bought the $48,000 of Mr. Powers's stock in Mr. Hobson's bank on account of the Senatorial controversy. By his own testimony (p. 1891) it appears that he bought the stock for the following reason:

"Mr. CAMPBELL. Where is the stock now?

"Senator CLARK. It is in my bank now, in the bank of W. A. Clark & Co., Butte, Mont. I was going to say, if the committee will allow me, that I would like to give, briefly, a little narrative of that transaction.

"After the election was over Senator Phillips spoke to me about the bank stock, the stock owned by Mr. Powers in the Fergus County Bank, and said that Mr. Powers was somewhat indignant as to the action of Mr. Hobson in voting for me, and that he might give him trouble in some way. He was a little concerned about it. I asked him some questions about it, what stock Mr. Powers owned, and what he thought about the value of the stock. He said he was certain that the stock was first class and would return good dividends. So I said, 'If it is a good investment, if I am assured that it is a good investment, and Mr. Powers should give any trouble to Mr. Hobson about this stock, I would be very willing to buy it,' as I was seeking good investments.

"I went, I think I went, to Mr. Hobson, or met him. I am not sure that I went for that purpose.

"Mr. CAMPBELL. You went to whom? To Mr. Hobson?

"Senator CLARK. Mr. Hobson. I spoke to Mr. Hobson about the stock and mentioned something about the conversation with Mr. Phillips, and asked him about the stock, and if there was any danger of his getting into trouble with his partner, Mr. Powers, who was interested with him. He said he did not know that there was, but there might be; it might be possible that something might arise that would put him in bad shape, so far as his financial interest was concerned there. I think he said something about his telling him to sell or to buy his stock. That conversation is not very clear in my mind, but it was something of that nature.

As to the statements of Senator Clark that the result of the admission of perjured testimony was "damaging in the extreme" to his case, the attention of the Senate should be distinctly called to the statement made by the committee on page 13, that all the witnesses whose conduct has occasioned comment had been originally employed by Senator Clark, or his committee, or his friends.

He complains of the committee for giving any weight to those parts of the Montana laws against bribery, which limit expenditures by candidates, and require candidates and their committees to make returns.

The expressed view of the committee was that the disobedience of those laws, which rendered Mr. Clark and his committee liable to criminal prosecutions, furnished "strong additional reasons for believing the other evidence which seems to them to establish the corruption charged." Those laws were specially made by the legislature of Montana on February 25, 1895, in order to redeem the State from its bad condition and repute, and should not have been defied by Mr. Clark, Mr. McDermott, Mr. Davidson, and his other assistants.

He states that no proof was adduced that he had any knowledge of corruption on the part of his agents, and that no charge of complicity had been made in the report. His language in his letter of May 11 to the governor of Montana is as follows:

"None of the charges affecting my personal honor or which allege that I had personally been guilty of corrupt practices have been sustained by the finding of the committee."

Against this assertion there should be placed the explicit and unequivocal statement of the committee in their report, on page 12, in the following words:

"It is also a reasonable conclusion upon the whole case that Senator Clark is fairly to be charged with knowledge of the acts done in his behalf by his committee and his agents conducting his canvass. He arrived in Helena from Butte on January 4, and was in constant conference with his committee and agents."

In view of the issue thus made, it is important to reexamine some of the facts showing exactly what Senator Clark's personal connection has been with the circumstances which have resulted in his resignation from the Senate.

It is not intended to reiterate at any length facts stated in the report to prove the correctness of what is asserted in the foregoing extract.

The preliminary arrangements for so influencing the nominations and elections to the legislature that he could be chosen Senator were made by Mr. Clark personally, as appears under the third head of the report. Nothing since the hearing closed has tended to impair the facts stated concerning Senator Clark's own personal connection with the course of his canvass for election as Senator.

In the case of Mr. E. C. Day, recited under the fourteenth head of the report, it appears that the transactions originated with Mr. Clark himself, who, on February 13, in writing, personally directed that the $5,000 should be given to Mr. Day for his services in the legislature and as a retainer as counsel in the future. Mr. Clark says that he wishes to correct a misstatement. He says, "I never wrote a letter couched in such language," but he then proceeds to say that the amount was paid to Mr. Day as a testimonial of friendship. The gloss which Mr. Clark now tries to put upon a very serious transaction of his own is not consistent with the language of Mr. Day, quoted in the report. In opposition to Mr. Clark's statement in the Senate may be put his testimony before the committee, as follows:

"Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Day voted for you during the canvass?

"Senator CLARK. Mr. Day voted for me.

"Mr. CAMPBELL. Yes; he was one of the leaders of your force?

"Senator CLARK. Yes, sir.

"Mr. CAMPBELL. And was the recognized leader for what was called the Clark faction of the Democratic party?

"Senator CLARK. He ran as speaker of the house of representatives, I believe, representing our forces.

"Mr. CAMPBELL. And upon the floor of the house he was the recognized leader for the Clark forces, was he not?

"Senator CLARK. I am not sure of that. I think he was. I never was in the house of representatives or in the joint assembly.

"Mr. CAMPBELL. Do you not know, as a matter of fact, that he was the man who made the motion to take a second ballot upon the day on which your election occurred?

"Senator CLARK. Yes; I believe he was. I think he was recognized as the leader of the Clark forces in the house of representatives.

"Mr. CAMPBELL. And four days after your election you made him a present of $5,000?

"Senator CLARK. Yes, sir.

"Mr. CAMPBELL. What was that for?

"Senator CLARK. It was in consideraion of my friendship for Mr. Day, and for the work performed by him in trying to organize the legislature—to be elected speaker and in order to control our forces, in which, however, we failed. I recognized that he was worthy of this consideration. We expected to have, from the talk that was going around, more or less trouble or litigation, and Mr. Day was to take charge of everything of that kind, and has done so."

In the case of Mr. McLaughlin, stated under the sixth head of the report, Mr. Clark says of the statement of the committee that "in December, 1898, Senator Clark began negotiations with one H. W. McLaughlin, a member of the legislature, for the purchase of his wood lots and sawmills." "This statement, Mr. President, is not correct;" and he proceeds to justify this charge by stating that the negotiations were begun by Mr. Bickford and not by himself in the month of September before Mr. McLaughlin was ever nominated for the legislature.

The fact was that Mr. McLaughlin and Mr. Bickford did enter into preliminary negotiations, without doubt growing out of Mr. McLaughlin's expected nomination and election to the legislature. The committee regarded all the excuses given for the purchase by Mr. Clark directly and personally of all Mr. McLaughlin's property at an extravagant price as a very clear case of improper arrangement with a member of the legislature. Although Mr. Clark calls the McLaughlin incident a "weak case" and a "flimsy expedient," the facts are convincing as to the character and purpose of the so-called "purely business enterprise."

As to the Woods case, stated under the seventh head of the report, Mr. Clark says that the statement of the report that he knew of Mr. Bickford's attempt to purchase the indebtedness which Woods owed is absolutely unfounded, and that he never heard of the transaction until it was disclosed in the testimony during the investigation. It is true that the scheme for controlling Mr. Woods by buying up his indebtedness originated with Mr. Bickford, and that Mr. Bickford on December 31, 1898, went to Missoula with five $1,000 bills and four $500 bills, which he had obtained from C. W. Clark for that purpose. But it also appears that Senator Clark, in response to letters from Dr. Ector, took up the case of Mr. Woods and came to comprehend what was intended.

Mr. Ector's letter to Mr. Clark of December 7, 1898, and Mr. Clark's letters to Mr. Ector of December 10, 1898, and January 4, 1899, leave little doubt that Senator Clark knew what Mr. Bickford was engaged in doing, especially in view of the fact that Mr. Ector's letters of November 17, 1898, and January 3, 1899, are not produced.

In the case of Mr. B. F. Fine, stated under the twelfth head of the report, it is not denied that the arrangement with him to work for Mr. Clark, for which he received $5,000 for nominal or useless services, was made by Mr. Clark personally during the session of the legislature after Mr. Clark's election. The criticism made by Senator Clark is "that there was no agreement, but merely a statement made by me to him after my election." This different form of putting the case is not material. The committee did not claim that Mr. Fine would not have voted for Mr. Clark had it not been for this arrangement, but that it was like the case of Mr. E. C. Day, a payment afterwards for services as a member of the legislature under circumstances which at least aroused suspicion that there was an understanding to that effect before the election.

In the case of Mr. Z. T. Cason, who gives an account of Mr. Bickford's efforts to induce him to endeavor to corrupt Mr. Marcyes, it appears from Mr. Clark's own testimony that he had interviews with Mr. Cason, and at last on the 3d day of February, 1899, sent to Mr. Cason $500 in a letter giving thanks for his services. The personal activity of Senator Clark in conducting the details of his canvass is thus very clearly indicated.

The testimony of Mr. Cason was not credited by the committee, because he wrote a recantation at the instigation of Mr. Jesse B. Root, Mr. Wellcome's law partner, upon receiving $1,500 from Mr. Root for copying and signing the recantation and going into hiding in Baker City, Oreg., as stated on page 13 of the report. But Senator Clark's own testimony as to his relation with Cason and his letter to him inclosing the $500 stand as undisputed facts.

As to the approach to Mr. Justice William H. Hunt, of the supreme court of Montana, stated on page 14 of the report, while it does not directly appear that Senator Clark had knowledge of this approach made by Dr. Treacy, who also in a similar way approached Attorney-General Nolan, yet there stands against Senator Clark the significant fact, proved by Mr. Clark's letter to Rev. A. B. Martin, that he urged Mr. Martin to approach Chief Justice Brantley in order to prevent the disbarment of "that splendid man, John B. Wellcome." This admitted fact certainly justifies a strong suspicion that the other attempts to reach the court made by Dr. Treacy, under the circumstances narrated in the report, were known to Senator Clark.

Reference will now be made in this report to the criticisms of the chairman made by the minority of the committee in their addendum to the report, by annexing the following memorandum by the chairman.

MEMORANDUM BY THE CHAIRMAN.

The statement that the chairman left the committee little to do is unjust. The chairman did nothing except what such an officer is expected to do. Every important ruling was made either by decision of the committee or by the chairman in the first instance after an order of the committee was made prescribing that course of proceeding, with the understanding that any member of the committee might dissent on any point and have it decided by the vote of the committee.

The minority say that the committee made an order at the beginning appointing the chairman and another member to determine what witnesses should be summoned, and it was determined that way at first, but the chairman kindly relieved the other member of that labor and determined that matter for the committee. The Senator from Alabama and the chairman were appointed to consider in the first instance applications for subpœnas for witnesses.

Forty-four witnesses were summoned and heard for the prosecution, 41 witnesses summoned and heard for the defense, and 7 witnesses summoned directly by the committee. As to witnesses for the prosecution and defense, the lists which were submitted in the first instance by the two sides were deliberately considered by the chairman and the Senator from Alabama, and every question arising was passed upon.

Those lists covered three-quarters of the witnesses summoned. Subsequently in some few cases the chairman summoned witnesses where previous decisions to summon had established a principle which covered the new requests, and there the formality of consulting the Senator from Alabama may have been omitted. Such cases probably did not exceed a dozen. Various witnesses are upon the list who came to Washington without being summoned, and were called to the stand by the respective parties. The question of summoning witnesses to prove the attempt upon the supreme court of Montana was decided by the whole committee; and it may be further and finally added that, so far as Senator Clark was concerned, there was no refusal to summon any witness whom his counsel insisted upon obtaining.

While the chairman was sick at his house he received an important communication, which seemed to him to require the instantaneous summoning of two witnesses. For those witnesses he telegraphed immediately, and at once sent to the committee a report of what he had done, in the following words, on the 3d of March, 1900:

"There are two more witnesses whom I have taken the responsibility of summoning, and do not wish to state the facts and reasons until I am sure that I shall get them here. The principal witness claims to be sick."

The circumstances connected with the summoning of this principal witness are detailed in memorandum which is in the hands of the committee. His name is J. A. Largent, of Greatfalls, Mont.

Another statement, on page 24, of the two Senators is that the report fails to state in connection with the destruction by Senator Clark, in June, 1899, of his checks, that it was his habit to destroy such checks. The two Senators are mistaken. The report distinctly states that fact on page 11, where it says that the destruction of the checks was "in accordance with what he testified was his custom."

Another statement of the two Senators is that "statements are made as facts which are based only on the testimony of a witness of doubtful credit, and that testimony plainly contradicted." This is an error. The report from beginning to end shows no statement made as a fact unless it is an undisputed fact, and no conclusion appears to be reached by the majority of the committee on contradicted testimony without the contradiction being plainly noted; and one important statement appearing on page 8 should be constantly borne in mind, that, laying aside substantially all the controverted facts, "there would still remain sufficient evidence in the case to lead the committee to find, as they do, that Mr. Clark's election is void."

WM. E. CHANDLER.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, this untimely, protracted, and most remarkable performance of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] forces us all to remember that we are sons of Adam, and have inherited a very large amount of human nature. It teaches us a sad lesson, which ought to be emphasized so that we shall not forget it.

Mr. President, if we inflict a great injury upon a man we are absolutely certain to hate him. Why? The cause is that every time we see him and every time we hear of him we feel mean, and we charge our bad feelings on to that man whom we have thus wronged, and we hate him for our own bad conduct.

Mr. President, this has been a terrible picture we have had here to-night. Let us turn away in sadness and pass on.

Mr. CHANDLER. I am sorry I disturbed the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PETTUS]. I have no hatred for Senator Clark. I simply joined the Senator from Alabama in a declaration that the election of Mr. Clark was null and void for bribery, and that he ought to go out of the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, I present the credentials of Hon. William A. Clark, chosen a Senator by the legislature of the State of Montana for the term beginning March 4, 1901, which I ask may be read and filed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The credentials will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

In the name and by the authority of the State of Montana.

To the President of the Senate of the United States:

This is to certify that on the 16th day of January, 1901, William Andrews Clark was duly chosen and elected by the legislature of the State of Montana a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of six years, beginning on the 4th day of March, 1901.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the great seal of the State of Montana to be affixed at my office, at Helena, the 24th day of January, in the year of our Lord 1901, and in the one hundred and twenty-fifth year of the independence of the United States of America.

JOSEPH K. TOOLE, Governor.

By the governor.
[SEAL.] GEORGE M. HAYS,
Secretary of State.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The credentials will be placed on file.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 4509) extending to the city of Everett, Wash., a subport of entry, the privileges of the act approved June 10, 1883, governing the immediate transportation of dutiable goods.

The message also announced that the House had passed with amendments the bill (S. 4687) for the relief of Richard H. Townley, a lieutenant (junior grade) on the retired list of the United States Navy; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House insists upon its amendments to the bill (S. 5593) to provide for two additional associate justices of the supreme court of the Territory of Oklahoma, and for other purposes; agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. WARNER, Mr. GIBSON, and Mr. LLOYD managers on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 1452) to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to John C. Weckler;

A bill (H. R. 3003) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to loan naval equipment to certain military schools;

A bill (H. R. 13530) to provide an American register for the foreign-built ship Balclutha; and

A bill (H. R. 14314) to amend section 37 of an act entitled "An act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January 12, 1895.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate to print 10,000 additional copies of the report of Dr. V. R. Chestnut and Dr. E. V. Wilcox of their investigation of plants poisonous to stock in Montana.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate to print 6,000 copies of the Legislative History of the General Staff of the Army of the United States.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate to print 2,200 copies of the military laws of the United States.

The message also announced that the House had passed, with an amendment, the concurrent resolution of the Senate to print 3,000 copies of the special expert reports as prepared under the direction of the committee on awards of the Columbian Exposition held in Chicago in 1893; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 425) for the relief of John M. Davis;

A bill (S. 437) for the relief of Isaac McConnaughay, private, Company H, Fortieth Iowa Infantry Volunteers;

A bill (S. 1632) to amend an act authorizing certain officers of the Navy and Marine Corps to administer oaths, approved January 25, 1895;

A joint resolution (S. R. 158) ratifying agreement between Tennessee and Virginia with reference to the boundary line of said States.

DELIVERY OF IONIC COLUMNS TO BALTIMORE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill from the House of Representatives, the title of which will be stated, and calls the attention of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLINGTON] to it.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 13776) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to deliver to the mayor and city council of Baltimore, Md., Ionic columns.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of that bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN C. WECKLER.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill from the House of Representatives, the title of which will be stated, to which he calls the attention of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON].

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 1452) to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to John C. Weckler.

Mr. MASON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ELKINS. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce to report three House bridge bills, for which I ask present consideration. They have been passed by the House of Representatives and are reported upon favorably by the Committee on Commerce.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia will please retain the reports for the present, until the Chair can lay before the Senate bills on his table.

Mr. ELKINS. Very well.

COURT AT SHERMAN, TEX.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill from the House of Representatives, the title of which will be stated, and calls the attention of the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON] to it.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 14260) to amend an act entitled "An act to constitute a new division of the eastern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for the holding of terms of court at Sherman, Tex., and for the appointment of a clerk for said court, and for other purposes," approved February 19, 1901.

Mr. CULBERSON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on this day approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 2799) to carry into effect the stipulations of article 7 of the treaty between the United States and Spain concluded on the 10th day of December, 1898; and

An act (S. 3535) for the relief of the Brooklyn Ferry Company, of New York.

ENLISTED MEN OF THE NAVY OR MARINE CORPS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill from the House of Representatives, the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 14309) for the reward of enlisted men of the Navy or Marine Corps.

Mr. HALE. I ask that that bill may be now taken up and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read in full for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any enlisted man of the Navy or Marine Corps who shall have distinguished himself in battle or displayed extraordinary heroism in the line of his profession shall, upon the recommendation of his commanding officer, approved by the flag-officer and the Secretary of the Navy, receive a gratuity and medal of honor as provided for seamen in section 1407 of the Revised Statutes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. BUTLER. I ask the Senator from Maine how does that change the existing law? The statute provides for giving this gratuity and these medals to certain men, and I want to know what change in the existing law this bill makes.

Mr. HALE. This is more specific, and makes it entirely certain that medals will be given to the men who are covered by the bill.

Mr. BUTLER. Who are covered by existing law?

Mr. HALE. The Department prepared this bill upon the ground that it was necessary in order to cover the men without selection by the Department. It applies to all men who are engaged not for specific service, but for all who are engaged in the general service.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand, then, that the present law provides that the Department may select a certain number?

Mr. HALE. There is a selection.

Mr. BUTLER. Can not the Department select the whole number?

Mr. HALE. Of course they can, but in this case they are not called upon to select. This makes it general.

Mr. BUTLER. Do I understand it to apply to everybody in an engagement?

Mr. HALE. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BUTLER. I feel that I should like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs another question. The wording of this bill still requires the Department to determine who has displayed this degree of gallantry and bravery. Is not selection still required by the Department?

Mr. HALE. It applies to all men in the Navy, not only those who are technically seamen, but to enlisted men—the entire range of employment in the Navy. Perhaps the Senator is not aware of the fact that the term "seaman," as covered by the present statute, is very limited in its application in the Navy. For instance, in the last twelve months the Navy has only been able to enlist about 300 sailors or seamen, and the general enlistments that have been made are not covered by that phrase. This applies to all of the enlisted men in the Navy, and not merely to the seamen or sailors.

Mr. BUTLER. What is the difference between the seamen and enlisted men who would be in an engagement and might distinguish themselves?

Mr. HALE. About 1 in 10, or perhaps 1 in 20, is a seaman or sailor, and the rest are enlisted as landsmen.

Mr. BUTLER. The present law, then, restricts the selection of the Department from those known technically as seamen?

Mr. HALE. Seamen or sailors. This bill applies to all the men who enlist in the Navy.

Mr. BUTLER. The Department now selects from the seamen—not all of the seamen—but it makes the selection from certain seamen?

Mr. HALE. Under this bill it selects from the entire enlisted men—landsmen, seamen, sailors, and all.

Mr. BUTLER. But the Department still makes the selection?

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

Mr. BUTLER. This bill simply broadens the number from which the selection may be made?

Mr. HALE. It applies to all of the men, what you may call in the Navy the rank and file.

Mr. BUTLER. That may remove still another objection, but there is still selection by the Department according to the degree of gallantry or bravery?

Mr. HALE. That is provided for in the bill.

Mr. BUTLER. I understood the Senator at first to say that this was to remove that discrimination and to relieve the Department from the burden of discriminating.

Mr. HALE. I did not mean that. I mean it enlarges the eligibility of the men who may be appointed or may be selected. It covers all the men in the Navy.

Mr. BUTLER. In the case of a man distinguished for bravery or courage or gallantry there would still, under this bill, be an incentive to him for promotion and reward, just the same as under the present law?

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

Mr. BUTLER. Except that the landsmen may be rewarded for gallantry and bravery just as those who are technically called seamen may be?

Mr. HALE. The constituency is widened.

Mr. BUTLER. Very well.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXPENDITURES OF ISTHMIAN CANAL COMMISSION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals:

To the Senate:

I transmit herewith a report from the Acting Secretary of State, in response to the resolution of the Senate of March 2, 1901, calling upon the Secretary of State for "an account, in detail, of the expenditures of the Isthmian Canal Commission, of which Admiral John G. Walker is president, up to date, and what sum, if any, is needed to complete the work of said commission and for what purposes the same is needed."

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, March 2, 1901.

EXECUTION OF CHINESE OFFICIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying paper, ordered to lie on the table and be printed:

To the Senate:

In response to the resolution of the Senate of February 9, 1901, requesting information as to "whether the United States minister to China has joined the representatives of other powers at Pekin in demanding the execution of Prince Tuan and other Chinese officials, and if so, by whom he was authorized to join in making such demand," I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, March 2, 1901.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 3003) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to loan naval equipment to certain military schools was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The bill (H. R. 13530) to provide an American register for the foreign-built ship Balclutha was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The bill (H. R. 14314) to amend section 37 of an act entitled "An act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January 12, 1895, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

CHARLES J. CLARK.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas, Mr. WOLCOTT, and Mr. ELKINS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] is recognized.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. If there is no morning business, I suppose the motion made by me to take up Calendar No. 2413 is in order.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the Senator from Arkansas yield to me for a moment?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. ELKINS. I was recognized by the Chair some time since to make reports from the Committee on Commerce.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia was recognized by the Chair to report three bills, but h asked unanimous consent for the consideration of the three bills, and the Chair asked him to yield while the Chair laid some House bills before the Senate.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, I appeal to the Senator from West Virginia to allow me to have passed a little pension bill. It will take but a moment. It is one of those unanimous-consent bills, less than an inch long. It can go through in a moment.

Mr. ELKINS. I will yield to the Senator, if by so doing my bills will not be prejudiced.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I assure the Senator the bill I desire to have considered will take but a moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Colorado asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill, the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 5084) granting a pension to Charles J. Clark.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 6, after the word "lieutenant-colonel," to strike out the word "of;" and in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "thirty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles J. Clark, late lieutenant-colonel Twenty-third Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OPENING OF LANDS IN OKLAHOMA.

Mr. ELKINS. Mr. President——

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I desire to present a conference report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The conference report will be received and read.

The Secretary read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the amendment No. 2 of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12901) to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of lands, etc., having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to amendment numbered 2 of the Senate, and agree to the same.

H. C. HANSBROUGH,
THOMAS H. CARTER,
HENRY HEITFELD,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

JOHN F. LACEY,
F. W. MONDELL,
JOHN F. SHAFROTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, I am willing to yield for morning business, but I am not willing to yield to Senators to take up bills that will consume more time than it would take to dispose of the resolution which I ask the Senate to vote on.

Mr. ELKINS. I should like to have the Senator allow me to bring to the attention of the Senate the bridge bills I desire to report.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I have no objection to Senators making reports, but I can not give way for the purpose of allowing bills to be passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Quite a number of Senators have adopted the rather unusual course of handing in their names to the presiding officer to be recognized for the purpose of calling up bills.

Mr. ALDRICH. I shall object to any House bills unless we can take them up in order on the Calendar and dispose of the unobjected House bills. It seems to me that is the thing that ought to be done.

Mr. ELKINS. The bills I have in charge are bridge bills.

Mr. ALDRICH. Bridge bills have no higher claim than any other bills.

Mr. DANIEL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected House bills.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I demand the regular order—the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS] can report his bills and have them placed on the Calendar.

REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. ELKINS, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 14093) to authorize the Paris, Choctaw and Little Rock Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across Red River, in the State of Texas, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with amendments:

A bill (H. R. 13436) to authorize the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River; and

A bill (H. R. 14228) to authorize the city of Nashville, Tenn., to construct a free public bridge across the Cumberland River within the corporate limits of said city.

UNLAWFUL TRADE RESTRAINTS AND MONOPOLIES.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Now, Mr. President, the pending motion, I think, is my motion to take up Calendar No. 2413.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion was to proceed to the consideration of a resolution, which will be stated.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. JONES of Arkansas on February 16, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 10539) to amend an act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July 2, 1890, and that the Senate proceed to consider the same.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the resolution submitted by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES].

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, the question is not upon the resolution, but upon taking it up. It can not be anything else. The resolution is on the Calendar, and the Senator from Arkansas can only make one motion, and that is to take it up.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I think the Secretary did not read the last part of the resolution properly. I modified the resolution by striking out the words "and that the Senate proceed to consider the same;" so that the resolution is merely to discharge the committee from the further consideration of the bill named.

Mr. ALDRICH. The pending motion is a motion to take up the resolution.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. It is a motion to take up a resolution from the Calendar.

Mr. ALDRICH. That is right.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. That is all right. That is the motion—to take up the resolution.

Mr. ALDRICH. The resolution is not before the Senate; the resolution is on the Calendar, and can only be taken up by motion.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Then I move to take up the resolution if the Senator from Rhode Island is so technical.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arkansas. He moves to take up the resolution which has been read.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HEITFELD (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT] and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. MCMILLAN (when his name was called). I announce my pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY]. He is not present, and I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. MONEY (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCBRIDE]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY], who is absent. I therefore withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. MORGAN. I suggest to the Senator that we transfer our pairs.

Mr. SPOONER. That is satisfactory to me; and I will transfer my pair with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY] to the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY], who is paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], which will enable the Senator from Alabama and myself to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MORGAN. I vote "yea."

Mr. BATE (when Mr. TURLEY'S name was called). My colleague [Mr. TURLEY] is necessarily absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER], which has been transferred to the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] on this vote.

Mr. WETMORE (when his name was called). I inquire if the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that he has not voted.

Mr. WETMORE. I have a general pair with the Senator from Georgia, and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. NELSON. I inquire if the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that he has not voted.

Mr. NELSON. I have a general pair with that Senator, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. HANNA. I inquire if the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that he has not voted.

Mr. HANNA. I have a general pair with that Senator, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. HEITFELD. I suggest to the Senator from Ohio that we transfer our pairs, so that the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS] will stand paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], with whom I have a general pair.

Mr. HANNA. That is satisfactory to me. I vote "nay."

Mr. HEITFELD. I vote "yea."

Mr. KENNEY. I have a pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE], but I will transfer that pair to the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WETMORE. Under the announcement made by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. KENNEY] I am at liberty to vote, and I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 24, nays 36; as follows:

YEAS—24.

Allen,	Chilton,	McEnery,	Pettigrew,
Bate,	Clay,	McLaurin,	Sullivan,
Berry,	Culberson,	Mallory,	Taliaferro,
Butler,	Harris,	Martin,	Teller,
Caffery,	Heitfeld,	Mason,	Tillman,
Chandler,	Jones, Ark.	Morgan,	Wellington.

NAYS—36.

Aldrich,	Fairbanks,	Kearns,	Quarles,
Burrows,	Foraker,	Kenney,	Scott,
Carter,	Foster,	Lodge,	Simon,
Clark,	Frye,	McComas,	Spooner,
Cullom,	Gallinger,	McCumber,	Stewart,
Deboe,	Hanna,	Perkins,	Thurston,
Dillingham,	Hansbrough,	Platt, Conn.	Warren.
Dolliver,	Jones, Nev.	Pritchard,	Wetmore,
Elkins,	Kean,	Proctor,	Wolcott.

NOT VOTING—28.

Allison,	Daniel,	McBride,	Quay,
Bacon,	Depew,	McMillan,	Rawlins,
Baker,	Hale,	Money,	Sewell,
Bard,	Hawley,	Nelson,	Shoup,
Beveridge,	Hoar,	Penrose,	Turley,
Clapp,	Kyle,	Pettus,	Turner,
Cockrell,	Lindsay,	Platt, N. Y.	Vest.

So the motion to take up the resolution was rejected.

RICHARD H. TOWNLEY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4687) for the relief of Richard H. Townley, a lieutenant (junior grade) on the retired list of the United States Navy, which were, on page 2, line 4, to strike out all after "rank," down to and including line 9, and insert "of lieutenant (junior grade) on the foot of the active list;" and on page 2, line 13, to strike out all after "grade," down to and including "advanced," line 17.

Mr. TILLMAN. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

SAFETY APPLIANCES ON RAILROADS.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10302) to amend an act to promote the safety of employees, etc., by requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, etc., approved March 2, 1893.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by him.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope that will be done.

Mr. THURSTON. Let the bill be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. The bill has not been taken up.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask, if it is in order, that the bill may be read as it will read if the amendments proposed by the committee are adopted.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. For information.

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be read as if the amendments had been adopted.

Mr. THURSTON. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the Secretary will so read.

Mr. CULLOM. If the Senate will pardon me for a moment, the first paragraph, which is only a recitation of the title of the bill which it is proposed shall be amended——

Mr. ALDRICH. I suggest to the Senator from Illinois that any discussion had better be deferred until after the bill is taken up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill. That motion is now before the Senate, and is not debatable.

Mr. CULLOM. I know it is not, but I thought perhaps I might save some of the reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. PETTIGREW. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to have the bill read for information. That is what we started to do. It is very short, and I think I have a right to have it read as it will read if amended.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. That is debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hardly thinks the Senator from South Dakota can demand by right that the bill shall be read before it is before the Senate.

Mr. ALDRICH. Oh, no. Regular order!

Mr. KENNEY. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HANNA (when his name was called). If the Senator from Idaho [Mr. HEITFELD] will make the same arrangement that we did on the last roll call, it will enable both of us to vote.

Mr. HEITFELD. That is agreeable to me.

Mr. HANNA. I vote "nay."

Mr. KENNEY (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]. I transfer my pair to the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. If he were here, I should vote "yea."

Mr. WETMORE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON], but under the transfer of pairs announced by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. KENNEY], I will vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BURROWS. I am paired with the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY]. I should like to know if he has voted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed he has not.

Mr. BURROWS. I withhold my vote.

Mr. MORGAN. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] to the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY] and will vote. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 39, nays 21; as follows:

YEAS—39.

Allen,	Dolliver,	McComas,	Pritchard,
Bate,	Fairbanks,	McCumber,	Sullivan,
Butler,	Foraker,	McEnery,	Taliaferro,
Caffery,	Foster,	Mallory,	Teller,
Chandler,	Harris,	Martin,	Thurston,
Chilton,	Heitfeld,	Money,	Tillman,
Clay,	Jones, Ark.	Morgan,	Turner,
Cockrell,	Lindsay,	Perkins,	Warren,
Culberson,	Lodge,	Pettigrew,	Wellington.
Cullom,	McBride,	Pettus,

NAYS—21.

Aldrich,	Elkins,	Kearns,	Scott,
Allison,	Frye,	Kenney,	Stewart,
Carter,	Gallinger,	McLaurin,	Wetmore.
Clark,	Hanna,	Platt, Conn.
Deboe,	Hansbrough,	Proctor,
Dillingham,	Kean,	Quarles,

NOT VOTING—28.

Bacon,	Daniel,	McMillan,	Sewell,
Baker,	Depew,	Mason,	Shoup,
Bard,	Hale,	Nelson,	Simon,
Berry,	Hawley,	Penrose,	Spooner,
Beveridge,	Hoar,	Platt, N. Y.	Turley,
Burrows,	Jones, Nev.	Quay,	Vest.
Clapp,	Kyle,	Rawlins,	Wolcott.

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. THURSTON. I ask that the bill be read as it will stand when the committee amendments are agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The bill will be read as if the amendments were adopted.

Mr. CULLOM. Before the reading begins I desire to call the attention of the clerks to a failure to print the bill as it was intended to be. Page 2, line 22, of the bill as reported, after the word "or," the words "where any train, or" should be inserted. It was left out of the print. There should be a comma after the word "train."

Mr. PETTIGREW. The word "That" should be put in the beginning of line 17.

Mr. CULLOM. Yes.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the general manager, superintendent, or other proper officer of every common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad to make to the Interstate Commerce Commission, at its office in Washington, D. C., a monthly report, under oath, of all collisions of trains or where any train or part of a train accidentally leaves the track, and of all accidents which may occur to its passengers or employees, which report shall state the nature and causes thereof, and the circumstances connected therewith.

Mr. ALDRICH. I suggest to the chairman of the committee, after the words "all accidents which may occur," the insertion of the words "by reason thereof." If a man stubs his toe on a platform, I should take it for granted that the accident would not have to be reported.

Mr. CULLOM. Would it not be on a railroad?

Mr. PETTIGREW. If he is an employee, it should be reported.

Mr. CULLOM. Let us see.

Mr. THURSTON. That is good enough.

Mr. ALDRICH. It is not good enough for me.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is as good as the rest of the bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. After the words "all accidents which may occur," I move to insert "by reason thereof."

Mr. GALLINGER. The bill has not been read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Rhode Island will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "accidents" in line 23, page 2, it is proposed to insert the words "by reason thereof."

Mr. ALDRICH. That is all right.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the bill as it would read if amended, as follows:

SEC. 2. That any common carrier failing to make such report within thirty days after the end of any month shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof by a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $100 for each and every offense and for every day during which it shall fail to make such report after the time herein specified for making the same.

SEC. 3. That neither said report nor any part thereof shall be admitted as evidence or used for any purpose against such railroad so making such report in any suit or action for damages growing out of any matter mentioned in said report.

SEC. 4. That the Interstate Commerce Commission is authorized to prescribe for such common carriers a method and form for making the reports in the foregoing section provided.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I desire to say merely a word about this matter. This bill passed the House and came over here and was sent to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. An attempt was made several times to take it up in committee, but there was not a quorum present. It has now been reported by the committee, and I desire simply to submit this observation.

I voted for this amendment in order that the bill might be laid before the Senate and acted upon. Otherwise it would not have been reported at all. I desire to submit this further observation. This amendment or any amendment to the House bill means its defeat, for it can not pass the House at this session of Congress if amended here. Therefore I trust no amendment will be adopted.

Mr. CLARK. I should like to ask the chairman of the committee to interpret line 22 of the bill, or of the amendment, on page 2. I am so dense that I can not understand it.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Wyoming perhaps did not observe that I stated a few moments ago that in line 22 there were some words which were not printed which ought to be in the amendment.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Where is that?

Mr. CULLOM. Line 22, page 2. It should read:

Of all collisions of trains, or where any train or part of a train accidentally leaves the track, etc.

Mr. CLARK. In the confusion I missed that.

Mr. ALDRICH. In the eighth line, on page 3, I move to strike out the word "less" and insert the word "more."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Rhode Island will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 8, page 3, it is proposed to strike out the word "less" and insert "more," so as to read:

Shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. KENNEY. I desire to hear the context read in order to know what effect it will have on the general bill. I ask that the amendment be read in connection with the bill itself, so that we may understand it.

Mr. THURSTON. The present bill provides a fine for failure to comply with the act of not less than $100. The amendment would make the fine not more than $100. The present bill fixes a minimum; the amendment would fix a maximum fine.

Mr. SULLIVAN. It might be that a railroad company would pay the fine rather than comply with the order. It appears to me the amendment should not be adopted. To say that the company shall pay a fine of not less than $100 is one thing. To say it shall pay a fine of not more than $100 is a different matter.

Mr. TELLER. By the unanimous action of the Senate, we are to take a recess from half past 10, which hour will arrive now in five minutes, until 3 o'clock to-morrow. There is on the Calendar a large number of House pension bills and small claims that are not contested, and there is a great desire to have them taken up and disposed of. I desire to ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that we may so modify the unanimous-consent agreement of this afternoon that we may complete this bill and take, say, until 12 o'clock, and from 12 o'clock take a recess until 3 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. ALDRICH. That can not be done.

Mr. LODGE. I do not think we ought to modify that agreement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. TELLER. If there is objection, that ends it.

Mr. ALDRICH. So far as I am concerned, I am quite willing to do this—that the unanimous-consent agreement shall be modified so that we shall give forty minutes or even an hour, if necessary——

Mr. THURSTON. One hour.

Mr. ALDRICH. For the consideration of unobjected House bills——

Mr. TELLER. On the Calendar.

Mr. ALDRICH. Commencing at half past 10 and ending at half past 11, this bill to retain its place as the unfinished business, but not to be considered. Otherwise this bill will take up the whole of the time.

Mr. KENNEY. I ask the Senator whether he proposes to displace the pending bill without prejudice and take up unobjected House bills?

Mr. ALDRICH. Without prejudice.

Mr. TELLER. If we can agree to that——

Mr. CULLOM. I should like very much——

Mr. TELLER. Do not keep this bill here.

Mr. ALDRICH. It will certainly take up the whole hour, and I shall object to any arrangement of that sort.

Mr. TELLER. Let us get up these unobjected cases.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Colorado asks unanimous consent that when the hour for a recess which was agreed upon arrives one additional hour may be devoted to the consideration of unobjected House bills on the Calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. KENNEY. And nothing else.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall object until the pending bill has been disposed of.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I understood I had the floor, but I was taken off my feet, so to speak.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was not aware that the Senator from Mississippi was on the floor. The Senator is entitled to the floor.

Mr. SULLIVAN. That might be quite true, and yet it might be a fact that I was on the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I see there is one minute remaining—long enough to take a vote upon this bill—and for that reason I yield the floor.

Mr. WOLCOTT. We can not hear what the Senator from Mississippi is saying.

Mr. SULLIVAN. The Senator from Mississippi said there was time enough to take a vote on the bill now, if anyone wants to vote upon it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I should like to have the amendment stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will again be stated.

Mr. CULLOM. I desire to have the amendments of the committee first acted upon.

Mr. WOLCOTT. It is impossible to hear what is going on.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island offered an amendment, which is in order.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I should like to have it stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be again stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 8, page 3, it is proposed to strike out the word "less" and insert "more."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I should like to have the whole clause read, so that we can see how the bill would read if "less" were substituted for "more."

The Secretary read as follows:

SEC. 2. That any common carrier failing to make such report within thirty days after the end of any month shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof by a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100.

Mr. ALDRICH. I ask unanimous consent that the time of meeting to-morrow may be changed from 3 o'clock to 2 o'clock, and that the period between 2 and 3 o'clock be devoted to the consideration of unobjected House bills upon the Calendar.

Mr. PETTIGREW. To that I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island asks unanimous consent that the recess——

Mr. PETTIGREW. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made. The Senate will now take a recess until to-morrow at 3 o'clock.

Thereupon (at 10 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Sunday, March 3, 1901, at 3 o'clock p. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

[Continuation of proceedings of legislative day, Friday, March 1, 1901.]

The recess having expired, the House reassembled at 9 o'clock a. m. (Saturday, March 2, 1901), and was called to order by the Speaker.

BOUNDARIES OF VIRGINIA AND TENNESSEE.

Mr. RHEA of Virginia. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 158) ratifying agreement between Tennessee and Virginia with reference to the boundary line of said States.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That a recent compact or agreement having been made by and between the States of Tennessee and Virginia whereby the State of Tennessee, by an act of its legislature approved January 28, 1901, ceded to the State of Virginia certain territory specifically described in said act and being the northern half of the main street between the cities of Bristol, Va., and Bristol, Tenn., and the State of Virginia, by act of its general assembly, approved February 9, 1901, having accepted said cession of the State of Tennessee, the consent of Congress is hereby given to said contract or agreement between said States fixing the boundary line between said States as shown by said acts referred to, and the same is hereby ratified.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. RHEA of Virginia, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

H. R. 14018. An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

Mr. JENKINS. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary to ask the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 12665) supplementary to an act entitled "An act to prohibit the coming of Chinese persons into the United States," approved May 5, 1892, and fixing the compensation of commissioners in such cases.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be lawful for the district attorney of the district in which any Chinese person may be arrested for being found unlawfully within the United States, or having unlawfully entered the United States, to designate the United States commissioner within such district before whom such Chinese person shall be taken for hearing.

SEC. 2. That a United States commissioner shall be entitled to receive a fee of $5 for hearing and deciding a case arising under the Chinese-exclusion laws.

SEC. 3. That no warrant of arrest for violations of the Chinese-exclusion laws shall be issued by United States commissioners excepting upon the sworn complaint of a United States district attorney, assistant United States district attorney, collector, deputy collector, or inspector of customs, immigration inspector, United States marshal, or deputy United States marshal, or Chinese inspector, unless the issuing of such warrant of arrest shall first be approved or requested in writing by the United States district attorney of the district in which issued.

SEC. 4. That this act shall take effect immediately.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I have not objected to the consideration of the bill, but, as I did not catch fully the effect of the bill as read, I would like the gentleman to make some statement with regard to it.

Mr. JENKINS. This bill was prepared by the Department of Justice upon the request of the United States attorney for the northern district of New York. It is designed to secure a better enforcement of the laws with reference to immigration of Chinese. It has been unanimously reported by the Committee on the Judiciary, and is a wise measure.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. JENKINS, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

BRONZE MEDALS FOR THE PARTICIPANTS IN THE WAR WITH SPAIN.

Mr. MEYER of Louisiana. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 115) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to cause bronze medals to be struck and distributed to certain officers and men who participated in the war with Spain, and for other purposes.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause to be struck bronze medals commemorative of the naval and other engagements in the waters of the West Indies and on the shores of Cuba during the war with Spain, and to distribute the same to the officers and men of the Navy and Marine Corps who participated in any of said engagements deemed by him of sufficient importance to deserve commemoration: Provided, That officers and men of the Navy or Marine Corps who rendered specially meritorious service otherwise than in battle may be rewarded in like manner: And provided further, That any person who may, under the provisions of this act, be entitled to receive recognition in more than one instance shall, instead of a second medal, be presented with a bronze bar, appropriately inscribed, to be attached to the ribbon by which the medal is suspended. And to carry out the provisions of this resolution the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. MEYER of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to cause bronze medals to be struck and distributed to certain officers and men who participated in the war with Spain is so plain in its provisions that it calls for very little explanation. It has come to us from the Senate, and is framed in accordance with the views of the Navy Department, which is thoroughly familiar with the whole subject. The object is not a vote of money, or increased pay, or of lands, or anything of mere money value to the officers and men of our Navy, for gallant and meritorious service; but it is a testimonial of honor in an enduring form, which tells its own story and may be handed down by the recipient to his children and his children's children as a precious possession.

The resolution proceeds upon the known principle that fidelity, patriotism, and an honorable fame are the greatest inspiration of heroism in your soldiers and sailors, and that to secure the highest results you must appeal to whatever is noblest and best in man's nature. This idea is not new. It is familiar in all the pages of history, ancient and modern. It comes down to us from the days of the old inscription, "Go, stranger, and tell Sparta that we died in obedience to her laws."

How many veterans, maimed and crippled, it may be, have in France held up their heads proudly, enduring poverty and the loss of every earthly possession, because the emblem of the Legion of Honor was pinned upon their breasts. Across the Channel you have the Victoria cross to fire brave men to more than common acts of bravery, daring, and suffering. Congress, all through our history, has voted swords and monuments to our heroes.

We do not by this resolution give these medals of honor to every one whose name was borne upon the rolls of the naval and marine service, but to those who participated in engagements of sufficient importance in the waters of the West Indies to deserve special commemoration. Naturally, perhaps I should say necessarily, the joint resolution devolves upon the Secretary of the Navy to select the actions which were of special importance. It is well suggested by the acting head of the Department that the Secretary of the Navy, in carrying out the law, can avail himself of the services of a board to examine the official reports, and determine what engagements were of real importance as bearing on the struggle. The joint resolution properly recognizes the fact that there may be services performed which were specially meritorious otherwise than in battle. Provision is also made for those who, in more than one instance, have rendered such service as deserves recognition. The resolution is carefully worded, and I believe that in its practical execution it will accomplish the object we all have at heart.

It would not be proper or possible for me to attempt to foreshadow in any way the action of the Navy Department or any board it may create in determining the events of greatest importance in the naval combats or the services of great importance and merit other than those rendered in battle. Some there were which comprised hard fighting and risk, others great personal risk and danger, as well as tact, skill, and judgment.

I may mention here some of the engagements, events, and services in Cuba and Porto Rico waters which contributed to the general and final success of the American arms. I may refer to Aguadores, July 1; Nipe, July 21; the landing of the troops at Bairiquiri, June 22; Cabanas, May 12; Tunas, June 30; Palo Alto, July 2; Baracoa, July 15; Cardenas, May 11; Cienfuegos, May 11, June 13, and April 29; Casilda, June 29; cable cutting, May 11, 16, 18, 19, 20, July 10, 16; Caibarien, August 14; Cape San Juan, August 6 to 9; San Juan, May 12; the voyage of the Oregon around Cape Horn and to the scene of operations; capture of Ponce, July 27; Don Jorge Juan destroyed, July 21; Manzanillo, June 30, July 1, 18, August 12; Guanica, July 25; Mariel, July 5; Santiago, June 6–16, July 2, 3; Matanzas, April 27; Point Muno, June 29; San Juan, June 19.

I do not claim that the foregoing is a full and complete list of important events, and still less do I undertake to assign the relative order of their importance. All this will be performed by hands far more competent than mine. These events will be the study of our youth in future days, as were those of the naval heroes of the Revolution, the war with Tripoli, and the grand combats of the war of 1812 with Great Britain.

There are those who will feel, as many have done, that the heroes of the Army and Navy who perished of pestilence in the British prison ship Jersey, near Brooklyn, in the Revolutionary struggle, preferring death to taking the oath of allegiance to the Crown, merited even greater honor than their more fortunate comrades who were not captured, and that there was no higher act of heroism performed in the late war than that of the young officer who entered the Spanish lines in Cuba in order to reach the insurgent camp and establish communication with them—a service in which, if captured, he would have suffered a shameful death, according to the usual laws of war. These records we all may be proud of, for they ennoble human nature and inspire all our sailors and officers to everything that man can do, achieve, and endure.

The late war with Spain was specially a naval war. I mean no disparagement to the courage and fortitude of our army who fought near Santiago. It was supposed by many of us at the outset that it would be necessary to dispatch to Cuba an army sufficiently large to overcome the 200,000 soldiers whom Spain had sent there to put down the insurrection. There was grave consideration of the problem of besieging and reducing Habana, with its formidable defenses. But the question of the relative naval power of the United States and of Spain took precedence of land operations and dwarfed them to the second rank.

The questions that pressed upon the public mind after the Spanish fleet sailed for the Western Continent were their ability to elude the American squadrons, to destroy a detachment or a squadron of our forces, to relieve their own ports, to waylay the Oregon on her long voyage from the Pacific coast around Cape Horn, or to depredate upon our coasts and exposed shipping. There was deep anxiety on all hands for our shipping and our coast cities, not so well fortified then and guarded as they are now. There was a profound solicitude for the safety of the Oregon and a grateful feeling of joy when the commander, passing all risks, carried that magnificent war cruiser to join our naval forces at their point of concentration. In those hours we had high hopes, great confidence, indeed, in our naval officers and sailors, and, I may say, no little anxiety and tension until the end came at last. [Applause.]

The end did come when we had the welcome news of the destruction of the Spanish fleet which emerged from Santiago Harbor. That hour brought us a relief which was as profound as the anxiety that preceded the advent of Cervera's fleet in Spanish waters.

The service rendered in its effects upon the war was as important as any recorded in history. It had a greater relative effect upon the struggle than the victory of the British fleet at Trafalgar over the combined fleets of France and Spain. It resembles in its effects upon the military situation and the fortunes of the war the memorable naval battle of the Nile, when Nelson destroyed or captured the French fleet.

From that hour the campaign in Egypt was virtually at an end. The French forces there could not be reenforced in men or material of war, and the hour when they must capitulate to the power which held the command of the sea was reduced to a mere question of months. It happened in like fashion in 1898, on the shores of Cuba. When the fleet of Spain was destroyed, when her communication with her army in Cuba was broken up and she could no longer reenforce or supply it, the statesmen of Spain realized that it was useless to continue the combat.

The United States would henceforth be able to transport without obstacle or obstruction all the soldiers or guns which might be required to overcome the resistance of the Spanish army under Blanco. To continue the struggle for the island was a hopeless endeavor, however brave and spirited it might be. The Government of Spain acted wisely and for the best interests of their country in suing for peace. The naval victory of Santiago settled the contest. The war by Spain was for Cuba—to retain and dominate that island. The game was lost and Spain was compelled to yield. The language and terms of the protocol were practically shaped by the United States naval forces off the harbor at Santiago. They "conquered a peace."

The splendid performance of Dewey in his destruction of the Spanish fleet at Manila Bay, however brilliant as a feat of arms, and even important in results or discouraging to the enemy, was of secondary importance to the naval victory at Santiago which ended the war. I am glad that the services of those who fought at Manila have been recognized fully and generously.

But the gratitude of this country for those who fought in the waters of the West Indies remains to be expressed and typified in an enduring, permanent shape worthy of them, worthy of us, and worthy of the spirit which, from Revolutionary days until now, has rendered honor to those who have periled life in the country's service. This joint resolution will be a monument, if one is needed, to commemorate this victory. It is a monition to all who come afterwards that republics are not ungrateful to their heroes, and that in conquering the foreign foe they have captured the hearts of the American people for all time. [Applause.]

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. MEYER of Louisiana, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed was laid on the table.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITARIES IN ALASKA.

Mr. PAYNE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 13195) to amend section 5153 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5153 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5153. All national banking associations, designated for that purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be depositaries of public money, except receipts from customs, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary, but receipts derived from duties on imports in Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands, and other islands under the jurisdiction of the United States may be deposited in such depositaries subject to such regulations; and such depositaries may also be employed as financial agents of the Government; and they shall perform all such reasonable duties as depositaries of public moneys and financial agents of the Government as may be required of them. The Secretary of the Treasury shall require the associations thus designated to give satisfactory security, by the deposit of United States bonds and otherwise, for the safe-keeping and prompt payment of the public money deposited with them, and for the faithful performance of their duties as financial agents of the Government. And every association so designated as receiver or depositary of the public money shall take and receive at par all of the national currency bills, by whatever association issued, which have been paid into the Government for internal revenue or for loans or stocks."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Reserving the right to object, I would like to hear some explanation of this bill. It seems to be very important legislation. What committee reported it?

Mr. PAYNE. It came from the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I do not remember that that committee had it under consideration.

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, yes; the gentleman was present when the bill was fully explained. I will briefly explain it now; and I think the gentleman will recognize the bill.

The present law, Mr. Speaker, provides that national-bank depositaries may receive deposits of collectors of internal revenue, but not of collectors of customs. The only change that is proposed is to make the law for deposits of the collectors of Alaska, Hawaii, and other islands to be deposited in these designated depositaries.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I did not exactly catch the reading of the bill.

Mr. PAYNE. I will explain it, for the benefit of gentlemen not present in the committee.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I understand it now.

Mr. PAYNE. The reason for this——

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and, being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. PAYNE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS RED RIVER, TEXAS.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill H. R. 14093.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 14093) to authorize the Paris, Choctaw and Little Rock Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across Red River, in the State of Texas.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SHEPPARD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MONONGAHELA RIVER.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill H. R. 13436.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 13436) to authorize the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause]. The Chair hears none.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. DALZELL, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

JOHN M. DAVIS.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 425) for the relief of John M. Davis.

The bill as amended was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to revoke the order dismissing John M. Davis, captain of Company H of the Sixty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and to issue to him an honorable discharge as of date of April 9, 1865: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or other allowances shall be paid or become due or payable by reason of or on account of the passage of this act after April 9, 1865.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. LLOYD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

THOMAS LUTZ STITT.

Mr. OVERSTREET. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 4787) to authorize the appointment of Thomas Lutz Stitt as an officer in the Navy.

The bill as amended was read, as follows:

A bill (S. 4787) to authorize the appointment of Thomas Lutz Stitt as an officer in the Navy.

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and is hereby, authorized, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint Thomas Lutz Stitt as a line officer in the Navy as ensign, subject to physical, moral, and professional examination, to take rank and position at the foot of the list, but he shall not receive pay or allowances for the time he has been out of the naval service.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Reserving the right to object, I would like to hear the report read in this case.

Mr. OVERSTREET. Mr. Speaker, this is a Senate bill. It received the unanimous recommendation of the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs, and received the unanimous recommendation of the House committee.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would say to my friend from Indiana that the recommendation coming from the Senate may not have very much weight with this side of the House.

Mr. OVERSTREET. It is corroborated and strengthened by the unanimous report of the House Committee on Naval Affairs. It places this beneficiary at the foot of the list for appointment as an ensign.

Mr. STEELE. He is a graduate of the Naval Academy.

Mr. OVERSTREET. He is a graduate of the Naval Academy, and has been out since 1896. This merely restores him the privilege of taking the foot of the list. It is recommended by the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. What is the necessity of taking him out of civil life and putting him in the Navy? What claim has he to this distinction?

Mr. OVERSTREET. They are short of men, and he has graduated at the Naval Academy.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. You say he is a graduate of the Naval Academy?

Mr. OVERSTREET. That is my understanding.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. How did he come to leave the service?

Mr. OVERSTREET. He resigned.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There are no charges against him?

Mr. OVERSTREET. No, sir.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. He is a man of good character and standing?

Mr. OVERSTREET. Yes, sir.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And they need him in the Navy?

Mr. OVERSTREET. Undoubtedly.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. OVERSTREET, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

ISAAC M'CONNAUGHAY.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 432) for the relief of Isaac McConnaughay, Company H, Fortieth Iowa Infantry Volunteers.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue to Isaac McConnaughay a certificate of honorable discharge, to date from the 16th day of November, 1862, as a private of Company H, Fortieth Iowa Infantry Volunteers, it having been established that the service rendered in that company and regiment in the name of Isaac McConnaughay subsequent to that date was rendered by Thomas J. McConnaughay; and the said Isaac McConnaughay shall hereafter be held and considered to have been in the military service of the United States as a member of said organization from the 14th day of August, 1862, until honorably discharged from the service as herein provided: but it is further provided that he shall not be entitled to any pay, bounty, or allowances by reason of the relief herein granted.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have a statement from the author of the bill as to the necessity for passing this.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, this is a case where a man named Isaac McConnaughay enlisted in the Fortieth Iowa Infantry Volunteers and served a time and then, by mutual consent and by a way that was irregular and loose, his brother Thomas took his place and served to the end of the war, answering to the name of Isaac. Later he was honorably discharged, and later, by action of Congress, the record was so changed as to show that Thomas McConnaughay, and not Isaac, rendered the service after Thomas took Isaac's place. This leaves Isaac in a place where his record is not straight.

Mr. SLAYDEN. The substitution was consented to by the officers?

Mr. DE ARMOND. Yes; and he was carried in that way under Isaac's name all the time. This is to correct the record in accordance with the facts.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I would like to ask the gentleman one further question. Does this provide the possibility for two men drawing pensions when only one did service?

Mr. DE ARMOND. They both did service.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Alternately.

Mr. DE ARMOND. One served four months and the other twenty-eight months, making about three years' service by the two. This bill passed the Senate unanimously and received the unanimous report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. DE ARMOND, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI RIVER.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 5698) to extend the time for the completion of a bridge across the Missouri River.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. GAMBLE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

IONIC COLUMNS DELIVERED TO THE MAYOR OF BALTIMORE.

Mr. DENNY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill H. R. 13776.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 13776) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to deliver to the mayor and city council of Baltimore, Md., Ionic columns.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to deliver to the mayor and city council of Baltimore, in the State of Maryland, the twelve columns now in the custom-house of said city, in order that said columns may be placed in one of the public parks or places of said Baltimore City as a relic or remembrance of said custom-house, which is to be torn down and removed to make way for a new building to be erected.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I object.

RAILROAD THROUGH FORT ONTARIO MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

Mr. DENNY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass that bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from New York.

The Clerk read as follows:

The bill (S. 3489) authorizing and empowering the Secretary of War to grant the right of way for and the right to operate and maintain a line of railroad through the Fort Ontario Military Reservation, in the State of New York, to the Oswego and Rome Railroad Company.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I object.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I ask unanimous consent to call up the House bill——

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I object.

PREVENTING THE SALE OF FIREARMS, ETC.

Mr. SPERRY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill H. R. 12551.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is unanimous consent until 11 o'clock—unanimous consent or to suspend the rules, under the order made last night by the House. Objection is made to unanimous consent.

Mr. SPERRY. I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The SPEAKER. Are there any amendments to the bill?

Mr. SPERRY. There are two slight amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill with two amendments. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 12551) to prevent the sale of firearms, opium, and intoxicating liquors in certain islands of the Pacific.

Be it enacted, etc., That any person subject to the authority of the United States who shall give, sell, or otherwise supply any arms, ammunition, explosive substance, intoxicating liquor, or opium to any aboriginal native of any of the Pacific islands lying within the twentieth parallel of north latitude and the fortieth parallel of south latitude and the one hundred and twentieth meridian of longitude west and one hundred and twentieth meridian of longitude east of Greenwich, not being in the possession or under the protection of any civilized power, shall be punishable by imprisonment not exceeding three months, with or without hard labor, or a fine not exceeding $50, or both. And in addition to such punishment all articles of a similar nature to those in respect to which an offense has been committed found in the possession of the offender may be declared forfeited.

SEC. 2. That if it shall appear to the court that such opium, wine, or spirits have been given bona fide for medical purposes it shall be lawful for the court to dismiss the charge.

SEC. 3. That all offenses against this act committed on any of said islands, or on the waters, rocks, or keys adjacent thereto, shall be deemed committed on the high seas on board a merchant ship or vessel belonging to the United States, and the courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction accordingly.

SEC. 4. That this act shall take effect three months after its passage.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I demand a second, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. SPERRY. I ask that the second be considered as ordered.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SPERRY] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] as tellers.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 53, and noes 9.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. No quorum, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Ninety-one members present; not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant-at-Arms will bring in absent members, the roll will be called, and those favoring the motion will, as their names are called, vote "aye," and those opposed vote "no;" those not desiring to vote will answer "present."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is evident, Mr. Speaker, that there is no quorum and will not be until 11 o'clock. At 11 o'clock the House meets, and I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama moves that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and the motion was lost.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 93, nays 8, answered "present" 82, not voting 170; as follows:

So a second was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The roll call develops the presence of a quorum. The doors will be reopened. A second is ordered; and the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. SPERRY, in the affirmative, and the gentleman from Texas, Mr. BAILEY, in the negative, on the bill called up by the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. SPERRY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to reserve my own time. All I desire to say now in connection with this bill is this: It has the unanimous report of the committee, as far as I know. Not only that, but the President in his last annual message referred to this subject of the islands of the Pacific which are not under the control of any government and asked that some action be taken. This bill, therefore, only refers to those islands not under the control of any government or any power. They are simply tribal; they are mostly cannibals. The islands are contained within the boundaries set forth in the report and bill.

I wish to say also that the State Department has examined this bill, gone through it carefully, and has suggested one or two amendments which have been added. I suppose that members have been deluged with petitions from every State in the Union in behalf of this bill. The bill I have presented is known as the Gillett bill. I know of no opposition to it, and I trust that in humanity's name it may receive the unanimous vote of this House. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Connecticut a question.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Connecticut yield to the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. SPERRY. I will.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I see the designation of the territory over which this is to control is in geographical language which is not apparent without an examination of the map. About what points does this control?

Mr. SPERRY. It was intended, to begin with, to control entirely the New Hebrides, but there are some little small islands about the Hebrides which if the Hebrides only were named would not be included. There are about 60,000 of these aboriginal tribes which inhabit these islands, and this bill simply proposes to stop the sale mentioned by Americans to the aborigines in these islands.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Does it in any way attempt to control the sale to the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands?

Mr. SPERRY. It has nothing to do with the Philippine Islands.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Or the Samoan Islands?

Mr. SPERRY. No.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Will the gentleman from Connecticut yield to me?

Mr. SPERRY. Yes; with pleasure.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Why should you protect the savages of the Hebrides from being killed with bad rum and not protect the savages of the Philippines from being killed with the same liquid? Why are they omitted?

Mr. SPERRY. As I understand it, this bill simply applies to the islands about the Hebrides who are not under any government or any country. It does not refer to the Philippines or any of these islands except those who have a tribal government, so to speak, and within the boundaries named in the bill.

Mr. McDERMOTT. I understand that of the 14,000,000 people in the Philippine Islands, not more than 5,000 are of pure Castilian blood; the balance are half-breeds, Chinese, Malays, etc. Why do you not protect them from being killed by bad rum as well as the inhabitants of the New Hebrides?

Mr. SPERRY. I will say that we do not seek to enforce the provisions of this bill upon the Philippines.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Why not?

Mr. SPERRY. Because that is a matter now under consideration in relation to the Philippines itself, and we do not propose to trespass upon that which is the province of others. This is simply confined to these islands in the Pacific which have no recognized form of government and are not in the possession of any government or under the protection of any government.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, when I demanded a second on this measure I knew nothing about it, and, to be frank, I cared nothing about it. But upon an examination of it, it seems to me the most palpable attempt to first invent a fiction and then predicate legislation upon it that I have ever known. The original proponent of the bill simply undertook to assert the power of the United States over territory not subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

The committee evidently concluded that, broad as the power of the United States is now supposed to be, it does not extend to soil not subject to our jurisdiction, and have undertaken to cure that by an amendment, and that amendment is what? That these offenses, for which a punishment is provided in the bill, when committed in these islands not subject to our jurisdiction, shall be deemed to have been committed upon the seas on one of our ships. Now, as a matter of fact, these offenses might be committed a thousand miles from any place where the United States may exercise a rightful jurisdiction. These offenses might be committed a thousand miles from our ships of war or merchantmen. And in order that the jurisdiction of the United States may attach by fiction, this bill provides that these offenses shall be deemed to have been committed upon the high seas on one of our ships.

Mr. Speaker, it is discreditable to the Congress of the United States, it is discreditable to the Government of the United States, that, not content to exercise jurisdiction within its limits, that now embrace almost every sea in the world, it invents a fiction and extends jurisdiction where it can not be exercised except by a fiction. The gentlemen who are behind this bill subject themselves to the suspicion of insincerity so far as its intemperance feature is concerned, because, if they seek to stop the use of intoxicating liquors, why not include the Philippine Islands in their bill? I have been reliably informed that more than a thousand saloons have sprung up in the island of Luzon since the American flag was raised over it. I am told that in Hawaii, where saloons were unknown until we benevolently assimilated it, to-day there are over 400 in existence. You declare that the Philippine people are not entitled to their own form of government because they are incapable of maintaining it. If they are not capable of enjoying their freedom, why not protect them under our jurisdiction from the baleful effects of intoxicating liquors instead of extending our charity to people to whom we owe no obligation?

The gentleman from Connecticut, in charge of the bill, has not yet been gracious enough to tell the House exactly what islands are to be affected by the bill. Lest I should do him injustice, I pause to allow him, in my time, to enumerate the islands which are included.

Mr. SPERRY. The islands included within the boundaries designated by the bill I can not name. There are many of those little islands—hundreds of them; but where they are inhabited they are governed by tribes, not by any civilized country. They are not under the protection of any civilized country. In this bill we propose simply to say, so far as we are concerned, that within those boundaries people of the United States, subject to the United States jurisdiction, shall not sell rum or opium, whisky or firearms.

If the bill does not go as far as the gentleman would like to have it go, or as he thinks it should have gone, I will only say that it goes as far as the State Department has seemed willing to admit would be proper. The State Department is decidedly in favor of the bill as now drawn.

I would like to yield a few minutes of my time—five minutes——

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I am not through yet. I was just asking the gentleman from Connecticut to define the limits within which this bill, if passed, would operate.

Mr. SPERRY. I can only give the limits as they are indicated by the parallels and boundaries in the bill.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. The boundaries given in the bill do not indicate the points to which the proposed law would extend.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is mistaken when he says that I think the bill does not go far enough. I am very frank to say that I am not a philanthropist. I am not trying to take care of all people within the boundaries of the world. I simply instanced the fact that the bill is not made to apply to the Philippine Islands and to Hawaii to sustain my suggestion that the gentlemen urging this measure are not entirely sincere.

Now, Mr. Speaker, one other thing. I demand of the proponents of this bill to tell me in what court an offender of this bill, if it should become a law, would be tried. The bill provides punishment by imprisonment not exceeding three months at hard labor or by a fine not exceeding $50, or both. Where is the forum in which you would try those who may violate this law? If a man sells liquor in those islands, will you bring him back to the city of Washington and try him? If so, in what court? Will you take him to the State of Connecticut?

If you arraign him there, he will invoke that clause of the Constitution which provides that a man shall not be tried except in the district of the United States where the offense was committed, which district must have been previously ascertained by law. If a citizen of the United States residing in Connecticut should complete the sale there, it might be easy under your bill—however unjust it would be—to punish him. But if he goes to one of these islands and sells arms or ammunition or intoxicating liquors, I undertake to say that no court in America has the power to punish him. It was for that reason that the committee inserted this fiction—that the offense should be deemed to have been committed upon the high seas upon a ship-of-war or merchantman of the United States.

Under such a provision as that they may try a man for this offense without a jury. A man may be tried, convicted, and executed without a jury under this nebulous and vague and dangerous power of preserving the authority of the United States upon the high seas of the world. It was because there was no forum within the United States, and because none could be constituted within the United States, to try these offenses that these gentlemen invented a fiction, pure and simple, in order to confer one of the most dangerous and despotic powers ever yet exercised by a free government in the history of the world.

I deem myself fortunate in having my attention called to this dangerous piece of proposed legislation, which if enacted will become a precedent and can practically destroy the right of trial by jury in every place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SPERRY. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT].

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a word as to the legal point just raised by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY]. I did not draw the original bill. I put my name to the copy that was offered to me and introduced it because I saw that I was in hearty sympathy with its purpose; but when I had considered the question, I drew the amendment to which the gentleman from Texas has just referred; and the reason was——

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. The gentleman is too good a lawyer to have believed that the original bill was valid.

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. I confess that when I looked at it critically I did not think it was valid.

The gentleman suggests that this is a new and dangerous precedent. Mr. Speaker, this is not a new precedent. The section to which the gentleman objects is copied almost exactly from that portion of the Revised Statutes which provides for jurisdiction over the Guano Islands, in which case precisely this fiction was adopted. In that provision of the Revised Statutes it is enacted that any act committed on those islands should be considered, just as in this bill, as having been committed on board an American ship. And the purpose, of course, was clear—that thereby jurisdiction is obtained for American courts, and with all the safeguards of the Constitution.

The gentleman asks in what court these offenses shall be tried. Why, of course, as the law provides for ships, they shall be tried in the port at which the vessel first comes in.

Now, the provision in regard to the Guano Islands is not only a provision standing in the Revised Statutes, but it has been passed upon by our Supreme Court, and has been held to be valid. Therefore, as a matter of law, the provision of this bill not only is not a new precedent, but it follows a decision of the Supreme Court, and I think that is authority enough.

Now, as to the reason why this bill should not apply to the other Pacific islands, to the Philippines, and to Hawaii. Why, sir, it comes with bad grace from the other side of the House to make that objection. I thought gentlemen on that side were contending that we are already giving too little self-government to Hawaii and the Philippine Islands; that we are absorbing too much power. If we should attempt to impose this legislation upon them, it would leave them still less self-government. It would be doing exactly what that side has been strenuously opposing. At any rate, that proposition is not before the committee.

Another committee would naturally and properly have that matter in charge; and, as I understand, it has been under consideration by that committee. I think myself there is need of legislation for the Philippines, and I hope the committee will report a bill. But because it is not in this bill is a paltry, and, it seems to me, a disingenuous argument for offering this bill. This bill does not contain, and does not pretend to contain, all the legislation which I think advisable for all the universe or for all islands, but it aims to accomplish one good purpose, and can hardly be opposed fairly because it does not accomplish more.

Here is one special condition needing legislation. English missionaries have been most successful in civilizing in those islands. England has prohibited the sale of liquor and firearms by British subjects. But American traders are going where the English are forbidden, are supplying the natives with liquor, and are steadily neutralizing and undermining the good work of the English missionaries. I think thus to permit our citizens to undo the unselfish and beneficient work of another country is a reproach and disgrace to America. It is to prevent that, and for that object alone, that this bill is proposed. In law it stands firmly upon the decision of the Supreme Court, and in policy I think it should stand as firmly upon the conscience of Americans.

The SPEAKER. The motion is to suspend the rules and pass the bill with the amendments.

Mr. GAINES. I did not hear the amendments read. I have read the bill. Can those amendments be read again?

The SPEAKER. They can by unanimous consent. The gentleman from Tennessee asks to have the amendments read. Without objection, the Clerk will report them.

Mr. SHERMAN. I object.

The question being taken on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill, there were—ayes 79.

Mr. SPERRY (before the negative vote was announced). I call for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER (after counting). Thirty-four gentleman have arisen. It requires 36 to order the yeas and nays.

Mr. SPERRY. I ask for the other side.

The SPEAKER (after counting). Eighty-six gentlemen have arisen, and the yeas and nays are ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 117, nays 80, answered "present" 21, not voting 135; as follows:

So (two-thirds not having voted in favor thereof) the motion was rejected.

The following pairs were announced:

For this day:

Mr. HEMENWAY with Mr. MIERS of Indiana.

Mr. PUGH with Mr. TURNER.

Mr. SIBLEY with Mr. HALL.

Mr. CALDERHEAD with Mr. SHAFROTH.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri with Mr. LEWIS.

Mr. YOUNG with Mr. WHEELER.

Mr. COCHRANE of New York with Mr. BRENNER.

Mr. SHERMAN with Mr. DRIGGS.

Mr. MCCLEARY with Mr. COWHERD.

For this vote:

Mr. PEARRE with Mr. DAVIS.

Mr. BROMWELL with Mr. SHATTUC.

Mr. MORRELL with Mr. BANKHEAD.

Mr. JOY with Mr. NAPHEN.

Mr. BURLEIGH with Mr. MCLAIN.

Mr. BULL with Mr. SUTHERLAND.

Mr. SHELDON with Mr. MCLAIN.

Until further notice:

Mr. CANNON with Mr. MCRAE.

Mr. RUSSELL with Mr. MCCLELLAN.

Mr. BOUTELL of Illinois with Mr. GRIGGS.

Mr. MCCALL with Mr. FITZGERALD of Massachusetts.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SIBLEY], and if he has not voted I desire to be recorded as "present."

Mr. MCCLELLAN. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. RUSSELL], and wish therefore to withdraw my vote and be recorded as "present."

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I answered "present" on this call. I would ask if the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HAMILTON], with whom I have had a pair, has voted?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan is recorded.

Mr. KING. Then I desire to be recorded in the negative.

Mr. KING's vote was accordingly recorded as above.

LIMIT OF COST OF CERTAIN PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill H. R. 13947, with certain committee amendments.

The bill was read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 13947) increasing the limit of cost of certain public buildings, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That to enable the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to give effect to and execute the provisions of existing legislation authorizing the purchase of sites and the erection thereon of public buildings in the several cities hereinafter enumerated, the limit of cost heretofore fixed by Congress therefor be, and the same is hereby, increased, respectively, as follows, and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to enter into contracts for the completion of each of said buildings within its respective limit of cost, including site, hereby fixed:

United States post-office and court-house at Aberdeen, S. Dak., from $87,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Abilene, Tex., from $75,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Boise, Idaho, from $200,000 to $250,000.

United States post-office and custom-house at Brunswick, Ga., from $50,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Cheyenne, Wyo., from $250,000 to $300,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Cumberland, Md., from $75,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Butte, Mont., from $200,000 to $225,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Eau Claire, Wis., from $50,000 to $100,000; and the limit of cost of site is hereby fixed at $10,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Elmira, N. Y., from $185,000 to $232,000; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to expend not to exceed $7,000 for the acquisition of additional land for the enlargement of the site heretofore acquired.

United States post-office and court-house at Creston, Iowa, from $50,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Elizabeth City, N. C., from $50,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Fergus Falls, Minn., from $75,000 to $100,000.

United States post-office at Fitchburg, Mass., from $100,000 to $125,000.

United States post-office at Freeport, Ill., from $75,000 to $85,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Helena, Mont., from $300,000 to $325,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Jamestown, N. Y., from $75,000 to $115,000.

United States post-office at Janesville, Wis., from $50,000 to $75,000.

United States post-office at Joliet, Ill., from $100,000 to $130,000.

United States post-office at Joplin, Mo., from $50,000 to $65,000.

United States post-office at Hot Springs, Ark., from $78,000 to $85,000.

United States post office at Lawrence, Mass., from $100,000 to $135,000; and the limit of cost of site is hereby fixed at $40,000.

United States post-office at Leadville, Colo., from $50,000 to $75,000.

United States post-office and court-house at Lockport, N. Y., from $50,000 to $105,000.

United States post-office and custom-house at Newport, Vt., from $50,000 to $85,000.

United States post-office and custom-house at Newport News, Va., from $100,000 to $150,000.

United States post-office at Norwich, Conn., from $100,000 to $110,000; and the limit of cost of site is hereby fixed at $35,000.

United States post-office at Rome, N. Y., from $50,000 to $70,000.

United States post-office at St. Cloud, Minn., from $50,000 to $68,000.

United States post-office, court-house, and custom-house at St. Paul, Minn., from $1,050,000 to $1,100,000.

United States post-office, custom-house, and court-house at Salt Lake City, Utah, from $300,000 to $400,000.

United States post-office, court-house, and custom-house at Seattle, Wash., from $300,000 to $650,000; and the limit of cost of site is hereby fixed at $150,000.

United States post-office, court-house, and custom-house at Tampa Fla., from $250,000 to $300,000.

United States post-office at Wilkesbarre, Pa., from $125,000 to $135,000; and the limit of cost of site is hereby fixed at $40,000.

United States post-office at Winston, N. C., from $50,000 to $60,000.

United States post-office at Oskaloosa, Iowa, from $50,000 to $66,000.

United States post-office at Bristol, Tenn., from $50,000 to $55,000.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

On page 2, line 12, strike out all after the word "hundred" and insert "and twenty-five thousand dollars;" so as to read "$325,000."

On page 2, line 20, strike out all after the word "hundred" up to and including the word "dollars," in line 21, and insert "and ten thousand dollars;" so as to read "$110,000."

Page 6, after line 4, add the following: "United States post-office at Carrollton, Ky., from twenty-five thousand to thirty thousand dollars;" also "United States post-office and court-house at Columbus, Ga., from $156,000 to $159,000;" also "United States court-house, post-office, and custom-house at Dubuque, Iowa, increasing limit of cost and improving and enlarging building, as authorized by act of March 2, 1899, from $[illegible],000 to $110,000."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I demand a second.

Mr. MERCER. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made by the gentleman from Texas. The Chair appoints the gentleman from Nebraska, Mr. MERCER, and the gentleman from Texas, Mr. BAILEY, to act as tellers.

The House divided; and tellers reported—ayes 122, noes 5.

So a second was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Nebraska and the gentleman from Texas for twenty minutes each.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, this bill affects forty different cities of the United States. It provides for increases recommended by the Treasury Department and occasioned principally by the rise in the price of building material since the buildings were first authorized. In some instances United States courts have been established, which necessitates an additional story to buildings originally intended for post-office purposes only.

The only two marked increases in this bill are Salt Lake City, Utah, and Seattle, in the State of Washington. In the city of Salt Lake the citizens presented the Government with a very valuable site, and this bill increases the limit of cost of building from $300,000 to $500,000, a very moderate sum for so important a city as Salt Lake, a city in which so many public officials are to be housed.

The increase in Seattle is correspondingly large, for the reason that, next to San Francisco and Portland, Oreg., upon the Pacific coast, this city of Seattle demands more room for Government officials than any other city west of the Rocky Mountains.

The following statement indicates the different cities benefited by this bill, and shows not only the limit of cost heretofore authorized by public buildings in the respective cities, but shows estimates made by the Treasury Department thereon and amount of increase conceded by your committee:

Location.	Present limit.	This bill.	Treasury estimate.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GRAFF. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois for a question.

Mr. GRAFF. I desire to ask the gentleman from Nebraska whether there are any provisions here for any building not heretofore authorized by law?

Mr. MERCER. None whatever. This bill does not carry any new authorizations. I ask for a vote.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I shall only myself consume enough time to remark that had I known in the beginning how widely and how judiciously the pork in this barrel had been distributed I would have had no expectation of defeating it; and with this remark I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SULZER].

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, this bill, carrying enormous appropriations, is another demonstration of the cohesive power of public plunder. I doubt not it will pass without a division. I am somewhat suprised, to say the least, at the present attitude of the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], and I fail to hear his eloquent and emphatic protest against this bill, which will take hundreds and hundreds and thousands of dollars out of the public Treasury. Yesterday, the day before, and for several days last past, we have heard the gentleman from Illinois protesting against these kind of reckless and extravagant appropriations. But when this omnibus building bill comes up, appropriating this vast amount of money, we do not hear a word from the gentleman from Illinois. He is as dumb as an oyster. It is the old, old story. It only goes to show, however, how strong and powerful local patronage is to secure legislation.

The principal point I now desire to make is that the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has refused to give New York City a new post-office. A bill for that purpose has been in the committee for six years. New York City is unjustly discriminated against. The post-office in New York City is old and dilapidated. It is no longer adapted to the postal affairs of the metropolis. It is a menace to the health and to the lives and limbs of every man employed in it. Thousands of men employed in the New York City post-office are compelled to work underground, standing part of the time during each twenty-four hours in water and in dampness. Every merchant, the chamber of commerce, the press, the people, every board of industry and board of trade in New York have petitioned Congress for the last three years to appropriate enough money to build a new and decent post-office in the city of New York.

I myself, sir, have filed with the Clerk of this House hundreds and hundreds of petitions and resolutions in favor of a new post-office in New York City. They have been referred to the committee and that has been the end of the matter. I want to enter my most emphatic protest against the outrageous way New York City is treated by Congress.

The post-office in New York City supplies more revenue to the Government than any other ten post-offices in the United States. The revenue from that post-office, over and above its expenses, amounts every year to between five and six millions of dollars. It is the greatest post-office for the distribution and the transmission of mail in this country; and I say in all sincerity that the great metropolis of the country should have a post-office that will be not alone a credit to the nation, but will preserve the lives and not menace the health of the people who are compelled to work in it.

The chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds and the committee appropriate money for every little crossroad post-office in the country. There is no trouble to get an appropriation of $150,000 for some little country post-office that is an expense to the Government, but when it comes to the post-office of the city of New York the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds is deaf to all supplications and to all the entreaties of the people of that great city.

The entire postal business of the country is centered in New York City, and that city should have a post-office of adequate accommodations to facilitate business. We only ask for decent treatment—for what is just and right. I hold in my hand an editorial from the New York Herald of March 1 instant——

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SULZER. Will the gentleman from Texas yield to me time enough to have this article read?

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I have agreed to give out the time, and will have to take it from others.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print as a part of my remarks an editorial from the New York Herald of March 1, 1901, regarding the New York post-office.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to print an editorial from the New York Herald in reference to the New York post-office.

Mr. MERCER. I object, Mr. Speaker, until I know what it is.

Mr. SULZER. It is a very short editorial from the New York Herald. It does not refer to the gentleman, but only to this post-office.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MIERS].

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the attention of the chairman of the committee a moment. I would like to inquire if there has been an increase in the appropriation for the public building at Indianapolis?

Mr. MERCER. There has.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. It is not in the printed bill.

Mr. MERCER. No; it is a committee amendment.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. How much is the increase?

Mr. MERCER. Three hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. What is the purpose of the increase?

Mr. MERCER. For the purpose of permitting the Secretary of the Treasury and the Supervising Architect to draw plans so that the building shall be commensurate with the needs of the public business there.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Is it the purpose to change the plan originally adopted as to the character of the building?

Mr. MERCER. The plans had not been drawn. They were held up pending the action of Congress.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Is it changed, then, to carry out a different plan?

Mr. MERCER. I refer the gentleman to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. OVERSTREET].

Mr. OVERSTREET. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the increase is to make the difference between the price of material at the time the original law went into effect and the present time; also because of the increased price for the site for the building, which was made more by reason of the purchase of a larger amount of ground. I know the point the gentleman from Indiana refers to—whether or not there is any change in reference to the material to be used.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. That is the point.

Mr. OVERSTREET. That has nothing to do with the increase. It has been the practice of the Department for a great many years to let bids for contracts for public buildings with the alternative of a different character of material, for the purpose of insuring competition, that would bring the best possible price for the construction for the amount authorized by the law. There is no purpose in this increase to change that practice, nor in any way or manner to affect the material to be used in the construction of the building. Taking into account the cost of the material and the increased price for the site are the only reasons for the increase.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I would like to ask my colleague, the gentleman from Indiana, whether this in any way militates against the use of Indiana stone and in favor of granite?

Mr. OVERSTREET. Not in any way whatever.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I would like to ask the gentleman if he has any information as to the relative cost of the Indiana stone and the Vermont granite?

Mr. OVERSTREET. I have not.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. There is much more difference than $300,000, is there not?

Mr. OVERSTREET. I do not know, because the character of the material has nothing to do with the proposed increase. Bids will be invited in the alternative, so that the friends of one kind of material can have the privilege of competing with friends of the other material. They are not discriminated against.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Then, Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I am in favor of the best building for Indianapolis that can be erected on an economical basis. There are two theories here. One is that there was an effort to crowd out the Indiana stone, because it is close there and cheaper, and put in the Vermont marble or granite; but I am entirely content with the explanation of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. OVERSTREET], for two reasons. I realized there would be more difference between the cost of the two materials than two or three hundred thousand dollars; there would be more difference than half a million, and, in addition to that, if the Indiana stone, which is the favorite building stone, not only of the West, but the East, the North, and the South, were to be crowded out or to be put in jeopardy I would be opposed to it. But I understand from the distinguished chairman of the committee and the gentleman from Indiana that there is no such purpose as that. They tell me the proposed increase is to meet the extra expense by reason of the increase in price of material and labor.

Mr. STEELE. Let me say to the gentleman that I had correspondence with the Secretary of the Treasury on this subject. He assured me that the Supervising Architect of the Treasury had been misquoted, and that he had never said anything that could be tortured into expressions against the use of the Indiana stone.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Then the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] joins in the conclusion that I do, that there is no proposed discrimination against the Indiana stone?

Mr. STEELE. I think not; if I thought there was I would not vote for this measure.

Mr. OVERSTREET. May I inquire of the gentleman whether or not my colleague has any opposition to leaving this to an open bid between all the representatives?

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. An open bid and a fair investigation is all that the Indiana stone desires. This industry has added largely to the wealth of the State and furnished employment to many laboring men, and is a matter of great interest to both labor and capital in the State and the nation. I would be derelict if I should allow any enactment that would needlessly vote an additional sum out of the Treasury, even if it does go to my State. I would be doubly so if I should allow anything to go unchallenged that would cripple this great industry.

The quarries of the State of Indiana have furnished the stone for the magnificent capitol at the city of Indianapolis and for the soldiers' monument and the court-house, all of which beautify the city of Indianapolis.

The products of said quarries have been used successfully in the building of several capitols of other States of this Union, court-houses, and public buildings all over the country.

The product of said quarries has by the experience of time proven to be permanent, enduring, and having all the qualities needed and desired in the construction of buildings and monuments for the future as well as the present.

The said quarries have become one of the great industries of the great State, and the value of their product represents to a very large extent the labor of the State.

It is regarded everywhere as the best and cheapest building stone in the United States. Its ability to stand the wear of time has been fully demonstrated; its superior qualities are recognized by the first architects of the United States. It never shirks or evades competition, but always courts it. It only wants open and equal chance for a place in the great building at our capital city. I accept the avowed purpose of the chairman of the committee and of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. OVERSTREET] that the sole purpose of this increased appropriation is to meet the increased cost of labor and material since the original plans were considered.

I need hardly say that the people of Indiana are proud of this great industry and watching the legislation on this subject and will not consent that any legislation be had that looks to the smuggling in some other material to the disadvantage of the Indiana stone. What we want is an appropriation sufficiently large to economically construct a building adequate to the purposes for which it is to be used and in keeping with the growth and enterprise of the beautiful capital of the great State of Indiana. Personally, I believe the Indiana stone will meet all of these requirements.

Mr. OTEY. Mr. Speaker, may I ask if this bill can be amended?

The SPEAKER. It can not. This is a motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may have leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that he may be permitted to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MERCER. I object.

The SPEAKER. Too late.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAINES].

Mr. GAINES. Mr. Speaker, if these buildings are incomplete they, of course, can not be used for the purposes for which they are supposed to be erected. If they are incomplete they should be finished. But, Mr. Speaker, I want to call the attention of this honorable body to the fact that if the majority party, that now makes this law, and has been making the law for four years, if the party had executed the laws as they now exist on our statute books, perchance this deficit might have been avoided.

In other words, if the trust laws that slumber absolutely dead upon our statute books had been prosecuted as they should have been, the trusts or combines, the unholy monopolies that are now outraging a free people and at this very moment are holding up the Government of the United States, as this bill is a proof of, this legislation might have been properly and fortunately avoided.

But, Mr. Speaker, the fact is that under the anti-trust act of 1890, placed there by the voice of both parties without a dissenting vote in the House or the Senate, up to last May had been brought into action against only three trusts in this country.

And the letter of the honorable Attorney-General of the United States, Mr. Griggs, which I hold in my possession, is absolute proof of the fact. One of these cases had failed, one case had succeeded, and one had been unadjudicated at that date. No one will dispute the fact, Mr. Speaker, that if that law had been properly executed every trust that has been carrying on interstate combines in this country might have been crushed, and this appropriation avoided, and the people permitted to have the rights that they should have under the law of the land.

Not only that statute, Mr. Speaker, but we have the act of August 28, 1894, known as the Wilson law. That act, Mr. Speaker, was carried into and made a part of and is now the law of this land, under and by virtue of the last section of the McKinley act, which expressly provided for the continuation of sections 73, 74, 75, 76, and 77 of the Wilson bill law. The sections in question read as follows:

SEC. 73. That every combination, conspiracy, trust, agreement, or contract is hereby declared to be contrary to public policy, illegal, and void, when the same is made by or between two or more persons or corporations either of whom is engaged in importing any article from any foreign country into the United States, and when such combination, conspiracy, trust, agreement, or contract is intended to operate in restraint of lawful trade, or free competition in lawful trade or commerce, or to increase the market price in any part of the United States of any article or articles imported or intended to be imported into the United States, or of any manufacture into which such imported article enters or is intended to enter. Every person who is or shall hereafter be engaged in the importation of goods or any commodity from any foreign country in violation of this section of this act, or who shall combine or conspire with another to violate the same, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof in any court of the United States, such person shall be fined in a sum not less than $100 and not exceeding $5,000, and shall be further punished by imprisonment, in the discretion of the court, for a term not less than three months nor exceeding twelve months.

SEC. 74. That the several circuit courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of section 73 of this act; and it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney-General, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations. Such proceedings may be by way of petitions setting forth the case and praying that such violations shall be enjoined or otherwise prohibited. When the parties complained of shall have been duly notified of such petition the court shall proceed, as soon as may be, to the hearing and determination of the case; and pending such petition and before final decree, the court may at any time make such temporary restraining order or prohibition as shall be deemed just in the premises.

SEC. 75. That whenever it shall appear to the court before which any proceeding under the seventy-fourth section of this act may be pending that the ends of justice require that other parties should be brought before the court, the court may cause them to be summoned, whether they reside in the district in which the court is held or not; and subpœnas to that end may be served in any district by the marshal thereof.

SEC. 76. That any property owned under any contract or by any combination, or pursuant to any conspiracy (and being the subject thereof) mentioned in section 73 of this act, and being in the course of transportation from one State to another, or to or from a Territory, or the District of Columbia, shall be forfeited to the United States, and may be seized and condemned by like proceedings as those provided by law for the forfeiture, seizure, and condemnation of property imported into the United States contrary to law.

SEC. 77. That any person who shall be injured in his business or property by any other person or corporation by reason of anything forbidden or declared to be unlawful by this act may sue therefor in any circuit court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the costs of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee.

Yet, Mr. Speaker, that law now is nearly seven years old, and not a single suit has been filed under it. The distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK] introduced a bill a few days ago, but in plenty of time to have a willing Congress make it a law, which provides for putting on the free list, clearly a Democratic policy long espoused, every one of the iron materials that are used in making our public buildings as well as our private buildings, all the steel material and billets, etc.; and yet that bill sleeps to-day in the distinguished Republican committee; and yet that bill has not been heard of save in the public press since its introduction.

We passed last session a bill here that we thought at least continued the fight and opposition of the American people against trusts, and we sent it to the Senate, where it will die absolutely by the 4th of March, and yet the Democrats last session and this session demanded its passage; but nothing has been done by the majority party to pass it.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GAINES. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. MERCER. I must object to that, but I will yield the gentleman two minutes of my time.

Mr. GAINES. I thank the gentleman.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am not taking any partisan advantage of this situation—a statement of these facts suffice—but I challenge any man in this House or elsewhere to dispute the fact that the present Attorney-General, under the law of 1890 had filed any more than three suits up to the 31st of last May. I challenge any man to dispute successfully the fact that under the act of the Wilson anti-trust law and continued in the Dingley Act not a single suit has been filed—not one.

Mr. Speaker, it is said by the unholy party, the parent of trusts, that Bryanism is dead in this country, but, Mr. Speaker, that is not true. We find that that great patriot introduced in the Congress of the United States a bill similar to the Babcock bill on May 26, 1892, the number being H. R. 9004, requiring that such materials as were made into trust property and were protected under the tariff law should be placed upon the free list.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GAINES. I append, Mr. Speaker, as part of my remarks, the Bryan bill of 1892 and Babcock bill of 1901, as follows:

[H. R. 9004, Fifty-second Congress, first session. In the House of Representatives, May 26, 1892. Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means and ordered to be printed. Mr. Bryan introduced the following bill:]

A bill to amend an act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That an act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July 2, 1890, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following as an additional section, namely:

"SEC. 9. That whenever any circuit court of the United States shall find in a case pending before it under this act that any contract, combination in the form of a trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, exists in respect to any article or articles upon which any duties are levied by the then existing tariff laws of the United States, it shall be the duty of the court to report the facts so found to the President of the United States, setting forth specifically each and every such article. It shall be the duty of the President of the United States, upon the receipt of such report, to issue his proclamation placing each and every such article, when imported into the United States, upon the free list, and shall fix the time, not exceeding thirty days from the receipt of the findings of the court, at which such article or articles shall be admitted free of duty. And on and after the date fixed in said proclamation such article or articles shall, when imported into the United States, be admitted free of duty: Provided, That whenever such article or articles are subjected to a tax under the internal-revenue laws of the United States, the duty on such article or articles shall be equal to such internal-revenue tax. And from and after the date fixed by the proclamation such article or articles shall be admitted, when imported into the United States, subject to a duty equal to the internal-revenue tax on said article or articles."

[H. R. 14145, Fifty-sixth Congress, second session. In the House of Representatives, February 11, 1901. Mr. BABCOCK introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.]

A bill repealing certain sections of the act approved July 24, 1897, entitled "An act to provide revenue for the Government and to encourage the industries of the United States."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sections of the act approved July 24, 1897, entitled "An act to provide revenue for the Government and to encourage the industries of the United States," being a part of "Schedule C.—Metals and manufactures of," be, and the same are hereby, repealed:

"123. Bar iron, square iron, rolled or hammered, comprising flats not less than 1 inch wide nor less than three-eighths of 1 inch thick, round iron not less than seven-sixteenths of 1 inch in diameter, six-tenths of 1 cent per pound.

"124. Round iron, in coils or rods, less than seven-sixteenths of 1 inch in diameter, and bars or shapes of rolled or hammered iron, not specially provided for in this act, eight-tenths of 1 cent per pound: Provided, That all iron in slabs, blooms, loops, or other forms less finished than iron in bars, and more advanced than pig iron, except castings, shall be subject to a duty of five-tenths of 1 cent per pound: Provided further, That all iron bars, blooms, billets or sizes or shapes of any kind, in the manufacture of which charcoal is used as fuel, shall be subject to a duty of $12 per ton.

"125. Beams, girders, joists, angles, channels, car-truck channels, T T, columns and posts or parts or sections of columns and posts, deck and bulb beams, and building forms, together with all other structural shapes of iron or steel, whether plain or punched or fitted for use, five tenths of 1 cent per pound.

"126. Boiler or other plate iron or steel, except crucible plate steel and saw plates hereinafter provided for, not thinner than No. 10 wire gauge, sheared or unsheared, and skelp iron or steel sheared or rolled in grooves, valued at 1 cent per pound or less, five-tenth of 1 cent per pound; valued above 1 cent and not above 2 cents per pound, six-tenth of 1 cent per pound; valued above 2 cents and not above 4 cents per pound, 1 cent per pound; valued at over 4 cents per pound, 25 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That all sheets or plates of iron or steel thinner than No. 10 wire gauge shall pay duty as iron or steel sheets.

"127. Iron or steel anchors or parts thereof, 1½ cents per pound; forgings of iron or steel, or of combined iron and steel, of whatever shape or whatever degree or stage of manufacture, not specially provided for in this act, 35 per cent ad valorem; anti-friction ball forgings of iron or steel, or of combined iron and steel, 45 per cent ad valorem.

"128. Hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel, not otherwise provided for in this act, valued at 3 cents per pound or less, 8 inches or less in width, and less than three-eighths of 1 inch thick and not thinner than No. 10 wire gauge, five-tenths of 1 cent per pound; thinner than No. 10 wire gauge and not thinner than No. 20 wire gauge, six-tenths of 1 cent per pound; thinner than No. 20 wire gauge, eight-tenths of 1 cent per pound: Provided, That barrel hoops of iron or steel, and hoop or band iron or hoop or band steel flared, splayed or punched, with or without buckles or fastenings, shall pay one-tenth of 1 cent per pound more duty than that imposed on the hoop or band iron or steel from which they are made; steel bands or strips, untempered, suitable for making band saws, 3 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem; if tempered, or tempered and polished, 6 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem.

"129. Hoop or band iron, or hoop or band steel, cut to lengths, or wholly or partly manufactured into hoops or ties, coated or not coated with paint or any other preparation, with or without buckles or fastenings, for bailing cotton or any other commodity, five-tenths of 1 cent per pound.

"130. Railway bars, made of iron or steel, and railway bars made in part of steel, T rails, and punched iron or steel flat rails, seven-twentieths of 1 cent per pound; railway fish-plates or splice-bars, made of iron or steel, four-tenths of 1 cent per pound.

"131. Sheets of iron or steel, common or black, of whatever dimensions, and skelp iron or steel, valued at 3 cents per pound or less, thinner than No. 10 and not thinner than No. 20 wire gauge, seven-tenths of 1 cent per pound; thinner than No. 20 wire gauge and not thinner than No. 25 wire gauge, eight-tenths of 1 cent per pound; thinner than No. 25 wire gauge and not thinner than No. 32 wire gauge, 1.1 cents per pound; thinner than No. 32 wire gauge, 1.2 cents per pound; corrugated or crimped, 1.1 cents per pound: Provided, That all sheets of common or black iron or steel not thinner than No. 10 wire gauge shall pay duty as plate iron or plate steel.

"132. All iron or steel sheets or plates, and all hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel, excepting what are known commercially as tin plates, terne plates, and taggers tin, and hereinafter provided for, when galvanized or coated with zinc, spelter, or other metals, or any alloy of those metals, shall pay two-tenths of 1 cent per pound more duty than if the same was not so galvanized or coated.

"135. Steel ingots, cogged ingots, blooms, and slabs, by whatever process made; die blocks or blanks; billets and bars and tapered or beveled bars; mill shafting; pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes; saw plates, wholly or partially manufactured; hammer molds or swaged steel; gun-barrel molds not in bars; alloys used as substitutes for steel in the manufacture of tools; all descriptions and shapes of dry sand, loam, or iron-molded steel castings; sheets and plates and steel in all forms and shapes not specially provided for in this act, all of the above valued at 1 cent per pound or less, three-tenths of 1 cent per pound; valued above 1 cent and not above 1.4 cents per pound, four-tenths of 1 cent per pound; valued above 1.4 cents and not above 1.8 cents per pound, six-tenths of 1 cent per pound; valued above 1.8 cents and not above 2.2 cents per pound, seven-tenths of 1 cent per pound; valued above 2.2 cents and not above 3 cents per pound, nine-tenths of 1 cent per pound; valued above 3 cents per pound and not above 4 cents per pound, 1.2 cents per pound; valued above 4 cents and not above 7 cents per pound, 1.8 cents per pound; valued above 7 cents and not above 10 cents per pound, 2 cents per pound; valued above 10 cents and not above 13 cents per pound, 2.4 cents per pound; valued above 13 cents and not above 16 cents per pound, 2.8 cents per pound; valued above 16 cents per pound, 4.7 cents per pound.

"WIRE.

"136. Wire rods: Rivet, screw, fence, and other iron or steel wire rods, whether round, oval, flat, or square, or in any other shape, and nail rods, in coils or otherwise, valued at 4 cents or less per pound, four-tenths of 1 cent per pound; valued over 4 cents per pound, three-fourths of 1 cent per pound: Provided, That all round iron or steel rods smaller than No. 6 wire gauge shall be classed and dutiable as wire: Provided further, That all iron or steel rods which have been tempered or treated in any manner or partly manufactured shall pay an additional duty of one-half of 1 cent per pound.

"137. Round iron or steel wire, not smaller than No. 13 wire gauge, 1½ cents per pound; smaller than No. 13 and not smaller than No. 16 wire gauge, 1½ cents per pound; smaller than No. 16 wire gauge, 2 cents per pound: Provided, That all the foregoing valued at more than 4 cents per pound shall pay 40 per cent ad valorem. Iron or steel or other wire not specially provided for in this act, including such as is commonly known as hat wire, or bonnet wire, crinoline wire, corset wire, needle wire, piano wire, clock wire, and watch wire, whether flat or otherwise, and corset clasps, corset steels and dress steels, and sheet steel in strips, twenty-five one-thousandths of an inch thick or thinner, any of the foregoing, whether uncovered or covered with cotton, silk, metal, or other material, valued at more than 4 cents per pound, 45 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That articles manufactured from iron, steel, brass, or copper wire, shall pay the rate of duty imposed upon the wire used in the manufacture of such articles, and in addition thereto 1½ cents per pound, except that wire rope and wire strand shall pay the maximum rate of duty which would be imposed upon any wire used in the manufacture thereof, and in addition thereto 1 cent per pound; and on iron or steel wire coated with zinc, tin, or any other metal, two-tenths of 1 cent per pound in addition to the rate imposed on the wire from which it is made.

"NAILS, SPIKES, TACKS, AND NEEDLES.

"160. Cut nails and cut spikes of iron or steel, six-tenths of 1 cent per pound.

"162. Wire nails made of wrought iron or steel, not less than 1 inch in length and not lighter than No. 16 wire gauge, one-half of 1 cent per pound; less than 1 inch in length and lighter than No. 16 wire gauge, 1 cent per pound.

"171. Wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, made of iron or steel, and steel-tired wheels for railway purposes, whether wholly or partly finished, and iron or steel locomotive, car, or other railway tiers or parts thereof, wholly or partly manufactured, 1½ cents per pound; and ingots, cogged ingots, blooms, or blanks for the same, without regard to the degree of manufacture, 1½ cents per pound: Provided, That when wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, of iron or steel, are imported with iron or steel axles fitted in them, the wheels and axles together shall be dutiable at the same rate as is provided for the wheels when imported separately."

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I ask the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MERCER] if he intends to consume the balance of his time, that he use part of it now. We have, I believe, on this side five minutes remaining.

Mr. MERCER. I prefer that the gentleman from Texas should go on.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. It is usual to alternate in these speeches. I had an impression that the gentleman from Nebraska did not intend to consume his time.

Mr. MERCER. I shall occupy only three or four minutes.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Well, with that expectation, I yield whatever time I have remaining to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GLYNN].

Mr. GLYNN. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a petition and set of resolutions, which appeared in the RECORD of January 11, 1901, and which I wish the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A PETITION.

SALT LAKE CITY, December 28, 1900.

To the Honorable Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: Your petitioners—merchants, bankers, and business men of Salt Lake City, Utah—respectfully represent that in compliance with "An act to provide for the purchase of a site and for the erection of a public building thereon at Salt Lake City, the capital of the State of Utah," approved March 2, 1899, advertisements were inserted in the Salt Lake Tribune for such site, requiring, among other things, that the Government building be located on "a corner lot, approximating 180 feet front by 180 feet in dimensions, is preferred. If not a corner lot, the property must approximate 180 feet by 220 feet in dimensions, the 220 feet to be street frontage." The act referred to requires, among other things, after the said advertisement is made, "that thereafter the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause examination to be made of the said bids and the said proposed sites, and shall cause statements, maps, and plats thereof to be taken and submitted to him."

Your petitioners therefore allege:

First. That no examination, such as is required by the act referred to, has ever been made.

Second. That they are informed and believe that the site was selected by one H. A. Taylor, who had visited Salt Lake City but three times and at dates long prior to 1899, and hence was not qualified at the date said site was selected to make a proper or suitable selection without personal examination.

Third. That it is south of all the business portion of the city and not in the direction of the city's growth.

Fourth. That it is on low ground, only 1½ blocks above the line of the gravity sewer. It is on ground similar to that on which the city and county building is located, the foundation of which is estimated to have cost from $40,000 to $50,000 more than if located on solid ground in the center or upper portion of the city.

Fifth. The advertisement fixed the size of the site 180 feet square if located at a street intersection. Streets in the business portion of Salt Lake City are 132 feet wide. The site selected is located on the corner of East Temple and Market streets. Market street is a private street, one block in length, half the width of the regular streets, hence it does not comply with the terms or intention of said advertisement.

Sixth. Your petitioners believe that the capital of the State of Utah should receive more consideration in the selection of a site for a public building.

That no proper consideration was given to the other numerous sites offered.

That if proper examination had been made the site which was situate on lowest ground and which would require the greatest expenditure for foundation would not have been selected.

Seventh. Your petitioners request that a committee be appointed to make a proper examination and select a site in the business district of the city, where it will be centrally located as regards population, in the direction of the city's growth, and where it will be convenient to all residents, and at the same time present an imposing and dignified appearance. They also request that all persons may be awarded an impartial hearing to present the merits of their respective locations.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

Lewis S. Mills, president Deseret National Bank; Heber J. Grant, president State Bank of Utah; John E. Dooly, banker; The Brigham Young Trust Company, by N. W. Clayton, chairman executive committee; Cooperative Wagon and Machine Company, Geo. T. Odell, general manager; Spencer Clawson & Co., wholesale dry goods; McCormick & Co., bankers; Henry Dinwoody, Dinwoody Furniture Company; Wm. R. Wallace, property owner; Hooper Building, by Jos. E. Caine, agent; Continental Market Company, J. E. Caine, president; W. F. Armstrong, president of Utah Commercial and Savings Bank; Thomas W. Jennings; Mary H. Jennings, by Thos. W. Jennings; P. W. Madsen; Utah Stove and Hardware Company, P. W. Madsen, president; Western Loan and Savings Company; J. B. Toronto, vice-president Western Loan and Savings Co.; Thomas G. Webber, merchant; Home Fire Insurance Company of Utah, by Heber J. Grant, president; Salt Lake Theater Company; Consolidated Implement Company, by Geo. A. Snow, president and general manager; The Deseret News, H. G. Whitney, business manager.

Mr. GLYNN. Mr. Speaker, this petition is signed by many of the leading business men of Salt Lake City, including representatives of 10 of the 14 banks of that city. It asks that the site upon which it is proposed to erect a public building there be investigated by a committee before any of the money appropriated for this building be expended. These gentlemen are among the most prominent men of that city. They speak for themselves in this petition. They claim that there was an irregularity in the selection of the site and that the title to a part of it is imperfect. For that reason they ask an investigation. I know that petitions have been filed on the other side in opposition to this; but I want to call attention to the fact that 10 out of the 14 banks in that city have signed the petition just read. The United States attorney at Salt Lake has filed with the Attorney-General a statement that the title of the proposed site is defective.

These gentlemen claim that the city of Salt Lake has only one-half of the title of this property on one side of the street—Market street—that the other half is merged in some estate.

The people of that city asked for a hearing before the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. They were notified that a hearing would be held on the succeeding day at 9 o'clock. It happened that one of the leading men of Salt Lake City, who signed that petition, was in the city of Washington. He appeared before the committee and informed them that only a few feet away from where it is proposed to erect this building there has been erected a large building, and in order to secure a foundation for it it was necessary to sink railroad ties.

They also claim, in another petition, printed in the RECORD of January 23, that the proposed site does not meet the requirements of the Government advertisement for a site. The gentlemen whose signatures appear on this petition stand ready to donate to the Government any site in Salt Lake City which may be selected by a committee to be appointed in accordance with their prayer in the petition as the best site in the city for a Federal building. Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not want to be misunderstood in this matter. I am not against the appropriation for the building at Salt Lake. I am in favor of the whole amount mentioned in this bill for that city, but I am also in favor of this House paying respectable attention to the prayers and requests of the prominent business men of Salt Lake City.

Surely, the standing and prominence of those men are sufficient to entitle them to attention from the members of this House; surely, those men would not place their names on a petition which stated aught else but the strict truth; surely, they are not asking anything unreasonable when they petition Congress to make an investigation for the purpose of securing the best possible site in Salt Lake City for the erection of a $500,000 building. I, for one, do not believe that we have any right to vote away the people's money for the erection of a public building without at least a reasonable assurance that the best possible site is being selected. But in this case, Mr. Speaker, men of prominence assert, in cold type, that the proposed site is the worst one of the eleven offered to the Government.

In the snap hearing before the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds on this matter Mr. Spencer Clawson, one of the leading business men of Salt Lake City, distinctly stated that a more objectionable site than the one proposed could not be selected. Now, sirs, I do not believe that a man of Mr. Clawson's standing would make such an assertion unless it were true, and I do not think that any of you do, either. In fact, sirs, every person from Salt Lake City that I have talked with admits that there are more desirable sites in Salt Lake City than the one selected.

A gentleman sitting near me whispers for information as to how a public building at Salt Lake City interests me. He states it is not a New York State matter. I agree with him in a degree. But in another degree it is a New York State matter just as much as it is a Utah matter. New York does not furnish all the money for the public buildings, though I am rather under the impression that it furnishes a good deal indirectly for everything this country does. Neither does Utah furnish all the money. The money comes from the Federal Treasury. We are Federal officials, and every man here should be interested in every cent spent from the Treasury, even if it does not go into his own district.

I am well aware, Mr. Speaker, that no words of mine, or of anyone else, as far as that is concerned, will have the least influence upon this bill. I know that not a single line will be changed or a single amendment allowed. Knowing that, though, does not deter me in presenting the claims of the prominent men on this petition before the members of this House. The die has been cast; the logs have rolled; the booty has been so distributed that enough votes are behind the bill to ride roughshod over the prayers of these prominent men of Salt Lake. They may be right, they may be wrong; but, right or wrong, they are certainly entitled to a hearing to make good the serious charges they present in their petition, and I am in favor of giving them this opportunity, even though the sauce has been so spread over this appropriation pudding as to make it toothsome to the majority of the members of this House.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, in reply to what has just been said I wish to say that the Representative from Utah [Mr. KING], who at the outset favored the site in the interest of which the gentleman from New York has spoken, comes in now, and, with nearly all the citizens of Salt Lake, asks that the present site, which was given to the Government free of cost, be taken for this building, and the whole matter settled. I ask unanimous consent to publish with my remarks some data and reports covering this whole matter.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MERCER] asks unanimous consent to print with his remarks certain papers. Is there objection?

Mr. SULZER. I object.

Mr. MERCER. I now ask for a vote.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the objection.

Mr. MERCER. I thank the gentleman for his courtesy. I now submit the data referred to concerning the Walker site in Salt Lake, upon which the Government building is to be erected.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, March 5, 1900.

SIR: In compliance with the request contained in your letter of the 19th ultimo, for a report in connection with S. 2198, providing for an increase of limit of cost of the public building at Salt Lake City, Utah, I have the honor to advise you that an increase in present limit, namely, $300,000 to $500,000, will be sufficient for the erection of a building affording ample accommodations to meet all the requirements of the public service at Salt Lake City.

Respectfully,

O. L. SPAULDING,
Acting Secretary.

The CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS,
House of Representatives.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Washington, D. C., December 17, 1900.

DEAR MR. MERCER: Referring to our conversation by telephone on Saturday, I wish to submit to you, in corroboration of what I stated, a number of telegrams which I have received to-day. You will notice that one of them is from the city engineer, one from the State engineer, and two from ex-engineers, members of the board of public works. Of course no men are so well qualified to give an opinion as these men, and it puts an entire quietus on those who are claiming that it is not possible to get good foundations for the Salt Lake building.

I also understand that there is some complaint about there not being sufficient approaches. There is no more ground for this than for the other complaint. Ample approaches have been provided for. There was some controversy about a title to one-half of the street on one side of the building, but this has all been settled. The United States attorney says the title is perfect, and it has been so certified to us by the Department of Justice.

Let me say that this whole agitation is the result of disappointment on the part of certain parties who were not able to sell sites to the Government at big prices. I went over the whole matter of the Salt Lake building thoroughly. All these questions were raised before, and I satisfied myself fully in regard to them before selecting the site. I hope these telegrams which I inclose will settle the matter. If not, and if there is any more information desired, will you be kind enough to inform me and let me appear before the Committee before any adverse action is taken on the estimate for more money with which to construct the building.

It is my opinion that the extra money asked for should be appropriated. Salt Lake is a very important and growing city and greatly in need of a public building, and I hope such action will be taken as will permit us to begin its construction at an early date.

Please return the telegrams.

Very truly, yours,

H. A. TAYLOR.

Hon. DAVID H. MERCER,
Chairman Committee on Public Buildings, House of Representatives.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Washington, D. C., December 18, 1900.

SIR: Your letter of yesterday to the Secretary of the Treasury has been referred to me for reply. I wrote you yesterday, inclosing various telegrams, which I presume will satisfy you that there is no ground for the charge that the site for the Federal building is located where it will be impossible to secure good foundations. You also say that it is claimed that the site is removed some distance from the business portion of the city. As a matter of fact, it is on the main street of the city, less than two blocks from the point that everybody concedes is the business center, and is south, in the direction in which nearly all the growth of the city at present is being had.

You say that other sites were offered to the Government free of cost. Only one, and that was at the extreme northern end of the city, adjoining the Mormon Temple. That site has since been occupied by the erection of a building. This matter, as I wrote you before, has all been thoroughly investigated, and the Department believes that the site selected is the most suitable one to be had and meets the approval of a great majority of the people of the city, as papers on file in this office show.

Truly, yours,

H. A. TAYLOR,
Assistant Secretary.

Hon. DAVID H. MERCER,
Chairman Committee on Public Buildings, House of Representatives.

ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT,
WATERWORKS DIVISION, CITY HALL,
Salt Lake City, January 5, 1901.

To whom it may concern:

I hereby certify that the relative elevation of the Walker and Dooly sites offered to the United States Government is as follows:

Walker site	4,294
Dooly site	4,303

I also certify that the Walker site is nearer the present business center of Salt Lake City than the old city hall, Mormon Church, or Dooly sites, and 2 blocks nearer the present business center than the joint city and county building, in which the courts are held and the public records kept, and which cost about $1,000,000.

Also, that the sewer which passes the Walker site is over 12 feet below the sidewalk at the corner of said site, and the main 42-inch outlet sewer, 1¼ blocks below, is 26 feet below said corner.

I also certify that the foundation at said site is good and is better than the foundation where the joint city and county building is erected.

F. C. KELSEY, City Engineer.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 5th day of January, A. D. 1901.

[SEAL.] M. J. CHEESMAN, Notary Public.

My commission expires July 14, 1901.

I, C. W. Johnson, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original document.

[SEAL.] C. W. JOHNSON, Notary Public.

STEPHEN H. LYNCH,
TREASURER OF SALT LAKE COUNTY,
Salt Lake City, Utah, January 2, 1901.

To whom it may concern:

I, W. O. Carbis, deputy county treasurer, hereby certify that the real estate valuations of blocks Nos. 51, 59, 71, and 88, Plat A, Salt Lake City survey, for the year 1899, as shown by the books in the office of the county treasurer, were as follows, to wit:

Block 51, Walker site	$210,384.00
Block 59, Dooly site	169,308.00
Block 71, Young site (old city hall)	156,578.00
Block 88, Church site	97,685.00

Said valuations were assessed by the county assessor and approved and fixed by the boards of equalization of both the county and State for the year 1899.

W. O. CARBIS,
Deputy County Treasurer.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 5th day of January, A. D. 1901.

[SEAL.] GEO. F. FELT, Notary Public.

My commission expires May 14, 1904.

I, C. W. Johnson, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original document.

[SEAL.] C. W. JOHNSON, Notary Public.

To the HONORABLE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: Your petitioners, bankers, merchants, business and professional men of Salt Lake City, Utah, respectfully request that you make the additional appropriation of $200,000 for the new Federal building to be erected in this city on the Walker site, purchased by the Hon. Lyman J. Gage, Secretary of the Treasury Department, for $1 consideration, said site having cost the donors over $40,000. On August 1, 1899, said site was conveyed to the United States Government.

We make the above request on the ground that the site selected and purchased is as good and as centrally located as any that was offered to the Government, and that the Government will require a building of that size, to cost not less than $500,000, to accommodate its business in a city the size of Salt Lake.

We respectfully call your attention to the affidavits of the county treasurer and the city engineer, herewith attached, showing the relative value of the Walker site as compared with the others, and that the protests filed against said site are by parties who were directly interested in other sites.

We would respectfully call your attention to the certificate of the county treasurer, herewith attached, showing that the real estate in block 51, in which the Walker site is located, was assessed for the year 1899 by the county assessor (the same being approved by the State and county boards of equalization) at 34.3 per cent more than the real estate in block 71, in which the old city hall site is located; at 115.3 per cent more than the real estate in block 88, in which the Mormon Church site is located, and 24.3 per cent more than the real estate in block 59, in which the Dooly site is located.

And your petitioners ever pray.

[SEAL.] E. J. WILLS, Notary Public.

My commission expires May 10, 1901.

The question being taken on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill with the amendments, it was agreed to, two-thirds voting in favor thereof.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the sundry civil appropriation bill with Senate amendments. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] is recognized.

Mr. OTEY. I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. OTEY. I would like first to submit a parliamentary inquiry. I believe we are now still in the session of yesterday. Is that true, parliamentarily speaking?

Several MEMBERS. That is right.

The SPEAKER. This is the Calendar day of Saturday, but it is the legislative day of Friday.

Mr. OTEY. Well, Mr. Speaker, this is a matter involving high personal privilege—involving the rights of every member on this floor.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his question of personal privilege.

Mr. OTEY. Yesterday—or rather to-day—about 4 o'clock yesterday evening, when I made some extemporary remarks without any manuscript, I made no request whatever to have those remarks submitted to me for revision. I turn to page 3639 of the RECORD to-day and I find that my speech is not in the RECORD. It simply says:

[Mr. OTEY addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter.]

I think, sir, it is the right of every member to have his speech published in the RECORD just as he delivers it. [Laughter.] I made a speech yesterday—perhaps the best one I ever made in my life—and I find that it is not in the RECORD. I ask, sir, the poor privilege of a member of this House to put that speech in the RECORD just as I delivered it.

The SPEAKER. Has the gentleman concluded his statement?

Mr. OTEY. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER. The Chair finds no question before him to be decided. [Laughter.] The Chair is advised—though not knowing the facts—that the gentleman's speech consisted of standing poetically silent, holding his watch, without saying a word.

Mr. OTEY. I did say a word. [Laughter.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12291) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title:

H. R. 14017. An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bill of the following title:

S. 3288. An act for the relief of Daniel Coonan.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] is recognized.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I desire to reserve points of order upon this bill.

The SPEAKER. There is no report yet.

Mr. CANNON. I ask unanimous consent that the House nonconcur in all of the Senate amendments to the sundry civil appropriation bill and ask for a conference with the Senate.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I object, unless the gentleman from Virgia [Mr. OTEY] can have his "word" printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The Chair had not stated the request of the gentleman from Illinois. That gentleman, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, asks unanimous consent that the House nonconcur in all the amendments of the Senate to the sundry civil appropriation bill, and request on the part of the House a conference with the Senate.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I object, unless the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. OTEY] be permitted to print his "word" in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. That permission will be cheerfully given. [Laughter.]

Mr. RIXEY. Mr. Speaker, I have been unable to procure a copy of the sundry civil bill as passed by the Senate. One of the amendments, I understand, is a provision in which I feel an interest—an amendment providing for the building of a bridge across the Potomac. I want to say to the gentleman from Illinois that I have no objection to his motion, provided we can have some assurance that before that amendment is finally disposed of we may have a vote upon the question in the House.

Mr. CANNON. Well, I will say to the gentleman that I have no expectation or belief that there can be a complete agreement upon this bill in the first instance. If there should not be, I am entirely content to report that item back for the consideration of the House.

Mr. RIXEY. That will be satisfactory.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered. The Chair appoints the following managers on the part of the House: Mr. CANNON, Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts, and Mr. MCRAE.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the conference report on the legislative appropriation bill, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read instead of the conference report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana calls up the conference report on the legislative bill, and asks unanimous consent that the statement be read, and that the reading of the report be omitted. Is there objection?

Mr. SULZER. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made, and the Clerk will read both the report and the statement.

The Clerk proceeded to read the report.

Mr. SULZER (during the reading of the report). Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman withdraws the objection. The Clerk will report the statement only.

The report of the committee of conference is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12291) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 23, 33, 34, 35, 36, 39, 40, 41, 42, 53, 55, 59, 62, 65, 66, 67, 72, 73, 76, 77, 78, 88, 94, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 115, 121, 122, 124, 125, 127, 131, 143, 144, 146, 149, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 175, 176, 179, 180, 182, 183, 191, 192, 204, 206, 207, 216, 220, and 221.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21, 22, 25, 26, 31, 32, 44, 45, 47, 49, 50, 51, 56, 58, 60, 61, 64, 68, 69, 70, 71, 74, 75, 79, 80, 82, 86, 87, 90, 91, 92, 93, 95, 96, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 119, 120, 123, 126, 130, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 145, 148, 150, 151, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 177, 178, 187, 188, 201, 202, 203, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 217, 218, 219, 222, 225, 226, and 227, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 14: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "thirty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 15: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$74,200;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 16: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: Strike out all of the amended paragraph and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Office of the Clerk: For Clerk of the House of Representatives, including compensation as disbursing officer of the contingent fund, $5,000; hire of horses and wagons and cartage for use of the Clerk's office, $780, or so much thereof as may be necessary; Chief Clerk, journal clerk, and 2 reading clerks, at $3,000 each; tally clerk, $3,000; printing and bill clerk and disbursing clerk, at $2,500 each; file clerk, $2,750; enrolling clerk, $2,250; assistant disbursing clerk, assistant enrolling clerk, resolution and petition clerk, newspaper clerk, index clerk, assistant journal clerk, and assistant to Chief Clerk, at $2,000 each; librarian, distributing clerk, and stationery clerk, at $1,800 each; 1 bookkeeper, 2 assistant librarians, and 7 clerks, at $1,600 each; document and bill clerk, $1,600; document clerk, $1,440; locksmith, who shall be skilled in his trade, $1,200; cabinetmaker, who shall be skilled in his trade, $1,200; 2 assistant cabinetmakers, who shall be skilled in their trade, at $900 each; 1 assistant in Clerk's office and 1 assistant in disbursing office, at $1,400 each; telegraph operator, assistant file clerk, and stenographer to the Clerk, at $1,200 each; 1 assistant in library, 1 assistant in document room, and 1 assistant in stationery room, at $900 each; 1 page, $720; 2 laborers in the bathroom (Robert Richardson and William Richardson), at $720 each; 2 laborers, at $720 each; assistant index clerk, $1,500; page in enrolling room and messenger in Chief Clerk's office, at $720 each; in all $91,460.

"The library of the House of Representatives shall hereafter be under the control and direction of the librarian of Congress, who shall provide all needful books of reference therefor. The librarian, 2 assistant librarians, and assistant in the library, above provided for, shall be appointed by the Clerk of the House, with the approval of the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-sixth Congress, and thereafter no removals shall be made from the said positions except for cause reported to and approved by the Committee on Rules."

On page 14 of the bill, after line 8, insert as a separate paragraph the following:

"For janitors for rooms of the Committees on Accounts, Agriculture, Banking and Currency, Claims, District of Columbia, Elections, Foreign Affairs, Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Indian Affairs, Insular Affairs, Invalid Pensions, Judiciary, Merchant Marine and Fisheries, Military Affairs, Naval Affairs, Pensions, Public Buildings and Grounds, Public Lands, Rivers and Harbors, and War Claims, at the rate of $720 per annum each, from December 1, 1901, to June 30, 1902, inclusive, and said janitors shall be appointed by the chairmen respectively of said committees and shall perform all of the duties heretofore required of messengers detailed to said committees by the Doorkeeper; in all, $8,412."

On page 14 of the bill strike out all of lines 12 to 20, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Office of Sergeant-at-Arms: For Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, $4,500; deputy to the Sergeant-at-Arms, $2,000; cashier, $3,000; paying teller, $2,150; bookkeeper, $1,800; assistant bookkeeper, $900; messenger, $1,200; clerk in charge of pairs, $1,400; page, $720; and skilled laborer, $840; in all, $18,510."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendments numbered 17 and 18: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 17 and 18, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: Strike out all of the amended paragraph and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Office of Doorkeeper: For Doorkeeper, $3,500; hire of horses, feed, repair of wagon and harness, $600, or so much thereof as may be necessary; assistant doorkeeper, and Department messenger, at $2,000 each; 1 special employee (John T. And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 19: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: On page 17 of the bill strike out lines 19 to 24, inclusive, and on page 18 of the bill strike out lines 1 to 9, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"To continue the employment of the person named in the resolution of the House adopted June 5, 1900, as a laborer, at $50 per month, from March 4, 1901, until June 30, 1902, inclusive, $796.67.

"Successors to any of the employees provided for in the six preceding paragraphs may be named by the House of Representatives at any time prior to July 1, 1902.

"Office of postmaster: For postmaster, $2,500; assistant postmaster, $2,000; 12 messengers, including messenger to superintend transportation of mails, at $1,200 each; 8 messengers, at $100 per month each, during the session, $5,574.16; and 1 laborer, $720; in all, $25,194.16.

On page 20 of the bill, strike out lines 7 and 8 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"For packing boxes, $3,218.40. And hereafter packing boxes for the use of the House of Representatives shall be procured after advertisement for proposals therefor, under specifications to be prepared by the Clerk of the House, and from the lowest and best bidder to furnish the same."

On page 20 of the bill, after line 18, insert the following as new paragraphs:

"Hereafter employees of the House of Representatives under the Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, and Postmaster shall only be assigned to and engaged upon the duties of the positions to which they are appointed and for which compensation is provided, except that in cases of emergency or congestion of public business incident to the close of a session of Congress or other like cause an employee or employees may be assigned or required to aid in the discharge of the duties of any other employee or employees, and in the discretion of the Doorkeeper not more than one folder may, if necessary, be assigned to do clerical work under the direction of the foreman of the folding room, but all assignments made hereunder shall be without additional compensation and shall not constitute the basis of a claim therefor.

"It shall not be lawful to appoint or employ in any position under the House of Representatives more than one person at any one time, or to require or permit any such person to divide with another any portion of his salary or compensation while so employed.

"It shall not be lawful to require or permit any person in the employ of the House of Representatives to sublet to another the discharge of any portion of the duties of the position to which he is appointed.

"No person shall be appointed or employed as a page in the service of the House of Representatives who is under 12 years or more than 18 years of age; but this provision shall not apply to chief pages, riding pages, and telephone pages.

"The Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, and Postmaster shall make certificate each month to their respective pay rolls, stating whether the persons named in such pay rolls and employed in their respective departments have been actually present at their respective places of duty and have actually performed the services for which compensation is provided in said pay rolls, and in each case where a person carried on such pay roll has been absent and has not performed the services in whole or in part for which payment is proposed, the reason for such absence and for such nonperformance of services shall be stated.

"The violation of any of the foregoing provisions of law shall, upon ascertainment thereof, be deemed to be cause for removal from office.

"It shall be the duty of the Committee on Accounts of the House of Representatives from time to time to inquire into the enforcement or violation of any of the foregoing provisions of law; and for this purpose they are hereby authorized to send for persons and papers, and to administer oaths; and they shall report to the House at least once every session their compliance with the duty herein imposed."

The action taken by the committee of conference and recommended in this report with reference to amendments of the Senate numbered 16, 17, 18, and 19, whereby new matter and certain provisions of law are inserted affecting the officers and employees of the House of Representatives, is based upon the authority expressed in the concurrent resolution of the two Houses, adopted February 27, 1901, and which is as follows:

"Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12291) making appropriations for legislative, executive, and judicial expenses are authorized to include in their report such alterations, changes, and recommendations as they may deem proper with reference to so much of the text of said bill as relates to the officers and employees of the House of Representatives."

Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12291) making appropriations for legislative, executive, and judicial expenses submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report, namely:

On amendments numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13, relating to the employees of the Senate: Provides for such additional employees and at such rates of compensation as the Senate proposed by its amendments.

On Nos. 14 and 15: Provides for 5 additional Capitol policemen at $900 instead of 6, as proposed by the Senate.

On Nos. 16, 17, 18, and 19, relating to the House of Representatives: Provides under the authority of a concurrent resolution of the two Houses for a reorganization of the employees under the Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, and Postmaster, with the following results, compared with the bill as it passed the Senate, namely:

"In the Clerk's office: One librarian, reduced from $2,000 to $1,800; 2 assistant librarians, reduced from $1,800 to $1,600 each; 1 locksmith is reduced from $1,440 to $1,200; 1 cabinetmaker, $1,200, created; 2 assistant cabinetmakers, at $900 each, created; 2 messengers in House library, at $1,314 each, omitted; 2 assistants, 1 in Clerk's office and 1 in disbursing office, at $1,400 each, created; 3 laborers, at $720 each, omitted; 3 assistants, 1 in library, 1 in document room, and 1 in stationery room, at $900 each, created; 1 assistant index clerk at $6 per day during the session, with average annual pay of $1,539, omitted; 1 assistant index clerk, at $1,500 per annum, created; for hire of horses and wagons and cartage for use of the Clerk's office the sum is reduced from $900 to $780; the net result is an increase of $2,434.

"In the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms: It is proposed to omit from the Capitol police 1 private at $960 and the $500 additional heretofore paid for services in looking after pairs; provides for a clerk in charge of pairs at $1,400; increases the compensation of the paying teller from $2,000 to $2,150; increases the compensation of the laborer from $660 to $840; making a net increase of $270.

In the office of the Doorkeeper: One messenger is provided for at $1,200 in lieu of a folder in the sealing room, at same salary, dropped; 1 clerk in folding room at $1,200 is provided for in lieu of a folder at $900, dropped, who receives $300 extra pay; 3 folders at $720 each are provided for instead of 3 folders at $70 per month each during the session; 2 telephone pages are provided for instead of 1 telephone and one telegraph page; 5 additional messengers, including one at the Speaker's table, at $1,000 each are provided for; 10 pages for duty at the entrances to the Hall at $2.50 per day each during the session are proposed, $5,275; 20 janitors for committee rooms at rate of $720 per annum each from December 1 next are recommended, $14,400 per annum, or $8,412 for balance of fiscal year from December 1, 1901; the salary of the assistant superintendent of the document room is reduced from $2,000 to $1,800; the salary of one assistant in the document room is increased from $1,314 to $1,400; 2 laborers at $720 each are provided for instead of 2 messengers at $70 per month each during the session; making a total proposed net increase of $11,622.30.

Office of the Postmaster: Two additional messengers are provided for at $1,200 each; 4 additional messengers during the session at $100 per month each are provided for; 3 messengers during the session at $800 each are omitted; 3 messengers have heretofore been authorized by resolution at each session at $100 per month each. Net increase for Post-Office under the foregoing will be $696.77.

Minority employees: Five hundred dollars is included as additional for one special chief page at $900 for services as pair clerk. The salary of one laborer is reduced from $720 to $600 to conform to the pay of other cloakroom men.

The total apparent net increase under the foregoing reorganization amounts to $15,403.07 on the face of the bill, or to $21,391.07, if the salaries of the new committee janitors are reckoned for a whole year instead of for the seven months remaining of the fiscal year from the beginning of their term of service in December next. On the other hand, the claims for compensation for extra services recommended at this session, amounting to $13,376.14, will be avoided in the future, and there will no longer be necessity for the usual provision for 15 extra folders at $75 per month each during a long session of Congress, which for six months would amount to $6,750; and by providing for the three skilled cabinetmakers as proposed the payments to the House carpenter, which for the past twelve months have amounted to more than $4,000, will likewise be avoided. These three sums aggregate $24,126.14, or nearly $3,000 more than the whole proposed increase reckoned on the basis of a year.

The new positions provided for are: One cabinetmaker at $1,200, and 2 cabinetmakers at $900 each, under the Clerk; 5 messengers at $1,000 each, and 10 pages at $2.50 per day each during the session, under the Doorkeeper, and 20 janitors to committee rooms at $720 each.

The following new provisions of law applying to the service of the House are proposed:

The library of the House of Representatives shall hereafter be under the control and direction of the Librarian of Congress, who shall provide all needful books of reference therefor. The librarian, two assistant librarians, and assistant in the library, above provided for, shall be appointed by the Clerk of the House, with the approval of the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-sixth Congress, and thereafter no removals shall be made from the said positions except for cause reported to and approved by the Committee on Rules.

Hereafter employees of the House of Representatives under the Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, and Postmaster shall only be assigned to and engaged upon the duties of the positions to which they are appointed and for which compensation is provided, except that in cases of emergency or congestion of public business incident to the close of a session of Congress or other like cause an employee or employees may be assigned or required to aid in the discharge of the duties of any other employee or employees, and in the discretion of the Doorkeeper not more than one folder may, if necessary, be assigned to do clerical work under the direction of the foreman of the folding room, but all assignments made hereunder shall be without additional compensation and shall not constitute the basis of a claim therefor.

It shall not be lawful to appoint or employ in any position under the House of Representatives more than one person at any one time, or to require or permit any such person to divide with another any portion of his salary or compensation while so employed.

It shall not be lawful to require or permit any person in the employ of the House of Representatives to sublet to another the discharge of any portion of the duties of the position to which he is appointed.

No person shall be appointed or employed as a page in the service of the House of Representatives who is under 12 years or more than 18 years of age; but this provision shall not apply to chief pages, riding pages, and telephone pages.

The Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, and Postmaster shall make certificate each month to their respective pay rolls, stating whether the persons named in such pay rolls and employed in their respective departments have been actually present at their respective places of duty and have actually performed the services for which compensation is provided in said pay rolls, and in each case where a person carried on such pay roll has been absent and has not performed the services in whole or in part for which payment is proposed, the reason for such absence and for such nonperformance of services shall be stated.

The violation of any of the foregoing provisions of law shall, upon ascertainment thereof, be deemed to be cause for removal from office.

It shall be the duty of the Committee on Accounts of the House of Representatives from time to time to inquire into the enforcement or violation of any of the foregoing provisions of law; and for this purpose they are hereby authorized to send for persons and papers, and to administer oaths; and they shall report to the House at least once every session their compliance with the duty herein imposed.

And hereafter packing boxes for the use of the House of Representatives shall be procured after advertisement for proposals therefor, under specifications to be prepared by the Clerk of the House, and from the lowest and best bidder to furnish the same.

On Nos. 141 and 142: Appropriates $3,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $1,500, as proposed by the House, for rent of the depot quartermaster's office of the War Department.

On Nos. 143 and 144: Strikes out the addition of 1 clerk of class 2, proposed by the Senate, in the office of the Naval Records of the Rebellion.

On Nos. 145, 146, and 147: Provides for a draftsman at $2,000, as proposed by the Senate, and strikes out 1 additional clerk of class 3 in the Bureau of Equipment.

On Nos. 148, 149, 150, 151, and 152, relating to the Naval Observatory: Provides for a librarian at $1,200 instead of $1,400, as proposed by the Senate, and provides for 2 assistants, at $1,000 each instead of 1 laborer at $720 and 1 laborer at $660, as proposed by the Senate.

On Nos. 153 and 154: Strikes out increase of salary for draftsman from $1,000 to $1,200, proposed by the Senate, in the Bureau of Steam Engineering, Navy Department.

On Nos. 155, 156, and 157: Strikes out provision for 1 clerk of class 2 instead of 1 clerk of class 1, proposed by the Senate, in the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Navy Department.

On Nos. 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, and 165, relating to the office of the Secretary of the Interior: Increases the compensation of the chief clerk $250; provides for 2 additional special inspectors at $2,500, 2 additional clerks of class 4, 3 additional clerks of class 3, 5 additional clerks of class 2, 1 additional clerk of class 1, and 3 additional clerks at $1,000 each, all as proposed by the Senate.

On Nos. 166, 167, and 168: Provides for 1 assistant attorney at $2,750, instead of 1 assistant attorney at $2,500, and an additional sum of $250, as proposed by the Senate.

On Nos. 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, and 174, relating to the Indian Office: Provides for 1 additional clerk of class 3, 2 assistant messengers, 1 laborer, and 4 charwomen, and strikes out provision for 1 female messenger at $840, all as proposed by the Senate.

On Nos. 175 and 176: Strikes out increase of salary of captain of the watch of the Pension Office building from $840 to $900.

On No. 177: Appropriates $5,000, as proposed by the Senate, for equipment of the library rooms of the Patent Office.

On Nos. 178, 179, 180, and 181: Increases the salary of the Commissioner of Education, as proposed by the Senate, from $3,000 to $3,500, and strikes out the proposed increase in the salary of 1 specialist in educational systems from $1,400 to $1,600.

On Nos. 182 and 183: Strikes out the provisions proposed by the Senate permitting the purchase of newspapers and books for the Bureau of Education.

On No. 184: Provides for the continuance of the office of Commissioner of Railroads during the fiscal year 1902, as proposed by the Senate.

On Nos. 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, and 201, relating to the offices of surveyors-general, as compared with the provisions therefor proposed by the House, provides for the following increases, namely: For clerks in Alaska, $1,000; in Colorado, $1,500; in Idaho, $500; in Nevada, $500; in Utah, $1,000; in Washington, $200, and in Wyoming, $700; and increases the amount for contingent expenses of the office in Wyoming from $1,000 to $1,315.

On Nos. 202, 203, 204, 205, and 206, relating to the office of the Third Assistant Postmaster-General: Provides for 1 additional clerk of class 4 and 1 of class 1, and strikes out 1 additional clerk at $1,000 and 1 assistant messenger proposed by the Senate.

On No. 207: Fixes the rate of per diem allowance of assistant superintendents of the registry system at $4, as proposed by the House, instead of $3, as proposed by the Senate.

On Nos. 208 and 209: Provides for 3 additional clerks at $1,000 each in the office of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General, as proposed by the Senate.

On Nos. 210 and 211: Provides for an electrician for the Post-Office Department at $1,400, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $1,200, as proposed by the House.

On Nos. 212, 213, 214, and 215: Appropriates $15,500, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $15,000, as proposed by the House, for miscellaneous items for the Post-Office Department.

On No. 216: Strikes out the appropriation of $8,000 proposed by the Senate for the employment of a competent lawyer to represent the United States before committees of Congress.

On Nos. 217, 218, and 219: Provides for a law clerk at $2,000 instead of a clerk at $1,600 in the office of the Solicitor of the Treasury, as proposed by the Senate.

On Nos. 220 and 221: Strikes out the increase proposed in the compensation of the reporter of the United States court for Hawaii from $1,200 to $1,500.

On Nos. 222, 223, and 224: Makes a verbal correction in the text and provides for the reporter of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia at $1,200 instead of $1,000, as proposed by the House, and $1,500, as proposed by the Senate.

On No. 225: Appropriates $250, as proposed by the Senate, for contingent fund for the commissioner's office of the Yellowstone Park.

On Nos. 226 and 227: Increases the compensation of the chief clerk of the Court of Claims from $3,000 to $3,500, as proposed by the Senate.

The bill as finally agreed upon appropriates $24,600,753.85, being $196,205.58 more than as it passed the House, $798,755.58 less than the estimates, and $425,101.32 more than the appropriations for the current fiscal year.

The appropriation for the temporary employees in the Bureau of Internal Revenue in connection with the act to provide for war expenditures was fixed in the bill as it passed the House at the amount provided for the current fiscal year, namely, $650,000. In passing the bill the Senate reduced this amount to $400,000 in order to bring the matter within the jurisdiction of the conference committee. The conference committee fixed the amount at $550,000, that being the sum which it is estimated will be required for the service of the fiscal year 1902 under the provisions of the new revenue act which has been agreed upon by both Houses.

HENRY H. BINGHAM,
J. A. HEMENWAY,
L. F. LIVINGSTON,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. Speaker, unless there is some inquiry to be made, I move that the report be adopted.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I did not hear what the report was.

Mr. HEMENWAY. The report of the committee of conference on the legislative bill.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Is it a full agreement?

Mr. HEMENWAY. It is a full agreement.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, there is one matter I simply desire to call attention to; but if there is a full agreement I have no hope of correcting it now. If the gentleman will permit, I understand that in reforming the appointments in the House the conferees have placed the House library under the control of the Librarian of Congress. Is that true?

Mr. HEMENWAY. That is true. I will state, however, that the patronage of the House library will continue as heretofore, with this exception. The employees will be appointed by the Clerk, with the approval of the Speaker of the House, and after they have once been appointed they can not be removed without consent of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Well, will that leave the library under the control of the House?

Mr. HEMENWAY. It leaves it under the control of the House.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. My question was based on the fact that I have seen a statement in the public prints that the House library was put under control of the Librarian of Congress; and I hope that is a mistake.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I will state that the same provision that was shown to the gentleman from Texas the other day is left in the bill. It is simply that the supervision of the books and the selection of the books is with the Librarian. He has no other power.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Read the gentleman the exact language.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I will read the gentleman the exact language of the provision:

The library of the House of Representatives shall hereafter be under the control and direction of the Librarian of Congress, who shall provide all needful books of reference therefor. The librarian, two assistant librarians, and assistant in the library, above provided for, shall be appointed by the Clerk of the House, with the approval of the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-sixth Congress, and thereafter no removals shall be made from the said positions except for cause reported to and approved by the Committee on Rules.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I think it entirely proper to provide in this way for the appointment, but I have very serious doubt about the propriety of the House placing its library under the control of a gentleman who bears no relation to the House. The Librarian of Congress is now appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The House, having once by law placed its library under his control, would find it necessary to enact a law to regain absolute control of it; and it appears to me an unwise provision for the House itself to share with the Senate and the President the control of its library. The Librarian of Congress is not responsible to the House; he is not an officer of the House, and to turn over to his supervision and control the library of this body seems to me of more than doubtful propriety.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I will state to the gentleman from Texas the only object of this is that the Librarian may select the books that go into this library; and I have no doubt if there is any member of Congress who desires a particular book in the library, and suggests it to the Librarian of Congress, that the book would be furnished. Why, the Public Printer simply prints upon the orders of the House; and I have no doubt the Librarian would furnish such books as members of the House desire. Now, the object of this provision is this: that we may have in the library such books as members of Congress desire; that we may have as near as possible a permanent force of competent men, who, when a member on the floor calls for a particular book, will be able to put their hands on it and give it to him.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. That is all very desirable.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I think the Librarian of Congress is probably more competent to select the books for this library than anyone else. I have no doubt, as I said before, on the suggestion of any member that he desired certain books placed here in the library, that he would be pleased to put them there.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt in this colloquy, and let us understand each other fairly. Does the bill mean to say that it gives arbitrary power to the Librarian of Congress or not?

Mr. HEMENWAY. I would say we will not give more power to the Librarian than we give to the Public Printer down here. He bears the same relation to the House that the Public Printer does.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. May I suggest this fact. I agree with the gentleman from Texas that it would be unwise to part with complete control of the library. I suggest to the gentleman from Texas that by delegating this authority to the Librarian of Congress he becomes the servant of the House for that purpose. This designates a person who for the time shall be the servant of the House. And we very frequently do that in public law. For instance, in the case of the Commissioner of Immigration, the duty of looking after analogous public service—the Chinese restriction law; and I think that in giving this duty to the Librarian we do not give it to one who is not our servant, but we make some one ad hoc our servant for the purpose and duties with which we intrust him.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Does the gentleman mean——

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Permit me to finish the colloquy with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY].

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. The only trouble about that is this. Take this instance, while wholly improbable, not impossible: The House disagrees with the Librarian about the manner in which he manages that library. The House would have no power to withdraw its authority except by law. Now, what I should want, if I expected to remain a member of this House, would be authority, whenever dealing with any officer of the House who might transgress the rules of the House, that there should be ample power to remove him.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Practically it comes to that, because, as the gentleman from Texas knows very well, on any resolution relating to House affairs sent to the Senate they would agree to it, as we extend the same courtesy to them. I think there is no danger. I agree with the gentleman's view.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will the gentleman allow me?

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. One moment; I would like just a word.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a word on the amendment which is the provision in the conference report. That I understand provides all the officers of the House and reassigns the places and fixes the salaries of the House employees.

Mr. HEMENWAY. It does.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Now, I want to say this: The report brought in here by the gentleman from Indiana may be very proper, and probably is, but the minority have not had any opportunity whatever to investigate this report and to consider it. I know in the closing hours of this session that we can not go into it intelligently now.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Let me suggest to the gentleman, right in connection with your statement, that on this special committee, appointed by the House, the minority was represented by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] and the gentleman from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS]. Every provision that is in this bill was submitted to Mr. BAILEY and to Mr. NEWLANDS, and from time to time I consulted with the gentleman himself as to the minority employees.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the gentleman will permit me, I do not think there will be any great difference. I will state yesterday afternoon the report was submitted to me. I was informed that it had to go back to the Senate within twenty minutes, and had to be passed on by the Senate in twenty minutes; and upon the question of the appointment of the employees of this House and the amount of salaries that they should receive, and as to whether we had too many or too few to perform the duties, I did not think we could do that in that time; and therefore I did not attempt to consider it.

Now, all I desire to say is this, that the House has by resolution provided a committee for the reorganization of the employees of the House, authorizing them to sit during recess, and therefore I think the minority members can very well allow this to go, notwithstanding the fact that they have had no real opportunity to investigate it. The gentleman from Indiana, and gentlemen on the conference committee on that side, have assumed this responsibility. We can not interfere with it now, and I merely wish it to go in the RECORD that we have not had a chance to investigate it.

Mr. HEMENWAY. The gentleman will understand that at this late day in the session, the agreement having been reached yesterday late in the day, and the report being a long one, there could be little opportunity upon our part to offer him a chance to investigate; and at the time the report went back to the Senate yesterday afternoon it was expected that the Senate would immediately act upon it, but they were delayed and did not act upon it as early as was expected.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We do not propose to oppose the passage of the bill, but having had no chance to investigate it, I stated that we did not assume any responsibility in the matter, as we can not know what is in it.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia ten minutes.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, the employees of the House are cared for. There is $500 added to the messenger who arranges the pairs on this side of the House, which takes him out of the deficiency bill hereafter and gives him a salary of $900. That place is now filled by Mr. English. Another alteration is in regard to an employee in the cloakroom who now gets $60, and he is reduced to $50, which puts him on the same basis as the employees of the cloakroom on the right of the House. These are the only changes in the minority employees. Making the best analysis of changes I could, there are 14 places dropped and 25 created. That, however, does not include the 10 pages to be employed for the session nor the 20 janitors for committee rooms. There is one gentleman who has been on the roll who is employed now that has not been taken care of in this arrangement. I refer to Mr. McCloskey.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Let me suggest to the gentleman that he would have to be taken care of on the deficiency bill.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I was going to suggest that that gentleman can be taken care of on the deficiency bill if the House proposes to continue his services. I want to say that the managers on the part of the House, I think, have succeeded very well in keeping down appropriations, or in reducing the appropriations in our dealings with the conferees or managers on the part of the Senate. I think the bill carries just about as small an amount of money as your managers on the part of the House could possibly secure at the hands of the Senate. We did our utmost to reduce the amount as low as possible.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND].

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, as suggested by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], it is unfortunate that we have to vote upon these very important provisions without an opportunity to know what they are. It is unfortunate, I think, that the work of preparing the legislation in regard to the employees of the House was not left to the committee to be provided under the resolution which the House adopted a day or two ago. I hope that the members of the committee, headed by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOODY], have been given an opportunity to inspect this legislation, and that they are cognizant of it fully, and that it has their approval or disapproval. It seems to me, from what I can gather, that the main effect of the legislation is to provide that the employee under the present regulations who gets, say, $900 in the regular way and $300 or $400 in the deficiency bill, will get the increase at once as a matter of course, and in the regular course, instead of by indirection.

It seems to me, as I gather from the reading by the Clerk of the new provisions, that the thought of keeping down salaries to what would be a reasonable limit, that the possibility of reducing instead of increasing the number of employees in the House, have had but little consideration, if any, in this committee.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I will state to the gentleman that the result of the reorganization is a net reduction of $3,000.

Mr. DE ARMOND. That is, with the amounts allowed in the deficiency bill?

Mr. HEMENWAY. Yes; for extra pay.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Well, it seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that if we were desirous of making reductions we could go much further. The gentleman from Georgia has suggested that care has been taken of minority employees. The one thing, it seems to me, which care has not been taken of is the interests of the people who pay the minority employees as well as the majority employees. I do not believe that 357 or 400 employees in this House (secretaries to members not included) are at all necessary. I believe that one-half the number, or less than half the number, if properly selected and under proper discipline, would render more efficient service.

Mr. KING. Does the gentleman from Missouri state that there are 357 employees connected with this House?

Mr. DE ARMOND. That was the report of the special committee.

Mr. KING. And with such a report as that does the gentleman mean to say that this committee has not recommended a reduction?

Mr. DE ARMOND. I understand the number has been increased instead of lessened. It does seem to me that this is a rash way of legislating. While I make no question of the good intentions of anybody, and could not with the lack of knowledge I have, which must be shared by every other member of the House, it seems to be possible, at least—I will not put it more strongly—that we may discover after the new provisions have gone into law that we have crystallized and anchored abuses in the law, while taking away some objectionable features of the system that have prevailed, those of "addition, division, and silence."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish we could have a separate vote upon this. I wish the matter could be so arranged that it could have the consideration of the House in something approaching an intelligent manner. This emphasizes what I think is an exceedingly bad practice—that of putting onto appropriation bills legislation of vast importance, of the propriety and effect of which no member of the House not upon the conference committee can have anything like a fair or adequate conception. It ought not to be done; it is not the way to do, and instead of removing abuses we are perpetuating them.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I yield to the gentleman one minute more in order to make a suggestion. I want to make a suggestion that in the Missouri legislature there are more employees than we have in the House of Representatives.

Mr. DE ARMOND. I want to suggest to the gentleman that he is entirely mistaken in his illustration. Will the gentleman be kind enough to direct the line of his suggestion to the territory where he probably knows something about things, and not to that of which he does not know. How about the Indiana legislature?

Mr. HEMENWAY. There are a great many more there than there ought to be. Did not the Democratic candidate for governor admit that there were more than 400 employees under the Missouri legislature, and did not the Republican governor claim that there were more than 500?

Mr. DE ARMOND. I do not know about the details of that. The Missouri legislature at times when the gentleman's party was in control had more employees and paid at a far higher rate of compensation than public interests would permit or require.

But the suggestion of the gentleman in regard to the legislature of Missouri has nothing at all to do with the kind of legislation that we have here now—legislation in regard to which there is no possibility in knowing what it is; legislation that may be all right—I do not say it is not—but legislation that the House can not understand; legislation that the House will enact, if it does enact it, in the dark, and by this process, so much resorted to, putting upon appropriation bills and carrying through with the appropriation bill as a vehicle measures which could become law by no other agency and which by no process of reasoning could be justified as law.

What I have suggested is—and I come right to the point—the unfortunate state of affairs is that upon matters of so much importance as these we are to legislate in the dark, and that this committee has seen proper to take the place of the committee to be appointed by the Speaker of the House to consider intelligently this subject for such time as they desire and make their recommendations.

I believe, and I think it will be found to be true, that this legislation will fasten upon the House, with its approval, the employment of far more employees than are needed to discharge the business of the House and at a much higher rate of compensation than is necessary. At least it will forestall the intelligent investigation to be made under the order of the House by a committee appointed by the Speaker; and in that respect it is objectionable.

I for one, inasmuch as I must vote in the dark in this matter, with no more information than can be gathered by trying to listen to the hurried reading of the clerk—inasmuch as it is impossible for anybody, unless he has been upon the conference committee, to know whether this is right or wrong, good or bad—I for one being compelled to vote in the dark—recognizing this method of legislation as very objectionable and usually very bad in its results—shall vote against the adoption of this conference report.

Mr. HEMENWAY. In comparison with the number of employees in the Missouri legislature, which I am informed is larger than the number in this House, I suggest to the gentleman from Missouri that this provision, notwithstanding his lack of knowledge, is a good one.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I would like to put a question to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HEMENWAY]. When I am asking a question, simply and purely for information, as to whether this measure will place absolute power in the hands of one officer, whoever he may be, does the gentleman think that it is a fair answer to refer to the fact that possibly outrages are perpetrated in the printing and folding departments?

Mr. HEMENWAY. I have answered that question.

Mr. CORLISS. I wish to ask whether this provision does not create a life position, the incumbent to hold it indefinitely unless removed for cause?

Mr. HEMENWAY. The gentleman is referring to the librarian?

Mr. CORLISS. Not only the librarian of the House, but his three assistants. The provision certainly creates life positions.

Mr. HEMENWAY. The object of the provision is to secure in the library competent men, so that when a gentleman on his feet perhaps in the House making a speech desires some information—desires a book from the library—there will be some one there who can put his hand on the volume which is wanted and have it sent here promptly when called for.

Mr. CORLISS. But this creates life positions.

Mr. HEMENWAY. No; not necessarily.

Mr. CORLISS. Is there any limitation in this measure with reference to the length of tenure?

Mr. HEMENWAY. The appointments are to be made by the Clerk.

Mr. CORLISS. And the incumbents can not be removed except for cause during life. Is not that true?

Mr. HEMENWAY. That is true.

Mr. CORLISS. I certainly think that is an outrage on the House.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, for many Congresses the library of the House of Representatives has been a library in name only—a place for incompetency—where the employees substantially have simply drawn their salaries without any intelligent service, and where what little service we have had has been from one, and sometimes two, employees drawing inferior salaries. There ought to be a provision which would give permanency of employment to competent people in the library, where competent service is required, and frequently required on the instant.

Mr. HOPKINS. Suppose you should get an incompetent man in that life position, then where are you?

A MEMBER. He can be removed for cause.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, there will be no trouble about removing an incompetent man, if such a one should get the position. But the man is appointed with the approval of the Speaker.

Mr. CORLISS. Gentlemen say the officer can be removed for cause. For what cause can he be removed? This is an act of Congress, and will give the legal incumbent a right to the office until removed for cause, and there is no cause set forth.

Mr. CANNON. Well, I will say blindness would be a cause; senility would be a cause; incompetency would be a cause.

Mr. CORLISS. That is your interpretation?

Mr. CANNON. There are a thousand possible causes; nobody could specify all of them.

Mr. HEMENWAY. The Committee on Rules would determine the cause.

Mr. CORLISS. You do not provide who shall exercise the power of removal.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Oh, I beg to differ with the gentleman. The officer to be appointed by the Clerk with the approval of the Speaker.

Mr. CORLISS. But there is no power to remove him.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Certainly there is. He can be removed whenever sufficient cause is presented to the Committee on Rules. Whenever the Committee on Rules thinks that the officer is not competent, that is cause enough and he goes out.

Mr. CORLISS. There is no such provision.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Oh, yes, there is.

Mr. CORLISS. I submit that there ought to be a defined tenure of office. We do not want life positions created anywhere.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I read from the provision of the amendment:

> And thereafter no removals shall be made from the said position except for cause reported to and approved by the Committee on Rules.

The Committee on Rules is to determine whether the officer is competent. If at any time a member asking for a book should find that the employee in the library is incompetent, he would immediately say to the Committee on Rules: "This man is not competent; he does not know where to find a book which is wanted." I have no doubt if the charge was sustained the Committee on Rules would at once say: "That is a sufficient cause for his removal."

Mr. CORLISS. I have not been very successful myself in obtaining action from the Committee on Rules. [Laughter.] Therefore I think we had better have some limitation upon this power.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I would like to occupy a few minutes.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I will yield to the gentleman for three minutes.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. As I understand, the provision now reported with respect to employees in the House library is an effort to make the tenure of office of those employees more permanent. Is that true?

Mr. HEMENWAY. That is the object.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. How many of these employees are there?

Mr. HEMENWAY. Four.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Now, it is proposed to fix their tenure of office by law, making it to that extent permanent. I understand they must be removed for cause, with the consent of the Speaker.

Mr. HEMENWAY. No; the Committee on Rules.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Well, the Committee on Rules, presided over by the Speaker. Now, that is right. I believe that all the officers and employees of the House should have some permanent tenure to the extent of enabling them to stay here until they learn their duties. They ought not to be changed so often. But the objection which I make in this case is that you extend this permanent tenure to these library employees when you on the other side have all four of the officers.

Mr. HEMENWAY. No doubt that is true. I will ask the gentleman right there——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. One moment. You are entitled to it, and you need not expect them to be permanent if the opportunity comes to change, when they are all of one party; because there has never been any civil service in this Government that has been absolutely fair.

Now, what I would suggest to the gentlemen would have been, when they were making these appointments, they should divide these offices when you are undertaking to make a permanent establishment, so that there would be no political inducement to make these changes. In other words, you can not so arrange it that there will not be found cause to remove a man when all the employees of that special bureau belong to any one political party.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I want to say to the gentleman that I have no doubt that if the Democrats secure control of the House—and I hope they never will—that the Committee on Rules will soon find a cause for the removal of the four——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. No, that would not be right; and I would not insist on that, where there is a law to protect them. I would not ask a total violation of the law upon any kind of a pretext; but you will always find that there will be some way by which they will get a part of them, and that you may not expect human nature will ever get so perfect and pure that men will not claim their share; and it would have been a great deal better in undertaking to make a permanent roll that they should have been equally divided between the two parties.

Mr. HEMENWAY. While the Republicans are in control of Congress, this will no doubt result in continuing the same force, if they are competent librarians; and I have no doubt should the Democratic party control for ten years, and have four competent men, it would keep them for the ten years.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I move the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. HEPBURN. I desire to make a point of order.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman?

Mr. HEMENWAY. Does the gentleman desire to ask a question?

Mr. HEPBURN. I desire to make a point of order. Mr. Speaker, all points of order were reserved on the bill.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I do not yield to the gentleman for that purpose.

Mr. HEPBURN. I think the gentleman will have to yield.

Mr. HEMENWAY. If I do, I will be very glad to; but I decline to yield for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. The Chair must hear the point of order.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that the amendment in the report of the committee is not germane to the amendment, and that it is a recommendation of a usurpation on the part of the conference committee of a subject-matter in their report not having been referred to them, and there being no disagreement between the two Houses upon that subject.

Mr. HEMENWAY. If the gentleman will permit me there——

Mr. HEPBURN. I decline to yield to the gentleman for that purpose. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Let the gentleman state his point of order.

Mr. HEPBURN. Amendment No. 16 reads as follows: The Senate strikes out of the resolution "February 2, 1901." That is the entire amendment. There is no addition, and the only disagreement between the two Houses is whether or not the House will consent to the striking out of those words.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield to a suggestion?

Mr. HEPBURN. Yes.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. The gentleman must have been absent when the House unanimously, on my motion, conferred upon the conference committee authority to deal with this whole subject.

Mr. HEPBURN. What whole subject?

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. The whole subject of House employees. It was on an action of the special committee, reporting a concurrent resolution reported by the committee of which I was chairman.

Mr. HEPBURN. That perhaps would justify the committee in a portion of their report. If I could have the report a moment I would call the attention of the Chair to it.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I call the attention of the gentleman to the last page.

Mr. HEPBURN (reading):

> That the committee is authorized to include in their report such alterations, changes, and recommendations as they may deem proper with reference to so much of the text of said bill as relates to the officers and employees of the House of Representatives.

Now, the first portion of the recommendation of the committee refers to certain officers of the House, and my friend——

The SPEAKER. The Chair will have to interrupt the gentleman from Iowa, as our time is very precious. In the first place, no reservation of any points of order was made upon this legislative bill report.

Mr. HEPBURN. I think I distinctly heard a gentleman; I was rising to make that reservation.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk states that is not the case. It was upon the sundry civil bill, made by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON], but not on this bill. Secondly, if the point had been reserved against the report it is too late to bring it up as to this particular part of the report, because it has been under consideration for some time.

Therefore the reservation of the point of order would not protect the gentleman from Iowa if he allows a discussion to proceed and then waits to bring up his point of order. In the third place, as called to his attention, this matter was absolutely referred to the conferees on the legislative bill, with full power. Therefore the Chair is compelled to overrule the point of order.

Mr. HEPBURN. It is on the question of fact that I desire to dispute with the Chair. I find no authority to transfer the library.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. HEPBURN. The Chair can do that.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the report.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. HEPBURN. Division.

The House divided: and there were—ayes 82, noes 41.

So the report of the committee of conference was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HEMENWAY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to, was laid on the table.

RAILWAY THROUGH THE FORT ONTARIO MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of this bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3489) authorizing and empowering the Secretary of War to grant the right of way for and the right to operate and maintain a line of railroad through the Fort Ontario Military Reservation in the State of New York, to the Oswego and Rome Railroad Company.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, authorized and empowered to grant to the Oswego and Rome Railroad Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, its successors and assigns, the right of way for and the right to operate and maintain a line of railroad through the Fort Ontario Military Reservation, in the State of New York, said right of way to be a strip of land of sufficient width of each side of the center line of the railroad of said Oswego and Rome Railroad Company, as the same is now located and constructed across the northerly and westerly portions of said military reservation, to enable said company to properly and efficiently operate said line of railroad.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of War shall have power to impose such terms, conditions, restrictions, and limitations as he shall deem advisable in said grant of right of way, and shall have power from time to time to make and enforce such reasonable and necessary rules and regulations concerning the operation and maintenance of said line of railroad across said military reservation as he may deem necessary for the proper protection of the interests of the United States in the use of said military reservation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

PUBLICATION OF SUPPLEMENT OF REVISED STATUTES.

Mr. BARBER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 5280) to continue the publication of the Supplement to the Revised Statutes.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5280) to continue the publication of the Supplement to the Revised Statutes.

Be it enacted, etc., That the publication of the Supplement to the Revised Statutes, embracing the statutes, general and permanent in their nature, passed after the Revised Statutes, with references connecting provisions on the same subject, explanatory notes, and citations of judicial decisions, be continued and issued in one volume, to include the general laws of the Forty-third to the Fifty-sixth Congresses, inclusive, with a table of alterations and a general index to the whole, to be prepared and edited by the editors of the current part of the existing Supplement, authorized by the act of February 27, 1893, chapter 167, Supplement to the Revised Statutes, volume 2, page 91, and the act of January 12, 1895, chapter 23, section 73, Supplement to the Revised Statutes, volume 2, page 354, and the act of June 4, 1897, chapter 2, Statutes at Large, volume 30, page 30, and to be known as Supplement to the Revised Statutes, volume 1, 3d edition, 1874 to 1901, to be stereotyped at the Government Printing Office, using the present plates, as far as practicable, with such alterations as may be found necessary, the work and plates and all right and title therein and thereto to be in and fully belong to the Government for its exclusive use and benefit.

SEC. 2. That a sufficient number of copies be printed and bound for distribution, and to be distributed to members of Congress for themselves and for distribution by them, and to the departments, libraries, public officers, and others, the same number to each as heretofore provided by Congress for the distribution of the pamphlet copies of the statutes of each session of Congress as provided by the act of January 12, 1895, section 73, chapter 23, Supplement to the Revised Statutes, volume 2, page 354, and the same number to each of the editors as to a member of Congress, and such additional copies on the order of the Secretary of State as may be necessary from time to time to supply such number as may be certified by the head of any department to be required for the use of his department, and for offices newly created, and for keeping for sale in the same manner and like terms as the Revised Statutes are required to be kept for sale. For preparing and editing said supplement, including the legislation of the Fifty-sixth Congress, and the indexing and all clerical work necessary fully to complete the same, there shall be paid to said editors the sum of $6,000.

SEC. 3. That the publication herein authorized shall be taken to be prima facie evidence of the laws therein contained, but shall not change or alter any existing law or preclude reference to or control, in case of any discrepancy, the effect of any original act passed by Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and, being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER. Without objection the amendment to the title will be agreed to.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

On motion of Mr. BARBER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. ALLISON, Mr. HALE, and Mr. COCKRELL as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 12901) to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of lands, etc., disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. HANSBROUGH, Mr. CARTER, and Mr. HEITFELD as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8068) authorizing the board of supervisors of Pima County, Ariz., to issue fifty-year 5 per cent bonds of Pima County, Ariz., to redeem certain funded indebtedness of said county.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

House concurrent resolution 85.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed from the stereotype plates in the Government Printing Office 6,000 copies of House Document No. 336, Fifty-sixth Congress, second session, entitled "A report on the work and expenditure of the Agricultural Experiment Stations for the year ended June 30, 1900," of which 1,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 3,000 copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture; the quality of paper and style of binding to be the same as in the original edition of the publication.

PRIVILEGE OF SEVENTH SECTION OF IMMEDIATE-TRANSPORTATION ACT.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 5022.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5022) to extend the privileges of the seventh section of the immediate-transportation act to Fall River, Mass.

Be it enacted, etc., That the privileges of the seventh section of the act approved June 10, 1880, governing the immediate transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement be, and they are hereby, extended to the port of Fall River, Mass.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

OFFICERS OF NAVY AND MARINE CORPS TO ADMINISTER OATHS.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 1632.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1632) to amend "An act authorizing certain officers of the Navy and Marine Corps to administer oaths," approved January 25, 1895.

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act authoring certain officers of the Navy and Marine Corps to administer oaths," approved January 25, 1895, be, and is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"That judges-advocate of naval general courts-martial and courts of inquiry, and all commanders in chief of naval squadrons, commandants of navy-yards and stations, officers commanding vessels of the Navy, and recruiting officers of the Navy, and the adjutant and inspector, assistant adjutant and inspector, commanding officers, and recruiting officers of the Marine Corps be, and the same are hereby, authorized to administer oaths for the purposes of the administration of naval justice and for other purposes of naval administration."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. WHEELER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

REGISTRATION OF NAMES OF PERSONS ENGAGED IN TRANSPORTATION BUSINESS.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill H. R. 13109.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 13109) to authorize the registration of the names of persons, firms, or corporations engaged in transportation business.

Be it enacted, etc., That any person, firm, or corporation incorporated under the laws of the United States, or of any of the States or Territories thereof, engaged in transportation, for hire, of passengers, goods, merchandise, and other property between any of the States of the United States, or between the United States and any of its possessions, or in foreign commerce, or in any or all thereof, may register the trade, firm, or corporation name under which such business is conducted in the Patent Office by complying with the provisions of this act and with such rules and regulations not inconsistent with this act as the Commissioner may make.

SEC. 2. That the application for such registration of such name must be accompanied by a written declaration, verified under oath, that such person, firm, or corporation is engaged in the transportation, for hire, of passengers, goods, merchandise, and other property between the States of the United States, or between the United States and any of its possessions, or in foreign commerce, or in any or all thereof, and has at that time the right to use the name sought to be registered, and that no other such person, firm, or corporation has, since the date of the passage of this act, acquired the use of such name in the identical form of or in such near resemblance thereto as may cause confusion or mistake and be calculated to deceive. In case of several applications for registration of the same name or of names of such near resemblance as aforesaid which have been in use prior to the passage of this act, the Commissioner shall and may determine which applicant for registration first used such name, and, upon compliance with the terms of this act, shall allow the registration of such name by such applicant and by no other.

No name shall be registered which is merely a surname, or which is identical with another registered name, or is in such near resemblance thereto as may in use cause confusion or mistake and be calculated to deceive. Each application for such registration shall be accompanied by a fee of $25, which shall cover the expense of examining the application, registering the same, and issuing a certificate therefor.

SEC. 3. That the certificate of registration of such name shall be issued in the name of the United States of America under the seal of the Patent Office and be signed by the Commissioner of Patents, and the record thereof, together with printed copies of the application, shall be kept in books in the Patent Office, and such certificate of registration shall be evidence in any suit in which such name shall be brought into controversy.

SEC. 4. That such registration shall vest in such person, firm, or corporation, their successors or assigns, the exclusive right and privilege to use such registered name.

SEC. 5. That the registration of such name in the Patent Office shall be prima facie evidence of the ownership, and any person, firm, or corporation who shall imitate such name as registered in the Patent Office under this act shall be liable to an action for damages for the wrongful use of the said name at the suit of the owner thereof, and the party aggrieved shall also have the right, according to the course of equity, to enjoin the wrongful use of such name and to recover damages therefor in any court having jurisdiction of the person, firm, or corporation guilty of such wrongful act, and courts of the United States shall have original and appellate jurisdiction in such cases without regard to the amount of damages in controversy.

SEC. 6. That any person, firm, or corporation who shall procure the registry of the name in the Patent Office by a false or fraudulent representation or declaration, orally or in writing, or by any fraudulent means, shall be liable to pay any damages sustained in consequence thereof by the injured party, to be recovered in an action on the case.

SEC. 7. That this act shall take effect on and after the 1st day of July, 1901.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I desire to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania if this bill has been reported from a committee?

Mr. ADAMS. It has been reported from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Mr. SULZER. It seems to me that this bill should have gone to the Committee on Patents. That is the proper committee.

Mr. ADAMS. It was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and reported out of that committee. It relates to firms and corporations trading between the different States. It is limited to that. This matter is protected in the State courts, but this is to make it effective throughout the United States.

Mr. SULZER. Does not the patent or trade-mark law at the present time protect the trade-marks of firms, individuals, and corporations? Why should there be further legislation?

Mr. ADAMS. That is the object of this bill, to put it on a par with the law as to patents and trade-marks. It follows the act in reference to trade-marks and patents, and was submitted to the Commissioner of Patents, who makes a favorable report and shows the analogy between the two questions, and he advises and urges the passage of the bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. ADAMS. I hope the gentleman will not object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made by the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. ADAMS. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his objection.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. This is offering the general trade law of the country for the benefit of some private concern. If they were protected by the general law they would have no need of the bill. I object.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE CUMBERLAND RIVER AT NASHVILLE, TENN.

Mr. GAINES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 14238) to authorize the city of Nashville, Tenn., to construct a free public bridge across the Cumberland River within the corporate limits of said city.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman if this is an ordinary bridge bill, with the ordinary language.

Mr. GAINES. Yes; approved by the Secretary of War, and has the unanimous report of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I have no objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I shall not object to this bill, but I desire to call the attention of the House to the fact that this is the third bridge bill that has passed to-day, evidently coming from our Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, which does not contain the reservation that the bridge shall be a post road. I desire to call the attention of the House to the danger in the closing hours of Congress in passing these bills in this manner. I do not care whether they reserve them for post roads or not, but I desire to call to the attention of the House that these reservations are not made here as they are when the House is in its sober senses.

Mr. PAYNE. I want to suggest, Mr. Speaker, that if the gentleman from California had proposed such an amendment to any bill the House would not have opposed it.

Mr. LOUD. I have not the language in my head of that amendment. Personally I do not care.

Mr. GAINES. This is to be a free bridge for everybody; there is no toll to be exacted.

Mr. HEPBURN. I will say these provisions were not placed in the bill because it is to be a free bridge.

Mr. LOUD. But what would the gentleman say in relation to the bridge across the Monongahela River which the gentleman from Pennsylvania brought up this morning? This is the third bill of the kind to-day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. GAINES, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PRISONERS CONVICTED IN CONSULAR COURTS.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 13396) to amend section 5546 of the Revised Statutes.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5546 of the Revised Statutes be amended by adding after the words "any court of the United States" the words "including consular courts," and after the words "District or Territory" by adding the words "or country," and after the words "where the conviction has occurred" by adding the words "and in case of convictions by a consular court the transportation shall be by some properly qualified agent or agents designated by the Department of State, the reasonable actual expense of transportation, necessary subsistence, and hire and transportation of guards and agent or agents to be defrayed from the appropriation for bringing home criminals;" so as to read:

"SEC. 5546. All persons who have been, or who may hereafter be, convicted of crime by any court of the United States, including consular courts, whose punishment is imprisonment in a District or Territory or country where, at the time of conviction or at any time during the term of imprisonment, there may be no penitentiary or jail suitable for the confinement of convicts, or available therefor, shall be confined during the term for which they have been or may be sentenced, or during the residue of said term, in some suitable jail or penitentiary in a convenient State or Territory, to be designated by the Attorney-General, and shall be transported and delivered to the warden or keeper of such jail or penitentiary by the marshal of the District or Territory where the conviction has occurred; and in case of convictions by a consular court the transportation shall be by some properly qualified agent or agents designated by the Department of State, the reasonable actual expense of transportation, necessary subsistence, and hire and transportation of guards and agent or agents to be defrayed from the appropriation for bringing home criminals; and if the conviction be had in the District of Columbia, the transportation and delivery shall be by the warden of the jail of that District, the reasonable actual expense of transportation, necessary subsistence, and hire and transportation of guards and the marshal, or the warden of the jail in the District of Columbia only, to be paid by the Attorney-General out of the judiciary fund.

"But if, in the opinion of the Attorney-General, the expense of transportation from any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia in which there is no penitentiary will exceed the cost of maintaining them in jail in the State, Territory, or the District of Columbia during the period of their sentence, then it shall be lawful so to confine them therein for the period designated in their respective sentences. And the place of imprisonment may be changed in any case when, in the opinion of the Attorney-General, it is necessary for the preservation of the health of the prisoner, or when, in his opinion, the place of confinement is not sufficient to secure the custody of the prisoner, or because of cruel and improper treatment: Provided, however, That no change shall be made in the case of any prisoner on the ground of the unhealthiness of the prisoner or because of his treatment, after his conviction and during his term of imprisonment, unless such change shall be applied for by such prisoner or some one in his behalf."

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, it is almost impossible in hearing a bill of this character read to understand it. It seems to me it is pretty far-reaching. I do not like to object to a bill of a general character like this, but unless the gentleman has some good reason for taking it up by unanimous consent I shall have to object. I would like to hear from the gentleman what the scope of the bill is.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Mr. Speaker, this bill simply confers upon the Government the same power with reference to transferring prisoners under conviction and in confinement by consular courts that the Government now possesses with reference to Territories and the District of Columbia. It is merely a matter of convenience on the part of the Government in the proper confinement and punishment of criminals. It is asked for by the Department of State.

They now have in confinement in Korea, for instance, one life convict who is held in prison with great inconvenience and much insecurity. It is very desirable that he should be removed to some safe penitentiary. The Attorney-General is anxious to have the bill passed in order to confer upon the Government such power with reference to convictions in consular courts that it now has in connection with convictions in other United States courts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. LITTLEFIELD, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

DELIVERY OF CERTAIN IONIC COLUMNS TO THE MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL OF BALTIMORE, MD.

Mr. DENNY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 13776) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to deliver to the mayor and city council of Baltimore, Md., Ionic columns.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to deliver to the mayor and city council of Baltimore, in the State of Maryland, the 12 columns now in the custom-house of said city, in order that said columns may be placed in one of the public parks or places of said Baltimore City as a relic or remembrance of said custom-house, which is to be torn down and removed to make way for a new building to be erected.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. DENNY, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

IMPROVEMENT OF PIGEON RIVER, MINNESOTA.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 14128) to authorize the Pigeon River Improvement, Slide, and Boom Company, of Minnesota, to enter upon the Grand Portage Indian Reservation, and improve the Pigeon River in said State at what is known as the cascades of said river.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Pigeon River Improvement, Slide, and Boom Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Minnesota, be, and hereby is, authorized, under such rules and regulations and subject to such conditions and limitations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, to enter upon and improve the Pigeon River at what is known as the cascades of said river, for the purpose of making said river at said point navigable for floating logs, and to that end to enter upon the unallotted lands, and, with the consent of the allottees, upon any allotted lands, adjacent to said cascades, of the Grand Portage Indian Reservation, in said State, and to construct such sluice dams, wing dams, bulkheads, spill dams, and other works necessary for said purpose, and to take from said unallotted lands timber for the construction of said improvements and works in quantity not to exceed 125,000 feet, board measure, for which timber said company shall pay such price as may be agreed upon between said company and the Secretary of the Interior, but not less than $5 per thousand feet, board measure, the proceeds to be placed in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota: Provided, That said river after being so improved shall be open at all times to the free passage of all timber cut from said Grand Portage Indian Reservation, and to the passage of all other timber upon such terms and conditions as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

The following committee amendments were read:

Strike out all after the word "Reservation," in line 14 of page 2, and insert the following: "and to the passage of all other timber for a reasonable charge therefor."

Add at the end of the bill the following:

"Provided further, That suitable fishways shall be constructed and maintained by said company, to be approved by the United States Fish Commissioner."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask what committee reported this bill.

Mr. MORRIS. I will say to the gentleman from Tennessee that the object of this bill is only for the purpose of enabling these parties to go upon the Indian reservation and improve this stream so as to admit of the passage of saw logs.

If the Indian reservation were not adjacent to these cascades, it would not be necessary to come to Congress at all in relation to this matter; the power would exist without additional legislation. But the Indian reservation being adjacent, it is necessary to get permission to go upon the Indian reservation and cut this small amount of timber—only 125,000 feet; and provision is made for payment, under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, at a minimum price of $5 per thousand feet—a high minimum, I will say—so that the logs which may be cut thereafter on the Indian reservation would come down free through these cascades.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Has the bill been submitted to the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. MORRIS. It has been submitted to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and to the Secretary of the Interior, and is recommended by both of them. It has also been unanimously reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs, before whom I appeared and explained the bill.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. MORRIS, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

JAMES A. HUTTON.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 2936) authorizing the appointment of James A. Hutton to a captaincy of infantry in the United States Army.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and is hereby, authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint James A. Hutton, late a captain of infantry in the Army of the United States, to the position of captain of infantry, at the foot of the list of captains therein, the list of captains of the infantry arm of the service being increased to that extent until a vacancy shall occur; and all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are suspended for this purpose only: Provided, That said Hutton shall receive no pay or allowances of any kind for the period between the date of his dismissal and date of his appointment under the provisions of this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RAY of New York. I reserve the right to object. I would like to hear some reason for the passage of this bill.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. Speaker, Captain Hutton was a graduate of West Point and was commissioned in the Regular Army. He was dismissed from the Regular Army in 1894 for absence without leave and disobedience of orders. Later on he volunteered in the late Spanish war and was appointed a second lieutenant in a California regiment.

He was ordered to the Philippine Islands, where he rendered very distinguished service upon the staff of General King, the staff of General Wheaton, and the staff of General Anderson; and these officers, as I understand, all recommend his restoration to the Army on the ground of distinguished and courageous service in the Philippines.

Mr. RAY of New York. Then, as I understand, this man has redeemed himself by his subsequent conduct, so that it is now thought proper to authorize his reappointment to the Army, which the President can not make without this bill?

Mr. NEWLANDS. The President can not do it without this bill; and the conduct of this officer ever since his dismissal has been, according to the testimony of numerous officers, unexceptionable.

Mr. RAY of New York. I have no objection.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, just a few words. I wish to say that this matter has been carefully examined by the Committee on Military Affairs, and the Committee unanimously recommend the passage of the bill. It is a very worthy case. As the gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY] has expressed it, Captain Hutton has redeemed himself, and in my judgment is entitled to this relief. He is a brave and gallant soldier, and has made a splendid record. I hope there will be no objection.

Mr. BROMWELL. How old is he?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I should judge about forty-five.

Mr. BROMWELL. And he is not eligible to appointment in the Regular Army under the provisions of the act recently passed?

Mr. NEWLANDS. No, sir.

Mr. BROMWELL. What was the cause of his discharge from the Army?

Mr. NEWLANDS. Absence without leave and failure to obey an order commanding him to report. With reference to that point, I wish to say that I have carefully looked over all the testimony given before the court-martial on whose finding he was dismissed; and the conclusion of that court seems to me to have been very, very severe.

The case has been looked into most carefully by both the Senate committee and the House committee. The Senate committee took it up a year ago, and were then in favor of recommending the restoration of this officer, but concluded to let the matter rest until the present session in order to obtain reports concerning his character and conduct meanwhile. The testimony has now come from officers of the Army high in standing, stating that his conduct and character have been unexceptionable, and the result is these favorable reports by both committees.

I will state further that two distinguished officers of the Army who had been in the Philippine war—Lieutenant-Colonel Edwards, the chief of staff of General Lawton, and Brigadier-General Barry, chief of staff of General Otis—both appeared before the Military Committee of the Senate and testified to the value of the services rendered in the Philippines by this officer and urged his restoration to the Army. Colonel Edwards stated among other things that upon two occasions he had heard General Lockwood say that he intended to urge the restoration of this officer to the Army at the conclusion of the war.

Mr. BROMWELL. What was his rank when he was discharged?

Mr. NEWLANDS. He was a captain.

Mr. BROMWELL. Then this bill will not place him above his proper rank?

Mr. NEWLANDS. It puts him at the foot of the list.

Mr. BROMWELL. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. NEWLANDS, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

REGISTRATION OF EMPLOYEES IN TRANSPORTATION BUSINESS.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago I objected to the present consideration of the bill offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ADAMS]. I have since looked over the bill and report very carefully, and I still think the bill ought not to pass. But the pressure of my friends upon my courtesy is so great that I do not feel like taking the responsibility of defeating the bill by my sole objection. I therefore withdraw the objection, but I hope the House will vote down the bill.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I renew the objection.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT OF ALASKA.

Mr. WARNER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (S. 5573) to amend section 208 of Title III of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes."

Be it enacted, etc., That section 208 of Title III of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes," be amended so as to read as follows:

The treasurer of the corporation shall be ex officio treasurer or the school board, and shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, take the oath prescribed by law and execute bonds to the corporation in an amount to be determined by the judge of the district court, which bond shall be approved by the council and the judge of the district court and filed in district court may from time to time direct, but in no event shall such bonds be less than twice the amount of money in the hands of the treasurer at any one time, to be determined by the tax rolls and license books of the corporation, of the corporation clerk, and the clerk of the district court: Provided, That 50 per cent of all licensed moneys provided for by act of Congress approved March 3, 1899, entitled "An act to define and punish crimes in the district of Alaska and to provide a code of criminal procedure for said district," and any amendments made thereto, required to be paid by any resident, person, or corporation for business carried on within said corporation, shall be paid over by the clerk of the United States district court receiving the same to the treasurer of said corporation upon taking his receipt therefor in duplicate, one of which duplicate receipts shall be forwarded to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States by the clerk as a voucher in lieu of cash, and the other receipt shall be retained by the clerk.

The money received by the treasurer of the corporation from the clerk of the court for licenses shall be used, under the direction of the council, for school purposes: Provided, That where it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the district court that the whole amount heretofore or hereafter received by the treasurer of the corporation from the clerk of the court is not required for school purposes, the court may from time to time, by orders duly made and entered with a statement of the facts upon which they are based, authorize the expenditure of the accumulated surplus, or any part thereof, for any of the municipal purposes enumerated in this chapter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I would like to hear some explanation of the bill by the gentleman from Illinois; and I ask him to state also whether the Secretary of the Interior has approved the bill.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the bill is double. In the first place, it has been discovered that more money has been derived from licenses in the incorporated towns of Alaska than is necessary for school purposes in those towns. The bill provides that the surplus of this money may be turned over to the incorporated towns or municipalities for municipal purposes, under the direction of the court.

Then, again, the schools outside of the municipalities are not provided for at all. This bill provides that 50 per cent of the money derived from licenses on business outside of incorporated towns, or so much thereof as the Secretary of the Interior may deem necessary, shall be expended, under the control and direction of that officer, for school purposes outside of municipalities.

Heretofore Congress has appropriated money for schools in Alaska, starting with $50,000 a year, and since 1893, to and including the current year, has appropriated $30,000 a year, and the Committee on Appropriations has now declined to make any further appropriations for school purposes in Alaska.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. And that would take the place of that which is provided on the sundry civil bill.

Mr. WARNER. There are 25 schools that would be closed if this appropriation is not made. The Secretary of the Interior approves it, the President in his message recommended that such a bill be passed, and it has the approval of all the Departments.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. The gentleman stated that the Committee on Appropriations had declined to make the appropriation. Was that not for the purpose of enabling your committee to deal with the subject-matter in this way?

Mr. WARNER. The chairman of the Appropriation Committee told me he wanted our committee to provide for these schools with this license money.

Mr. RIDGELY. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. WARNER. Certainly.

Mr. RIDGELY. Can this money be taken and given to sectarian or religious denominations?

Mr. WARNER. No distinction is made as to denominations. The Secretary of the Interior controls the schools outside of the incorporated towns. The municipalities control them inside their jurisdiction.

Mr. RIDGELY. But those inside the jurisdiction, they are to be public schools, are they not?

Mr. WARNER. They are to be public schools, the same as we have them in Kansas and Illinois.

Mr. RIDGELY. Under this law, if the Secretary should see fit to turn it over to churches or religious societies he could do so.

Mr. WARNER. No; they must be public schools.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. If this matter was so pressing a necessity and of such urgency, why was it not presented earlier in the session?

Mr. WARNER. It has been reported out from the committee I do not know how long, and I have been making the Speaker's life a burden to him trying to get recognition in order to obtain consideration of this bill.

Mr. LOUD. Has he been opposed to it?

Mr. WARNER. No.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. We have been sitting here for some days without having anything to do, and it seems to me that would have been a proper time to have considered this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add at the end of the bill that "hereafter no hides of deer shall be exported from Alaska under a penalty of $100 for each hide."

Mr. WARNER. I raise the point of order on the amendment; it is not germane, and is new legislation.

Mr. SULZER. Upon that I desire to be heard.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman on the point of order.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, when the Alaska code bill passed this House, by some inadvertence there was no provision put in that bill to protect the deer of Alaska. This was a mistake of grave importance. The deer of Alaska are being rapidly exterminated by the Indians, who hunt the deer simply for their hides. I am reliably informed—in fact, I know—that thousands and thousands of deer in Alaska are slaughtered every winter by the Indians. During the winter the deep snows compel the deer to come down from the mountains, and the natives ruthlessly slaughter them for their skins. Their skins are sold for from 50 cents to a dollar apiece. If this thing continues——

The SPEAKER. The Chair is prepared to rule on the question.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, just one moment more. If this thing continues, in a very short time the deer of Alaska will be exterminated, and the people who live there and who to a certain extent subsist on the meat of the deer will be unable to get fresh meat. The natives slaughter the defenseless deer, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred leave the carcass to rot.

This amendment is a matter of great importance to the people of Alaska and in the interest of the protection of the deer. It ought to be adopted. Every true sportsman should favor it. I trust the gentleman will withdraw his point of order against the amendment. If he does not—and the Chair sustains it—I shall at once prepare and introduce a bill to accomplish the purpose desired.

The SPEAKER. The bill has entire relation to educational matters in Alaska and no relation whatever to deer, and therefore the amendment is clearly out of order.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. WARNER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

MESCALERO INDIAN RESERVATION, N. MEX.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 213) setting aside certain lands within the Mescalero Indian Reservation, in New Mexico, for the use of the Indians thereon, and providing for the sale of the residue of the lands therein for the benefit of said tribe of Indians.

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby requested and directed, through the Secretary of the Interior, to allot the lands of the Mescalero Apache Indians in Donna Ana County, N. Mex., to the individual members of said tribe, under the act of Congress of February 8, 1887, and of February 8, 1891, and that he negotiate with said tribe of Indians for the cession of the unallotted lands to the United States, and that the same be disposed of under all of the land laws of the United States.

For the purpose of carrying out this resolution the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to order an Indian inspector to the Mescalero Apache Agency, in New Mexico, to allot said lands among said Indians and to negotiate with said tribe for the relinquishment of all their interest in the unallotted portion of said reservation, and that such relinquishment be in the form of an agreement, which shall be subject to ratification and confirmation by Congress: Provided, That any agreement entered into by said inspector shall contain a proviso that the United States shall make no payment for the relinquishment of the title to said land until the receipt of funds from the sale thereof, and as fast as the lands opened for settlement are sold the money received from such sale shall be covered into the United States Treasury and placed to the credit of the said tribe of Indians.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RAY of New York. Reserving the right to object, I desire to know what committee this comes from?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. This bill comes from the Committee on Indian Affairs, on a unanimous report from the committee.

Mr. RAY of New York. Do I understand the gentleman to say that this is a unanimous report?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. It is; I made the report myself in behalf of the committee. This bill has but few of the same provisions as were contained in the original bill. I introduced a bill providing for the acquirement of these lands, and provided that allotments should be made to the Indians and the remainder thrown open for settlement.

In this reservation there are 471,000 acres of land. About 70,000 will be allotted to the Indians, who are 444 in number, and, giving 160 acres to each Indian, will leave 403,000 acres to be thrown open for settlement. The bill as originally introduced was to open the reservation unreservedly for settlement. The bill as amended and now under consideration provides that a commission shall be appointed by the President who shall negotiate a treaty with these Indians for the purpose of purchasing the land and have them allot the land among them, and then open the remaining lands for settlement after the treaty has been ratified by Congress.

Consequently this is only a preliminary step, and is necessary because a railroad from El Paso, called the El Paso and Northeastern Railroad, now a part of the Rock Island system, passes near the reservation, just to the west of it, and it is very necessary to the development of that country that this reservation should be thrown open to settlement.

The agent of these Indians, Capt. V. E. Stotler, has resigned and joined the Army, and when this agency was under his control he recommended strongly in different reports that this reservation should be opened to settlement, after first allotting to each Indian 160 acres of land. He stated that the Indians desired the lands allotted among them.

The lands where they now live are irrigable lands, and it is understood that the treaty would set apart irrigable lands to the Indians as their allotment for themselves, and the remainder would be opened for settlement. This opening of this reservation has frequently been requested by the governors of the Territory in different reports, and I hope there will be no objection to the bill.

Mr. RAY of New York. The bill seems to dispose of a large amount of land, or provides for it to be disposed of. What proportion of it will go to the Indians?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. About one-seventh, and after the treaty has been made with the Indians allotting them each 160 acres of land, the lands not allotted, six-sevenths, would be opened for settlement and be sold, and the money derived from the sale of the land would be placed to the credit of the Indian tribe.

All the moneys received from the sale of the land would be turned into the Indian fund, and the Government does not pay 1 cent for the land under this bill. Under the terms of the bill the United States pays nothing for the land. Whenever a man purchases a homestead the money goes to the Indians, and until it is purchased there will be no money to turn in. There is no burden on the Treasury, but it throws open 403,000 acres of a desirable country to settlement by white men.

Mr. LOUD. Let me ask the gentleman—does the present Delegate from New Mexico favor this bill?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The present Delegate is opposed to it, but his predecessor was in favor of it, and I understand the succeeding one is in favor of it.

Mr. LOUD. Owing to the fact that the Delegate is not in a position to oppose it, I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made by the gentleman from California.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that the Chair did not recognize the gentleman for that purpose.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE NIAGARA RIVER.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 13973) to amend section 14 of the act approved June 29, 1898, entitled "An act to provide for the construction of a bridge across the Niagara River."

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 14 of the act approved June 29, 1898, entitled "An act to provide for the construction of a bridge across Niagara River," be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 14. That this act shall be null and void if actual construction of the bridge herein authorized be not commenced within one year and completed by June 30, 1904."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HEPBURN. I object.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The SPEAKER. That is in the same situation as the last bill.

ISAAC R. DUNKELBERGER.

Mr. JETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3283) for the relief of Isaac R. Dunkelberger.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States be, and is hereby, authorized to nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint Isaac R. Dunkelberger, late a captain, First United States Cavalry, and brevet lieutenant-colonel, United States Army, a captain of cavalry in the Army of the United States, and when so appointed he shall be placed on the retired list of officers of the Army.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like some explanation of this bill.

Mr. JETT. Mr. Speaker, this was a bill passed by the Senate in the first session of the Fifty-sixth Congress, and, as I remember, it was reported unanimously by the Committee on Military Affairs of the House during the last session. There was a great injustice done this officer at the time he was forced out of the service.

I want to say by way of parenthesis that I am as much opposed to putting officers on the retired list as any man on the floor of this House, but when a great injustice has been done, as I believe has been done to Captain Dunkleberger, I believe as a member of this body it is our duty to correct the error if it is in our power so to do. When he was dismissed his disabilities were such that he should have been placed upon the retired list at that time instead of being forced out of the service.

If any member of this House will take the time to investigate this report, he will ascertain also that his condition was the result of wounds received while in the line of service and that he should have been retired and placed on the retired list instead of being forced out of the service, as was done by some medical gentlemen.

Mr. BROMWELL. Mr. Speaker, I do not understand that the gentleman has given us any reason why this bill should be passed or this action should be taken; he has made an argument, but he has not stated any facts. We want the facts.

Mr. JETT. I will say to the gentleman from Ohio that when the act of 1870 was passed, forcing certain officers out of the service on account, as I understand, of the fact that the establishment had got top-heavy with officers, this man was forced out when he had a right to take advantage of his condition and disabilities and go onto the retired list.

Mr. BROMWELL. How was he forced out?

Mr. JETT. He was forced out under an act passed by the Congress of the United States, which went into effect, I think, January 1, 1871. At the time this was done he had received such injuries in the service before as entitled him to take the benefit of the law that would have placed him on the retired list.

In other words, he could have gone before a certain board provided for by law, and if they found he was suffering from certain disabilities resulting from injuries received in the line of service he would be entitled to be placed on the retired list. Instead of that he was forced out of the service. He was not given that notice to which he was entitled before he was forced out of the Army.

Mr. BROMWELL. Mr. Speaker, I object to this bill.

Mr. HULL. Will not the gentleman withhold it a minute?

Mr. BROMWELL. I will reserve the objection, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman from Illinois has stated the facts partially. Under that act the man was entitled, if he was subject to retirement, to notice, and had a right to appear before the retiring board. This officer had no notice of the action of the Department until he was entirely out of the service. Serving where he was, he had no knowledge that he was even to be retired or dismissed from the service until it was an accomplished fact.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would not be in favor of retiring officers because they were out of the service as the result of the act of 1870. The act was right, and if they had received proper notice so they could protect their interests, and then they were dismissed by the Department, this Congress, nor no other Congress, should ever interfere in the matter. But in place of this man having the right to do as he had under the law and go before a retiring board, the "benzine board," as it was called, situated in Washington, did not comply with the law and give him notice.

Mr. BROMWELL. Was that the case with other officers of the Army at that time?

Mr. HULL. Very few; and most of them have been retired by act of Congress.

Mr. BROMWELL. How many other cases are there probably of this kind?

Mr. HULL. I do not know of any.

Mr. BROMWELL. Twenty-nine years afterwards he comes here to have this thing corrected.

Mr. HULL. It is not twenty-nine years. He has been fighting for it and got favorable reports for a number of years. I yield to my colleague [Mr. CAPRON].

Mr. CAPRON. Mr. Speaker, I only want to say a word which I think may be of interest and perhaps will strengthen this case, having been on the subcommittee which examined it from the beginning. In the report you will find that it says this case was referred to the Secretary of War April 20, 1871, and he says "If this applicant can be sent before a retiring board legally, I think he should be sent." That is signed "U. S. Grant."

A little later on there is a statement, "I am afraid that injustice has been done him," meaning Captain Dunkleberger. And that is signed by "P. H. Sheridan, U. S. A.," and the board of physicians say the same thing. No stronger case was ever brought before that committee than this.

Mr. RAY of New York. Then, as I understand, this man is not out of the service and is not seeking relief because of any official misconduct or moral turpitude?

Mr. CAPRON. Not at all.

Mr. RAY of New York. As I understand, similar relief has been granted in a large number of cases?

Mr. CAPRON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HULL. Let me add that everyone of this man's disabilities was contracted during his service in the civil war—from wounds received in battle.

Mr. CAPRON. No man who reads this man's record could object to the bill.

Mr. BROMWELL. If this explanation had been made in the first place, I should not have objected. I now withdraw the objection.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. JETT, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

JAMES A. SOMERVILLE.

Mr. THOMAS of Iowa. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7603) to correct the military record of James A. Somerville.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the charge of desertion now standing against James A. Somerville, late of Company D, Fifth New Jersey Volunteer Infantry on the records of the War Department, be, and the same is, removed, and the Secretary of War is hereby directed to issue to said James A. Somerville an honorable discharge, the same to date from the muster out of the said Fifth New Jersey Infantry.

The amendment reported from the Committee on Military Affairs was read, as follows:

Strike out the last two lines of the bill and insert in lieu thereof the following: "dated December 10, 1862: Provided, That no pay, bounty or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act."

Mr. HAY. I would like some explanation of the bill.

Mr. HALL. Let the report be read.

The report was read, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7603) to correct the military record of James A. Somerville, report the same back to the House favorably, with the recommendation that it do pass with the following amendment:

Strike out the last two lines of the bill and insert in lieu thereof the following: "dated December 10, 1862: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act."

Lieutenant Somerville was sent to hospital from Fair Oaks in July, 1862. He was dismissed in December for absence without leave, although he was then in hospital at Newark, N. J., and so reported by the surgeons, who stated that he was not fit for active service. In February, 1863, he asked that the dismissal be revoked and that he be granted an honorable discharge. The military commission reported that he ought not to be restored to the service, and took no action. He was notified that he had no appeal.

Beyond all question he was dismissed while he was in hospital, without notice. No reason can be given for the dismissal, and he is entitled to an honorable discharge with the usual proviso.

We add the record in this case as an appendix.

Mr. KING. I would like to ask whether this bill, if passed, will give this man a pensionable status?

Several MEMBERS. They all do that.

Mr. KING. Then I shall object.

Mr. CAPRON. The record shows that this man never deserted.

Mr. KING subsequently withdrew his objection, and the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RIVER IMPROVEMENTS AT ST. JOSEPH, MO.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Secretary of War is hereby instructed to send to the House of Representatives information as to the information and recommendations contained in the supplemental report of the Missouri River Commission as to river improvements at St. Joseph, Mo.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, my reason for asking the adoption of this resolution is that the report which it asks for can not be made available for the use of the House or the Senate except by the adoption of a resolution of this kind.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the resolution, and it was adopted,

JAMES W. LONG.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I ask unanimous consent to take up for consideration the bill (H. R. 3651) placing James W. Long, late a captain of the United States Army, on the retired list.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and is hereby, authorized to place the name of James W. Long, late a captain in the United States Army, upon the retired list of the Army, in the class whose disabilities result from wounds received in battle, with the rank and pay of a captain of infantry.

The amendment reported by the committee on Military Affairs was read, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That the President be, and is hereby, authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint James W. Long, late captain in the United States Army, a captain of infantry, and to thereupon place his name upon the unlimited retired list of the Army, in the class whose disabilities result from wounds received in battle, with the rank and pay of a captain of infantry, retired."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. HAY. Reserving the right to object, I ask the reading of the report.

The SPEAKER. The report will be read unless the gentleman would prefer to hear a statement.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. Mr. Speaker, I am satisfied that no unanimous consent has been asked of the House upon a more meritorious bill than the one I have presented. Indeed, I do not look with favor upon special bills of this character ordinarily, though I have never yet objected to one where the member presenting it felt that it was proper legislation, and I do not think there will be anyone in the House who will consider this measure improper from any standpoint. This is the first unanimous consent I have asked, and I should not avail myself of this privilege were it not for the fact that a great injustice has been done Maj. James W. Long, which it would be proper and right that Congress should rectify.

Major Long was appointed second lieutenant by President Lincoln in 1861, and served in the Regular Army for ten years. There is not a blemish upon his record. He was gallant, fearless, punctual, soldierly in his conduct and in his bearing, from the time he entered the Union Army until he severed his connection therewith. He bears many honorable wounds upon his person, the most serious of which has destroyed the sight of one eye and left his face somewhat mangled and disfigured, as the result of loyal services to his country.

He was recommended for retirement in 1867 on account of wounds, but the War Department, knowing he was a valuable man and an excellent soldier of exceptional ability, assigned him to service as Indian agent for the State of Michigan, under an old law set forth in section 2062 of the Revised Statutes. This was during the Administration of President Grant, when Army officers were assigned to Indian service. His work was of the most delicate character, and he did it with signal ability, calling forth the commendation of the Department many times while he was thus engaged.

He was with the Army of the Potomac, and participated in the campaigns of that army at Yorktown, Gettysburg, and the seven days' fight on the Peninsula, during which time—at the battle of Gaines Mill—he received three wounds, one from a pistol ball, a shell in the left foot, and an Austrian rifle ball, explosive caliber .69, which entered his face at the right ala of the nose, passing upward, outward, and downward, fracturing the superior maxillary bone, lodging at the lower angle of the jaw, from which it was afterwards extracted by Asst. Surg. Gen. W. C. Spencer, of the United States Army.

This latter wound thoroughly disabled him, and he was sent to the rear. Upon his arrival in Washington he was examined and ordered to his home to recruit his health and obtain necessary medical treatment. While at his home, and before his wound was healed sufficiently to allow of the removal of the bandages, he was placed on recruiting service, and from that time on he was either in the field or on special duty, or under medical care during the balance of his service, and during this fearful test of his physical condition he went through severe campaigns and battles and hardships, commanding his regiment through the battles of the Wilderness and Spottsylvania Court-House, where he was again prostrated by an attack which ended in typhoid fever and resulted in a long and dangerous sickness.

Again Surgeon Norris insisted on his retirement, but again this splendid officer was ordered on special duty, both at Louisville, Ky., and Trenton, N. J. From Trenton he was ordered back to the regiment at Newport Barracks, Ky., and from there to Louisville, and from there to Jeffersonville and Warsaw, where he was in command of the post.

Thence he was ordered to Atlanta, Ga., with his regiment, for consolidation of the Sixteenth and Second Regiments of the United States Infantry, all of which is set forth in General Orders of the War Department, under date of March 15, 1869. While at Atlanta, this officer, who served continuously through the entire civil war, who had endured hardships that no one thought he could stand, who had suffered from wounds that weaker men would have yielded to, who was dauntless and fearless in battle, and intelligent and discriminating in the performance of his every duty, was finally ordered before the examining board at Atlanta, Ga., and by that board found to be disqualified for active service on account of physical disability.

By the decision of this Atlanta board he lost his regimental standing of the company, the association of nearly ten years of service, and was practically told that on account of his physical disabilities he was no longer fit for active service. This meant, according to the laws of Congress, his retirement from active service, with the right to appear before a regularly constituted retiring board.

This, however, was not done, but Major Long, after going to his home and reporting his address, as prescribed, was ordered to the Indian service by General Orders No. 49 of the War Department, May 7, 1869. He was placed in charge of the Mackinac Indian Agency, performing all of the duties required of him and drawing the pay to which he was entitled as an officer of the Army on duty. While holding this civil position by the direction of the War Department he was made ineligible to assignment on the active list of the Army, the decision of the Atlanta board standing in his way; and to further complicate his status, the following paragraph in public act 185, approved July 15, 1870, was enacted by Congress:

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any officer of the Army of the United States on the active list to hold any civil office, either by election or appointment, and any such officer accepting or exercising the functions of a civil office shall at once cease to be an officer of the Army, and his commission shall be vacated thereby.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there was but one remedy for this gallant soldier after this law was passed, and that was to get off the active list. He having been pronounced unfit for active service, and having lost his regimental position and status by virtue of the decision of the Atlanta board, he made application to be ordered before the retiring board, which was done, and that tribunal found that he was fit for active service, contrary to the finding of the Atlanta board, who said that he was not fit for such service.

Major Long was then the Indian agent. He could not help it; he was acting under orders. He could not leave his post without being relieved; had he done so, he would have been tried by court-martial and dismissed. He was not relieved from duty, and he could not relieve himself, and found that the only alternative for him was to resign, or be legislated out after ten years of service, with two brevets, both for bravery in battle, and under this misinterpretation of his rights he resigned, receiving an honorable discharge. General Corbin, Adjutant-General of the Army, says Major Long's "record is good."

There is no dismissal by court-martial to be explained away. There are no charges of any kind against him. His record is eloquent with gallant service during the whole period of his Army career. He is entitled to be restored, and I urge my associates here to give this just and proper recognition to this splendid soldier. When the Atlanta board found him unfit for service he was entitled to be retired, and this is but a very tardy act of justice which I seek to accomplish for him to-day. The following letter, written by Brig. Gen. and Chief Signal Officer A. W. Greely to the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, is a high testimonial to Major Long's service as a soldier. The letter says:

WASHINGTON, December 4, 1900.

MY DEAR MR. HULL: I have always viewed applications for restoration to the Army with disfavor, but from a knowledge of the case of James W. Long I believe that his is one of exceptionable hardship and that this restoration of a man very badly wounded and practically forced out of the service, through no fault of his own, has particular merits. I earnestly hope that his bill will pass.

Yours, truly,

A. W. GREELY,
Brigadier-General, Chief Signal Officer U. S. A.

Hon. J. A. T. HULL,
Chairman Military Committee, House of Representatives.

With such a record as this soldier has, Congress is justified in doing for this soldier what should have been done for him years ago. I urge it in the interest of justice and in recognition of a most worthy officer of our Army.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Is this gentleman now receiving a pension on account of his injuries in the service?

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I do not so understand. He has for years been anxious to have a measure of this kind passed so that he could go back to the Army, where he belongs.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Is he seeking to go back into the Army on the retired list?

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. He is seeking to go back into the Army.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does not this bill provide for his retirement?

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. Yes; he may be retired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to understand this matter distinctly, because if this bill proposes to retire him I will object; if it merely seeks to give him a status in the Army, that he may go upon regular duty, I will not object.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. The gentleman has not objected to other cases less meritorious than this.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I have never asked unanimous consent, and would not now, if this case were not highly meritorious.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not making any objection against the gentleman, but against his bill.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I want to put this officer back where he belongs.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to have the bill read again.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection the bill will be again read.

The bill with the amendment was again read.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I ask that the bill be read again.

The bill was again reported.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I object to the bill.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

NEW DIVISION OF EASTERN JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF TEXAS.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 14260) to amend an act entitled "An act to constitute a new division of the eastern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for the holding of terms of court at Sherman, Tex., and for the appointment of a clerk of said court, and for other purposes," approved February 19, 1901.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5 of said act be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. That the clerk of the circuit court of said eastern district shall maintain an office, in charge of himself or a deputy, at the said city of Sherman, which shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of said division; and the district judge for the said eastern district shall appoint a clerk of the district court who shall maintain an office at the said city of Sherman, which shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of said division."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. LANHAM, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

CONSTRUING THE ACT APPROVED JUNE 27, 1890.

Mr. LINNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution No. 8.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (S. R. 8) construing the act approved June 27, 1890, entitled "An act granting pensions to soldiers and sailors who are incapacitated for the performance of manual labor, and providing for pensions to widows, minor children, and dependent parents."

Resolved, etc., That the act approved June 27, 1890, entitled "An act granting pensions to soldiers and sailors who are incapacitated for the performance of manual labor, and providing for pensions to widows, minor children, and dependent parents," is construed and held to include all persons who served for ninety days in the military or naval service of the United States during the late war of the rebellion, and who have been honorably discharged therefrom: Provided, however, That the foregoing shall not apply to those who served in the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth regiments United States Volunteer Infantry who had a prior service in the Confederate army or navy.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 11, after the word "from," insert:

"Nothwithstanding a prior service in the Confederate army or navy, and section 4716 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is amended accordingly."

After the word "navy," in line 3, on page 2, add:

"Nor to those who served more than one year in the Confederate army or navy; nor to those who, having had such prior service, enlisted in the military or naval service of the United States after the 1st day of January, 1885: And provided further, That no pension shall be granted for any disability incurred while aiding or abetting the late rebellion; and that no pension shall be granted under this resolution except on application therefor filed after its passage."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. PAYNE. Reserving the right to object, I want the bill explained. It looks that the bill might be held to include every person who served ninety days in the Army.

Mr. LINNEY. It does not.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I want to say that we can not hear one solitary word of what is being said, and unless we can we will object.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman in charge of a bill would talk distinctly so that all could hear him, it would preserve order. The trouble is they talk between themselves, instead of in a manner that they should if they were addressing an audience of 10,000 people, which is necessary in this Hall.

Mr. LINNEY. Mr. Speaker, I think I can explain the resolution so that there will be very little, if any, objection to it on its merits. Discriminations have been made by a construction of section 4715 of the Revised Statutes touching pensions, which reads as follows:

No money on account of pensions shall be paid to any person, or to the widow, children, or heirs of any deceased person, who in any manner voluntarily engaged in or aided or abetted the late rebellion against the authority of the United States.

Now, by various amendments and constructions of this section, I find that there have been seven separate exceptions made. The first is, widows of soldiers who served in the Revolutionary war; second, those who served in the war of 1812 against Great Britain; third, those who served in the Mexican war; fourth, those who served in the Indian wars; fifth, those who served in the Spanish war (though they had formerly been Confederate soldiers); sixth, those who received a pensionable disability in the United States Army (see act of March 3, 1877), and, seventh, those who received a pensionable disability in the United States Navy, although the soldier may have given former service to the Confederate cause.

No soldier, whatever may have been the character of his service, and whatever may have been the injuries originating in the service in the Federal Army, is entitled to a pension. Now, this resolution, as I understand it, and I do not think it is capable of any other construction, simply places the soldier himself upon the same footing—that is, where he has received injuries in the Federal service—as other soldiers who are now receiving a pension.

Those who served in certain regiments mentioned in this resolution—First, Second, Third, and Fourth Infantry—shall not get anything. Why? Because it has been generally supposed that those persons enlisted in the service of the United States under an agreement that they were not to fight their former comrades, but to do service in the Indian wars, or something of that sort, and to receive no bounty or pension. This resolution expressly excepts them, and these will take no benefits whatever from my resolution.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. LINNEY. Certainly.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama. I understand you to say now that men who belonged to the Confederate army and afterwards fought in the Union Army are not entitled to a pension.

Mr. LINNEY. He is not, as the law is now construed.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama. That is right.

Mr. LINNEY. Those who joined the Federal Army and rendered faithful service have much merit in their claim for pension now, because the Government accepted their services, and is thereby estopped now to say they are not entitled to the same treatment that their comrades get.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama. I am opposed to giving pensions to men who were in the Confederate army and joined the Union Army.

Mr. LINNEY. Will you do me the kindness to hear me a moment? There were many men of the South who went into the Southern army under influences they could not resist, and the first opportunity they joined the Federal Army and did good service. Are they not entitled to a pension?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama. I am for giving a pension to any true, loyal Federal soldier in every way, shape, and form, and opposed to Confederates receiving a pension, because I am opposed to rewarding a man who deserts any cause.

Mr. LINNEY. As a general rule your proposition may be correct; but, Mr. Speaker, when the Government desired his services and welcomed him into the ranks of the Federal Army, he is in every sense a Federal soldier. There is one class just as worthy as any soldier. Suppose a man volunteered, under peculiar influence brought to bear, in the Confederate army, and honestly seeing his error, joined the Federal Army and shed his blood for the Union, is he not even more of a hero than the average soldier?

Conscription began and was rigidly enforced from 1862 to 1864. It took in our boys at the tender age of 17 years. Now, who doubts the patriotism of a boy of 17 years, who under strong pressure joined the Confederate army, and, following his convictions, left it? Has he not shown more moral courage than the average soldier if he afterwards was loyal to the last to the Union cause?

Mr. BROMWELL. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BROMWELL. All this discussion, as I understand, is subject to the objection reserved?

The SPEAKER. It is all under the unanimous-consent privilege.

Mr. BROMWELL. And the objection can still be made.

The SPEAKER. An objection from any member prevents consideration.

Mr. HAY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. LINNEY. Certainly.

Mr. HAY. Is it the purpose of this bill to put on the pension list men who were in the service of the Confederacy and then served in the Federal Army?

Mr. LINNEY. Under certain restrictions, it is.

Mr. HAY. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

ADDITIONAL POWERS TO MARINE-HOSPITAL SERVICE.

Mr. MEYER of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 4171.

A bill (S. 4171) to amend "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine-Hospital Service," approved February 15, 1893.

Be it enacted, etc., That an act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine-Hospital Service, approved February 15, 1893, be amended and added to as follows:

That section 6 of said act shall be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. That on the arrival of an infected vessel at any port not provided with the proper facilities for treatment of the same the Secretary may remand said vessel, at its own expense, to the nearest national or other quarantine station where accommodations and appliances are provided for the necessary disinfection and treatment of the vessel, passengers, and cargo; and after treatment of any infected vessel, or inspection of any vessel not infected, at a national quarantine station, and after certificate shall have been given by the United States quarantine officer at said station that the vessel, cargo, and passengers are each and all free from infectious disease or danger of conveying the same, said vessel shall be permitted to enter and admitted to entry at any port of the United States named within the certificate. But at any ports where sufficient quarantine provision has been made by State or local authorities the Secretary of the Treasury may direct vessels bound for said ports to undergo quarantine at said State or local station."

That there shall be added the following sections:

"SEC. 10. That national quarantine stations shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of this act, and the Supervising Surgeon-General, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, is authorized to designate and mark the boundaries of the quarantine grounds and quarantine anchorages for vessels, which are reserved for use at each United States quarantine station; and any vessel or officer of any vessel or other person trespassing or otherwise entering upon such grounds or anchorages in disregard of the quarantine rules and regulations, or without permission of the officer in charge of such station, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to arrest, and upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not more than $300 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

"Any master or owner of any vessel, or any person violating any provision of this act or any rule or regulation made in accordance with this act, relating to inspection of vessels or relating to the prevention of the introduction of contagious or infectious diseases, or any master, owner, or agent of any vessel making a false statement relative to the sanitary condition of said vessel or its contents or as to the health of any passenger or person thereon, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to arrest, and upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

"SEC. 11. That at any port or place in the United States where the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem it necessary for the prevention of the introduction of contagious or infectious disease from a foreign port or place that incoming vessels, vehicles, or persons shall be inspected by a national quarantine officer, such officer shall be designated or appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, on recommendation of the Surgeon-General of the Marine-Hospital Service; and at any such port or place no vessel, vehicle, or person from any foreign port or place shall be admitted to entry or enter without a certificate of said officer that the United States quarantine regulations have been complied with.

"Any vessel sailing from any foreign port without the bill of health required by section 2 of this act, and arriving within the limits of any collection district of the United States, and not entering or attempting to enter any port of the United States, shall be subject to such quarantine measures as shall be prescribed by regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury, and the cost of such measures shall be a lien on said vessel, to be recovered by proceedings in the proper district court of the United States and in the manner set forth above as regards vessels from foreign ports without bills of health and entering any port of the United States.

"SEC. 12. That the medical officers of the United States, duly clothed with authority to act as quarantine officers at any port or place within the United States, and when performing the said duties, are hereby authorized to take declarations and administer oaths in matters pertaining to the administration of the quarantine laws and regulations of the United States."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. FITZGERALD of New York. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman if there is in any way any interference with the State's rights?

Mr. MEYER of Louisiana. Not in any way.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. MEYER of Louisiana, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

JAMES M. STRADLING.

Mr. GARDNER of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill H. R. 12807.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 12807) for the relief of James M. Stradling.

Be it enacted, etc., That James L. Stradling shall be held and considered to have been mustered into the service of the United States as a second lieutenant of the First Regiment of New Jersey Cavalry Volunteers on the 19th day of July, 1864, and that the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue to him a certificate of discharge as a second lieutenant of said regiment, to date from the 16th day of September, 1864: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to entitle the said Stradling to receive any pay, allowances, or pension.

The amendment recommended was read, as follows:

In line 3 strike out the letter "L" and insert the letter "M."

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have the report read in that case.

Mr. GARDNER of New Jersey. Possibly I can save time by stating the case in a few sentences.

James M. Stradling enlisted in the First New Jersey Cavalry Volunteers as a private in 1861, and served until 1864. He was promoted to corporal, sergeant, and finally quartermaster-sergeant. On the 19th day of July, 1864, he was recommended for promotion to a second lieutenancy, to fill a vacancy then existing, and the company contained 102 members, or above the number of men required.

The commission was issued as of the date of July 19, 1864. For a reason that has never been explained it never reached him. He was mustered out September 16, 1864, without having been mustered in as a lieutenant. This bill simply requires the Secretary of War to issue to him a discharge as second lieutenant instead of quartermaster-sergeant.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Do I understand the gentleman to say that the company had a sufficient number of men?

Mr. GARDNER of New Jersey. It had 102 men—2 more than necessary.

Mr. SLAYDEN. How do the War Department explain the failure of this commission to reach him?

Mr. GARDNER of New Jersey. The War Department had nothing to do with it. Volunteer commissions were issued by the governors of the States; they were sent by mail to the commandants of the regiments.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause]. The Chair hears none.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. GARDNER of New Jersey, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

BRIDGE OVER THE NIAGARA RIVER.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill 13973, to amend section 14 of the act approved June 29, 1898, entitled "An act to provide for the construction of a bridge across the Niagara River."

The SPEAKER. This is the bill that has been already once read this morning?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the bill again by its title.

The Clerk again read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. ALEXANDER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

LIEUT. ROBERT PLATT.

Mr. MEYER of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3077) authorizing the President to appoint Lieut. Robert Platt to the rank of commander.

The bill was read at length.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I think I shall have to object. I understand this is taking a civilian and putting him on the retired list.

Mr. MEYER of Louisiana. My friend from Alabama is in error. Lieutenant Platt is now an officer of the Navy and has been in service since the civil war. He was made a lieutenant in the Navy a generation ago for gallant services in that war. For certain reasons which I do not know, perhaps because of prejudice against civilian officers then existing, a limitation to the act appointing him barred him from promotion. Under existing law a naval officer can not be retired for age unless he has reached the rank of commander.

Hence he is still on the active list, although 67 years of age. He has served faithfully in the low grade of junior lieutenant for over thirty years. This bill proposes to retire him with rank of commander, but to meet the objections of certain members I have sent to the desk an amendment providing that he shall be retired with the rank of lieutenant, which is the next higher grade to the one he now occupies. The Senate has several times passed an act authorizing him to be retired to a higher grade. The bill is unanimously approved by the Committee on Naval Affairs, and I urge it as an exceedingly worthy one. Lieutenant Platt is old, infirm, and deserves this consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I regret, Mr. Speaker, to object, but, as I understand it, it is to put a man on the retired list, and I renew my objection.

AMERICAN REGISTER FOR THE BARKENTINE J. C. PFLUGER.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 5331) to provide an American register for the barkentine J. C. Pfluger, of San Francisco, Cal.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Navigation is hereby authorized and directed to cause the foreign-built barkentine J. C. Pfluger, of San Francisco, Cal., purchased and wholly owned by a citizen of the United States and repaired by him, to be registered as a vessel of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. KAHN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

FRANK B. CASE.

Mr. METCALF. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report on the bill (H. R. 11598) for the relief of Frank B. Case, and I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the report be dispensed with and that the statement only be read.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I desire, Mr. Speaker, to reserve all points of order to the report.

The SPEAKER. Points of order are reserved to the report, but no objection is made to the request.

The conference report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11598) for the relief of Frank B. Case, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same.

V. H. METCALF,
JAMES E. WATSON,
ADOLPH MEYER,
Managers on the part of the House.
EUGENE HALE,
WILLIAM E. CHANDLER,
B. R. TILLMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

STATEMENT.

The House bill authorizes the President to appoint Frank B. Case a line officer in the Navy, with the proviso that when appointed "he shall perform shore duty, or such duty at sea as the physical disability for which he was retired will permit."

The amendment of the Senate authorizes the President to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint said Case upon the retired list of the Navy, with the rank of ensign.

In view of the fact that the disability of said Frank B. Case applies only to the question of his vision, and that under the statute the Secretary of the Navy is empowered to assign him to shore duty in any branch of the naval service for which he may be qualified, your conferees recommend that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand this is a private bill?

Mr. METCALF. It is a private bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I desire to oppose the conference report and I ask the gentleman to yield me sufficient time to be heard.

Mr. METCALF. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Ten minutes, although I may not use all of it.

Mr. METCALF. Very well; I will yield to the gentleman ten minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, this is a similar case to the bill that has just been before the House. The House bill, it seems, was passed providing that this officer might be once more enlisted in the Navy. As I recollect the bill when it came before the House, it was shown that he was retired on account of color-blindness, and the board retired him permanently from the Navy. It was afterwards discovered that he could do duty on shore.

A bill was brought in here placing him back in the Navy, where he could serve the Government and could be of service to the Government, giving the Government the benefit of his time for the money that was paid. He is a young man, if I recollect the report right. His services can be used; he is healthy; there is no objection to him in the world, except he is color-blind and could not recognize the signals on board of ships at sea.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I would like to ask the gentleman what is to prevent his being detailed if put on the retired list?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not want him put where he does not have to work. When the Government of the United States employs a man and pays him a salary it should be his duty to work.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Is it not a fact that he would have to work if detailed?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not think the details are ever made except in time of war. If you expect him to be detailed and sent back to work, why not insist on the House bill and put him on the retired list of the Navy, where he can work? It has been repeatedly said in this House within the last few days that they wanted to place men on the naval list because the Navy needed the men, that it needed trained men, and there is but one reason that can be assigned for this why he should not be placed on the regular list as provided by the House bill, and that is that a little clique of naval officers want to have their sea service cut down and be able to stay at home in fat positions as long as possible.

If this man was put on duty he would have to be assigned to shore duty, and it would possibly, for a few days or a few weeks, prevent some able-bodied naval officer from occupying that position.

Mr. METCALF. Will the gentleman allow me an interruption?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. METCALF. Under the House bill he would be named as a line officer to perform practically shore duty, and as such officer perform shore duty, and for shore duty he would receive $2,500 a year, and when performing duty at sea, $3,000 a year. Under the act of June, 1900, if he is placed upon the retired list, the Secretary of the Navy can order him to active duty, and if ordered to active duty on shore he would draw $1,480. He is now drawing $1,800 in the Judge-Advocate-General's department.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If he is color-blind and is only performing shore duty he ought not to be sent to sea. If he can perform shore duty, there is no reason why he should not be assigned to a position down at Indian Head, where color-blindness would not interfere with him.

There is no reason why he can not go out to one of these shipyards to superintend work done for the Government. There is no reason why he can not be sent to Bethlehem to inspect armor plate. There are thousands of positions in which this man's services could be used. If it is true, as high naval officers have asserted, that the Navy is in need of officers, it would be very proper to put him on the active list and let him engage in some work for the Government. But that is not what is wanted. The object is to put him on the retired list. I know there is a provision of law that a retired naval officer may be assigned to active duty. But I ask gentleman to tell me a case where any naval officer is so assigned.

Mr. METCALF. There are such assignments in the Judge-Advocate-General's Department. I made inquiry at the Navy Department and learned that in every instance the Secretary of the Navy orders retired officers to active duty, if they are competent to perform it. This man is forty-two years old. Under the act of 1900 he would have to serve for twelve years, when he would reach the age of fifty-four. If placed on the retired list he would have to be placed there as an ensign, drawing half pay.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If he is to be assigned to duty, why can we not fix that now and let him be retired at a proper age? But if he is placed on the retired list, he can bring his political influence to work, can avoid any assignment to active duty, can go on and attend to his private business. While on the retired list, unless the Secretary of the Navy should assign him to active duty, he will draw three-fourths pay.

Mr. Speaker, we have reached the point where officers of the Army or Navy, after resigning in order to engage in civil business—after getting tired of the Army and Navy and seeking to launch their fortunes on the sea of commerce—come back to Congress, after making a failure in civil life, and, upon some excuse, want to be put on the retired list, where they may live upon the bounty of the Government for the balance of their lives. I say it is time to call a halt upon this practice.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Case never resigned from the Navy. He was wholly retired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not speaking particularly of this case. I am speaking of the practice of putting men on the retired list. We have a pension list. If an officer has been injured in the service, we provide that he shall receive a pension.

But as for this practice of men getting bills through here by means of political influence, to put them on the retired list for the rest of their lives, drawing pay from the Federal Treasury, it is time this practice should be stopped. I hope the House will vote down the conference report.

Mr. METCALF. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SOUTHARD].

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say that there is no case similar to this. There never has been a retirement in the naval service from which this case is not easily distinguishable. I wish to occupy only a moment in stating the circumstances under which this retirement was brought about.

Mr. Case entered the Naval Academy, I think, in 1873. He was wholly retired some time in the eighties, just after a long cruise in the Arctic regions. His incapacity for active service developed on an examination for promotion. It was discovered that he was either permanently or temporarily color-blind. At that time the medical officers of the Department were insisting that color-blindness was congenital—that it could never be acquired. Mr. Case was retired under a different rule from that under which anybody else has been retired for color-blindness since we have had a Navy.

This was the first retirement in that service for color-blindness. Three or four or five officers have been retired since that time for color-blindness; and a different rule has been followed in their cases from the rule which was applied in this case. All the others have been retired either on half pay or three-fourths pay.

We doubt, of course, whether this is a genuine case of color-blindness. Prior to the Spanish war Mr. Case was examined for the railroad service and passed. During the Spanish war he came down here to be examined for the naval service. The medical board at the navy-yard here examined him. He was passed by that board as not being incapacitated because of color-blindness. He then disclosed, as he ought to have done, the fact that he had been retired from the Navy because of color-blindness.

The board examined him again, and then two out of the three members of the board were in favor of passing him. Some dispute arose, and they finally concluded to reject him. Out of some two or three hundred tests in distinguishing different shades of color he made only two or three mistakes. I believe that his color vision is to-day as correct as that of most men.

But he was retired under a different rule from that which has been applied in the case of any other retirement in the naval service. No one who has examined this case has failed to concede readily that a great injustice was done Mr. Case.

The bill to restore him to the active list passed this House and went to the Senate. The Senate for some reason or another would not agree to it.

Now, something ought to be done. This injustice ought to be remedied. For fourteen or fifteen years he has been kept out of what is his just due. Let the same rule be applied to him as has been applied to every other officer in the Navy similarly situated. There is no one who has examined this case who does not agree that a great injustice has been done.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I hope the gentleman will understand that I have no objection to this man being restored to the service and being put to work. It is admitted that he is competent for some classes of work in the Department. He ought to be assigned to such duty as he is qualified for. But because the United States Senate insists on his retirement why should we, as we too often do, lie down before that body?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I agree with the gentleman that the other bill—the bill introduced in the House—provided what ought to be done. But the Senate will not agree to it. If this bill passes, what will be the result? This man will be detailed for service at an annual salary of $300 less than he is now receiving. That will be the result of retirement. It will do him something of an injustice. But the two Houses ought to agree on something. There is no denial of the fact that we ought to do something for Mr. Case.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. METCALF. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COWHERD].

Mr. COWHERD. Mr. Speaker, I freely admit that I have a good deal of sympathy with the argument which has been made by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. I agree with him that the House bill was better; but the question before the House now is whether we shall remedy an injustice to this man or perpetuate an injustice.

Now, if the gentleman from Alabama will bring a bill in doing away with the retired list entirely and pass such a bill, then his argument would be proper upon this measure; but when we come here with a measure which proposes to remedy an absolute injustice, that every man who ever examined this record admits has been done against this man, and every officer of the Navy admits has been done, that every medical board of examiners to-day in the United States admits has been done; and then you object to it because you do not want to increase the retired list, I submit that an argument of that sort should not receive serious consideration. Now, here are six of these bills that the House has agreed to for putting men back on the retired list.

Mr. TALBERT. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. COWHERD. I will.

Mr. TALBERT. Does this bill seek to remove a charge of desertion?

Mr. COWHERD. Oh, no.

Mr. TALBERT. Does it vacate a sentence of a court-martial?

Mr. COWHERD. Not at all.

Mr. TALBERT. Simply to put him on the retired list?

Mr. COWHERD. Simply to put him on the retired list. The gentleman certainly did not hear the gentleman from Ohio make the explanation. This was a young man who entered the Navy, graduated, made one cruise at sea, and then made another cruise at sea in the Jeannette relief expedition. He was ordered for examination immediately after this cruise, and it then was found that he was color-blind, and he was wholly retired from the Navy on account of color-blindness. The doctors then thought that color-blindness was congenital, and could not be acquired.

The most learned doctors now coincide in the opinion that color-blindness may be acquired and is most frequently acquired where a man is exposed to the glare of the sun upon ice or snow fields. This man had been in that service in Alaska. Upon a similar case a man was placed on the retired list because the House thought color-blindness could be acquired and his eyes were injured in the service, and they give him three-fourths pay.

From every aspect of this case I think this man ought to receive consideration. I agree with the gentleman from Ohio. I challenge the records of the Navy to show where there has been any man wholly discharged from the Navy for a physical disability whether it was incident to the service or not. As a matter of fact there have been very few discharges in the Navy, except in a case where there was something against the man's character.

I know that. I went to see the Judge-Advocate, and stated the case to him, and he laughed at me, and said, "You will find the fellow was drunk or did something." I took the records and ran them down with the Judge-Advocate from the beginning to the end, and there is not a blot upon it anywhere. And I appeal to this House to pass this bill, or agree to the conference report, as it is the only way that this wrong can be remedied. [Cries of "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the conference report.

The question was taken, and the conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. METCALF, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

CALENDAR AS A HOUSE DOCUMENT.

Mr. HEATWOLE. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Printing asks consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution No. 436:

Resolved, That the last issue of the House Calendar for this Congress be printed as a document of the House.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask the gentleman to yield to me two minutes, in order that I may yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. FLYNN. Mr. Speaker, some time since, upon what at the time appeared to me to be good authority, I made some remarks in reference to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS]. Since that time I have taken great pains to investigate the matter, and while I find that he did send a telegram, it was in reply to a letter from a party in Oklahoma requesting him to notify him when a certain bill was passed and when it was signed by the President.

If I had had all the facts at the time I made the remarks I do not suppose that I should have made them. I am the last man in the world who would do an injustice to anybody, much less a member of this House, and I want to make this statement to the House as a matter of justice to myself and to the gentleman from Texas. [Applause.]

The resolution was agreed to.

MOUNTING MAPS.

Mr. HEATWOLE. I ask for the consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 413.

Resolved, That the superintendent of the folding room of the House of Representatives is hereby directed to mount with rollers and hangers all United States maps hereafter printed and placed to the credit of members of the House of Representatives.

With the following amendment:

After the word "Representatives," in line 5, add: "the cost of mounting each map not to exceed 30 cents."

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

MILITARY LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. HEATWOLE. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the Senate concurrent resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there be printed for the use of the Senate and House of Representatives 2,000 copies of the military laws of the United States, to include all legislation in respect to military affairs of the Fifty-sixth Congress, of which 650 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 1,350 copies shall be for the use of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The resolution was agreed to.

REPORT OF DR. V. K. CHESTNUT AND DR. E. V. WILCOX ON POISONOUS PLANTS IN MONTANA.

Mr. HEATWOLE. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of Senate concurrent resolution 92.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there be printed 10,000 copies additional to the usual number of the report of Dr. V. K. Chestnut and Dr. E. V. Wilcox of their investigation of plants poisonous to stock in Montana, of which 1,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 3,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 6,000 copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The resolution was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF PUBLIC PRINTING ACT.

Mr. HEATWOLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 14314) to amend section 37 of an act entitled "An act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January 12, 1895.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 37 of an act entitled "An act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January 12, 1895, be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out of said section the words "said Congressman to deposit with his order the extra expense involved in printing these additional words."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HISTORY OF GENERAL STAFF OF THE ARMY.

Mr. HEATWOLE. Mr. Speaker, I am also directed to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the Senate concurrent resolution No. 113.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there be printed for the use of the Senate and House of Representatives 6,000 copies of the Legislative History of the General Staff of the Army of the United States, of which 1,500 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 3,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,500 copies for the use of the War Department.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The resolution was agreed to.

PRINTING FOR A COMMITTEE.

Mr. HEATWOLE. There is another resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 419.

Resolved, That the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands be, and hereby is, authorized to have printed such papers, documents, and testimony taken at meetings had before that committee, and such as may be necessary for the business of said committee.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read as follows:

Strike out all after the word "Committee" in line 4, and insert in lieu thereof "during the second session of the Fifty-sixth Congress."

The amendment was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution as amended was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HEATWOLE, a motion to reconsider the several votes by which the various resolutions were agreed to was laid on the table.

DISPOSITION OF LAND.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I call up a conference report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa calls up a conference report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 12901) to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of lands, etc.

The report of the committee of conference was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2 to the bill (H. R. 12901) to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of lands, etc., having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to amendment No. 2 of the Senate, and agree to the same.

JOHN F. LACEY,
F. W. MONDELL,
JOHN F. SHAFROTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

H. C. HANSBROUGH,
THOS. H. CARTER,
HENRY HEITFELD,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The effect of the agreement is to adopt the amendment of the House to the Senate amendment authorizing the President to avoid the contest and conflicting claims heretofore resulting from a rush upon a newly opened reservation, by prescribing the manner in which the land may be settled, occupied, and entered, which regulation shall be embraced in the proclamation.

JOHN F. LACEY,
F. W. MONDELL,
JOHN F. SHAFROTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. LACEY. The gentleman from Texas would like to have a few minutes, and I yield to the gentleman two minutes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, this bill is not as I would like to have it. I think some means should be adopted in opening this reservation whereby we could avoid the horse race, or run, that has heretofore taken place.

It might be done by adopting a plan of drawing similar to that that we have adopted in this House. It would be very easy for everyone who is interested in settling on these lands to file their affidavits showing that they have a right to the land and then draw for it. There will probably be 50,000 people asking for these 10,000 homes, because this is the last reservation of good lands to be opened in the United States.

It is very necessary, in my judgment, that the Interior Department should have some plan other than running for it, as has been heretofore indulged in in Oklahoma. I hope, under the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY], that the Secretary of the Interior will see proper to open this reservation by some scheme similar to the one devised by this legislative body for selecting their seats.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, what means will be adopted by the Secretary or President it is impossible to say, but I am satisfied that he could not possibly do worse than to continue the present system of racing for the possession. I have no doubt by giving the authority that we do give in this amendment a scheme will be devised to avoid that, and probably something in the line suggested by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS].

Mr. DE ARMOND. I would like to ask the gentleman if this enlarges the power of the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. LACEY. At present all the power the Secretary has is to throw open the reservation for a race. There is no authority for making any rules or regulations that will prevent five or six different men from getting onto the same quarter section or having the multitudinous and expensive contests that have ensued from the races in the past.

This law giving the President, by proclamation, power to provide some system of avoiding this will be equitable to all persons. Bloodshed often ensues in contests of this kind, and it takes an army to protect the settlers during the race. I have no doubt some method can be devised that will prevent it. We did not have time in the closing hours of the session to put in perfect shape a plan such as would obviate this difficulty. Therefore I think it is perfectly safe to allow this regulation to be promulgated by the Department of the Interior, under the direction of the President, included in the proclamation.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Are there any limits as to when the proclamation shall issue? Is there any time fixed for issuing the proclamation?

Mr. LACEY. This does not attempt to handle the question in detail. I apprehend the proper way would be to make the applicants file their applications and have some system by lot. There will be 50,000 applicants probably, and of course there will not be a quarter section for all. There will be many more applicants than can possibly obtain land.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Is there anything to determine where this shall be done?

Mr. LACEY. It would have to be done at the land office in the district. We have not attempted to go into these details on account of the lack of time and the rush of business in the closing hours of the session.

Mr. SHAFROTH. If the gentleman will pardon me I will state that unless this bill passes practically in its present form this reservation will not be open for settlement for one year after the 6th day of August. It is true it would be better, and I should prefer it, if we could prescribe exactly what the settler should be entitled to and how he should make his selection, but it is impossible to formulate anything but what would be open to serions objection at this late hour of the session, and I therefore concurred in the conference report.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The question was taken and the conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. LACEY, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

MEDALS OF HONOR FOR ENLISTED MEN OF NAVY OR MARINE CORPS.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 14309) for the reward of enlisted men of the Navy or Marine Corps.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any enlisted man of the Navy or Marine Corps who shall have distinguished himself in battle or displayed extraordinary heroism in the line of his profession shall, upon the recommendation of his commanding officer, approved by the flag-officer and the Secretary of the Navy, receive a gratuity and medal of honor as provided for seamen in section 1407 of the Revised Statutes.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have some explanation of this bill.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, perhaps the best explanation I can make will come from a letter addressed to the House Naval Affairs Committee by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy. It is as follows:

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, February 18, 1901.

To the CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS,
House of Representatives.

SIR: I have the honor to invite your attention to an omission in the law providing for the recognition of distinguished services on the part of enlisted men of the Navy. The only clause of the Revised Statutes that applies is section 1407, which is fully set out in the accompanying letter. You will observe that this does not include marines, nor does it include firemen or others than seamen on board ship.

A board is now sitting at the Department to consider the subject of rewards to officers and men in China and the Philippines. This board has addressed the Department a communication calling attention to the omission just referred to, which letter is inclosed herewith.

I have the honor to recommend that this obvious defect in the law be cured by legislation.

Inclosed is a draft of a few words which, if added to section 1407, will, in the opinion of the Department, secure the end desired.

The language of the draft is: "Provided, That any enlisted man of the Navy or Marine Corps so recommended may receive a like medal and gratuity."

Respectfully,

F. W. HACKETT, Acting Secretary.

Now, let me read a letter from the chairman of the board for the bestowal of awards:

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, February 18, 1901.

To the honorable the SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

SIR: Section 1407 of the Revised Statutes provides as follows:

"Seamen distinguishing themselves in battle, or by extraordinary heroism in the line of their profession, may be promoted to forward warrant officers upon the recommendation of their commanding officer, approved by the flag officer and Secretary of the Navy. And upon such recommendation they shall receive a gratuity of $100 and a medal of honor, to be prepared under the direction of the Navy Department."

The board, of which I am chairman, ordered to consider the subject of the bestowal of awards upon officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps for distinguished services in China and the Philippines and to make recommendations in regard thereto to the Secretary of the Navy, is unable to act upon the numerous cases of enlisted men of the Marine Corps before it.

The board have, therefore, to recommend that the necessary steps be taken at as early date as possible to secure such action by Congress as will enable the board to carry out its instructions regarding the enlisted men of the Marine Corps.

Respectfully,

F. W. HACKETT, Chairman.

I would like to read the last clause of the report which is unanimously made by the Committee on Naval Affairs:

Under the term "seamen" there has been a construction excluding enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps from the benefits and reward of the aforesaid statute. This bill is simply declaratory of an evident intention to provide for all the enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps, and will enable the Secretary of the Navy to amply reward the gallant conduct of our Marine Corps in China and elsewhere.

Does the gentleman from Tennessee desire to ask any further questions?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Will the gentleman state what this bill does?

Mr. BUTLER. The bill was just read.

Mr. MADDOX. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. BUTLER. I shall be delighted to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MADDOX. What was the bill passed this morning, presented by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MEYER], appropriating $25,000 to give medals for sailors or seamen?

Mr. BUTLER. That bill provided a reward for seamen and marines of the Spanish-American war for gallant services rendered by them on the shores of the Caribbean Sea. This bill is to provide rewards for enlisted men who rendered gallant and distinguished services in the Philippines and China.

I will say for the information of the gentleman from Georgia that the section referred to in the bill was passed in 1877 and has been in operation from that time to the present. This is simply declaratory of what was supposed to be the intention of Congress at the time that bill was passed. It was understood that bill contained sufficient language to enable the Department to confer medals of honor upon the marines as well as upon the seamen. The section has been construed so as to prohibit or exclude the marines from receiving the same reward of merit or the same recognition for conspicuous services that has been since 1877 conferred upon seamen upon shipboard.

Mr. MADDOX. Your bill does not cover the same ground that is covered by the bill offered by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MEYER]?

Mr. BUTLER. No, sir; it provides for separate and distinct services.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BUTLER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that the President had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

On March 1, 1901:

H. R. 13822. An act making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes;

H. R. 9140. An act providing that entrymen under the homestead laws, who have served in the United States Army, Navy, or Marine Corps during the Spanish war or the Philippine insurrection, shall have certain service deducted from the time required to perfect title under homestead laws, and for other purposes;

H. R. 11821. An act to ratify and confirm an agreement with the Muscogee or Creek tribe of Indians, and for other purposes;

H. R. 11820. An act to ratify and confirm an agreement with the Cherokee tribe of Indians, and for other purposes;

H. R. 13951. An act authorizing Calhoun County, State of Texas, to construct and maintain a free bridge across Lavaca Bay;

H. R. 1845. An act granting a pension to William Allen;

H. R. 13049. An act granting a pension to Elizabeth Fury;

H. R. 13118. An act granting a pension to Rebecca J. Gray;

H. R. 13154. An act granting a pension to Ernestine Lavigne;

H. R. 13569. An act granting a pension to the minor children of Henry R. Hinkle;

H. R. 3861. An act granting an increase of pension to Jesse Millard;

H. R. 3784. An act granting an increase of pension to Linsay C. Jones;

H. R. 8650. An act granting an increase of pension to William C. Whitney;

H. R. 12442. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Starr; and

H. R. 13086. An act granting an increase of pension to Eunice Henry.

The President, on March 2, 1901, approved the following bills:

H. R. 6204. An act for the relief of Olivia M. Clifford; and

H. R. 149. An act referring to the Court of Claims the claim of William E. Woodbridge for compensation for the use by the United States of his invention relating to projectiles, for which letters patent were ordered to issue to him March 25, 1852.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 5573) to amend section 203 of title 3 of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes," asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. SHOUP, Mr. CARTER, and Mr. BATE as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 425) for the relief of John M. Davis.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

House concurrent resolution No. 92.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Secretary of War is hereby instructed to send to the House of Representatives information as to the information and recommendations contained in the supplemental report of the Missouri River Commission as to river improvements at St. Joseph, Mo.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 12665. An act supplementary to an act entitled "An act to prohibit the coming of Chinese persons into the United States," approved May 5, 1892, and fixing the compensation of commissioners in such cases.

HARRISON CLARK.

Mr. GLYNN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12175) to correct the military record of Harrison Clark.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, authorized to correct the military record of Harrison Clark by dating his commission as second lieutenant, One hundred and twenty-fifth Regiment New York Volunteers (civil war), as of the date of May 6, 1864.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Military Affairs was read, as follows:

At the end of line 7 add the following: "The date of his commission as amended by the governor of the State of New York."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I believe that we have pending in this House a number of bills of this kind which are meritorious; but I am opposed to selecting one out of the number for special consideration. I think they all ought to take their places on the Calendar and have an equal chance. Therefore I must object.

Mr. GLYNN. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his objection for a moment, while I make an explanation.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I will withhold the objection till I can hear the explanation.

Mr. GLYNN. Mr. Speaker, this bill simply seeks to correct the military record of this man in the national archives here as it has been corrected in the New York State archives by order of Governor Roosevelt. Harrison Clark was severely wounded in the battle of the Wilderness. For exceptional bravery in that engagement he was recommended for promotion.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I withdraw my objection.

There being no further objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Military Affairs was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. GLYNN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

LEGAL REPRESENTATIVE OF SAMUEL TEWKSBURY, DECEASED.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following veto message of the President of the United States, which was read:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without approval, House bill No. 221, entitled "An act for the relief of legal representative of Samuel Tewksbury, deceased."

This bill provides for the payment to the legal representative of Samuel Tewksbury, late of Scranton, Lackawanna County, Pa., the sum of $5,697, in full compensation for the use and occupation by the United States Government of a brick building and premises owned by him in the city of Scranton, Pa., as a depot or barracks for United States troops by the Provost-Marshal of the United States, from June, 1862, to June, 1865, inclusive.

The records of the War Department show that under date of April 26, 1865 Col. J. G. Johnson, chief quartermaster, forwarded to the office of the Quartermaster-General a claim of Samuel Tewksbury for use of a building at Scranton, Pa., from February 24, 1864, to February 3, 1865, stated at $1,133.33, and damage to said building at $1,400; total, $2,533.33.

In forwarding these papers Colonel Johnson remarked as follows:

"In the spring of 1864, Mr. Samuel Tewksbury presented to me, through his agents, a claim against the United States Government for use of the premises mentioned in the inclosed account and accompanying papers.

"I learned from Capt. S. N. Bradford; provost-marshal, Twelfth district, Pennsylvania, at Scranton, that lodgings were furnished to persons in the military service at that place by Gardner & Atkinson, under a contract with the provost-marshal; also that the contractors rented the building used for the above purpose from Mr. Tewksbury.

"Considering it a matter entirely between that gentleman and his tenants, Messrs. Gardner & Atkinson, I at that time refused to take any action in the matter whatever."

The claim was again submitted to the office of the Quartermaster-General on September 30, 1865, by Maj. W. B. Lane, and was returned on May 1, 1866, with the information that the United States had already paid for lodging all the troops under the control of the provost-marshal at Scranton, Pa., during the time for which charge for rent is made.

The claimant was referred to the officer or person by whom the building was taken for compensation for its use.

No other record of this case is found in the War Department, although it will be observed that the bill covers a period from June, 1862, to June, 1865, inclusive, while the claim as originally presented to the War Department was for occupancy of a building at Scranton, Pa., from February 24, 1864, to February 3, 1865.

It thus appears that when this claim was originally presented it was examined by the proper representative of the Government, and was rejected; that such use and occupation as the United States Government had of claimant's building was under a contract between the Government and the tenants of claimant, and that payment therefor was duly made by the Government. Now, after a lapse of some thirty-seven years, the period of use and occupation covered by the claim has increased threefold, and the compensation asked therefor has more than doubled.

Under the circumstances of this case I do not feel at liberty to approve the bill.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, March 2, 1901.

Mr. GIBSON. I move that this message, with the accompanying bill, be referred to the Committee on War Claims and be ordered to be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill H. R. 11350 with the amendments as sent to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 11350) to establish the national bureau of standards.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Office of Standard Weights and Measures shall hereafter be known as the national bureau of standards.

SEC. 2. That the functions of the bureau shall consist in the custody of the standards; the comparison of the standards used in scientific investigations, engineering, manufacturing, commerce, and educational institutions with the standards adopted or recognized by the Government; the construction, when necessary, of standards, their multiples and subdivisions; the testing and calibration of standard-measuring apparatus; the solution of problems which arise in connection with standards; the determination of physical constants and the properties of materials, when such data are of great importance to scientific or manufacturing interests and are not to be obtained of sufficient accuracy elsewhere.

SEC. 3. That the bureau shall exercise its functions for the Government of the United States; for any State or municipal government within the United States; or for any scientific society, educational institution, firm, corporation, or individual within the United States engaged in manufacturing or other pursuits requiring the use of standards or standard measuring instruments. All requests for the services of the bureau shall be made in accordance with the rules and regulations herein established.

SEC. 4. That the officers and employees of the bureau shall consist of a director, at an annual salary of $5,000; 1 physicist, at an annual salary of $3,500; 1 chemist, at an annual salary of $3,500; 2 assistant physicists or chemists, each at an annual salary of $2,200; 1 laboratory assistant, at an annual salary of $1,400; 1 laboratory assistant, at an annual salary of $1,200; 1 secretary, at an annual salary of $2,000; 1 clerk, at an annual salary of $1,200; 1 messenger, at an annual salary of $720; 1 engineer, at an annual salary of $1,500; 1 mechanician, at an annual salary of $1,400; 1 watchman, at an annual salary of $720, and 1 laborer, at an annual salary of $600.

SEC. 5. That the director shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. He shall have the general supervision of the bureau, its equipment, and the exercise of its functions. He shall make an annual report to the Secretary of the Treasury, including an abstract of the work done during the year and a financial statement. He may issue, when necessary, bulletins for public distribution, containing such information as may be of value to the public or facilitate the bureau in the exercise of its functions.

SEC. 6. That the officers and employees provided for by this act, except the director, shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, at such time as their respective services may become necessary.

SEC. 7. That the following sums of money are hereby appropriated: For the payment of salaries provided for by this act, the sum of $27,140, or so much thereof as may be necessary; toward the erection of a suitable laboratory, of fireproof construction, for the use and occupation of said bureau, including all permanent fixtures, such as plumbing, piping, wiring, heating, lighting, and ventilation, the entire cost of which shall not exceed the sum of $250,000, $100,000; for equipment of said laboratory, the sum of $10,000; for a site for said laboratory, to be approved by the visiting committee hereinafter provided for and purchased by the Secretary of the Treasury, the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary; for the payment of the general expenses of said bureau, including books and periodicals, furniture, office expenses, stationery and printing, heating and lighting, expenses of the visiting committee, and contingencies of all kinds, the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended under the supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 8. That for all comparisons, calibrations, tests, or investigations, except those performed for the Government of the United States or State governments within the United States, a reasonable fee shall be charged, according to a schedule submitted by the director and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 9. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall, from time to time, make regulations regarding the payment of fees, the limits of tolerance to be attained in standards submitted for verification, the sealing of standards, the disbursement and receipt of moneys, and such other matters as he may deem necessary for carrying this act into effect.

SEC. 10. That there shall be a visiting committee of five members, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, to consist of men prominent in the various interests involved, and not in the employ of the Government. This committee shall visit the bureau at least once a year, and report to the Secretary of the Treasury upon the efficiency of its scientific work and the condition of its equipment. The members of this committee shall serve without compensation, but shall be paid the actual expenses incurred in attending its meetings. The period of service of the members of the original committee shall be so arranged that one member shall retire each year, and the appointments thereafter to be for a period of five years. Appointments made to fill vacancies occurring other than in the regular manner are to be made for the remainder of the period in which the vacancy exists.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I demand a second on the motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

Mr. GILBERT. I object.

The SPEAKER appointed as tellers Mr. SOUTHARD and Mr. GILBERT.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 78, noes 11.

So the motion to suspend the rules was seconded.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SOUTHARD] is recognized as entitled to twenty minutes.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, I hope we can have good order while this discussion is going on, for this is a very important measure, and I feel certain that it will be opposed by no one if it is fully and fairly understood.

It provides really for an enlargement of the existing Office of Weights and Measures under the Treasury Department. It, however, creates a separate bureau. The suggestion of this bill came from the Secretary of the Treasury himself. The bill was considered fully in committee, extensive hearings were had upon it; and it afterwards received the unanimous report of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

A similar bill was introduced in the Senate and referred to the Committee on Commerce. A subcommittee, consisting of Senators NELSON, GALLINGER, and TURNER, was appointed, and this subcommittee, after extensive hearings, reported unanimously to the full committee in favor of the bill. It has been indorsed more numerously than any bill we have had before the committee. It has been indorsed by practically all the heads of the Departments of the General Government. It has been indorsed very generally by the heads of the departments in the State governments. It has been indorsed by nearly all the scientific men of the country and nearly all the scientific associations. It has been indorsed by colleges and universities, whose officers have sent us their opinions in the shape of resolutions. It has been indorsed by the great manufacturing and commercial concerns of the country.

It has been especially indorsed by the railroads of the country, many of which maintain separate physical and chemical laboratories in connection with the running of the railroads. It has been indorsed by the great iron and steel manufacturing associations of the country. It has been indorsed by the manufacturers of locomotives, and indorsed especially by the manufacturers of electrical appliances and apparatus. I have to-day received a telegram which I will stop to read. It is signed "Carl Hering, President American Institute Electrical Engineers."

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 2, 1901.

Hon. DAVID B. HENDERSON,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Consideration and passage standardizing bureau bill to-day extremely important to electrical industry, representing over two thousand millions of dollars. National humiliation not to have own standards. People, manufacturers, and Government all alike interested together; no opposition. Appropriation small. Bill probably pass both Houses if brought up.

CARL HERING,
President American Institute Electrical Engineers.

We have had an office of weights and measures for a great many years, almost since the beginning of the Government, but for a very long time it has been ridiculously inadequate to meet the requirements of modern conditions.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I trust we may have better order. This is a very important measure, and every member of the House should have the information which the chairman of the committee is now giving.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, the functions of the present office of weights and measures are confined to the ordinary measurements of mass, length, and capacity. That was sufficient, perhaps, when that office was established. In the early days the standards in question were the pound, the yard, the bushel, and the gallon. Now, however, the progress of science and the complexity of industrial processes resulting from it require derived standards of a thousand and one kinds—all kinds of measuring apparatus—volumetric apparatus used in the chemical laboratories of the Government and similar laboratories all over the country—standards of measurement for high and low degrees of temperature, etc.

I must stop here to indicate some of the different kinds of measuring apparatus. They are barometers, thermometers, pressure gauges, polariscopes, instruments of navigation, steam-engine indicators, and instruments of a thousand different varieties. That the graduations and indications of these instruments should agree with the fundamental standards is a question of most vital importance, and without the facilities for such tests and comparisons the public is deprived of the greatest benefits to be derived from the standards recognized by the Government. We have in this country to-day no means of testing these different instruments of precision. The result is, we have to send them to Germany or France or England or somewhere else to have them tested and calibrated.

Mr. Speaker, only last year some of the incandescent lights designed for use in some of our naval vessels were sent to Germany to be standardized to determine whether they came up to the requirements. That means a consumption of time. It means also a matter of expense to our people, and it results in a loss of prestige to this country which is incalculable. Nearly all of the instruments used in our scientific investigations are sent abroad for calibrating and standardizing. This ought not to be so. We are simply providing in this bill for what every large and progressive nation on this earth now has or is making haste to obtain. I think I am not stating that too strongly.

Germany has recently established a very important physical technical laboratory. England has followed suit. Germany appropriates something like $100,000 annually to maintain her institution; England, something like $62,000; Austria, $45,000; Russia, something like $45,000. France appropriates, I think, a larger amount than either of the latter two. This bill carries an annual appropriation for salaries of $27,140. The bill as originally introduced carried an appropriation, for building and all, of something like $314,000. The bill as amended provides for a building of a hundred thousand dollars. It cuts down the appropriation for the force from $34,900 to $27,140. We appropriate annually for standard weights and measures, of which I have just spoken, about $10,000. This, of course, is to be taken from the $27,000, which will make an increase in the actual annual expenditures of something like $17,000.

I want to call the attention of the committee for just two or three minutes to what is provided by other governments in the matter of institutions of like character.

England has a standardizing department of the board of trade, the Electrical Standardizing Laboratory, the Kew Observatory, and the National Physical Laboratory, but recently established. Germany has what they call Die Normal Aichungs Commission, for which a $250,000 building has just been provided; Die Physikalische-Technische Reichsanstalt, the building and grounds for which cost approximately $1,000,000, and is maintained by an annual appropriation of about $80,000. The number of people employed in the Reichsanstalt last year was 87.

As this subject is somewhat technical in character, I would like to call attention very briefly to some of the statements of witnesses who appeared before the committee. I first call attention to the statement of Dr. A. E. Kennelly, president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, who appeared before the committee. He says:

This matter is one of vital importance from a utilitarian standpoint alone, and I heartily indorse the remarks of the gentlemen who have preceded me. This is primarily a question of dollars and cents. The cost of the disputes which arise in the electrical business every year would several times cover the annual cost of the institution which you propose to found.

Such a standardizing bureau as it is proposed to create would have such importance and character that everybody would recognize its statements as authoritative, and its determinations should settle disputes which are constantly arising from that one thing alone.

The matter is also important in another direction. When a standardizing laboratory is established in any country there goes with it a certain prestige, a certain technological importance which reacts and ramifies in all the affairs of life. You can not create an establishment which shall declare what is the true measure of anything without creating at the same time the means of settling the numerous questions which come up in connection with such standards, and establishing thereby a focus of knowledge and intelligence. That knowledge and intelligence you can not measure in dollars and cents, but it is, nevertheless, a great power to the nation in the distribution of its labor and its wealth.

Dr. Pritchett, until recently the superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, has been and is one of the strongest advocates of this measure. He says:

There is no reason why our manufacturers of scientific apparatus should not compete with Germany and England for the trade of Japan, South America, and other foreign countries. But if an American maker at present desires to sell his thermometers or other instruments of precision at home or abroad, the first questions asked will be, What assurance is offered that the instruments have been properly tested; that they are what they pretend to be; that they measure with the correct units? At present no such assurance can be given. The result is that American manufacturers of scientific apparatus are seriously handicapped in their competition with the makers of Germany, France, and England. The encouragement the proposed bureau would afford to American manufacturers of this class would alone warrant its establishment.

An interesting factor in the commercial development of Germany has been the establishment of a similar institution, known as the "Physikalische-Technische-Reichsanstalt." Immediately after the Franco-Prussian war the Germans began a study of the means of extending their commerce, one of the results of which was to provide German manufacturers with the above institution. It has now been in existence thirteen years, and the results obtained by this institution are far beyond those anticipated by its most earnest supporters. To-day German standards and standard measuring apparatus are used the world over. You will find them in every department of our Government doing scientific work.

The fact that Germany can furnish instruments of precision and guarantee them serves not only to introduce that apparatus but other products to the world, and the commercial development which has grown out of the establishment of this institution in Germany has been one of the most interesting things to follow. It has created not only the demand for the instruments of the more accurate sort, but, having introduced those, the less accurate and the more common instruments of commerce followed.

Therefore I come before the committee, without discussing any of the details, simply to say in a few words that I consider this measure exceedingly important from the standpoint of scientific men who are concerned, scientific institutions, the great branches of the Government which need this work; and from the standpoint of the commercial enterprises which would make use of such a standardizing laboratory I consider this the most important measure which could come before you. The establishment of such an institution would not only enormously advance scientific interest, but in a still greater measure advance the manufacture of precise and delicate measuring apparatus of all kinds, and, through that, a great extension of our commerce in all directions. I consider this the most important measure you could pass relating to weights and measures.

Dr. McMurtrie is the president of the American Chemical Society, or was when he appeared before the committee. He is said to be one of the ablest chemists in the country. He not only stands high professionally, but is in direct touch with the practical side of the question involved in the proposed legislation, and this may be said of almost every man who appeared before the committee. I read a part of Dr. McMurtrie's statement.

I can say for myself and for the organization which I represent here that we fully indorse this measure. It is of the utmost importance to everybody who is engaged in scientific work, because work of the research laboratories furnishes the basis of all the work that is done on practical lines. My personal experience has been not only in the work in the research laboratory, but in later years largely in the practical lines, and I know perfectly well how important a bearing this matter of having accurate standards is to those who are engaged in technical work. It used to be said, speaking of methods which were used in the industries, for analytical work or in various measurements, that, after all, those methods were technical, and if they were approximately accurate it was all right. Now, as a fact, at the present time we find that the practical men of this country are great sticklers for accuracy, and even more so than are the men who are working in the research laboratories.

I have had charge of a laboratory in works in which there were nine chemists employed. Those men were kept busy all the time. They began early in the morning and they kept at work until late in the evening. In making their analyses and the various determinations which they had to make it was not possible for them to duplicate their work—it was not possible to make six or eight determinations and accept the average of those determinations as an accurate result, as a standard of their work, but they must get the average with one determination.

In the research laboratories it is common to follow the methods that I have referred to; that is, to make a series of determinations and accept the average as the final result, but in these technical laboratories that is not possible. There are too many measurements to be made in chemical work, particularly in which I am interested. The accuracy of the work therefore depends very largely and almost entirely upon the instruments with which one has to work. I will illustrate in our own laboratory. An invoice of material was received which was bought upon its purity.

The young men who are employed to determine what that purity is, as I stated before, have to make a great many tests during the day; they have not time to duplicate their work. There was one case which came within our experience, and which after the result was readily found and compared with the result obtained in the laboratory in France there was a very wide difference in the two, and the people whom we represented had a balance against them of about $8,000. I sat down beside the young man who made the test and I found he had followed the methods perfectly; he had done everything that was required of him so far as the method of work was concerned, and it was only for us to determine where his mistake lay. His work was duplicated by one of his associates, and those two men were not able to get improved results. It was difficult to find where the mistake lay.

I found that this young man, who had a series of flasks in which to make his measurements, had an accident and dropped one of the flasks off the table, and it was necessary to substitute another. He did not have the time to standardize this flask, and we found, upon a careful standardization, that it was incorrect; that it varied enough to make the difference in the commercial results I have described. Now, it seems to me that we have no better illustration of the value of reliable standards. If we had had in that laboratory a set of instruments which had been properly calibrated by a person in authority, such as this bill provides for, it would have been an easy matter in the case cited to standardize the flask in question, and this difficulty would not have arisen. It required some three or four months of correspondence back and forth before that matter could be properly settled.

This happens in many laboratories. Constant disputes are occurring, and I think there is no place where there is a better illustration than in the custom-house and the relations between the United States custom-house and importers. I know something about that, because I have had occasion to go before the appraisers in some cases of disputes of tests of materials in which the collection of customs depended upon those tests. We have this illustrated in a most important way in connection with the collection of duties upon sugars. The very large amount of sugar which is imported into this country would make a very great difference in the money value if there should be a variation of even so much as two-tenths of 1 per cent.

Now, such differences are common and may result simply from the differences in the standardization of the instrument of two operators. The tests of the custom-house in regard to sugar particularly are made altogether by polariscope. Now, the use of the polariscope depends not only upon the length of the tubes which are used, but the temperature at which those tubes are used, and any variation of that kind may make a different result in two observers. The observer in the custom-house may get one result and the observer in the refinery would get another. There would be a dispute at once between the manufacturer and the custom-house. Disputes of that kind are always expensive.

Now, if the instruments used in both places are carefully calibrated and are carefully tested all of these disputes will be removed and a great deal of time and worry and expense would be obviated. There is another case which came under my observation very lately—a case which was carried into court. Some very carefully conducted experiments were thrown out entirely and completely because the observed temperatures were not measured with a thermometer calibrated in the German national testing laboratory.

If we had had such a laboratory in this country, then the instruments made in this country could have been used in the observations and the results of those observations would have been accepted by the court. The courts are demanding that kind of work. The courts demand it because commerce demands it and commerce demands it because the people demand it, and it seems to me that in the consideration of this matter you have the people of this whole country behind you, and it seems to me that it ought to influence you very strongly in the consideration of this matter.

These are the principal points I have in mind. Of course in connection with chemical work we have all kind of instruments, and use not only instruments of glass, but instruments of metal construction for making electric measurements. In fact, the whole range of physical tests is followed in the work of chemical laboratories. I am sure that people who have to do with iron and steel will appreciate enormously the work that is proposed here. A slight variation in the composition of steel makes a very decided difference in the strength of that steel, and the railroads of this country are all establishing physical and chemical testing laboratories.

None of the important roads are now without them. The Pennsylvania Railroad during the last twenty-five years, under the direction of Dr. C. B. Dudley, has done an enormous work in the improvement of the manufacture of steel for railroad work and for all kinds of construction. There has been no greater work done in this country than that of Dr. P. H. Dudley, of the New York Central Railroad. We see how all the great industries and enterprises are dependent upon the accuracy of the instruments with which we have to perform the researches required in these various industries and enterprises, and I earnestly hope that the matter will receive favorable consideration of the committee and of Congress generally.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. SOUTHARD. Certainly.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Is this a step toward the adoption of the metric system in this country?

Mr. SOUTHARD. It has nothing whatever to do with establishing the metric system of or any other system of weights and measures. The bill provides that one of the functions of the bureau shall be "the construction, when necessary, of standards, their multiples, and subdivisions;" it in nowise adopts a standard for the Government or anybody else. At present, we are told, there is no reliable photometric standard in this country. If a reliable photometric standard should be constructed by this institution when established, it would be a matter for sincere congratulation, but this bill would not compel anyone to adopt it or use it.

This bill proposes the standardizing of the instruments we possess for the General Government, for the States and municipalities, and for anyone else who may see fit to employ its services. It has nothing whatever to do with the metric system. I made that statement in the start. I wish to read just a paragraph from the statement of Dr. C. B. Dudley, chemist for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

You are doubtless quite well aware that where it is essential to have standard apparatus at the present time we are compelled to send abroad for it. There is no reason in the world why this work can not equally well be done in this country, and I am sure I voice the sentiment of everyone who is at all conversant with the facts in the case, and especially those who, like myself, have had endless disputes and conflicts during the years which have passed, some of which would have been avoided if we had had in this country a means of having the apparatus which we use in this country standardized.

The importance of this bureau in scientific investigation I leave to others, confining myself to the actual practical daily use of apparatus in commercial work. I have been connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, I may say, for nearly twenty-five years, and the value of material alone which has been examined in our laboratory during that time can safely be said to be not less than $50,000,000.

I most sincerely hope that your committee will see their way clear to make a favorable recommendation in regard to the establishment of this bureau, and that satisfactory legislation will follow that recommendation.

Captain Sigsbee, United States Navy, made a very interesting and valuable contribution to the information of the committee. I wish I could read all of it, but for want of time I shall read but a small part of what he says:

It seems to me very important that the Navy, when inviting bids, should be able to say that the standards offered should be those of a national bureau of standards. Doubtless bids would then be made by a greater number of competitors, and this would be very advantageous to the Navy. The Bureau of Equipment uses delicate instruments.

At the Observatory, which comes under that Bureau, they make magnetic and astronomical observations, which requires instruments of precision. Surveying and navigation come largely under that Bureau, and also meteorological observations at sea. The Hydrographic Office under that Bureau has between 1,500 and 2,000 voluntary observers of the weather at sea, all of whom use delicate instruments, which must be compared with standards for which again there ought to be an ultimate standard.

The Bureau of Equipment also, I might say, is charged by the Navy with matters pertaining to electricity, and makes many observations accordingly.

The Bureau of Steam Engineering gave me yesterday a list occupying a whole page of foolscap naming tests and observations required in that Bureau, all of which had some relation to the necessity for ultimate standards.

The Bureau of Construction makes tests in many directions which require ultimate standards.

The Bureau of Ordnance, as we all know, deals with questions of ballistics, and of measurements in the manufacture of guns, shells, and powder, and in many other ways the Bureau of Ordnance is interested in the establishment of ultimate standards.

In order to draw a parallel to what we desire to effect, I might invite attention to the fact that our National Observatory gives daily the standard of time for a vast region of country. We set our watches by the standard Observatory time, whereby we know that they are correct with respect to each other. This, in brief, in respect to all measurements, is what we want. I do not see any way of attaining authorized standards for ultimate application except by means of a national bureau; therefore I favor such an establishment.

The present state of the art of steel manufacture in this country is largely due to the high standard of tests persistently demanded by the Navy at the outset and against all opposition. A similar improvement may be expected in other arts from the maintenance of exalted standards. A bureau of standards under Government control would give universal encouragement to this end.

The bill has been enthusiastically indorsed by all the heads of Departments of the General Government having scientific bureaus, as well as by all the chiefs of such bureaus.

As furnishing an illustration of the necessity and value of this proposed bureau to the General Government, I will quote from the statement of the Secretary of Agriculture:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of April 24, and beg to assure you that the establishment of a national standardizing bureau, having the function outlined by you, will be of the highest value and importance, not only to the scientific bureaus, offices, and divisions of this Department, but to the country at large. Its influence will be felt wherever the quality and value of substances are fixed by chemical and physical tests, whether this be in connection with scientific investigations, in connection with manufacturing and other industrial processes, or in connection with commercial transactions.

Speaking for this Department alone, I wish to say that it has been our policy to patronize the American manufacturers of scientific apparatus whenever practicable without hampering our investigators by compelling them to use apparatus of an inferior grade. The art of the construction of scientific apparatus has been brought to such a high degree of perfection under the fostering care of European governments—notably Germany—that we have been compelled to send abroad a large proportion of our orders, either directly or indirectly, through importers. The greatest disadvantage resulting from this state of affairs is not the delay, inconvenience, and expense connected with making purchases abroad; nor is it to be found in the danger of injury to delicate and expensive apparatus during transportation across the sea.

It is the necessity of importing the certificate of a foreign government whenever an official certificate of accuracy is desired with apparatus. In Germany an order can be issued for apparatus with the specification that the goods delivered must be of the quality and accuracy recognized by the regulations established by the standardizing bureaus of the Imperial Government. Apparatus made in accordance with these regulations are regular commodities, and are described in the catalogues of all the apparatus makers and dealers. When the goods are received the purchaser is able to send a proper proportion of the shipment to the government standardizing bureaus and base his acceptance or refusal of the goods upon the results of the official tests. For the accommodation of customers who need certified apparatus for immediate use most of the dealers keep in stock apparatus bearing the official stamp.

The disadvantage under which American scientific workers—notably chemists—labor is evidenced by a recent experience of the Division of Chemistry of this Department. The confusion of standards and carelessness which has characterized the manufacture of graduated chemical glassware in the past is notorious. Some months ago the Division of Chemistry issued to an American dealer and importer an order for graduated glassware, to be made in accordance with the regulations of the German Imperial Testing Commission (Kaiserliche Normal Aichungs Kommission).

While all of this apparatus was to fulfill the requirements in point of construction and limits of error in graduation of the regulations named, certain pieces were to bear the official stamp of the Imperial commission. At the special request of the American dealer to whom the order was sent permission was granted to import only the pieces of apparatus requiring the official stamp and to supply for the remainder of the order apparatus of American manufacture, but made in accordance with the regulations named. After considerable delay the goods were delivered. The certified pieces were eminently satisfactory; the uncertified ones were quite the opposite. They were unsatisfactory both in the form of construction and in regard to accuracy.

As an example of the degree of inaccuracy, it may be stated that a flask marked to contain 100 cubic centimeters was found to contain 100.3 cubic centimeters. I do not believe that this experience was due to unworthy motives on the part of either the manufacturer or dealer. This experience is simply the result of the absence in this country of any well-established and authoritative standards governing the forms of construction, the system of graduation, and the allowable limits of error for apparatus of this kind. The mere adoption of regulations relative to the character of apparatus admissible for stamping by a national standardizing bureau will cause a revolution in the apparatus manufactured and give to it that highly important quality, uniformity.

As a further illustration of the great desirability of such an establishment, I may call your attention to the contention which has arisen in the courts in the United States in the last few years concerning the regulations prescribed by the Treasury Department governing the polarization of imported sugars. These regulations were prepared by a joint commission consisting of the Chemist of the Department of Agriculture as chairman, a representative of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, Office of Weights and Measures, and the Chemist of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The regulations were based upon the most careful scientific determinations and the apparatus and utensils employed by the customs-house officers standardized by the Office of Weights and Measures of the Coast and Geodetic Survey. Nevertheless, the accuracy of these officials has been called into question by the importers, and the question is now the subject of expensive and tedious litigation. The existence of such an office of your Department as you propose to establish would have avoided all such trouble by the weight of its authority. This is only one of the many instances where the utility of such a bureau would prove of practical advantage to official operations.

The above examples merely serve to illustrate the numerous ways in which the establishment of a national standardizing bureau will directly facilitate and increase the value of the scientific work of this Department. While it is a proper part of every scientific worker's training to be able to assure himself of the accuracy of his instruments and of their suitability for the work in hand, in these days of the division of labor the testing of apparatus has very properly become a well-defined specialty, requiring a special training, in order that the various operations connected with it may be performed with rapidity, with the greatest economy of time and apparatus, and with the highest degree of skill.

Our investigations need, first of all, clearly defined authoritative standards for many forms of apparatus, including volumetric apparatus, thermometers, etc., second, they need the assistance of a readily accessible and properly equipped bureau charged with testing and official certification of apparatus; third, they need from time to time the cooperation of just such an institution as you describe in aiding them in devising and perfecting new apparatus for special purposes, as the progress of discovery in various branches of agricultural science makes them possible and useful.

I am sure that the close of this century of most brilliant scientific discoveries can not be given a more enduring monument in this country than the establishment of just such an institution as you describe under the head of a national standardizing bureau.

It would take much more time than we have at our disposal to refer even briefly to the many splendid indorsements received in support of the pending bill. The hearings had before the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, and also those had before the subcommittee of the Committee on Commerce in the Senate, have been printed, those in the Senate as a Senate document. No one can read these hearings without wondering why this country has waited so long to take the first step toward the establishment of a national bureau of standards.

We sincerely hope that the bureau of standards, when established, as it certainly must be, will become an aid to scientific and industrial progress in this country, such as the Reichsantalt has been in Germany. Germany for several years has been rapidly advancing toward industrial supremacy in Europe. One of the potent factors in this notable advance is the perfected alliance between science and commerce existing there, and the Reichsanstalt is universally regarded as the crowning glory of her scientific advancement.

Professor Carhart, of Ann Arbor University, in a paper presented at the one hundred and forty-sixth meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers in New York City, in September last, refers to the necessity of an institution in this country similar to the Reichsanstalt in the following language:

> If Germany has found it to her scientific and industrial advantage to maintain the Reichsanstalt and is proud of what it accomplishes, and if Great Britain is so impressed with the success of the institution that she has decided to imitate it, it is surely the part of wisdom for the United States to move in the same direction. It is therefore very gratifying that at the suggestion of Secretary Gage a bill was introduced in the last Congress to establish a national standardizing bureau, and that the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures reported unanimously and strongly in favor of its passage. So great is the importance of this movement from the point of view of science, of national pride, and of the higher interests of industrial pursuits that the effort, so happily begun, to secure suitable legislation should be repeated with redoubled force and enthusiasm. Some of the reasons for making this effort one does not need to go far to seek.
> In the first place, the scientific interests to be served are certainly as great as in any other country in the world. Science is cultivated here with increasing assiduity and success. We are no longer content to follow in the footsteps of European savants and modestly repeat their investigations. Original work of a high order is now done in many American universities; but the difficulties under which university instructors prosecute research are even greater here than in Germany, and we are still compelled to go to Europe for most of our standards.
> As a result, inventions of an almost purely scientific character originating here have been carried to perfection in the Reichsanstalt, and Germany gets the larger part of the credit. I need only instance the Weston standard cell, which has been so fully investigated at the Reichsanstalt, and the alloy "manganin," which the same institution employs for its standard resistances after a searching inquiry into its properties. Both of these are the invention of Mr. Edward Weston, one of the past presidents of this institute. So long as there is no authoritative bureau in the United States under Federal control and presided over by men commanding respect and confidence, we must continue "to utilize the far superior standardizing facilities of other governments."
> It is true that science knows no nationality, but the scientific workers of any nation can serve their own country better if they are not compelled to obtain their standards and their best instruments from distant parts of the globe. America has the cultivation in physical science, the ability on the part of her investigators, and the inventive faculty to do work in a national institution that we shall not be ashamed to place by the side of Germany's best products. The establishment of a national institution for physical and technical purposes can not fail to foster a vigorous and healthy growth in science, to which we already owe so much of our national prosperity and renown.

In the manufacture of optical and scientific instruments Germany is leading the world, and we can not expect to compete with her in this line of manufacture unless we offer our own people equal facilities for standardization and calibration. If we have been successful in impressing the House with the real value and importance of the measure, we have no fear that it will not receive favorable consideration.

Some objection has been made to the salaries carried in the bill. In the bill as reported by the committee the salary of the director was fixed at $6,000 per annum. In the judgment of the committee this is not too large, but to meet all possible objection in the amended bill the salary is fixed at $5,000, with the hope that Congress may see fit to increase it at some future time. The officers of the bureau of standards will be called upon to determine the most important as well as the most difficult problems.

These decisions must be such as to command the respect of the world. The salaries proposed for the director and others in the scientific class are no higher than the corresponding positions in our leading educational institutions, and it should be kept in mind that the latter positions are to be preferred on account of the general impression which prevails that Government positions are subject to political changes, and the fact that the scientific men of educational institutions receive from three to four months' vacation annually, in which they may travel or study.

When men of the ability required for this position are willing to give up the many advantages they possess at educational institutions, there is open to them the position of scientific expert in the large industrial corporations—positions which frequently pay as much as $10,000 per year. Moreover, a physicist or chemist of repute who holds a responsible position in an educational institution or industrial corporation in one of the large cities is frequently consulted and called upon for expert testimony, thus providing him with a source of income not available to the scientific men of the proposed bureau.

Some have thought the amount authorized for the building too large. The building must be solidly built.

It must be very solidly built, with heavy walls and floors. Many of the walls must be double, on account of temperature changes. The material in the building would be at least 50 per cent more than in an ordinary building of the same size.

The heating of the building is much more complicated and expensive than in ordinary cases. The heating plant must be of the most improved form, and capable of perfect regulation. It will cost twice as much as the usual heating plant.

In addition to the gas and water pipes of an ordinary building every room in the building must be provided with water and gas for laboratory purposes. There is also a system of compressed air and vacuum pipes which extend throughout the building. The plumbing and piping of a laboratory is a very considerable item of its entire cost.

In addition to the usual electric-light wires there are several systems of wires and switchboards used in the distribution of electricity for experimental purposes to the various rooms. This item would be four or five times that in an ordinary building.

The windows are to be provided with light-proof shutters or blinds, in order that the rooms may be absolutely dark or flooded with light, as the work may require. Many of the windows should be double.

The heating plant, engines, dynamos, motors, pumps, and heavy machines or apparatus would be placed in a small building, detached from the laboratory proper, which must be free from vibration or disturbances of all kinds. The instrument shops would also be in the small building.

It will be understood that owing to the requirements of such a building, the appropriation, rather the authorization, is not too large. The building should be built in an isolated place.

It should be far enough from the city to insure freedom from the disturbances caused by traffic or electric street-car lines, but not too far from the Departments and shipping facilities. The site should be large enough to prevent the construction of buildings, street-car lines, or streets near the laboratory.

Mr. Speaker, as I said in the beginning, the bill should pass without a dissenting vote. A summary of the whole situation could not be made in better terms than those used by the honorable Secretary of the Treasury in his statement before the subcommittee in the Senate. He there said:

> In a most general way I may state that it is open to our observation that a new country is raw in its methods. It does not work by close rule. There is often a large margin for waste. The technical and scientific side of affairs comes later on, when by the development of society the relation of things will become more complex. The law of competition becomes more closely applied, and we learn by slow and painful steps that accuracy and closeness and scientific skill are required to supplement what went on in a tolerably skillful way before.
> This country has advanced now to a point where in all the great things of life it is in competition with the older and more thoroughly established nations of the world, and by more thoroughly I mean in the experience of trade, in the scientific application of ideas, and in all the economies which save waste and aid efficiency.
> In this particular of standardizing weights and measures and testing apparatus of every kind the older countries are far ahead of us; in fact, it may be said that there is no comparison between us. We are dependent utterly upon Germany, perhaps France to some extent, and England for our measurements and those standards which we are obliged to resort to in testing and comparing when we enter into competitive work against them. The application of a standardizing bureau, if established, will be very wide. It touches the manufacturing arts and commerce and all scientific efforts, and it will be most important in the general work of education. We have come to a period where guesswork will not do and, to use an old familiar phrase, "pretty near" does not count. Exactness and absolute conformity to standards and uniformity are the essentials.
> There is another side to that which occurs to me. It may appear to many to have a more sentimental than practical value, but it gives the proposition, to my mind, great force, and that is what might be called the moral aspect of this question, the recognition by the Government of an absolute standard, to which fidelity in all the relations of life affected by that standard is required. We are the victim of looseness in our methods; of too much looseness in our ideas; of too much of that sort of spirit, born out of our rapid development, perhaps, of a disregard or a lack of comprehension of the binding sanction of accuracy in every relation of life.
> Now, the establishment of a bureau like this, where the Government is the custodian and the originator of these standards of weights and measures as applied to all the higher scientific aspects of life which we are so rapidly developing in, has, to my mind, a value far and above the mere physical considerations which affect it, although those physical considerations are fundamental and most important. Nothing can dignify this Government more than to be the patron of, and the establisher of, absolutely correct scientific standards and such legislation as will hold our people to faithfully regard and absolutely obey the requirements of law in adhesion to those true and correct standards.

Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has five minutes remaining.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX].

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I agree with the gentleman; this is a very important bill—too much so, in my judgment, to be taken up here and passed in forty minutes, without the right of amendment anywhere under the rules of this House.

Now, I should like to ask the gentleman, if he will give me his attention, for information. I do not know anything about the bill. If I understood it, or if it was possible for me to understand it in the time we have to consider it, I might be in favor of it. I want to know what it will cost; how many dollars it will take for this new bureau, and how many officers will be required to run this business.

Mr. SOUTHARD. There is a force of 14 employees provided for in the bill; and I want to say this to the gentleman: I was talking with Mr. Colby, chief chemist of the Bethlehem Iron and Steel Company, and he told me the physical and chemical laboratory of that institution has continuously 36 employees. This bill provides a less force than is usual in the laboratories of the railroads and other business institutions of the country.

Mr. MADDOX. If I understood you just now, this will affect this country very greatly.

Mr. SOUTHARD. No question about it.

Mr. MADDOX. The various instruments that you mention—it will be necessary for the people of this country to buy new ones, will it not?

Mr. SOUTHARD. Oh, no; nothing of that kind.

Mr. MADDOX. Would they not have to have new books on this matter?

Mr. SOUTHARD. Nothing of that kind.

Mr. MADDOX. Now, I say I do not understand the bill. I started out on that idea.

Mr. SOUTHARD. The bill is one which can not be thoroughly understood without some study. It has been very carefully studied by the committees of both Houses, and the original bill was recommended by both Houses.

Mr. MADDOX. It seems to be unfortunate that you brought it up at this time.

Mr. SOUTHARD. It is a very important matter, and some start ought to be made during this session. It ought to have been done twenty years ago.

Mr. MADDOX. Has it passed the Senate?

Mr. SOUTHARD. It will.

Mr. MADDOX. Do you suppose it can possibly become a law at this session?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I have been assured that if it passes the House there will be no objection to it in the Senate.

Mr. MADDOX. What is the cost of this?

Mr. SOUTHARD. This bill carries an appropriation of $167,140. That includes $100,000 toward the building, which is authorized and not to cost to exceed $250,000.

Mr. MADDOX. That includes the buildings and all?

Mr. SOUTHARD. The total cost of the buildings, including one annual appropriation for the force when the building is completed and the full force has been employed, will be $314,000, and the bill carried this appropriation before it was amended.

Mr. MADDOX. What will it all cost? What will be the annual cost?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I am going to state. It is proposed when this is all completed to employ an annual force of 21 persons. When that is done and the buildings completed the total expenditure will be $314,000. Understand, the annual appropriation for the full force would be $34,900. I have already stated that Germany appropriates every year $100,000 for the maintenance of a similar institution; England, $62,000; Austria, $45,000; and Russia, $46,000. Now, I want to say this to the gentleman.

Mr. CANNON. One moment. I think the gentleman from Georgia is getting a misapprehension of the bill, not the fault of either gentleman. This begins with 14 employees. Now, you appropriate $100,000 toward the erection of a building and then fix the limit of cost at $250,000, and then provide for a laboratory besides.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Oh, no.

Mr. CANNON. Yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HULL). The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois five minutes.

Mr. CANNON. Now, section 7 reads as follows:

> SEC. 7. That the following sums of money are hereby appropriated: For the payment of salaries provided for by this act, the sum of $34,900, or so much thereof as may be necessary; for the erection of a suitable laboratory, of fireproof construction, for the use and occupation of said bureau, including all permanent fixtures, such as plumbing, piping, wiring, heating, lighting, and ventilation, the sum of $250,000; for equipment of said laboratory, the sum of $25,000.

So that for a bureau of fourteen persons you start out with over $300,000 worth of buildings. I will ask the gentleman if he does not think that he ought to modify this measure for buildings not to exceed $100,000?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I want to say to the gentleman that if he had been present at the hearings before the committee in this case he would readily conclude that these appropriations, or this authorization, is not excessive.

Mr. CANNON. I don't think there ought to be any bureau organized. He starts out and comes full armed, like Minerva from the brain of Jove. He says the scientists come and want it, but there is no use in housing them in $300,000 worth of buildings. I believe it ought to be restricted to $100,000.

Mr. HOPKINS. I ask unanimous consent that it be limited to $100,000. I am greatly in favor of the passage of the bill, and I think we ought to conform to the wishes of gentlemen who are not in full accord with it.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I believe the gentleman from Illinois underestimates the importance of this bureau.

Mr. CANNON. This is a new service, and in my judgment it ought to be a division in the Coast and Geodetic Survey. If it needs some building, I think there is vacant ground on the other side of the Coast Survey building quite large enough for this building. Weights and Measures is now a division of the Coast Survey.

I think it would be better to authorize the standardizing division and let it go under the Coast Survey with a moderate salary to begin with until it justifies itself. But the gentleman thinks differently, and I have great regard for his committee, but I have not so much regard that I want to spend more than $100,000 to house 14 people.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I would like to say that the Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, who was before the committee, indorsed the bill heartily, and said that it ought not to be under the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Mr. CANNON. I understand the gentleman is content to modify his measure so as to read: "For the erection of a suitable laboratory of fireproof construction for the use and occupation of said bureau, including all permanent fixtures, such as plumbing, piping, wiring, heating, lighting, and ventilation, $100,000, which shall cover the entire cost of the same."

Mr. THROPP. Does that include the site?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, you have got $25,000 for a site besides.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HULL). The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH].

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. Speaker, when this measure was first presented to the committee, I thought the proposition was not a wise one. As a general thing I look upon the creation of offices as something that ought to be very carefully considered. But I have considered the question with great care, have talked with a good many people who know the practical workings of laboratories of the kind that is to be created under this bill, and I must say that in my judgment it is a measure which this Government should have passed long ago.

There is a new creation, as it were, of measures and of standards in the world. The development in electricity, in the great powers of heat, also in the great liquid-air field, have caused the creation of new units of measurements. It is now necessary to the manufacturers of instruments of precision that they should be gauged and calibrated here in the United States.

In the first place, it makes a fixed place to which reference can be made as to what is the standard. The difficulty to-day in the electrical field is that one manufacturer has one standard and another manufacturer a different one, and the result is it is all chaos; whereas if the Government establishes a standardizing bureau it fixes standards which all manufacturers must acknowledge, and thereby conduces to uniformity in measurements. Such a bureau will be of great service in compelling manufacturers to produce perfect work. When their product can be easily tested, self-interest will compel the highest order of work and will prevent the falsification of measures.

Such a bureau will add great reputation to the instruments of precision manufactured in this country, and by reason thereof extend the sales of the same throughout the world. There are contests arising, disputes arising, every day as to whether a certain meter is of the proper kind and measures properly. The Government itself ought to be the arbiter as to whether the meter is properly calibrated.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we find that inasmuch as the Government itself has to send many instruments to Europe for calibration that it would be a saving to the Government itself to some extent. But even if it would not we are hampering our manufacturers in not providing a place where they can have their instruments tested.

On account of the German bureau manufacturers of that country are gaining such reputation and such precedence for their goods that the American producers of the same goods are at a disadvantage in competing with them.

Unless we have some means of giving assurance that the instruments manufactured by Americans are of absolute certainty, they can never be brought up to equal in reputation those of Germany. Within the last ten years Germany has made great advances over England in this matter, although previous to that time England had the greater reputation.

But Germany, on account of the establishment of a bureau there and on account of the careful manner in which they have done their work, has established a reputation which gives to the German instruments calibrated by that Government a reputation all over the world as the most perfect of any. Our own manufacturers in order to sell are often obliged to have the goods sent to Germany to get there the certificate that their instruments are of equal character with those manufactured in Germany. This is a disadvantage which we should not any longer suffer to exist.

The report on this bill was unanimous and I hope the bill will pass.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. One criticism, though it is somewhat technical, is suggested by the language of this bill. In providing for the appointment of a director of this bureau the language is that the President "shall appoint" that officer. It is true that the language is added, "with the advice and consent of the Senate;" but the phraseology ought to be that the President "shall nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint." That is the language of the Constitution. I do not know that there was any object in varying from that language, but it seems to me the wording of the bill should be in accordance with the Constitution.

I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL], after which I will yield two minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS].

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, this is the unanimous report of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. There is no political question whatever involved in it. If this country is going to "keep up with the procession" in our foreign trade as well as in our home trade we must have the same accuracy of measurements and the same methods of standardizing our various forms of weights and measures that other nations have.

Last year Germany spent $116,000 in this direction, and in four establishments made 28,000 tests of various kinds. England spent $62,000 and had 29,869 tests. Now compare that with the United States. Our Coast Survey in its Bureau of Weights and Measures spent $10,400 and had only 1,333 tests.

If we are going to keep in line with the other nations of the world we must have some improvement in this system, which is a part of our Coast and Geodetic Survey. I believe that in one single thing in the measurement of electric arc street lights by means of a uniform standard, and thus enabling municipalities to know that they are getting the candle power in their arc lights which they are paying for—in this respect alone the establishment which this bill proposes to create will more than pay the people of this country the entire cost of maintaining the bureau. I sincerely hope that there will be in this House, as there was in the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, a unanimous vote in favor of this proposition.

I do not believe in extravagance. I have voted almost steadily at this and former sessions of Congress against the establishment of new bureaus. But I shall vote for this with pleasure. I hope, however, that the chairman of the committee will accept the suggestion that the appropriation now made be limited to $100,000 instead of $250,000 as proposed in the original bill. Let us establish the bureau, and then let it depend upon its own merits for any further development or enlargement in the future.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to delay the House by occupying even the two minutes which the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] has kindly yielded me. I regard this as one of the most important measures——

Mr. KNOX. Will not the gentleman occupy a part of his two minutes in explaining how this measure will affect the standardizing systems of the various States? Will it supersede them?

Mr. SOUTHARD. It has nothing to do with those. The bill provides that this bureau shall do its work free for the Government and for the different States, while it is to make a charge for such work as it may do for private individuals or corporations.

Mr. KNOX. Then this bureau will not supersede the similar establishments in the States.

Mr. SOUTHARD. It does not propose to supersede or interfere with anything. It does not determine the standards. It simply provides an institution where the standards can be tested.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, this measure has been called for by all classes of American citizens, including those manufacturing fine machinery, scientific apparatus, electrical appliances, etc. It has been called for by colleges and by railroads, by cities and States.

As there appears to be no division of sentiment in regard to the adoption of the bill, the only question is as to the expense which ought now to be incurred in the establishment of this bureau. The bill calls for an appropriation of $250,000. I agree with my colleague [Mr. CANNON] that it would be best to amend the bill and make the appropriation $100,000. Let the future take care of the question as to whether we shall increase the expenditures upon this bureau.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. Five minutes.

Mr. OTJEN. Is it not true that this bill provides a system of fees which will largely pay the expense of running the bureau?

Mr. SOUTHARD. It will be largely self-supporting. Last September Prof. Henry S. Pritchett, of Ann Arbor University, read a paper before the American Institute of Electrical Engineers in New York City, portions of which I shall take the liberty of including in my remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I now ask unanimous consent that the bill may be amended in accordance with the suggestions of the gentleman from Illinois, striking out $250,000 as the amount of the appropriation and substituting $100,000.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that the amendment which he has just indicated be incorporated in the bill. Is there objection?

Mr. GILBERT. I object.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on suspending the rules and passing the bill, with the amendment.

The question was taken; and, in the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the bill was passed.

GOVERNMENT OF ALASKA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following Senate bill, with House amendment disagreed to by the Senate.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5573) to amend section 203 of Title III of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes."

The amendment of the House was read.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House still insist on its amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair announces as managers on the part of the House Mr. WARNER, Mr. GIBSON, and Mr. LLOYD.

CHARGES AGAINST ROBERT W. WILCOX.

Mr. TAYLER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged report. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the report be dispensed with. The Committee on Elections No. 1 merely presents it to the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the report. There is no action to be taken. The report will be read by its title.

The Clerk read as follows:

In the case of the charges against ROBERT W. WILCOX, a Delegate from Hawaii.

The SPEAKER. This will be printed and referred to the House Calendar.

GEORGE M. DAVIDSON AGAINST G. G. GILBERT.

Mr. TAYLER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I present another privileged report in the contested-election case of George M. Davidson against G. G. Gilbert.

The Clerk read as follows:

Contested-election case of George M. Davidson against G. G. Gilbert.

The SPEAKER. This report will be printed and referred to the House Calendar.

E. D. SCOTT.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 12005) to correct the military record of the late E. D. Scott.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to correct the military record of E. D. Scott, late first lieutenant of Company E, Fourth Regiment Kentucky Volunteers, in the war with Spain, by erasing from the records any words which reflect in any way upon the military service and character of E. D. Scott, and that such officer be granted an honorable discharge as first lieutenant of said company and regiment, to date February 11, 1899.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I think there ought to be some explanation.

Mr. HAY. I will ask the Clerk to read the report.

The SPEAKER. The report is a very lengthy one.

Mr. BOREING. I suggest that the reading of the report be dispensed with.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Perhaps the gentleman will make a statement.

Mr. HAY. I will make a statement. I will read the report. It appears that when Lieutenant Scott was discharged from the Army that his colonel placed upon his record these words: "Service not honest or faithful, and character bad." Now the committee report that these words placed by his colonel on Lieutenant Scott's record were not justified according to the evidence, and that these words should be erased from the discharge of Lieutenant Scott. This does not carry any pension——

Mr. PAYNE. I have no objecton, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Speaker, I dislike to object; but this is not just to Colonel Colson.

Mr. HAY. There is nothing in the report reflecting on Colonel Colson in any way whatever.

Mr. WHEELER. I would like to inquire if Colonel Colson has been heard?

Mr. HAY. I have not heard from him. The bill was introduced by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BOREING], was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and was referred to me to draw the report. There is no purpose in it except to gratify the feelings of the father, who himself is about to die. I do not see how it can reflect upon Colonel Colson, and there is no disposition or purpose to reflect upon him.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Speaker, I would like the Chair to allow me to speak to my colleague. [After a pause.] Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

JOHN C. WECKLER.

Mr. BOUTELL of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the following bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 1452) to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to John C. Weckler.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to remove the charge of desertion from the record of John C. Weckler, who enlisted as John C. Brown, late private in Company C, Thirteenth United States Infantry, and to grant him an honorable discharge from said service.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

Add after the word "service," at the end of line 7, the following: "as of date June 21, 1865: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I object.

Subsequently

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Mr. Speaker, under a misapprehension a moment ago I made objection to the bill H. R. 1452. I desire to withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman withdraws his objection. Is there further objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BOUTELL of Illinois, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

H. R. 13947. An act increasing the limit of cost of certain public buildings, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Senate concurrent resolution 115.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 30,000 copies of the hearings, including the majority report and views of the minority thereon, before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and the House Committee on Agriculture, together with the briefs submitted relating to House bill No. 3717, 20,000 copies of which shall be for the use of the House of Representatives and 10,000 copies for the use of the Senate. The usual number shall not be printed.

KATE KING.

Mr. BULL. Mr. Speaker, I call up privileged resolutions from the Committee on Accounts.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives is hereby directed to pay, out of the contingent fund, to Kate King, widow of Mark King, late an employee of the House, a sum equal to six months of his salary, and funeral expenses not to exceed $250.

The resolution was agreed to.

J. R. WHITACRE.

Mr. BULL. Also the following.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution No. 353.

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives is hereby authorized to pay to the widow of J. R. Whitacre, late a messenger on the soldiers' roll of the House of Representatives, a sum equal to six months' salary, and funeral expenses not to exceed $250, the same to be immediately available.

The resolution was agreed to.

VIRGINIA P. WISE.

Mr. BULL. Also the following.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay, out of the contingent fund of the House, to Virginia P. Wise the sum of $67.75, being the amount due her as clerk to the late Representative Richard A. Wise from December 1 to December 21, 1900.

The resolution was agreed to.

FANNIE A. CLARKE.

Mr. BULL. Also the following.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay, out of the contingent fund of the House, to Fannie A. Clarke the sum of $32.25, being the amount due her as clerk to the late Representative Frank G. Clarke from January 1, 1901, to January 10, 1901, inclusive.

The resolution was agreed to.

RICHARD H. TOWNLEY.

Mr. RIXEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4687) for the relief of Richard H. Townley, a lieutenant (junior grade) on the retired list of the United States Navy.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas Lieut. Richard H. Townley, United States Navy, after seventeen years of active service, was placed upon the retired list of the Navy by reason of disability incurred through arduous service and excessive and prolonged exposure in the line of duty; and

Whereas the said Richard H. Townley has entirely recovered from the said disability which caused his retirement, and is able to perform active duty; and

Whereas the said Richard H. Townley volunteered for active duty, and served continuously and creditably during the war with Spain; and

Whereas several other officers who have been retired have been restored to and are now on the active list: Therefore, that justice may be done the said Richard H. Townley, and that the Navy Department may be enabled to command his services for all and any duty to which he may be assigned,

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and hereby is, authorized to appoint Richard H. Townley, now a lieutenant (junior grade) on the retired list of the Navy of the United States, to the grade and rank of lieutenant-commander on the active list, as of the date March 3, 1899, and next after his classmate, Moses L. Wood; and the provisions of law regulating appointments in the Navy by promotion and limiting the number of lieutenant-commanders on the active list are hereby suspended for the purposes of this act: Provided, That the said Richard H. Townley shall establish to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Navy, by examination pursuant to law, his physical, mental, moral, and professional fitness to perform the duties of that grade: And provided further, That he shall be additional to the number of officers prescribed by law for the grade of lieutenant-commander, and in any grade to which he may hereafter be advanced.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out line 4 after the word "rank."
Strike out lines 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9 to and including the word "act."
Insert in lieu thereof, after the word "rank," in line 4, "of lieutenant (junior grade) on the foot of the active list."
Strike out, in line 13, the word "and."
Strike out lines 14, 15, 16, and 17.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. HOPKINS. Reserving the right to object, I would like to hear a little explanation of this bill.

Mr. RIXEY. Mr. Speaker, I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that this lieutenant is not a resident of my district.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I can not hear what the gentleman says.

Mr. RIXEY. I am not responsible for that.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. Speaker, let me say to the gentleman that this is exactly opposite to retiring a man. It is where a man has been retired and wants to return to the service.

Mr. HOPKINS. I do not withdraw my objection. I want to know something about it.

Mr. DAYTON. This man was retired; he is on the retired list, and was retired because of disability. He has recovered from the disability incurred during the service, is now a well man, and it is proposed to restore him to the rank right where he left off—not in advance, but right where he left off. The Navy is needing just such officers. He is a brave, manly fellow; he is now in the Philippines in the service, and he wants to get back into the service.

Mr. HOPKINS. Does it advance him over other officers?

Mr. DAYTON. Not at all. It puts him at the foot of the grade that he was in when he had to be retired.

Mr. HOPKINS. I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there further objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and, being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. RIXEY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

Mr. HEATWOLE. Mr. Speaker, I present for consideration the following.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate concurrent resolution 72.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 3,000 copies of the Special Expert Reports as prepared under the direction of the committee of awards of the Columbian Exposition, held in Chicago in 1893, of which 1,000 shall be for the use of the Senate and 2,000 for the use of the House of Representatives.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

Strike out all after the resolving clause and insert in lieu thereof:

"That there be printed 3,500 copies of so much of the report of the committee on awards of the World's Columbian Commission as is contained in the special reports upon special subjects or groups as were prepared by expert judges authorized to act by the World's Columbian Commission, its executive committee on awards, the committee on final report, or the board of reference and control, of which 1,000 shall be for the use of the Senate, 2,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 500 for distribution by the Department of State."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendment was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution as amended was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HEATWOLE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the concurrent resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

SHIP BALCLUTHA.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 13530) to provide an American register for the steamship Manauense and the ships Antiope and Balclutha.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Navigation be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the foreign-built steamship Manauense and the foreign-built ships Antiope and Balclutha, owned by citizens of the United States, to be registered as vessels of the United States.

With the following amendments, recommended by the committee:

In line 5, before the word "Balclutha," insert the word "ship."
In line 7 strike out the word "vessels" and insert "vessel."
Strike out the words "steamship Manauense and the foreign-built ships Antiope and."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to hear some explanation from the gentleman.

Mr. GROSVENOR. At the time of the annexation of Hawaii there were certain merchant vessels bearing the flag and register of Hawaii. By act of Congress about a year ago in the long session we adopted an American register for all of these vessels excepting this one. The provision originally of this bill was to admit three, but on an investigation there appeared to be some question about the origin of two of them, and the committee reported only in favor of the one that is now submitted.

That one belonged regularly to Hawaiian citizens and was registered under the Hawaiian flag, and was in all respects upon all fours with those admitted heretofore. I will say to the House that it is the last one of the merchant marine of Hawaii that is not already registered under the American flag.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Who are the present owners?

Mr. GROSVENOR. J. J. Moore, an American citizen.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And it belonged to a Hawaiian citizen at the time of annexation?

Mr. GROSVENOR. At the time Hawaii came into our country, and it would have been included in the former bill had we known of the exact conditions existing at that time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendments were considered and agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. GROSVENOR, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

LOAN OF NAVAL EQUIPMENT TO MILITARY SCHOOL.

Mr. ZENOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 3003) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to loan naval equipment to certain military schools.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized, upon the application of the governor of any State having seacoast line or bordering on one or more of the Great Lakes, to direct the Secretary of the Navy to furnish to one well-established military school in that State, desiring to afford its cadets instruction in elementary seamanship, one fully equipped man-of-war's cutter for every 20 cadets in actual attendance, and such other equipment as may be spared and be deemed adequate for instruction in elementary seamanship: Provided, That the said school shall have adequate facilities for cutter drill, and shall have in actual attendance at least 140 cadets in uniform receiving military instruction and quartered in barracks under military regulation, and shall have the capacity to quarter and educate at the same time 150 cadets: And provided further, That the Secretary of the Navy shall require a bond in each case in double the value of the property, for the care and safe-keeping thereof, and for the return of the same when required.

Mr. ZENOR. Mr. Speaker, I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 9 strike out the word "twenty" and insert "fifty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. ZENOR, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

IMMEDIATE TRANSPORTATION PRIVILEGES, EVERETT, WASH.

Mr. CUSHMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4509) extending to the city of Everett, Wash., a subport of entry, the privileges of the act approved June 10, 1880, governing the immediate transportation of dutiable merchandise.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the privileges of the act approved June 10, 1880, governing the immediate transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement, be, and the same are hereby, extended to Everett, a subport of entry in the customs collection district of Puget Sound.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I would like to hear from the gentleman what committee reported this bill.

The SPEAKER. The Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I understand the bill has been reported favorably by the Ways and Means Committee:

Mr. CUSHMAN. Yes; and passed the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CUSHMAN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 11881. An act to amend the acts for the protection of birds, game, and fish in the District of Columbia;

H. R. 13067. An act to enlarge the powers of the courts of the District of Columbia in cases involving delinquent taxes;

H. R. 12904. An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 8068. An act authorizing the board of supervisors of Pima County, Ariz., to issue fifty-year 4 per cent bonds of Pima County, Ariz., to redeem certain bonded indebtedness of said county.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 437. An act for the relief of Isaac McConnaughay, private, Company H, Fortieth Iowa Infantry Volunteers;

S. 5698. An act to extend the time for the completion of a bridge across the Missouri River;

S. R. 158. Joint resolution ratifying agreement between Tennessee and Virginia with reference to the boundary line of said States; and

S. R. 115. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to cause bronze medals to be struck and distributed to certain officers and men who participated in the war with Spain, and for other purposes.

COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following request:

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. BROSIUS requests that the Committee on Banking and Currency be authorized to be have printed and bound such matter for the use of said committee as it may deem necessary in connection with the subject considered or to be considered by said committee.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, this request will be granted.

There was no objection.

RECESS.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I am informed that the deficiency appropriation bill will not be here from the Senate before 10 o'clock this evening, and it is necessary to get it into conference to-night. I therefore move that the House take a recess until 9.30.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 5 minutes), the House was in recess until 9.30 this evening.

At 9.30 o'clock p. m. the House resumed its session.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the Journal of the proceedings from the last approval up to date.

The Clerk thereupon read the Journal.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Journal will stand approved as far as read.

There was no objection.

J. W. PEGLOW.

Mr. VREELAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 14269) concerning a lease between J. W. Peglow and the Seneca Nation of New York Indians.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the agreement of lease dated October 11, 1900, entered into between the Seneca Nation of Indians, in council assembled, and J. W. Peglow, of Silver Creek, N. Y., on October 11, 1900, granting to said Peglow the right of excavating and removing sand from the premises described in said agreement, be, and the same is hereby, ratified and confirmed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I would be glad to have some explanation, reserving the right to object.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will be glad to explain it. It came from the Committee on Indian Affairs. They have considered that carefully. It is simply a proposition to confirm a lease made by the Seneca Nation of Indians in open council and for a piece of property owned by the tribe and not by any individual Indian.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Has the Commissioner of Indian Affairs recommended the passage of this bill?

Mr. SHERMAN. He has not recommended it, because he has not been asked to. It was sent to the Secretary of the Interior, and the only reason it was not confirmed there was because of the opinion of the Attorney-General that they had no right under the law to confirm the lease. Otherwise it would have been confirmed by the Department and Congress would not have been asked to act in the matter. It was a unanimous report from the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that a lease of this kind ought at least to have been submitted to the Department or the Indian Bureau and been acted on by them.

Mr. SHERMAN. It was submitted to the Department, though not by the committee; but it was not approved by the Department, because, as I have stated, the Attorney-General held that the Department had no right under existing law to approve the lease.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Has the gentleman personally examined the lease?

Mr. SHERMAN. I have.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. And the gentleman thinks it fair to the Indians?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Was this lease before the Committee on Indian Affairs?

Mr. SHERMAN. It was—the original lease.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. And the committee has unanimously recommended this bill?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

There was no objection; and the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. VREELAND, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS NEHALEM BAY AND RIVER, OREGON.

Mr. MOODY of Oregon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 14163) to authorize the Portland, Nehalem and Tillamook Railway Company to construct a bridge across Nehalem Bay and River, in the State of Oregon.

The bill, with the amendment reported by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, was read.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. MOODY of Oregon, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

SUBPORTS OF ENTRY AND DELIVERY IN HAWAII.

Mr. KNOX. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk for immediate consideration the bill (S. 5484) to provide for subports of entry and delivery in the Territory of Hawaii.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That such places in the customs district of the Territory of Hawaii as the Secretary of the Treasury may from time to time designate shall be subports of entry and delivery, and customs officers shall be stationed at such subports with authority to enter and clear vessels, receive duties, fees, and other moneys, and perform such other services and receive such compensation as in the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury the exigencies of commerce may require.

The SPEAKER. Is there any objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, a House bill substantially like this bill of the Senate was referred for some reason or another to the Committee on Territories. The Committee of Ways and Means considered the subject, and I was authorized and directed at a meeting a week or two ago to take steps to get the bill into the hands of the Committee of Ways and Means.

But the bill was overlooked until the last meeting of the committee. I have no doubt in my own mind that this Senate bill ought to pass. I believe that if it were considered by the Committee of Ways and Means they would recommend it. I therefore make no objection to the bill.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. KNOX, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, House bill No. 13372, similar in its provisions to the Senate bill just passed, will be laid on the table.

There was no objection.

NATIONAL BANKS.

Mr. LANE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and put upon its passage the bill (H. R. 10454) to amend section 1 of an act entitled "An act to amend sections 5191 and 5192 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and for other purposes."

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of an act entitled "An act to amend sections 5191 and 5192 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1887, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"That whenever three-fourths in number of the national banks located in any city of the United States having a population of 25,000 people shall make application to the Comptroller of the Currency, in writing, asking that the name of the city in which such banks are located shall be added to the cities named in sections 5191 and 5192 of the Revised Statutes, the Comptroller, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall have authority to grant such request, and every bank located in such city so designated shall at all times thereafter have on hand, in lawful money of the United States, an amount equal to at least 25 per cent of its deposits, as provided in sections 5191 and 5195 of the Revised Statutes: Provided, That no bank with a capital of less than $100,000 shall be thus designated."

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I demand a second on the motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. LANE. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Pending that, I desire to ask a question, after which I may not object to this request.

Owing to the confusion in the Hall during the reading of the bill, I do not feel certain as to its provisions. Is it a bill to reduce the lawful reserve of these banks?

Mr. LANE. It proposes to amend the present requirement as to population, substituting 25,000 for 50,000, and also to reduce the requirement as to capital from $200,000 to $100,000 in reserve cities.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. It does not touch the amount of the reserve which the banks will be required to carry?

Mr. LANE. Not at all. The requirement in that respect will be the same as now—25 per cent. It simply reduces by 50 per cent the population and the capital required.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. If that is all there is in the bill, I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection, the motion to suspend the rules is seconded. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LANE] for twenty minutes. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to suspend the rules——

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I must have some further explanation of the bill before the vote is taken.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Iowa desire to be heard?

Mr. LANE. If the gentleman wishes an explanation, I am willing to make one.

The present law requires that the capital of these banks shall be at least $200,000 and the population of the cities in which they are located not less than 50,000. The result of this is that at present, under the existing law, there are in the United States, outside of the 3 special reserve cities, only 28 reserve cities.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. The effect of the bill, as I understand, would be to increase the number of reserve cities, and thus more evenly distribute the bank reserve throughout the country.

Mr. LANE. That is the object of the bill, and that will be its effect.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. That being so, I have no objection to an immediate vote.

The question being taken, the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill was agreed to, two-thirds voting in favor thereof.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

H. R. 14236. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

KNOXVILLE POWER COMPANY.

Mr. GIBSON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4956) to grant the Knoxville Power Company the right to dam the Tennessee River at or near Knoxville, Tenn.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read.

Mr. GIBSON. The bill has already been twice read in extenso in the hearing of the House. I ask that the reading now be dispensed with.

Mr. PAYNE. I think the bill ought to be read at the present time.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Knoxville Power Company, of Knoxville, Tenn., be, and is hereby, authorized to construct a lock and dam across the Tennessee River at or near Knoxville, for the purpose of furnishing power for lighting, manufacturing, and other purposes: Provided, That the maximum charges for light, power, and other purposes, provided by the said Knoxville Power Company, shall be at all times subject to the regulation and control of the Secretary of War; but the Secretary of War shall not increase the rates fixed by the city of Knoxville.

SEC. 2. That said company, in the construction and operation of said lock and dam, shall conform to all the conditions and requirements that may be made by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 3. That before beginning the work the Knoxville Power Company shall file with the Secretary of War the plans, drawings, specifications, etc., to be used in connection with the construction of said lock and dam, and shall have his approval thereof, and until such approval is given the structure shall not be commenced.

SEC. 4. That the work of construction of said lock and dam shall be carried on in such a manner as not to unnecessarily interrupt or impede navigation while it is in progress; and when constructed the lock and dam shall be operated free of cost and charge to all vessels passing through the same, and at the cost and expense of the said Knoxville Power Company: Provided, That the works shall be so constructed and operated as not to interfere in any way with the regular flow of water in the river, and any ponding up or storing the water during certain periods so as to use it more rapidly during other periods is hereby prohibited: Provided further, That the said company shall be responsible for any damage or injury inflicted upon navigation interests by said works or by reason of the failure of the said company to comply with any conditions or requirements made by the Secretary of War in respect thereto, and the said company shall also be responsible for any damage to private property resulting from overflow, and any litigation arising from any of these causes may be tried in the courts of the United States for the district in which the said works are situated: Provided further, That should the works at any time and for any cause whatever become an unreasonable obstruction to navigation, the Secretary of War shall have authority to direct and compel the Knoxville Power Company to make such changes as may be necessary to obviate such obstruction at the expense of the said Knoxville Power Company.

SEC. 5. That this act shall be null and void if actual construction of the works be not commenced within two years and completed within five years from the date hereof.

SEC. 6. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. GIBSON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

TIMBER-CULTURE LAWS.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 2866.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2866) to extend the provisions of section 8 of the act entitled "An act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, concerning prosecutions for cutting timber on public lands, to California, Oregon, and Washington.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 8 of the act entitled "An act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, as amended by an act approved March 3, 1891, chapter 559, page 1093, volume 26, United States Statutes at Large, be, and the same is hereby, amended as follows: After the word "Nevada," in said amended act, insert the words "California, Oregon, and Washington."

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman for a brief explanation in regard to this bill.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. Speaker, under the act of 1878 the citizens of the States of Colorado, Montana, Idaho, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming, and the district of Alaska and the gold and silver regions of Nevada and the Territory of Utah were given the right to cut timber for mining, agricultural, and domestic purposes under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior might make; and under those regulations also, and under this act, it was provided that in all other mining districts they could do the same thing.

The Secretary of the Interior has held that these terms, general in their nature, do not apply to California, Oregon, and Washington. This bill only proposes to extend the same privilege to the States of California, Oregon, and Washington as are given to other mining States. There can be no question that they are mining States; and the only object, as I say, is to extend the same privilege to the citizens of those States.

Mr. SULZER. Well, I understand that this bill will permit the cutting of timber upon Government reservations.

Mr. JONES of Washington. It allows the cutting of timber on mining lands for domestic and mining purposes. For instance, a man is mining a claim and has not sufficient timber on that land, and he can go into another mining district and take enough for domestic purposes, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe. If he does that under the law as it now is in those States, he would be liable to punishment.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. JONES of Washington, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF LABOR.

Mr. HEATWOLE. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Printing to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate concurrent resolution No. 52.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate concurrent resolution 52.

Resolved, That there be printed and bound in cloth 8,000 copies of the report of the Commissioner of Labor on hand and machine labor, known as his thirteenth annual report, of which 5,000 shall be for the use of the Department of Labor, 1,000 for the use of the Senate, and 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HEATWOLE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the concurrent resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

MEMORIAL VOLUME TO THE LATE HON. JOHN SHERMAN.

Mr. KERR of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House joint resolution 314.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 314) to receive and deposit in the Library of Congress a memorial volume to the memory of the late Hon. John Sherman.

Resolved, etc., That the Librarian of the Library of Congress be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to receive and deposit in the Library of Congress a memorial volume to the memory of the late Hon. John Sherman; the said volume to be prepared by the executors of the will of decedent, and the same to be done without expense to the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I was about to ask the gentleman a question. Is this a usual course? Has this ever been done before?

Mr. KERR of Ohio. I never knew it to be done. It could have been.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I dislike to appear ungracious; but I think we had better not establish this precedent, and I shall object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Mississippi object?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

WILLIAM H. HUGO.

Mr. PEREA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 792.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 792) for the relief of William H. Hugo.

Be it enacted, etc., That the laws regulating appointments in the Army of the United States be, and they are hereby, suspended for the purpose of this bill, and that in view of his services to his country the President is hereby authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint William H. Hugo, now of Fort Bayard, N. Mex., a first lieutenant of cavalry in the Army of the United States, and thereupon to place him on the retired list of the Army, with the pay and emoluments of a retired officer, with the rank of a first lieutenant, without regard and in addition to the retired list now authorized by law.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I think it will save time. I object to the bill. This is similar to other bills that have been objected to.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

JAMESTOWN AND NORTHERN RAILROAD.

Mr. SPALDING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 11900) granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railway through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a right of way through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota, not exceeding 200 feet in width, with grounds for station and depot purposes, according to the map and plat thereof, respectively, now on file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, be, and is hereby, granted to the Jamestown and Northern Railway Company, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the then Territory and now State of North Dakota, upon the terms and conditions mentioned and set forth in a certain proposition in writing, dated July 28, 1883, made and submitted to the United States Indian agent at Devils Lake Agency by F. R. Delano on behalf of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, as the same is modified by a memorandum of consent in writing thereto appended, signed by the majority of the chiefs and headmen of the Indians occupying the Devils Lake Reservation, now on file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior; which said terms and conditions, so modified, have been accepted by the said Jamestown and Northern Railway Company, by a resolution of the board of directors of said company adopted October 5, 1883, a certified copy whereof is also on file in the said office: Provided, That the amount of compensation hereby agreed to be paid to said Indians shall be deposited by the said Jamestown and Northern Railway Company in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Sisseton, Wahpeton, and Cut-head Sioux Indians, occupying the Devils Lake Reservation, within sixty days after the passage of this act, to be expended for the benefit of said Indians in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior may direct: Provided further, That whenever said right of way and station and depot grounds shall cease to be used for railroad purposes the same shall revert to the United States; and that the right to repeal, alter, or amend this act is reserved to Congress.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Reserving the right to object, I want some explanation of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Dakota is asked to give an explanation of his bill.

Mr. SPALDING. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill which is desired to pass by the Indians that are affected, by the railroad company, and by the Department of the Interior.

This is a bill which provides for the payment by the Northern Pacific Railway Company to these Indians for the right of way which has been occupied by the railroad company through the Indian reservation since 1883, and by reason of the failure of this bill to pass this body, where it has been constantly since that time, although twice passed by the Senate, the Indians have been deprived of their pay for the right of way through the reservation in accordance with the agreement made in writing between the Department and this railroad company in 1883.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Will the gentleman tell us why the railroad has not the right to make that payment without coming to Congress?

Mr. SPALDING. Because of the treaty made between the United States and these Indians in 1867, and because the general law passed since that date on the subject is not applicable to this particular location.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. How is the value of this right of way to be ascertained under this bill?

Mr. SPALDING. The value has already been agreed upon by the Indians and the railroad company at $10 an acre, which, in my judgment, having full knowledge of the location of the road and the character and value of the land of that vicinity, is more than the land is worth.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Does the Secretary of the Interior recommend them to sell for $10 an acre?

Mr. SPALDING. He does earnestly recommend the passage of this bill; and it has been the subject of a message of the President of the United States to Congress recommending its passage.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Has the bill been considered by the Committee on Indian Affairs?

Mr. SPALDING. It is unanimously reported favorably.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. If the value of the land has been agreed upon between the parties—that is, the Indians and the railroad company—and the Secretary of the Interior approves the bargain, is there no authority to make it without coming to Congress?

Mr. SPALDING. This is the judgment of the Indian Department and the Interior Department.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I do not want to make any objection, if it is necessary to pass the bill; but I ask the gentlemen would it not be wiser legislation, instead of asking Congress to authorize this bargain, to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to make the bargain, if he deems it a proper one for the Indians?

Mr. SPALDING. The bargain, I will say to the gentleman, has already been made and approved by the Indian Department; and all that is lacking to enable them to get the price of the land is the passage of this bill. The money has been held for them since 1883, and caused great dissatisfaction on the part of the Indians because they have not had it before now.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Is this a Senate bill?

Mr. SPALDING. It is not.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Instead of this appeal for Congress to close this deal or contract, I think it certainly would be better legislation for Congress to enact a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior, if in his judgment it is proper, to make this contract, and give him authority to do so. I think the gentleman ought to accept an amendment to that effect.

Mr. SPALDING. I will say that several Secretaries of the Interior have already given their judgment in writing to this effect, and have recommended the passage of this bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Is that letter on file here?

Mr. SPALDING. I have an executive document which contains several letters from that Department.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I understand the gentleman to say that an executive document contains a letter from the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. SPALDING. It does; and the Indian Committee of this House have a letter, and also the Indian Committee of the Senate.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Will not the gentleman publish as a part of his remarks the letter from the Secretary of the Interior recommending this bargain?

Mr. SPALDING. I will be very glad to do so. The letters are as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, June 5, 1900.

SIR: In response to your letter of the 31st ultimo, with which you forwarded H. R. 10228 and H. R. 11900 for report, I have the honor to state in reference to the latter, being "A bill granting right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railway through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota," that the Department, on April 20 last, recommended favorable legislation on S. 3145, a bill similar in its purposes, and renews, in behalf of the above-named H. R. 11900, the recommendation then made for the passage of the said Senate bill.

I transmit for your information copies of letters from the Indian Office, dated April 18 and the 4th instant, on the said Senate and House bills, which meet with my approval.

Separate report of even date has been made on H. R. 10228, herein referred to.

Very respectfully, E. A. HITCHCOCK, Secretary.

Hon. JAMES S. SHERMAN, Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs, House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS, Washington, June 4, 1900.

SIR: The office acknowledges receipt, by Department reference of the 1st instant, for immediate report, of a communication from Hon. JAMES S. SHERMAN, chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, House of Representatives, submitting for the report of this Department H. R. 10228 and H. R. 11900, "A bill granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railway through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota." Mr. SHERMAN requests a report upon said bill by this Department.

Separate report has been made upon said H. R. 10228.

Reporting upon said H. R. 11900, the office has the honor to state that on April 18, 1900, it made report to the Department upon Senate bill 3145, bearing the same title as said H. R. 11900. By comparison it is found that the two bills are identical. The office therefore incloses a copy of its said report of April 18, 1900, on Senate bill 3145, as its report upon the bill in question.

Mr. SHERMAN'S letter and the bill are returned herewith. A copy of this report is also inclosed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. C. TONNER,
Acting Commissioner.

The SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, April 18, 1900.

SIR: The office acknowledges receipt, by Department reference of the 9th instant for consideration and report, of a communication from Hon. JOHN M. THURSTON, chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, submitting Senate bill 3145, "A bill granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railway through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota." Senator THURSTON requests a report upon said bill for the information of his committee.

The bill provides:

Be it enacted, etc., That a right of way through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota, not exceeding 200 feet in width, with grounds for station and depot purposes, according to the map and plat thereof, respectively, now on file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, be, and is hereby, granted to the Jamestown and Northern Railway Company, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the then Territory and now State of North Dakota, upon the terms and conditions mentioned and set forth in a certain proposition in writing, dated July 28, 1883, made and submitted to the United States Indian agent at Devils Lake Agency, by F. R. Delano, on behalf of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, as the same is modified by a memorandum of consent in writing, thereto appended, signed by the majority of the chiefs and headmen of the Indians occupying the Devils Lake Reservation, now on file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, which said terms and conditions, so modified, have been accepted by the said Jamestown and Northern Railway Company by a resolution of the board of directors of said company, adopted October 5, 1883, a certified copy whereof is also on file in the said office: Provided, That the amount of compensation hereby agreed to be paid to said Indians shall be deposited by the said Jamestown and Northern Railway Company in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Sisseton, Wahpeton, and Cuthead Sioux Indians occupying the Devils Lake Reservation within sixty days after the passage of this act, to be expended for the benefit of said Indians in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior may direct: Provided further, That whenever said right of way and station and depot grounds shall cease to be used for railroad purposes, the same shall revert to the United States, and that the right to repeal, alter, or amend this act is reserved to Congress.

In reporting upon the matter, the office has the honor to state that a full history of this case will be found in office report to the Department dated December 11, 1884, printed with accompanying papers containing the negotiations with the Indians in House Ex. Doc. No. 31, Forty-eighth Congress, second session, to which your attention is respectfully invited. A further report was made to the Department under date of December 12, 1885, also printed with accompanying papers in Senate Ex. Doc. No. 16, Forty-ninth Congress, first session, to which your attention is also respectfully invited.

Under date of September 4, 1890, in reporting on Senate bill No. 1810, Fifty-first Congress, first session, this office made a further report to the Department on this same subject-matter, to which your attention is also respectfully invited. Said executive documents and the above-mentioned communication present a full history of this case. For your further information in the premises there is transmitted herewith a copy of said office letter of September 4, 1890.

A further report concerning the construction of said railroad through the Devils Lake Reservation was made to the Department on Senate bill No. 175, under date of October 30, 1893. Said report, however, contains no information not found in the said executive documents and the report of this office of September 4, 1890, above referred to.

As will be seen from the correspondence above cited, a number of different bills have been introduced in Congress granting the Jamestown and Northern Railway Company a right of way through the Devils Lake Reservation without definite action having been reached upon any of them. In addition to the bills above referred to, Senate bill No. 839 and House bill No. 316 (substantially identical with previous bills) were introduced during the first session of the Fifty-second Congress, without final action being reached thereon, so far as this office is advised.

The bill submitted by Senator THURSTON for report is substantially identical with the draft of the bill prepared by this office and submitted with said office report of December 11, 1884, and this office has repeatedly urged the importance of securing the legislation proposed thereby. The railroad has been constructed through the reservation and in operation since the spring of 1885, and the Indians are greatly dissatisfied because they have not been paid for right of way of the road through their lands, and they have repeatedly called upon this office for an explanation as to why the amount agreed upon between them and the company has so long been withheld from them.

The "proposition in writing" between the Indians and the railroad company referred to in the bill will be found printed in said House Ex. Doc. No. 31, Forty-eighth Congress, second session. The object and purpose of the bill is merely to ratify or confirm said agreement or "proposition in writing" and to fix a basis for settlement by the company with the Indians.

As heretofore, this office now expresses an earnest desire that the present bill speedily be enacted into law. The bill and Senator THURSTON'S communication are returned herewith; a copy of this report is also inclosed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. C. TONNER,
Acting Commissioner.

The SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SPALDING, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 12665. An act supplementary to an act entitled "An act to prohibit the coming of Chinese persons into the United States," approved May 5, 1892, and fixing the compensation of commissioners in such case;

H. R. 13947. An act increasing the limit of cost of certain public buildings, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 11598. An act for the relief of Frank B. Case.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 3283. An act for the relief of Isaac R. Dunkelberger;

S. 4171. An act to amend an act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine-Hospital Service, approved February 15, 1893;

S. 5331. An act to provide an American register for the barkentine J. C. Pfluger, of San Francisco, Cal.; and

S. 2936. An act authorizing the appointment of James A. Hutton to a captaincy of infantry in the United States Army.

GENERAL DEFICIENCY BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the general deficiency bill.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House nonconcur in all the Senate amendments to the deficiency appropriation bill and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, asks unanimous consent that the House nonconcur in all the Senate amendments to the general deficiency bill and ask for conference. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The SPEAKER appointed as managers on the part of the House Mr. CANNON, Mr. BARNEY, and Mr. LIVINGSTON.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT FOR ALASKA.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the bill (S. 5573) to amend section 203 of Title III of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes."

The conference report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 5573) to amend section 203 of Title III of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for the civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House and agree to the same.

V. WARNER,
HENRY R. GIBSON,
JAMES T. LLOYD,
Managers on the part of the House.

THOMAS H. CARTER,
WILLIAM B. BATE,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

Statement of the House conferees on S. 5573, a bill to amend section 203 of Title III of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes."

The House amended the Senate bill by striking out the word "licensed," in line 10, on page 2, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "license," and by inserting, immediately after the word "chapter," in line 9 of page 2, the following:

"Fifty per cent of all license moneys provided for by said act of Congress approved March 3, 1899, and any amendments made thereto, that may hereafter be paid for business carried on outside incorporated towns in the district of Alaska, and covered into the Treasury of the United States, shall be set aside to be expended, so far as may be deemed necessary, by the Secretary of the Interior, within his discretion and under his direction, for school purposes outside incorporated towns in said district of Alaska."

The Senate disagreed to the two amendments and asked a conference, which was granted, and the committee of conference having met, after full and free conference agreed to recommend to their respective Houses that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House, and to agree to the same.

V. WARNER,
HENRY R. GIBSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. WARNER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PERSONAL REQUEST.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following personal request.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SOUTHARD asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in relation to the national bureau of standards bill in the RECORD—his remarks to be confined to said bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the request will be granted. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 33 minutes p. m.) the House was in recess until 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of the board of officers on claims for property taken for military purposes within the United States during the war with Spain—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

Also, resolutions of the National Board of Trade, recommending the reclamation and settlement of arid lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

SENATE.

[Continuation of proceedings of legislative day, Saturday, March 2, 1901.]

The Senate reassembled at the expiration of the recess, at 3 o'clock p. m., Sunday, March 3, 1901.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House has passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 2866) to extend the provisions of section 8 of the act entitled "An act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, concerning prosecutions for cutting timber on public lands, to California, Oregon, and Washington;

A bill (S. 4956) to grant the Knoxville Power Company the right to dam the Tennessee River at or near Knoxville, Tenn.; and

A bill (S. 5484) to provide for subports of entry and delivery in the Territory of Hawaii.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 5573) to amend section 202, of title 3, of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12291) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes; asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CANNON, Mr. BURTON, and Mr. LIVINGSTON managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 11900) granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railway through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota;

A bill (H. R. 14163) to authorize the Portland, Nehalem and Tillamook Railway Company to construct a bridge across Nehalem Bay and River, in the State of Oregon;

A bill (H. R. 14269) to confirm a lease between J. W. Peglow and the Seneca Nation of New York Indians;

A bill (H. R. 10454) to amend section 1 of an act entitled "An act to amend sections 5191 and 5192 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and for other purposes;" and

A bill (H. R. 11350) to establish the National Bureau of Standards.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate to print 8,000 extra copies of the report of the Commissioner of Labor on Hand and Machine Labor.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House has signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 12291) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

GENERAL DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments and agree to the conference asked for by the House.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. HALE, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. TELLER were appointed.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON submitted the following report.

The conference report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 7, 11, 25, 65, 74, 79, 80, 83, 86, 109, 120, 140, 141, 146, and 147.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, 12, 13, 15, 16, 18, 19, 21, 22, 23, 27, 29, 31, 32, 33, 34, 37, 38, 39, 40, 43, 44, 45, 46, 48, 50, 51, 52, 53, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 67, 68, 69, 75, 77, 78, 87, 90, 92, 100, 103, 104, 106, 107, 139, 142, 143, 144, 145, 148, and 153; and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "Tender for the Eighth light-house district: For constructing, equipping, and outfitting, complete for service, a new steam tender for buoyage, supply, and inspection in the Eighth light-house district, $125,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$200,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 47, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Add after the word "therein," at the end of the amended paragraph, the following: ", and hereafter no other fund appropriated shall be used for this service:" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 54, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed in said amendment insert "$25,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 63: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 63, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: ", to be immediately available;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 64: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "lines of reservations except forest reservations;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 66: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 66, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Before the word "and," in line 2 of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following: "not exceeding $6 per day;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 72: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$16,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 73: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 73, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$250,000," and on page 69 of the bill, in line 4, after the word "States," insert the following: "including examination of and report on the topography and geology of the territory adjacent to the forty-ninth parallel west of the one hundred and tenth meridian;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 76: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 76, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "Which report shall be published in one octavo volume, and as a distinct publication, the number of copies, printing of separate chapters, and mode of distribution of which shall be the same as of the annual report;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 85: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 85, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In line 2 of the matter inserted by said amendment, after the word "authorized," insert the following: "with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior;" and in line 3 of the matter inserted by said amendment strike out the word "of," where it first occurs, and insert in lieu thereof the words "not exceeding;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 136: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 136, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"That the commission authorized by the act entitled 'An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for other purposes,' approved June 4, 1897, to revise and codify the criminal and penal laws of the United States, is hereby directed to revise and codify, in accordance with the terms and provisions of said act and the acts supplementary thereto, all laws of the United States of a permanent and general nature in force at the time when the same shall be reported.

"That in performing this duty the said commission shall bring together all statutes and parts of statutes relating to the same subjects; shall omit redundant and obsolete enactments, and shall make such alterations as may be necessary to reconcile the contradictions, supply the omissions, and amend the imperfections of the original text; and may propose and embody in such revision changes in the substance of existing law; but all such changes shall be clearly set forth in an accompanying report, which shall briefly explain the reasons for the same.

That the said commission shall arrange such revision under titles, chapters, and sections, or other suitable divisions and subdivisions, with headnotes briefly expressive of the matter contained in such division, and with marginal notes so drawn as to point to the contents of the text, and with references to the original text from which each section is compiled, and to the decisions of the courts of the United States explaining or construing the same, and shall provide by an index for an easy reference to every portion of such revision.

That when the commission has completed such revision in accordance herewith it shall cause a copy of the same, in print, to be submitted to Congress, that the statutes so revised and codified may be reenacted if Congress shall so determine.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 137, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment, amended as follows: On page 120 of the bill, in line 10, before the word "within," insert the words "by direction of the Attorney-General;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 158, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In the last line of the matter inserted by said amendment, strike out the sum of "$15,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$7,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 6, 8, 17, 20, 26, 28, 30, 35, 36, 41, 42, 49, 62, 70, 71, 81, 82, 84, 88, 89, 91, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 101, 102, 105, 108, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 149, 150, 151, and 152 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

W. B. ALLISON,
EUGENE HALE,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. G. CANNON,
W. H. MOODY,
THOMAS C. McRAE,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. It was so difficult to hear the reading of the report, owing to the confusion in the Chamber, that I will venture to ask the chairman of the committee whether it is a final agreement or whether there are items still in disagreement.

Mr. ALLISON. It is not a final agreement. It is only a partial agreement. There are many items still in controversy.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What are the most important of the items in controversy?

Mr. ALLISON. There are a good many important items in controversy, I will say to the Senator. I can hardly distinguish as to their relative importance. The largest item is that relating to the public expositions. If the Senator has any particular matter in mind, I should be glad to inform him whether an agreement has been reached upon it.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I simply wanted to be informed of the progress that has been made.

Mr. ALLISON. The progress is not very great, I am sorry to say to the Senator, but we are making progress.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate still further insist upon its amendments in disagreement and ask for a further conference with the House of Representatives thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate at the further conference, and Mr. ALLISON, Mr. HALE, and Mr. COCKRELL were appointed.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

Mr. MORGAN. I am directed by the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 166) to complete the agreement entered into with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica in regard to future negotiations for the construction of an interoceanic canal by way of Lake Nicaragua, which was introduced yesterday by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. CLAY], to report it back without amendment, and with the recommendation that it pass. I ask that it may go upon the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be placed on the Calendar.

The Chair lays before the Senate——

Mr. PETTIGREW. I rise to the unfinished business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has some other matters on the table to dispose of.

JAMESTOWN AND NORTHERN RAILWAY.

The bill (H. R. 11900) granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railway through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota, was read the first time by its title.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I ask that the bill be put upon its passage. A similar bill has passed the Senate several times, and there is no objection to it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Has the bill passed the Senate?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. A similar bill has passed the Senate several times.

The bill was read the second time at length, and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS.

The bill (H. R. 11350) to establish the National Bureau of Standards was read twice by its title.

Mr. TURNER. I am authorized by the Committee on Commerce to report that bill favorably and to ask unanimous consent that it be put upon its passage at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of this bill, stating that the Committee on Commerce have reported it favorably. It will be read to the Senate in full for its information.

The bill was read.

Mr. TELLER. That is a bill which involves considerable money, the creation of a new bureau, etc. I think at this late hour it ought to go over. At least I should like to look at it before it is passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Colorado objects, and the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will inquire if the bill that was just objected to can lie on the table without prejudice?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. TELLER subsequently said: I objected to the passage of House bill 11350 a few moments since. I understand that the Committee on Commerce have had the same bill under consideration and made a favorable report. I desire to withdraw my objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I object to anything but the unfinished business, which I desire to have disposed of.

PORTLAND, NEHALEM AND TILLAMOOK RAILWAY.

The bill (H. R. 14163) to authorize the Portland, Nehalem and Tillamook Railway Company to construct a bridge across Nehalem Bay and River, in the State of Oregon, was read the first time by its title.

Mr. SIMON. A similar bill has heretofore been considered by the Committee on Commerce, and was favorably reported and passed by the Senate. This bill now comes from the House, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The bill was read the second time at length, and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall object to other bills until we dispose of the unfinished business.

REPORT OF WORLD'S COLUMBIAN COMMISSION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to concurrent resolution of the Senate No. 72.

The amendment of the House of Representatives was to strike out all after the resolving clause and insert:

That there be printed 3,500 copies of so much of the report of the committee on awards of the World's Columbian Commission as is contained in the special reports upon special subjects or groups as were prepared by expert judges authorized to act by the World's Columbian Commission, its executive committee on awards, the committee on final report, or the board of reference and control, of which 1,000 shall be for the use of the Senate, 2,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 500 for distribution by the Department of State.

Mr. PLATT of New York. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to move concurrence in the amendment of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York, by direction of the Committee on Printing, moves that the amendment of the House of Representatives be concurred in.

The motion was agreed to.

SAFETY APPLIANCES ON RAILROADS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10302) to amend an act to promote the safety of employees, etc., by requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, etc., approved March 2, 1893.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I wish to say that I desire a vote simply, and I do not wish to discuss the bill. I should like a vote on it disagreeing to all the Senate amendments in order to pass the bill as it passed the House. I think it is useless to pass an amended bill at this time. If we could have passed it yesterday it would have been well enough, but now it seems to me it is practically killing the bill to pass it with a Senate amendment. Therefore I shall ask the Senate to disagree to all the Senate amendments and pass the bill as it came from the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question before the Senate is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH].

Mr. PETTIGREW. To that amendment I object, for I believe it destroys the bill; and it is the purpose of the amendment, I think, to destroy the bill.

Mr. THURSTON. Mr. President——

Mr. ALDRICH. Is the subject of the amendment open now for consideration?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is before the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. Can the amendment be read once more?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read to the Senate.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Nobody understands it.

The SECRETARY. On line 8, page 3, strike out the word "less" and insert the word "more;" so as to read, if amended:

That any common carrier failing to make such report within thirty days after the end of any month shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof by a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100 for each and every offense and for every day during which it shall fail to make such report after the time herein specified for making the same.

Mr. HOAR. Is the word "more" in the amendment, or is it a proposed amendment to the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is a proposed amendment.

The SECRETARY. In line 8, strike out "less" and insert "more."

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. This bill, as it came from the House, provided a penalty of not less than $100 and not more than $500. The Senate has long ago thought that minimum punishments were not proper to be included in bills. The committee struck out "not more than $500" and left it to read "not less than $100." Of course, with that reading it might be $100 or it might be $10,000. If $100 is not enough as the maximum punishment, I suggest——

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from South Dakota does not object to what the Senator is talking about.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It is another amendment offered by the Senator from Rhode Island to which I do object.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator from South Dakota withdraws his objection to this amendment, I understand.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Then I have nothing further to say.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. To what amendment offered by the Senator from Rhode Island does the Senator from South Dakota object?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Another amendment was offered yesterday, and I do not find that it was adopted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What was the amendment offered yesterday?

Mr. ALDRICH. Is this amendment to the amendment disposed of and adopted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Striking out the word "less" and inserting the word "more." It is not yet adopted. Will the Senate agree to the amendment to the amendment?

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to have the first paragraph of the bill read as it now stands, to see whether the amendment of the Senator from Rhode Island was adopted yesterday. I think the RECORD does not show that it was adopted.

Mr. ALDRICH. It was adopted.

The Secretary read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the general manager, superintendent, or other proper officer of every common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad to make to the Interstate Commerce Commission, at its office in Washington, D. C., a monthly report, under oath, of all collisions of trains, or where any train or part of a train accidentally leaves the track, and of all accidents which may occur by reason thereof to its passengers or employees, which report shall state the nature and causes thereof and the circumstances connected therewith.

Mr. ALDRICH. I hope the Senator from South Dakota will not insist upon the bill passing as it left the House. There are serious objections to it. He expressed yesterday a willingness to accept the bill as amended by the committee.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am willing to accept the bill as amended by the committee, but not as destroyed by the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. ALDRICH. Does the Senator mean——

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to have the last three lines of that section read again.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The last three lines of the proposed amendment will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

And of all accidents which may occur by reason thereof——

Mr. PETTIGREW. The clause "by reason thereof" is what I wish to have left out. That is the amendment of the Senator from Rhode Island. With that clause left out, I am ready to have the bill passed.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. What is the objection to those words?

Mr. ALDRICH. What is the objection?

Mr. PETTIGREW. It limits it to just this class of accidents and does not embrace thereby all the other vast class of accidents which occur upon railroads, and therefore destroys the purpose of the bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. I was told that the purpose of the bill was that reports should be secured of all accidents which occurred either from collisions of trains or by reason of the derailment of a train or part of a train. As I understand it, that is the sole purpose of the bill, and is not to apply to a case where a man meets with any kind of an accident upon property of a railroad company for which the railroad company may not be responsible and will have nothing to do with the movement of railroads.

This bill is presented here solely upon the ground that it is to regulate interstate commerce. Otherwise we have no jurisdiction over it whatever. But suppose a man is killed upon the property of a railroad company, is it the intention of the Senator from South Dakota to make the railroad company responsible for that kind of an accident?

Mr. PETTIGREW. There is no responsibility about it. It simply requires that accidents to employees should be reported and the causes thereof, and that is all there is to it.

Mr. ALDRICH. What kind of an accident other than those mentioned does the Senator intend to include?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Innumerable accidents that may occur in connection with railroads, in coupling cars in yards, etc.

I am willing to accept the amendment of the committee—that is what I said yesterday—but the Senator from Rhode Island, keen as he is, comes in with an amendment which destroys the bill. That I will not accept. I would rather debate the bill out and let it die.

Mr. SEWELL. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. SEWELL. I wish to say that every accident in every State in the Union on every railroad is to-day reported by law to the State authorities, and the people who want this information can get it very accurately. So could the Interstate Commerce Commission get it without loading down the bill with unnecessary provisions.

Mr. HOAR. All they would have to do would be to send a copy of a printed document to the commission.

Mr. SEWELL. Why should we oblige them to send the reports there? The commission could get them.

Mr. PETTIGREW. If that is all there is to it, I wonder at the frantic effort of the railroads to defeat the bill.

Mr. SEWELL. Nine-tenths of the cases the Interstate Commerce Commission would have nothing to do with.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, if I may say one word, all that this bill does is to require the interstate and international carriers to do this thing. It is not half so onerous a burden as we place on boats in the harbors of New York and New Jersey.

If it be true that interstate carriers are also State carriers, this information goes to the States. There is nothing to be done except for the railroad companies to send a copy of a printed document to the Interstate Commerce Commission and have it all there together. I do not know that I ought to say what I am about to say, because I know how much more informed on such subjects the Senator from New Jersey is than I am, but I submit to him, with great respect, that the idea that this thing is a hardship on the railroads would disappear on an examination of the bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the Senator from South Dakota yield to me a moment?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. WOLCOTT. This is a most remarkable measure. If it helped anybody who was employed by a railway corporation there is not a Senator on the floor who would not be very glad to vote for it.

Mr. HOAR. It does.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Before I am through I think I will satisfy the Senator from Massachusetts that he does not understand the extent to which this is the most useless legislation that he has heard of this winter. The whole incentive to it comes from the secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission. That commission, having no work to do, seeks to aggrandize its office and to gather unto itself some functions to perform.

It has therefore stirred up an attempt to secure legislation for the report of all accidents throughout the country. If it served any useful purpose, everybody would favor it—people connected with railroads and people not connected with them. There is no sort of secrecy about a railroad accident.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I want to finish first. If the Senator will let me finish, he may ask me anything. There is no sort of secrecy about railway accidents. I am familiar with them, as every lawyer is who has ever had to deal with railroad affairs. The moment an accident has happened the most rigid inquiry is at once instituted as to the cause of the accident. It is carefully investigated. In a great number of the States of the Union there is a State requirement that all statements of accidents and their causes and reports concerning them shall be filed with the State railway commission.

Congress has no jurisdiction of the subject, technically, except as to accidents that happen through the transaction of interstate commerce. But, even so, nobody would object if there were any gain to be had to an engineer or a conductor or a switchman or a brakeman by the great additional expense which will be incurred by railroads in filing sworn statements here. It is not a hardship. Railroads and their management are more anxious to avoid accidents than anybody else. They do not object to the filing of their reports. This bill as it is framed means a large expense, but if it is necessary it can be passed.

We have had a good deal of suggestion here, not by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW], but by other Senators, that this is a measure in the interest of humanity, in which railroads are called upon to give the public information as to accidents, whereby so many lives are sacrificed.

As a matter of fact, the railroad business is the safest in the world, and fewer accidents in proportion take place on railroads than in any other industry in the world. If Senators would take the time to consult it, they would find there is a provision in the interstate-commerce law that the Interstate Commerce Commissioners shall call upon the railroads for such information as they desire and such reports as they wish, which shall be filed at such times as the Interstate Commerce Commission shall determine. Under that provision of the law, if Senators would take the time to look at the annual reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission they would find we have got every possible report which would be given under this bill if it became a law.

Let me call attention here to the advance sheets of the last report of the Interstate Commerce Commission. I have looked them over. For eight years they have been all alike. Let me read from page 73. I will skip along so as to give a summary:

> The total number of casualties to persons on account of railway accidents during the year ending June 30, 1899, was 51,473. The aggregate number of persons killed as a result of railway accidents during the year was 7,123 and the number injured was 44,620.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator yield to me at that point?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I will in a moment. There is nothing hidden in this matter. Why does not the Senator want the Interstate Commerce Commission to get a record of the number of men drowned at sea, and then tell us how dangerous the ocean is; that ships would sail with far greater safety if somebody here in Washington had an account of all the drownings that take place in the world? There is no negligence covered up; there is no roorback here; there is no information desired to be hidden.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President——

Mr. WOLCOTT. If the Senator will permit, I prefer not to yield now. I am proceeding to show, without any feeling, that every statement of an accident is given here in this record, which, as I said, will not make one switchman less careless, it will not make one engineer less forgetful, it will not make one passenger less careless in getting off and on a train. The object of this bill is not to save human life, but it is to give the Interstate Commerce Commission something more to do in the way of securing for them additional clerks. The only hardship is in the duplication of the reports, and they are reports which are filed in almost every State in the Union.

I was proceeding, before the Senator interrupted me, with respect to general casualties, which were: Trainmen, 1,155 killed and 16,663 injured, etc. They were not injured, as the Senator would seem to indicate, by the character of the railroad directors. He thought the prosecution of railroad directors would largely decrease the number of accidents; but 95 per cent of all the casualties to railway employees is occasioned by the negligence of some brother employee, who does not mean to do so; but because he forgets a signal, or is not careful, some fellow-employee is injured. You are not going to save human life by the passage of such a bill as this.

Mr. CARTER. Will the Senator from Colorado yield to me for a moment?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Certainly.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT FOR ALASKA.

Mr. CARTER. I present the conference report on Senate bill 5573, for which I ask immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The conference report will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

> The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 5573) to amend section 26 of Title III of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House, and agree to the same.

GEORGE L. SHOUP,
THOMAS H. CARTER,
WILLIAM B. BATE,
Managers on part of the Senate.

V. WARNER,
HENRY R. GIBSON,
JAMES T. LLOYD,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I desire to ask the Senator from Montana what became of the provision in relation to licenses in Alaska, which was contained in the bill?

Mr. CARTER. The Senate bill was not in effect in any manner modified, except in a slight verbal detail. The House amendment provided that 50 per cent of the licenses collected outside of incorporated towns should be paid into the Treasury of the United States, there to constitute a school fund for such portions of the district of Alaska as were not included within organized municipalities. The fund thus collected is to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior; and inasmuch as no provision has been made in any appropriation bill for educational purposes in Alaska this year, it was deemed wise to allow this percentage of the license fees outside of incorporated towns to be applied for such purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

SAFETY APPLIANCES ON RAILROADS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10302) to amend an act to promote the safety of employees, etc., by requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, etc., approved March 2, 1893.

Mr. HALE. I rise to a privileged report.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Does the Senator desire to proceed with it now? I was in the middle of a sentence, and I will conclude in two minutes.

Mr. HALE. I shall not, of course, interfere with the Senator.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I will take but a minute or two.

Mr. President, this report of the Interstate Commerce Commission and all these reports proceed to show how many train men and how many passengers were killed or injured from different causes, the number of collisions, the number of derailments, etc. All of these are reported, and they are all accessible to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

What I rose to say, however, was this: I can see but one good purpose that such a law as this might serve, and it might help in accomplishing that. If out of these reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission it should appear that an unusual number of accidents occurred upon some one line of railroad because of deficiency in embankments or bad alignment or grades, then it might serve in drawing public attention to the danger of the operation of that line. With that exception there is no useful purpose which this bill, if enacted into law, will serve. What I desire to impress upon the Senate is that it does not bring one iota of new information to Congress or to the people, and that everything in the way of information that would be given under this bill is given now.

One thing further. There have been constant suggestions here that the railroads, or Senators who are supposed to be friendly to vested interests, are frantically fighting the bill. I want to say to Senators who make that suggestion that I have never heard the slightest suggestion of hostility to this bill, unless because of its absurdity and of the fact that it incurs a needless expense and brings no additional information. With that statement, Mr. President, so far as I am concerned I have no opposition to the measure.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. NELSON. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the amendments of the Senate to the river and harbor appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, and asking for a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. NELSON. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments disagreed to by the House of Representatives and agree to the conference asked by the House.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. NELSON, Mr. MCMILLAN, and Mr. BERRY were appointed.

MASSACRE OF FOREIGN RESIDENTS OF MANILA.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent to offer a resolution at this time, for which I should like to have immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to communicate to the Senate, as early as may be convenient, all information in his possession relating to or tending to show the authenticity and genuineness of the alleged order for the massacre of the foreign residents of Manila, P. I., on the evening and night of February 15, 1899, and to transmit to the Senate the full text of said order and the signatures thereto.

And, further, to inform the Senate whether the original of said order purporting to be printed in part on page 157 of Senate Document No. 208, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session, is now or ever has been in the possession of the War Department, or of any person connected therewith or with the military authority of the United States, or whether it has ever been seen by any such person, and if it has, by whom; and to inform the Senate where the original of said order now is, if within the knowledge of the Department.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. ALDRICH. The colleague of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], the chairman of the Committee on the Philippines, is absent from the Chamber.

Mr. HOAR. If I shall find that my colleague has any objection to the resolution when he comes in, I will move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution is passed, if it shall be passed.

Mr. LODGE entered the Chamber.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The junior Senator from Massachusetts is present.

Mr. LODGE. I have no objection to the resolution.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I submit a privileged report, being the report of the committee of conference on the deficiency appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 5, 16, 25, 26, 30, 37, 38, 39, 40, 45, 46, 51, 60, 66, 67, 73, 74, 84, 85, 86, 98, 100, 101, 102, and 118.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 42, 43, 44, 47, 48, 49, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 97, 99, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, and 151, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$35,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$16,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 29, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$50,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 41, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$6,240;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 50, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all after the word "bridge" in line 5 of the matter inserted by said amendment; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 83, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, may allow during the fiscal year 1901 a larger per capita expenditure than $167, but not exceeding $250, at the Indian school for the Sac and Fox Reservation, Iowa, if he deems the same necessary;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 87, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$3,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 88, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 4 of the matter inserted by said amendment, after the word "hundred" where it first appears, insert the words "and one;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 137, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "Senate documents numbered 189 and 217;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the report of the conference committee.

The report was agreed to.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I submit the conference report on the naval appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate numbered 3, 7, 8, 9, 10, 24, 25, 23, 39, 40, 42, 60, 61, 65, 67, 79, 80, 81, 82, 84, 85, 86, and 89 to the bill (H. R. 13705) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have been unable to agree.

EUGENE HALE,
WILLIAM E. CHANDLER,
B. R. TILLMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
AMOS J. CUMMINGS,
Manager on the part of the House.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I submit this report, which, in some respects, and in very important respects, differs from most conference reports. It is the third report upon the naval appropriation bill, and each report has been narrowing the differences between the conferees of the two Houses.

In the last conference the conferees substantially were able to agree upon all contested items, excepting, possibly, the item in relation to the six years' course of cadets at the Naval Academy, where the Senate has taken its position by a very strong majority, and the provision incorporated in the bill touching torpedo boats

The Senate conferees, whatever might be their personal feeling with regard to this matter, felt that they could not recede from the amendment and give it up until it had been again submitted to the Senate and a formal yea-and-nay vote taken upon it to show the attitude of the Senate. The House conferees insisted that the Senate conferees should report that the Senate recede, and take a vote upon that. The Senate conferees did not feel, and do not feel, that anybody should attempt to interfere with the method that we have of doing business, and that, if the Senate conferees, representing the body, did not agree to recede, that, like every other disputed proposition, should be reported to the Senate as a disagreement. The House conferees insisted, as I have said, that the Senate should recede and take the matter back to a vote in the House and in the Senate, the House having already once taken a yea-and-nay vote and defeated the proposition by a small majority.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What was that yea-and-nay vote?

Mr. HALE. In the House?

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I do not mean the numbers, but upon what question was the vote taken?

Mr. HALE. On the Holland torpedo-boat proposition.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The House are opposed to it?

Mr. HALE. The House has voted it out. Its conferees insist on disagreement by a small majority. The Senate has never voted upon it. In that emergency the Senate conferees proposed that we should report a disagreement upon this item; that neither body should recede, but that we disagree and bring it into the Senate and have a yea-and-nay vote. If the Senate then recede, that ends the matter and the clause goes out.

We went further than that, and stated that, so far as we are concerned, if the item went back to the two Houses, whatever the vote of the Senate might be, if the House again rejected the proposition the Senate would not further seek to force it upon the House, and that would end the matter. But the House conferees said "no." Then when the Senate conferees proposed to report a disagreement, the House conferees refused to do that.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What is this report?

Mr. HALE. I am coming to that. It was such a situation as I have never confronted. We are within a few hours of the end of the session, and can only pass appropriation bills by reporting disagreements and taking the sense of the two bodies; but the House conferees not only refused to recede—which they had a right to do—but they refused to submit a report of a disagreement. When it was suggested that that course might end in the failure of the bill and an extra session of Congress, the reply was that the Senate must take the responsibility.

I did not feel, and my associates did not feel, that this matter ought to stand longer in this way without reporting it to the Senate. What was done then? By the direction of the Senate conferees, having notified the House of what we should do, the report has been made up, embracing disagreements upon all the items not already agreed to, signed by the Senate conferees, the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], and myself, and sent to the House for the signatures of the House conferees. Two of the conferees on the part of the House, however, refuse to sign the report of a disagreement. One conferee, as is shown here, signs the report, stating what the fact is, that there is a disagreement.

I am somewhat at a loss, Mr. President, to know what further the Senate conferees can do. As I have said, I have never known the conferees from either House to refuse to report a disagreement. Sometimes deadlocks occur and difficulties arise that are formidable, but they are solved by reporting a disagreement. Then either House may recede and concur, or, in the last extremity, may adhere, which is notifying the other House that they can not recede. It is not, however, proposed that we take that parliamentary course in this case, but that the matter shall hang in air, suspended, with no report to be made and the hours, the waning hours, fleeing fast away from us, and this great bill, carrying $80,000,000, for the most important branch of the service of the Government, suspended with the likelihood or the possibility of an extra session of Congress called on this account, when all of us have been working to the common end of saving such a session.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HALE. I shall be very glad to have any Senator ask me any question he pleases regarding the matter.

Mr. LODGE. Do I understand the Senator from Maine to say that the House conferees refuse to sign either an agreement or a disagreement, and will not allow the Senate to act on a disagreement?

Mr. HALE. The report as presented at the desk, signed by the Senate conferees and stating that there is a disagreement, which there is, has been presented to the House conferees for their signatures, and two of them refused to sign it, stating to us that they would not agree to report a disagreement.

Mr. LODGE. Then the conferees of one House are refusing to allow the Houses to act on the bill, either to recede or to insist?

Mr. HALE. That is precisely it. The report brought in in the usual way leaves it to the two Houses. As I say, it is an unprecedented situation. It is most remarkable that such an attitude should be taken.

I suppose the only thing the Senate can do is to insist upon the amendments, ask for a further conference, and appoint the conferees, and then, through the transmission of the messenger, it shall be reported to the House, and the body itself—not the two conferees—will take it up; and I trust and expect that the wisdom and long experience of many members of the House, and of the body generally, would see the futility of making such a point as this and would accede to our conferees, and then we should be able to report something to the Senate.

Mr. FORAKER. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HALE. Yes.

Mr. FORAKER. What reason is assigned by the two members of the House conference committee for not signing a disagreement?

Mr. HALE. I have stated that.

Mr. FORAKER. Having stated the remarkable conduct, or, rather, having characterized it as remarkable conduct, there certainly ought to be some reason for it, either real or imaginary.

Mr. HALE. The reasons assigned are, first, that the House conferees believe the House is against it, and, next, the House has demonstrated by once voting by a small majority that they are against it. Those are the only reasons.

Mr. FORAKER. There was a disagreement reported to the House?

Mr. HALE. Yes; there was a disagreement reported to the House.

Mr. FORAKER. It was sent to the House, and the House voted on this specific item, and it was defeated?

Mr. HALE. Yes.

Mr. FORAKER. But in the Senate there was no report and no vote taken?

Mr. HALE. There was no vote taken in the Senate. That is what the Senate conferees want to do—to have a yea-and-nay vote.

Mr. FORAKER. The House conferees thought, inasmuch as the disagreement had been reported to the House and the House had specifically voted upon it by a yea-and-nay vote, that the Senate ought to similarly act before they would agree to another conference or send in another report of disagreement?

Mr. HALE. That is what we report and what we propose.

Mr. FORAKER. I am only asking for information. I understand the reason why the House conferees would not sign any report of disagreement is that a vote was not taken in the Senate on the item.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, with reference to the matter of form I will not speak. It is a singular condition when the House conferees, when we do disagree, refuse to make a report that we disagree. In other words, they refuse to disagree when we do disagree. I wish to speak respectfully of the House and of its committees.

The matter of substance is this: That, in reference to torpedo boats, whereas the House has once voted on a yea-and-nay vote to reject the Holland torpedo-boat item, the House conferees say that the Senate conferees are bound to yield on that item without taking the sense of the Senate thereon. The Senate conferees do not think that is reasonable, and offered to report a disagreement to the Senate and take the sense of the Senate. We did not feel that we would be justified in yielding an item which the Senate had put in simply because the House had voted against it, without submitting the merits of that item to the Senate itself. That is practically all the question upon which we differ.

Mr. McCOMAS. I should like to ask the Senator from New Hampshire, before he takes his seat, whether the appropriation for torpedo boats is the one matter remaining in dispute between the two Houses?

Mr. CHANDLER. Nominally not. Although there are other items of disagreement reported by the three Senate conferees, the report being signed by one of the House conferees, I think I may say that the six conferees saw their way to an adjustment of all the others. But upon this one the House conferees say the Senate conferees must recommend the Senate to disagree, because "we have had a vote in the House of Representatives and you have not taken a vote in the Senate hitherto, and you can not take one now."

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Maine or the Senator from New Hampshire whether this item is now before the Senate, so that the Senate can act with reference to it.

Mr. CHANDLER. I will let the chairman answer. I do not know.

Mr. HALE. My attention was diverted. I did not hear the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The question is whether the action of the conferees on the part of the Senate in bringing in the report which they have brought in leaves the Senate at liberty to act upon this amendment and to recede from it or insist upon it.

Mr. HALE. I should hardly think so, because it is not a report of the majority of the two conferees. My suggestion is the other action, which is in the direction, finally, of getting a report signed by the conferees of both bodies, that the Senate simply ask for a further full conference and appoint the conferees and send it to the House. I should not want, on this report, to take any formal action either way, either in the way of insisting or receding.

Mr. ALLISON. But if the papers are here and we have jurisdiction to ask for another conference, we have jurisdiction to take any other step we choose.

Mr. CHANDLER. Shall we ask for another conference when the conferees now refuse to report a disagreement? Should we not have the two sets of conferees report the fact that there is a disagreement before we take the sense of the Senate upon the amendment?

Mr. ALLISON. That may be.

Mr. CHANDLER. I think so.

Mr. ALLISON. We have the papers here, I understand.

Mr. TELLER. We have jurisdiction.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I am embarrassed, as I suppose every other Senator must be, by the parliamentary difficulty which seems to have arisen. If that difficulty had not arisen and there was no question of propriety of acting at this time, I should feel very much in favor of the Senate voting to recede from this amendment. If it is in order, I would make the motion now that the Senate recede from this amendment.

I do not think it so important that there should be a contract for three more Holland torpedo boats as that the Senate ought to put in danger the passage of this bill. We already have six of them contracted for, as I understand, by the amendment, and this is a proposition to contract for three more. It seems a very small point of difference between the two Houses. But if it is a question of propriety and of regularity and of maintaining the dignity of the Senate, then I should propose to sustain the conferees in whatever action they desire. But I want to say now that I do not think this little matter of difference between the two Houses ought to imperil the passage of this bill.

It does not seem to me that it is so very important that the Navy Department be authorized to buy three more of the Holland submarine boats when we have six in course of construction, and when they can not make the contract for the other three until the first one has been completed to the satisfaction of the Navy Department. Surely we can not afford to stand on so small and, it seems to me, unimportant a matter as this. The six boats which are already contracted for will scarcely be finished during the next two years, and there will be plenty of time in the next Congress to determine whether other boats should be purchased.

Mr. CULLOM. May I suggest to the Senator from Connecticut whether it is not better to agree with the conferees and disagree to whatever the question is, and let the conferees try to see whether the other conferees will not meet with them, and if they do and disagree, then it will be time enough for us to determine whether we will recede.

Mr. McCOMAS. May I ask a question of the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Let me answer the question of the Senator from Illinois first. If the Senator from Illinois had been able to hear what I have been saying, and I have been speaking in the loudest tone of voice which I can command and endeavoring to drown out the conversation of Senators in the Chamber who are making more noise than I am, he would have realized that I said if it was a question of maintaining the dignity of the Senate, if it was a question of standing by our conferees in what they want us to do, I was perfectly willing to agree to the course which they propose, but that I thought eventually we should not let a matter of this sort imperil the passage of the bill.

Mr. CULLOM. The point I wish to make is that it is not the time now to say that we will back down, if we ever do. Let us agree with the conferees, and let the conferees have another trial.

Mr. McCOMAS. May I ask the Senator from Connecticut a question? This is not an agreement, and it is not a disagreement. Is there any parliamentary procedure under which we may recede or insist?

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I do not know. I would have to submit that question to the Chair.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I understand the Senate has the custody of the papers, and, as I understand the parliamentary situation, we are in a position now to pass upon a motion to recede, and that would bring about a solution of the difficulties that exist. While it may be true that the action of the conferees of the House is not such as to commend itself to the conferees on the part of the Senate or to the Senate as a whole, yet if it would bring a solution of the question I can see no reason why the Senate should not now vote as to whether it will recede or whether it will insist; and if there be no parliamentary objection to it, I will move that the Senate recede from amendment No. 89.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I do not understand that any report of a conference is regularly before us. This is not a report signed by a majority of the managers of each House. It is a question of procedure here, not the question what we will do with a given amendment. It seems to me there is a great deal involved in this question. If two conferees of one House have the power to hold up a conference report in this manner and not allow either body to vote upon it, then we are absolutely at the mercy of two conferees of any House. Two conferees, if they have the power to refuse to sign either an agreement or a disagreement, have the power absolutely to arrest one of these great bills at the very last moments of the session. It seems to me it is a very dangerous precedent to establish to allow two conferees of one House to force the situation in this way, something of which I in my experience have never heard.

If this had come back as a disagreement, of course we should have voted upon the main point in disagreement, the Holland boats, to which the motion of the Senator from Colorado refers, and we ought to vote upon it. I do not think there is any disposition in this body to be unreasonable or to sacrifice this great bill on account of that amendment. But that is not the question. The question is whether the powers of the two Houses are to be destroyed by the action of two conferees of one House; and it seems to me it would be a very dangerous precedent to establish if we submit to it.

Mr. HALE. As I stated, I do not present this technically as a conference report.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Then we can not act on it at all, Mr. President. We have got the bill and can act on it.

Mr. HALE. I thought it proper to notify the Senate of just what the situation is. If the Senate does nothing, it will depend upon whether the House conferees will come in and agree, not to recede, not that we recede, but that we disagree, and make a report; and then when a majority of the conferees of each House sign the report, it is a full conference report.

Mr. ALDRICH. Will the Senator from Maine allow me to make a suggestion?

Mr. HALE. Yes; I will be very glad to have the Senator from Rhode Island do so.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator from Maine says that this is not technically a report of the conference committee, and it seems to me the Senate can not possibly take any action upon these papers, which are not properly here. I suggest to the Senator from Maine that he withdraw the papers and try once more to secure the signatures of the House conferees, either to an agreement or a disagreement, and bring the papers back here then in one form or the other.

Mr. HALE. That is what I purposed to do when I brought it in.

Mr. ALDRICH. That, I think, had better be done.

Mr. WOLCOTT. If the Senator from Maine will withdraw the papers I will withdraw my motion. We either have them or we have not.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to make a suggestion.

Mr. HALE. I will not ask the Senate to take any action.

Mr. TELLER. Whether the report made by the conference committee to the Senate is properly before us or not, we have full control over the members of the committee appointed by the Senate. We can give them instructions, if we see fit, either to recede or to insist upon the amendment. We can not lose jurisdiction of this because the House members refuse to act. We have control of the papers, we have control of our committee, and we can recede here if we see fit, and if we do not see fit we can instruct the conferees to recede or otherwise, just as we see fit. I do not know what we ought to do, but we are certainly not without a full and complete remedy.

Mr. HALE. I have faith to believe that if nothing further is done by the Senate, and I expected that nothing would be done, we will be able in conference to get some disagreeing report signed by the majority of the conferees of the two Houses.

Mr. TELLER. Then I do not desire to make any motion. I intended to move to instruct the conferees to recede, but I will leave that as it is.

Mr. HALE. I think it would be better to leave it, and I will not press the matter any further.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine a question. I understood the Senator from Rhode Island a moment ago to intimate that the Senate was powerless in this matter because two conferees on the part of the House refuse to report a disagreement.

Mr. ALDRICH. If the Senator from Arkansas will pardon me, I did not mean to say that the Senate was powerless. I think the suggestion of the Senator from Colorado is a proper one. We have power to instruct our conferees, but at this stage I think the papers are not properly before the Senate for that purpose. That is all.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I simply wanted to enter a protest against any such understanding—that two members of the conference committee could hold up the bill and render both Houses powerless to act.

Mr. ALDRICH. I do not wish to be understood as making that statement in that way.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I think the Senate has certainly the power to act, if it chooses, and I think under the circumstances it ought to take such action as will get an agreement or have a disagreement reported.

Now, the fact is in this case there is a disagreement, and it seems to me that the conferees on the part of the Senate and the conferees on the part of the House are in contempt of the bodies that appointed them if they fail to report the fact to the House from which they emanated.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator from Maine will pardon me, the House conferees insisted that we should report an agreement when we did not. They demanded; they held us up.

Mr. HALE. Yes.

Mr. TILLMAN. That is it.

Mr. HALE. They required that we should make a report receding.

Mr. TILLMAN. They demanded that we should make a report that we had receded when we had not receded.

Mr. HALE. There are other matters before the Senate. I do not ask any action on this. I shall report it at no distant hour. I withdraw the papers.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine withdraws the papers.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, I desire to make a suggestion upon this matter. I am a young man here, and I am very desirous that the dignity and rights of this body shall be sustained. I do not think that the conferees, when they get outside of their duties, represent the body that send them; and it seems to me, with due deference to the old and experienced Senators, that the best way out of this matter is for the Senator from Maine to prepare a message to be sent by the Senate to the House of Representatives, to know whether they will recognize the rights and dignity of this body—not in those words, of course, but stating what has occurred and asking that instructions be given to their conferees to conform to the usages and customs of the two bodies when acting together. I make this merely as a suggestion. It seems to me that the dignity of the Senate ought to be preserved and that the rules of the Senate ought to be preserved if this bill does fail.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION.

Mr. BUTLER. I offer a resolution, for which I ask present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the resolution will be received.

Mr. CULLOM. Let it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina submits a resolution, for which he asks present consideration. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Nonpartisan Industrial Commission created by act of Congress approved June 18, 1898 be, and is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate a detailed statement, giving the expenditures made by the commission, the number of persons employed, the amount paid to each, the duties assigned them, respectively, and by whom such persons were appointed.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

SAFETY APPLIANCES ON RAILROADS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10302) to amend an act to promote the safety of employees, etc., by requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, etc., approved March 2, 1893.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the first amendment reported by the Committee on Interstate Commerce, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 1, section 1, strike out from line 3 to 16, inclusive, as follows:

That there be added to the act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes and their locomotives with driving-wheel brakes, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1893, the following:

SEC. 9. That where any collision of trains, where one of the trains is a passenger train, shall occur on a railroad of any common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad, or where any passenger train, or any part of a passenger train, accidentally leaves the rails, it shall be the duty of the superintendent or other officer in charge of the movement of trains on the division of said road on which the accident occurred to immediately institute an investigation into the causes of such accident and transmit a report under oath to the general manager or general superintendent of the road, showing the nature and causes thereof, and it shall be the duty of such general manager or general superintendent to transmit such report to the Interstate Commerce Commission at their office at Washington, D. C. It shall also be the duty of any such common carrier to make to the Interstate Commerce Commission a monthly report under oath of all accidents which may occur to its passengers or employees, whether attended with loss of life or personal injury, and such report shall state the causes and circumstances connected therewith.

And insert:

That it shall be the duty of the general manager, superintendent, or other proper officer of every common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad to make to the Interstate Commerce Commission, at its office in Washington, D. C., a monthly report, under oath, of all collisions of trains or where any train or part of a train accidentally leaves the track, and of all accidents which may occur to its passengers or employees, which report shall state the nature and causes thereof, and the circumstances connected therewith.

Mr. ALDRICH. My purpose in offering the amendment which I submitted last night was to make the section intelligible; but the Senator from South Dakota does not seem to think it is necessary, and I withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Inserting the words "by reason thereof."

Mr. ALDRICH. The words "by reason thereof."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is withdrawn. The other amendment was accepted. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

Mr. McCOMAS. I ask the Senator from Illinois to consent to two formal amendments. In line 22 I suggest the word "leaving" instead of the word "leaves," and in line 23, after the word "employees," I suggest the insertion of the words "while in the service of such common carrier." If an employee went to Jersey City and had an accident on a ferry boat, you would not want that reported.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am willing to accept the amendment if the Senator from Illinois is.

Mr. CULLOM. I see no objection to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments proposed by the Senator from Maryland will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 1, page 2, line 22, it is proposed to strike out the word "leaves" and insert "leaving."

Mr. CULLOM. I think that amendment is a mistake.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I suggest that an amendment has been made which would render the word suggested by the Senator from Maryland ungrammatical.

Mr. CULLOM. Yes. The amendment will read:

Or where any train or part of a train accidentally leaving the tracks.

"Leaves" is the right word, it seems to me.

Mr. McCOMAS. I do not care, if the Senator does not wish to accept it.

Mr. CULLOM. I think it is better as it is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 23, after the word "employee," it is proposed to insert "while in the service of such common carrier."

Mr. CULLOM. I have no objection to that.

Mr. CARTER. I desire to ask the Senator from Maryland if he does not desire to add the words "and actually on duty?"

Mr. McCOMAS. I accept that.

Mr. CARTER. An employee might be in the service of a company——

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. He is the year round.

Mr. CARTER. And not be on duty at the time of the accident.

Mr. McCOMAS. I accept the amendment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I make no objection to that addition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed, at the end of line 23, on page 2, to insert the following:

While in the service of such common carrier and actually on duty.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Interstate Commerce was, in section 2, page 3, line 3, after the word "month," to strike out "or failing to make report of any collision or cars leaving the rails accidentally, as herein required, within thirty days after the occurrence of such accident;" in line 8, after the word "dollars," to strike out "and not more than $500;" and in line 11, to strike out:

The failure of the superintendent or other officer in charge of the movement of trains as aforesaid to make report to the general manager or general superintendent, or of said general manager or general superintendent to make report to the Interstate Commerce Commission, as herein required, shall be deemed the offense of the carrier as well as of such officer himself: Provided.

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That any common carrier failing to make such report within thirty days after the end of any month shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof by a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $100 for each and every offense and for every day during which it shall fail to make such report after the time herein specified for making the same.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. That is the last amendment of the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerks will renumber the sections. Are there further amendments?

Mr. CULLOM. There are not.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read, "A bill requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to make full reports of all accidents to the Interstate Commerce Commission."

CONSIDERATION OF UNOBJECTED HOUSE BILLS.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I ask unanimous consent to call up the District code bill.

Mr. TELLER. That bill will create more or less debate.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator from North Carolina will yield to me, I will ask unanimous consent that we may now proceed to the consideration of unobjected House bills on the Calendar, and if we do that the code bill will be reached in due time.

Mr. TELLER. I will not object to it when it is reached.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me, I will make that request.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I will yield on that understanding.

Mr. GALLINGER. I then make the request that we now proceed to the consideration of unobjected House bills on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of unobjected House bills on the Calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. WARREN. I do not wish to object, but I ask that it may include such House bills as were reported this morning and are not on the printed Calendar. I ask that they may be considered as on the Calendar.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will enlarge my request to include those bills.

Mr. ALDRICH. That is right.

Mr. BUTLER. I do not wish to allow that agreement to be made and then put every Senator who has a bill in a position where, if some Senator wishes to make an observation of a few sentences or for a minute, it kills the bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. Oh, we never do that. We allow Senators to speak.

Mr. BUTLER. I desire to say that I have been the victim of this kind of a consent for a month on some bills that one or more Senators had observations which they wished to submit, and I understood had no objection to voting when they had made the observations; and yet the moment the observations were attempted, under the consent I could not get a hearing.

Mr. GALLINGER. We will give you that.

Mr. BUTLER. I do not know whether other Senators are in that condition or not. I want to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a short bill, and then I will have no objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. If the suggestion of the Senator from New Hampshire is agreed to, whenever one of these bills is reached it will be read first for information and then the Senate will be asked if there is objection. If there is not, the bill will be taken up and questions can be asked, and nobody will have the right to displace it because there shall be some question asked in relation to it. The question of consideration will come up first. There can be no wrong done to anybody. The proposition is a fair one, and one which, it seems to me, every member of the Senate ought to agree to; and I think my friend the Senator from North Carolina will not suffer the inconvenience which he suggests under this agreement.

Mr. CULLOM. No.

Mr. BUTLER. I will say to the Senator there is a short bill which has the unanimous report of the committees of both Houses. It passed the House after full discussion, and yet it has gone over four or five times by the objection of one Senator, when, I understand, he simply had a statement that he wanted to put in the RECORD; and that put the bill aside.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. If any Senator objects to any one of these bills, it goes over under the agreement.

Mr. BUTLER. That is why I object to the agreement. I do not wish the Senate to adjourn before I get a vote on this bill. It is for the relief of a Masonic lodge in my State, for a small amount. I feel it my duty to get a vote on it. It is a just claim.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I have no doubt the quickest way to get a vote is to pursue the plan suggested by the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is the only way.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It is best for all bills. It will save time. I believe it is the only way to do it, and I hope everybody will agree to it.

Mr. BUTLER. I feel that my duty to my constituents and to the persons interested in the bill makes it necessary for me to protect myself by every parliamentary situation. But I do not wish to inconvenience other Senators, and I hope other Senators will remember that, and be disposed to give me a vote on this bill. So I will not object.

Mr. CARTER. I desire to call attention to the fact that the Senate is in such disorder that the current of business can not be understood.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate must preserve order. There is some confusion in the galleries. The Chair hopes that persons in the galleries will preserve as much order as is possible and converse as little as is possible. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected House bills on the Calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. PRITCHARD. I do not propose to object, but when I secured the floor it was my intention to move that the Senate take up the District code bill for consideration; but inasmuch as there are a number of Senators who desire to have matters passed upon, I will not make objection.

Mr. BURROWS. I think the request was so modified as to include those bills which are not on the printed Calendar, but have been reported.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would treat them as being on the Calendar anyway. They have been reported on the last day of the session. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The Chair would like to inquire whether the unanimous consent agreement would interfere with the Chair in laying before the Senate bills as they come from the House, when Senators might request that they should be acted upon?

Mr. GALLINGER. My judgment is that it ought not, and that it ought, of course, to permit, as under the rules we would be forced to permit, the introduction of conference reports, and that the procedure might be interrupted for those purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair wanted to understand that.

CREDENTIALS.

Mr. ALLISON. I present the credentials of my colleague [Mr. DOLLIVER] and ask that they be read:

The credentials were read, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF IOWA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

To the Hon. WILLIAM P. FRYE,
President pro tempore of the Senate of the United States:

Whereas on the 16th day of January, A. D. 1900, John Henry Gear was duly elected Senator in Congress from the State of Iowa for the term beginning on the 4th day of March, A. D. 1901; and

Whereas said John Henry Gear died on the 14th day of July, A. D. 1900; and

Whereas, because thereof and the fact that the legislature of said State has not been in session since the date of said demise, and will not be before the 4th day of March proximo, will happen on that date in the representation of the State of Iowa in the Senate of the United States.

Now, therefore, I, Leslie M. Shaw, governor of the State of Iowa, by virtue of authority vested in me by the Constitution of the United States, do hereby appoint Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver, of the county of Webster, a Senator in Congress from the State of Iowa, to fill the vacancy thus occasioned, and do certify the same to the Senate of the United States.

In testimony whereof, witness my hand and the great seal of the State of Iowa. Done this 25th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1901, of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-fifth, of the State of Iowa the fifty-fifth.

[SEAL.] LESLIE M. SHAW.

By the governor:
W. B. MARTIN,
Secretary of State.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The credentials will be placed on file.

Mr. McBRIDE presented the credentials of John H. Mitchell, chosen by the legislature of the State of Oregon a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1901; which were read and ordered to be filed.

JAMES A. SOMERVILLE.

Mr. WARREN. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7603) to correct the military record of James A. Somerville, to report it without amendment. I report the bill now and ask that it may be put on the Calendar and come up under this order.

SHIP BALCLUTHA.

Mr. TURNER. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 13530) to provide an American register for the foreign-built ship Balclutha, to report it favorably without amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar. The Secretary will announce the first bill on the Calendar under the order.

PENSIONS OF CERTAIN WIDOWS.

The bill (H. R. 9896) to restore certain widows to the pension roll was announced as first in order.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I am in favor of the bill as reported to the Senate, but it is a substitute for the House bill, and I am quite sure it can not pass at this session, and will make discussion here. Therefore I ask that it may go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will go over.

TAX ON FERMENTED LIQUORS.

The bill (H. R. 8620) amendatory of sections 3329 and 3341 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relative to internal-revenue tax on fermented liquors, was announced as next in order.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Let that bill go over, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALDRICH in the chair). Objection being made, the bill goes over.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

Mr. MORGAN. The Secretary has passed over an order of business which ought to be called—House bill 2538.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The title of the bill will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 2538) to provide for the construction of a canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Mr. LODGE. I do not think we can discuss that now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the bill goes over.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts objects.

Mr. MORGAN. I did not hear the objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair heard it. The Senator from Massachusetts objects.

Mr. MORGAN. I will say to the Senator from Massachusetts that I am perfectly willing to take a vote on the bill without debate.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator knows very well that at this time we could not possibly pass the bill without debate.

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to ask a parliamentary question. Am I prevented now, by the unanimous consent agreement of the Senate just made, from the consideration of the bill?

Mr. GALLINGER. Oh, yes.

Mr. LODGE. Upon that point I am not prepared to speak.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair understands the agreement to be that the Senate shall proceed with the consideration of unobjected House bills upon the Calendar.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. And that an objection restores a bill to the Calendar when it is once taken up. The next bill will be announced.

EXTENSION OF PATENT.

The bill (H. R. 5711) extending the term of patent No. 287230 was announced as next in order.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill goes over. The next bill will be stated.

ELECTION OF SENATORS.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 28) proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of Senators of the United States was announced as the next business in order.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is an adverse report. Let it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the joint resolution goes over.

WASHINGTON TELEPHONE COMPANY.

The bill (H. R. 9047) to incorporate the Washington Telephone Company and to permit it to install, maintain, and operate a telephone plant and exchanges in the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCOMAS. I ask that the bill be taken up.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the next bill will be announced.

AGNES AND MARIA DE LEON.

The bill (H. R. 2619) for the relief of Agnes and Maria De Leon was announced as next in order.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. That item went on the deficiency appropriation bill yesterday. I do not know whether it has been retained or not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill goes over.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I do not object to it.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I trust my friend will not object to the bill and will permit me to make a brief statement.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I did not object to it. I said the item went on the deficiency appropriation bill yesterday, and I do not know whether it was retained or not.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Probably that was another bill.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The names were those of these parties.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I ask that the bill may be considered now. It is for the relief of two old ladies in the Garfield Hospital here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read for information, subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to Agnes De Leon and Maria De Leon, heirs at law of Rebecca L. De Leon, deceased, the sum of $1,000 for injury to the buildings of said Rebecca L. De Leon in Albuquerque, N. Mex., and consequent loss of rent, in the year 1862, and in the lifetime of the said Rebecca L. De Leon, which buildings, while occupied under a lease by the United States, were partially destroyed by the United States troops to prevent them and the stores therein contained from falling into the hands of the enemy in the war between the States.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I should like to ask what is the statement made in that bill. Is it that these injuries were done to prevent the buildings from "falling into the hands of the enemy?"

Mr. DOLLIVER. I presume that probably I am the only Senator who has any familiarity with this bill. I had my attention called to it in the House.

These two claimants are old women, now in the Garfield Hospital in this city. They are without friends or influential connections. Their property in Texas was rented to the Government, and when the Government gave up the occupation of it a portion of the buildings were burned, and the occupation of it itself occasioned serious damage to the buildings, which damage was assessed. The Committee on Claims in the House has reported the bill from time to time, but as the old people have been without friends or anyone to speak for them, the matter has been neglected. The committee reduced the amount of their claim more than one-half. I frankly confess there is an element of sympathy and of charity in their claim, and I trust no objection will be made to the passage of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut called the attention of the Chair to the fact that this bill was inserted in the deficiency appropriation bill which passed the Senate yesterday. The Chair finds upon examination of the RECORD that that was a fact. On page 3407 of the RECORD the following is found:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Alabama will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert the following:

"For the relief of Agnes and Maria De Leon, as shown in House bill 2619 and Senate report on that bill, No. 1619, $1,000."

Mr. ALLISON. If the Chair will allow me, the item was inserted in the deficiency bill and was stricken out in conference.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. That was the inquiry that I made.

Mr. DOLLIVER. It is out of the appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BURTON, Mr. REEVES, and Mr. CATCHINGS managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 1452) to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to John C. Weckler; and

A bill (H. R. 13776) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to deliver to the mayor and city council of Baltimore, Md., Ionic columns.

DISTRICT CODE BILL.

The bill (H. R. 9835) to establish a code of laws for the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that this bill has been read at length. Is there objection to its present consideration?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is one amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. PRITCHARD] has some amendments to submit to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia will be stated.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. President, there have been a great many amendments suggested to that bill——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The business of the Senate will be suspended until the Senate is in order. Senators and those entitled to the floor by courtesy must be in order. When Senators suspend conversation the Senate will proceed with business.

Mr. PRITCHARD. The Committee on the District of Columbia withdraws the amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There do not seem to be any amendments in the text except the date when the act shall go into effect. That amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 1, at the end of section 1, strike out "one" and insert "two;" so as to read: "1902."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further amendment proposed——

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask the Senator from North Carolina if he has not amendments to offer?

Mr. PRITCHARD. I have abandoned those amendments.

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not agree to the proposition to drop the amendments of the committee. There is no reason why they should not be incorporated in the bill. They relate to all the medical and sanitary laws of this District.

Mr. PRITCHARD. Very well; I offer the amendments that have been agreed upon by the committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. I represent interests here that I do not propose to have sacrificed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina reports further amendments from the Committee on the District of Columbia, which will be read.

The SECRETARY. In section 3, line 1, strike out the word "six" and insert the word "ten."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be agreed to, without objection.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let us see what it means.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clause may be read as proposed to be amended.

The Secretary read as follows:

There shall be ten justices of the peace in the District, who shall be appointed by the President of the United States, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in line 9, to strike out "four" and insert "two;" so as to read:

And shall either have held the office of justice of the peace in said District for a period of at least two years.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 17, to strike out "six" and insert "ten;" so as to read:

And said supreme court shall divide the said districts into ten subdistricts.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert at the end of section 5:

Should a suit be brought against any party or corporation in any district in which he or it does not reside or hold business, and a plea to the jurisdiction on this account be filed by said defendant, the party or corporation interposing such plea shall disclose under oath the district in which he or it should have been sued; and the justice, upon sustaining such plea, shall certify the cause for trial to the justice sitting in the district where suit should have been instituted; and should no such plea be filed before trial the justice shall be deemed to have had full jurisdiction. In any suit brought before a justice of the peace the defendant, his agent or attorney, may have the cause removed to the next nearest justice, upon filing an affidavit with the justice issuing the writ, on the return day or day of trial of the action, that he does not believe said justice will give him a fair and impartial trial.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 35, line 9, to strike out "two" and insert "four;" so as to read:

An appeal may be taken from the judgment, as in other cases, provided the same is prayed within four days after the entering judgment, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 226, line 3, after the word "thereof," to insert the following:

Including any final order or judgment in any case heard on appeal from a justice of the peace.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 553, line 17, to strike out "one" and insert "two;" also to strike out "eight" and insert "five."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 646, commencing with the word "Provided," line 24, to strike out all up to the word "said," in line 27.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 650, line 11, to insert after the word "receipts" the following:

And all insurance companies of every description, except mutual fire insurance companies, shall pay to the collector of taxes before March 1 of each year a sum equal to 1½ per cent of said premium receipts of the last preceding calendar year in lieu of all other taxes, except taxes upon real estate and any license fees provided for in sections 654 and 655; and upon the failure of any company to pay said taxes before March 1, as aforesaid, the license of said company shall be revoked and a penalty of 8 per cent per month shall be charged against said company, which, together with said taxes, shall be collected before said company shall be allowed to resume business.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 655, line 3, to strike out the word "beneficiary" and insert the word "beneficial;" also, same line, strike out the words "from operating" and insert the words "or apply to;" line 5, same section, strike out the word "beneficiary" and insert the word "beneficial;" also, same line, strike out the words "societies, orders, or," being in sequence.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the heading of subchapter 12, page 154, to change the word "benefit" to "beneficial."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 749, line 13, after the word "reserve" to insert a comma; also, in line 14, same section, after the word "reserve," to insert a comma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 751, page 156: At the end of said section insert as a new paragraph the following:

Any association doing business under this subchapter shall be permitted to do business upon filing annually with the superintendent of insurance the certificate of authority of the insurance department of the State, province, or Territory in which it is incorporated or organized: Provided, however, That in case of failure to file said certificate by any such association, or in case the superintendent of insurance shall deem it necessary, he shall have power, either personally or by some person designated by him, to examine into the condition, affairs, character, business methods, accounts, books, and investments of such association, at its home office, which examination shall be at the expense of the association. The amount of such expense shall not exceed $100 for associations which have no reserve or emergency fund and $200 for associations with a reserve or emergency fund.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add to section 842 the following:

Any person who obtains any lodging, food, or accommodation at an inn, boarding house, or lodging house without paying therefor, with intent to defraud the proprietor or manager thereof, or who obtains credit at such an inn, boarding house, or lodging house by the use of any false pretense, or who, after obtaining credit or accommodation at such an inn, boarding house, or lodging house, absconds or surreptitiously removes his baggage therefrom without paying for his food, accommodation, or lodging, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof in the police court of the District of Columbia be fined not more than $100 or imprisoned not more than six months, or both, in the discretion of said court.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1073, page 216, line 6, commencing with the word "unless," to strike out all down to the word "Provided," in line 8.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1574, line 2, to insert between the words "all" and "property" the word "private;" also in lines 2 and 3 to strike out the words "public and private;" and, same line, to insert between the words "and" and "all" the words "authenticated copies of."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1576, line 2, to strike out the word "public" and substitute the words "United States;" also, same line, between the words "property" and "of," to insert "under the jurisdiction of the Commissioners."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1601, line 4, to insert after the word "Columbia" the words "under their jurisdiction."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1636, page 314, after line 24, the end of the seventh exception, to add:

Eighth. An act to regulate the practice of pharmacy in the District of Columbia, approved June 15, 1878; an act for the regulation of the practice of dentistry in the District of Columbia, and for the protection of the people from empiricism in relation thereto, approved June 6, 1892; an act regulating the construction of buildings along alleyways in the District of Columbia, approved July 22, 1892; an act for the promotion of anatomical science, and to prevent the desecration of graves in the District of Columbia, approved February 25, 1895; an act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of medical and dental colleges in the District of Columbia, approved May 4, 1896; an act relating to the testimony of physicians in the courts of the District of Columbia, received by the President May 13, 1896; an act to regulate the practice of medicine and surgery, to license physicians and surgeons, and to punish persons violating the provisions thereof in the District of Columbia, approved June 3, 1896; and, generally, all acts or parts of acts relating to medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, the commitment of the insane to the Government Hospital for the Insane in the District of Columbia, the abatement of nuisances, and public health.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This completes the amendments of the committee. Are there further amendments to the bill as in Committee of the Whole? If not, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

EXCHANGE OF GOLD COIN FOR GOLD BARS.

The bill (H. R. 10698) to amend an act amending the act entitled "An act to authorize the receipt of United States gold coin in exchange for gold bars" was announced as next in order, and the Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President, I desire to make an inquiry. There is such confusion in the Chamber that it is impossible to hear the business that is being transacted. I desire to know what has become of the District code bill.

Mr. BURROWS and others. It was passed.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I could not hear its passage. I do not think it is fair or proper to pass any bill through this body when the confusion is such that the members of the Senate themselves when endeavoring to listen can not hear. I object to that matter. I desire to ask some questions concerning that bill. It is an important measure, and should not be passed upon the spur of the moment in confusion of this kind.

Mr. ALDRICH. The then occupant of the chair was very careful at every stage to put the motions clearly.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I was paying attention as much as I could, and yet the confusion was such that before I knew it the occupant of the chair had disappeared and the bill was passed. I did not hear that it was passed, and it is not fair to pass a bill in that way in the Senate of the United States, especially a bill of such importance.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Reporter's notes will show that the then occupant of the chair submitted both sides of the question to the Senate and declared the bill passed in regular form.

Mr. WELLINGTON. That may be possible. I do not say the Chair did not do that; but I do say that there was such commotion and confusion and such disorder in the Chamber that I could not hear the action taken, and I was listening. I intended to make objection to the passage of that bill unless it had in it some features that I desire to know about.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Has not the Senator from Maryland a perfect right to enter a motion to reconsider?

Mr. WELLINGTON. I desire to make that motion, if there is no other remedy. I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The Senate is proceeding by unanimous consent under a distinct understanding that bills not objected to are to be considered, and when a Senator states that he was in the Chamber and was trying to ascertain what was going on and did not know it, and objected to the consideration of a bill, I do not think there ought to be any objection to its being reconsidered. I think it ought to be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. HOAR. That is right.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let that be done.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maryland that the vote by which the bill to which he has referred be reconsidered? The Chair hears no objection, and the bill will again be placed before the Senate as soon as it can be returned from the Secretary's office.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I submit a resolution and ask action upon it.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the present conferees of the Senate upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon the naval appropriation bill be discharged from further duty, and that the House of Representatives is hereby requested to grant a conference with the Senate upon the disagreeing votes upon said bill.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, when the matter was before the Senate some little time ago and the papers were withdrawn the House conferees were upon the floor and were requested to meet the Senate conferees in the room of the Committee on Naval Affairs. The Senate conferees and one member of the conferees of the House have been there waiting since. The House conferees do not appear. Time is so short and such is the importance of the matter that, with no feeling whatever on the part of the Senate conferees, but in order that in some way we may emerge from this difficulty, I am directed to report the resolution, and as Senators were not listening I ask that it be read again.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Mr. President, that resolution has been twice read, but I should like to hear it read again.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be again read.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. HALE subsequently said: I ask unanimous consent that a message be sent to the House of Representatives recalling the resolution touching the naval appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 2866) to extend the provisions of section 8 of the act entitled "An act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, concerning prosecutions for cutting timber on public lands, to California, Oregon, and Washington;

A bill (S. 5484) to provide for subports of entry and delivery in the Territory of Hawaii;

A bill (S. 4509) extending to the city of Everett, Wash., a subport of entry, the privileges of the act approved June 10, 1880, governing the immediate transportation of dutiable merchandise;

A bill (S. 4687) for the relief of Richard H. Townley, a lieutenant (junior grade) on the retired list of the United States Navy;

A bill (S. 4956) to grant the Knoxville Power Company the right to dam the Tennessee River at or near Knoxville, Tenn.;

A bill (H. R. 12901) to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of lands, etc.;

A bill (H. R. 14260) to amend an act entitled "An act to constitute a new division of the eastern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for the holding of terms of court at Sherman, Tex., and for the appointment of a clerk of said court, and for other purposes," approved February 19, 1900; and

A bill (H. R. 14309) for the reward of enlisted men of the Navy or Marine Corps.

SEABOARD AND ROANOKE RAILROAD, ETC.

Mr. WARREN, from the Committee on Claims, to whom were referred the following bills:

A bill (S. 1161) for the relief of the Seaboard and Roanoke Railroad Company;

A bill (S. 5307) for the relief of Thomas W. Evans and the heirs of William Evans and of William R. Elliston;

A bill (S. 5308) for the relief of Thomas W. Evans;

A bill (S. 6064) for the relief of Samuel M. Blair; and

A bill (S. 6035) for the relief of James W. Manier, sr.,

reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the claims represented by the following bills, to wit, S. 1161, S. 5307, S. 5308, S. 6064, and S. 6035, for the relief of the Seaboard and Roanoke Railroad Company; for the relief of Thomas W. Evans and the heirs of William Evans and of William R. Elliston; for the relief of Thomas W. Evans; for the relief of Samuel M. Blair, and for the relief of James W. Manier, sr., now pending in the Senate, together with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same are hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," approved March 3, 1887. And the said court shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such act, and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. HOAR. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 13396) to amend section 5546 of the Revised Statutes, to report it favorably without amendment.

I wish to state in the hearing of the Senate that I was authorized by the Committee on the Judiciary to report a Senate bill exactly like the House bill, but that report has not yet been made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be placed on the Calendar.

DISTRICT CODE BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the bill (H. R. 9835) to establish a code of laws for the District of Columbia, the vote by which the bill was ordered to a third reading and passed having been reconsidered. The bill is before the Senate open to amendment.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I desire to ask any member of the committee having the bill in charge whether or not there has been included in the bill the amendment originally proposed by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KYLE], concerning the marriage laws of the District of Columbia? There was an understanding that that amendment should be placed on the bill, and I desire to know whether it has been included.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say that the two Senators having this bill in charge, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. MCCOMAS] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. PRITCHARD], have left the Chamber since the bill was passed. They left supposing that it had been finally acted upon. I am unable to answer the Senator's question further than to say that I think the amendment to which he has referred has not been incorporated in the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is the amendment originally proposed by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KYLE], the Chair understands.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has that amendment in his hands. It has not been agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. Then let the Senator from Maryland offer it.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I offer the amendments as originally proposed by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KYLE] to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maryland offers amendments which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 39, after section 185, it is proposed to insert:

The clerk of the court in which any proceeding for divorce shall be instituted shall immediately notify the United States attorney of the institution of such proceeding, and it shall be the duty of said attorney to enter his appearance therein in order to prevent collusion and to protect public morals.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 199, to strike out sections 966 and 967, and insert:

SEC. 966. Causes for divorce a vinculo and for divorce a mensa et thoro.—A divorce from the bond of marriage may be granted only where one of the parties has committed adultery during the marriage: Provided, That in such case the innocent party only may remarry, but nothing herein contained shall prevent the remarriage of the divorced parties to each other: And provided, That legal separation from bed and board may be granted for drunkenness, cruelty, or desertion: And provided, That marriage contracts may be declared void in the following cases:

First. Where such marriage was contracted while either of the parties thereto had a former wife or husband living, unless the former marriage had been lawfully dissolved.

Second. Where such marriage was contracted during the lunacy of either party (unless there had been voluntary cohabitation after the lunacy) or was procured by fraud or coercion.

Third. Where either party was matrimonially incapacitated at the time of marriage and has continued so.

Fourth. Where either of the parties had not arrived at the age of legal consent to the contract of marriage (unless there has been voluntary cohabitation after coming to legal age), but in such cases only at the suit of the party not capable of consenting.

SEC. 967. Foregoing section not retroactive.—The provisions of this act shall not invalidate any marriage heretofore solemnized according to law, or affect the validity of any decree or judgment of divorce heretofore pronounced.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

EXCHANGE OF GOLD COIN FOR GOLD BARS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 10698) to amend an act amending the act entitled "An act to authorize the receipt of United States gold coin in exchange for gold bars."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This bill was read in full a few moments ago. Is there objection to its present consideration?

Mr. TELLER. I do not desire to object to the bill. I think it ought to be changed, but I will not make a motion to amend. It ought to be entitled "A bill to encourage the export of gold."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE OLEOMARGARINE BILL.

The bill (H. R. 3717) to make oleomargarine and other imitation dairy products subject to the laws of the State or Territory into which they are transported, and to change the tax on oleomargarine, was announced as next in order.

Mr. PROCTOR. That is the oleomargarine bill, and it might possibly lead to debate. [Laughter.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill being objected to, goes over.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. NELSON. I desire to make a conference report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be received.

The Secretary read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 7, 13, 22, 25, 39, 46, 52, 55, 56, 60, 66, 67, 68, 69, 71, 72, 73, 79, 84, 86, 87, 88, 89, 91, 95, 100, 103, 109, 111, 114, 119, 122, 123, 124, 125, 132, 143, 151, 152, 153, 155, 156, 157, 159, 164, 171, 172, 176, 191, 198, 200, 201, 202, 203, 227, 228, 235, 236, 237, 244, 246, 248, 253, 268, 269, 271, 272, 276, 281, 283, 291, 294, 299.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 18, 19, 20, 21, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 47, 48, 49, 57, 59, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 74, 75, 76, 78, 80, 81, 82, 85, 90, 92, 94, 96, 97, 98, 99, 104, 105, 106, 107, 110, 112, 113, 115, 116, 117, 118, 120, 121, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 133, 134, 135, 137, 139, 140, 141, 142, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 158, 160, 161, 162, 166, 167, 169, 170, 174, 175, 178, 180, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 192, 193, 194, 195, 197, 199, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 211, 212, 213, 214, 217, 218, 222, 223, 224, 225, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 238, 239, 240, 241, 245, 247, 249, 250, 252, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 264, 265, 266, 267, 270, 273, 274, 275, 277, 278, 279, 280, 282, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 292, 293, 295, 296, 297, 298, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 16: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In the language proposed by the Senate amendment insert before the word "selecting" the words "determining the advisability of;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 17: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 17, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$30,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 23: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted insert the following: "Continuing improvement, with a view to obtaining a channel not less than 30 feet deep and with the greatest practicable width, $250,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 24: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the language proposed to be stricken out and in lieu of the sum named insert "$10,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 50: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 50, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted insert "twenty-five thousand;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 51: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Amend the paragraph so it will read:

"Improving harbor at Pensacola, Fla.: Continuing improvement and for maintenance, $220,000, of which amount $150,000 may be used for the construction of a seagoing suction dredge to be used in improving the harbors at Pensacola, Carrabelle, and Apalachicola, Fla."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 53: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 53, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted insert the following:

"Improving Biscayne Bay, Florida, by obtaining a uniform depth of 15 feet of water in a harbor or basin on the east side of Biscayne Bay, and a depth of 15 feet in a channel from said basin by way of the line north of Norris Cut to the sea, in accordance with the project submitted in House Document No. 962, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session, $200,000, out of which amount herein appropriated the Secretary of War may in his discretion construct a suitable dredge for use on said project."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 54: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 54, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the words proposed insert the words "three hundred and fifty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 58: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 58, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "one million eight hundred and twenty-nine thousand one hundred and sixty-seven;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 70: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 70, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$262,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 77: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 77, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "breakwater," where it occurs for the second time in the paragraph, insert the words "to be extended eastwardly from the breakwater now under construction;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 83: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 83, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the word "prosecute," proposed to be inserted, restore the word "complete," and after the word "aggregate" in same paragraph strike out the words "two hundred and forty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the words "two hundred and seventy;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 93: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 93, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Add at the end of the language proposed to be inserted the following words: "Exclusive of the cost of land required, if any;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 101: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 101, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed insert the following:

"Improving inner harbor at San Pedro, Cal., by dredging to the lower end of the wharves, $100,000; and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to use so much thereof as may be necessary for the construction of a suitable dredge."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 102: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 102, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In the language proposed to be inserted strike out all after the word "session" and insert in lieu thereof the words "one hundred and fifty thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 108: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 108, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the word "forty" proposed to be inserted, insert the word "eighty-one;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 126: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 126, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$15,000" and insert thereafter a new paragraph, as follows:

"Improving St. Jones River, Delaware, in accordance with the report submitted in House Document No. 165, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session, $10,000."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 136: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 136, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In the language proposed to be inserted strike out the word "prosecute" and insert in lieu thereof the word "complete;" and at the end of the language proposed insert the following: "Provided, That the contract herein authorized shall be entered into on or before June 30, 1902;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 138: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 138, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed insert the following: "In accordance with the report submitted in House Document No. 180, Fifty-sixth Congress, second session, $150,000, to be expended in obtaining a suitable navigable channel from Wilmington to Fayetteville;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 154: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 154, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed insert the following: "And the sum of $8,000 is hereby appropriated for dredging and improving the channel between Rome, Ga., and Lock No. 4;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 163: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 163, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$275,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 165: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 165, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the paragraph proposed to be stricken out, with an amendment as follows: In the first two lines strike out the words "A board of three engineers shall be appointed by the President from civil life" and insert the following: "A board of four engineers shall be appointed by the President, of whom two shall be from civil life and two from the Engineer Corps of the Army;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 173: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 173, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the words proposed to be inserted insert the following: "Provided, That the Secretary of War may expend any part of this sum, in his discretion, in the improvement of the mountain section in accordance with House Document No. 461, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 177: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 177, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted insert the following:

"Improving Tug and Levisa forks of the Big Sandy River, West Virginia and Kentucky, by construction of a lock and dam on each of said forks next above their junction, in accordance with the report submitted in House Document No. 235, Fifty-sixth Congress, second session, $300,000: Provided, That a contract or contracts may be entered into by the Secretary of War for such materials and work as may be required to prosecute the project recommended in said report, or said material may be purchased and work done otherwise than by contract, to be paid for as appropriations may from time to time be made by law, not to exceed in the aggregate $250,000, exclusive of the amount herein or heretofore appropriated."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 179: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 179, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed to be stricken out insert the following:

"Improving Licking River, Kentucky: Improving the Three-mile Ripple and adjoining shoals, in accordance with report submitted in House Document No. 645, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session, $100,000."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 181: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 181, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "dollars," in the language proposed to be inserted, insert the following: ", or so much thereof as may be necessary;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 182: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 182, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "what" and before the word "steps," in the language proposed, insert the word "legal;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 196: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 196, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the word "thirty" insert the word "twenty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 210: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 210, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed insert the following: "of which amount the Secretary of War is hereby authorized, if in his judgment the same is required in the interest of navigation, to expend $50,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, in preventing erosion of the banks at or near Sawyers Bend, so as to improve the channel and preserve the protection works at said point;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 215: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 215, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$2,000,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 216: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 216, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$3,000,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 226: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 226, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the word "fifteen" proposed to be inserted, insert the word "thirty-five," and after the word "dollars" insert the following: ", of which $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, may be used for the completion of the lock and dam at Brenneckes Shoals;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 234: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 234, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of inserting the language proposed in the amendment, strike out all of the paragraph after the word "Washington" and insert the words "For improvement and maintenance, $18,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 242: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 242, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted insert the following:

"Snake River, Alaska: The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and empowered to license any person, persons, company, or corporation to dredge and open the mouth of Snake River, at Nome City, in the district of Alaska, to enable small vessels and lighters to enter therein at any stage of the tide and during all conditions of weather; to construct wharves for commercial purposes, and to charge tolls during a period not to exceed ten years for the use of such improvements, according to plans and specifications and schedule of tolls to be approved by and under the direction of the Secretary of War: Provided, That the acceptance of the license shall be a complete waiver of any demand for compensation for such improvement."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 243: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 243, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In the language proposed, strike out, after the word "resolution," the words "of Congress, or requested by the Committee on Commerce of the Senate or the Committee on Rivers and Harbors of the House of Representatives;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 251: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 251, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted insert the following:

"The Secretary of War is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to permit mills or lumber manufactories now existing and operated by water upon the St. Croix River, the Machias River, the Narraguagus River, the Union River, the Denneys River, the Chandler River, the Pleasant River, and the Tunk River, in the State of Maine, to discharge their fine or short sawdust into said rivers."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 254: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 254, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of inserting the language proposed strike out all the paragraph after the word "Congress" where it last occurs; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 261: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 261, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted insert the following: "Wabash River from its mouth to Mount Carmel;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 262: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 262, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the language proposed strike out the period and insert the words "exclusive of the cost of land required, if any;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendments numbered 168, 219, 220, 221: As to amendments numbered 168, 219, 220, 221, the conferees have been unable to reach an agreement.

KNUTE NELSON,
JAMES McMILLAN,
JAMES H. BERRY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

THEODORE E. BURTON,
WALTER REEVES,
T. C. CATCHINGS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senate agree to the conference report?

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Will the Senator from Minnesota state the points in disagreement?

Mr. NELSON. I move the adoption of the report, and after the report has been adopted, I shall move to insist on the four amendments that are still in disagreement. Before submitting that motion, however, I desire to make a brief statement.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. That is what I desire to have the Senator do.

Mr. NELSON. This bill, as it came from the House originally, appropriated $59,935,415, or nearly $60,000,000, of which nearly $23,000,000 was direct appropriations and $37,000,000 continuing contracts. As the bill passed the Senate, the aggregate amount was $50,854,000, of which $22,288,000 were direct appropriations and $28,565,000 continuing contracts. We have cut the aggregate of the bill in conference to $49,675,000, or over a million dollars. Of this amount $23,000,000 was in direct appropriations and $26,477,000 for continuing contracts.

We have agreed about everything except four items. Those four items are two reservoirs in the State of Wyoming, one reservoir in the State of South Dakota, and the fourth is the appropriation of $400,000 to the Brazos Improvement Company to settle a matter which I shall explain a little further on.

The first of the reservoir amendments appropriated $50,000 cash and $165,000 for a continuing contract, which is based upon a survey made two or three years ago under the direction of the War Department.

For the second reservoir, in Wyoming, there was appropriated $50,000 in direct appropriations and $25,000 for continuing contract. That is based upon a survey conducted by the Geological Survey.

The next item is a reservoir and dam on the Sioux River, in South Dakota. The amendment adopted by the Senate was as follows:

For building dams and constructing reservoirs on the Sioux River, in South Dakota, to control the flow of said stream and impound the flood waters to secure a permanent stage of water in the Missouri River, $52,500.

The other item in disagreement is an appropriation of $400,000 for the Brazos Improvement Company. I want to make a brief explanation as to that. Several years ago—I do not remember how many, but a dozen or more years ago—the Brazos Improvement Company made great improvements on the Brazos River and built a harbor there, under a legislative provision for a contract, by which the improvement was to be made at their own expense, with the privilege of collecting tolls.

They carried on extensive improvements, building docks and jetties and dredging. They claimed that they spent over a million dollars in those improvements. The company became embarrassed, suspended, and was unable to further carry on the work. They came here to Congress two years ago, I think, and asked the Government to take the work off their hands and to make it a Government work. We appropriated at that time $85,000, on the condition that the company would give us a complete deed to their property and improvements there, and they have come to this Congress.

A provision, I might say, was made at that time for an investigation by the War Department as to the amount of money the company had expended in making the improvement. A report was made by the engineers of the War Department on that matter. The company claimed that they had spent over a million dollars in making that improvement, but the Government engineers, after boiling it down in every possible direction, found that the actual value of the work to the Government as it existed at that time was less than that, but that the Government could not replace it at any less figure than $600,000.

The company came to the Committee on Commerce and asked us to give them that amount as a matter of equity. They had no legal right to it, but they said: "Here we have spent a million dollars; you have got this improvement; you have taken the work, and you ought to recompense us as a matter of equity." I do not think anybody will contend that there was the least bit of legal obligation to pay them a cent; but they did have some equities. They asked for $600,000, the amount found by the Government engineers as the value of the work.

Through the efforts of the Committee on Commerce we have effected a compromise, or made an agreement with them, by which they agreed to take $400,000, with a provision that they would deed 1 mile of river front 300 feet wide to the Government for dock and wharf purposes, and, the property being mortgaged, that we were to retain $20,000 of that appropriation of $400,000 until they could give us a clean title. The 1 mile of river front was to be selected by the Secretary of War, and they were to give us a good title.

These are substantially the whole matters that are in disagreement—the two reservoirs in Wyoming, the reservoir in South Dakota, and this claim of the Brazos Improvement Company of $400,000. As to these matters the House conferees have decided and said they can not yield. We have reported a disagreement and desire to take the sense of the Senate on these matters.

I am unwilling to take up further time of the Senate, but will answer any question that may be put to me.

Mr. CULLOM. Do I understand the chairman of the conference committee to say that he desires to give up the Brazos River item?

Mr. NELSON. No; nothing of the kind. I have reported a disagreement, and I intend to take the sense of the Senate upon it.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senate will instruct its conferees to stand by that provision.

Mr. NELSON. After the report has been adopted I shall move that the Senate insist upon the amendments in disagreement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. NELSON. I move that the Senate still further insist upon its amendments disagreed to by the House of Representatives and ask for a further conference thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. NELSON, Mr. MCMILLAN, and Mr. BERRY were appointed.

J. W. PEGLOW.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill from the House of Representatives, which will be read by its title.

The bill (H. R. 14269) confirming a lease between J. W. Peglow and the Seneca Nation of New York Indians was read twice by its title.

Mr. THURSTON. Mr. President, this matter in a different form, but involving the same legislation, has been considered and acted upon favorably by the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate may proceed to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. That, I think, would be contrary to the spirit of the agreement under which we are acting. The bill should take its place on the Calendar, and it can be reported by a committee and be taken up in its proper order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being made, the bill will go to the Calendar.

HOME FOR AGED AND INFIRM COLORED PEOPLE.

The bill (H. R. 10305) to provide a home for aged and infirm colored people was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. That will excite debate.

Mr. ALDRICH. There are certain items in that bill which are sure to give rise to considerable discussion, and I feel constrained to object to its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being made, the bill goes over.

ST. JOHN'S LODGE, OF NEWBERN, N. C.

The bill (H. R. 636) for the relief of St. John's Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, No. 3, of Newbern, N. C., was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. LODGE. Let that bill go over, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being made, the bill goes over.

AFFIDAVITS UNDER HOMESTEAD ACTS, ETC.

The bill (H. R. 5483) to amend section 2294 of the Revised Statutes of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, I think that bill had better go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being made, the bill goes over.

REVISION AND CODIFICATION OF LAWS.

The bill (H. R. 7844) to provide for the revision and codification of the permanent and general laws of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. That matter was incorporated in the deficiency bill, if I am not mistaken.

Mr. ALDRICH. In the sundry civil bill.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. If it remains in that bill, there is no occasion for passing this bill.

Mr. ALLISON. It has been provided for in another form. The subject has been covered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being made, the bill goes over.

HEIRS OF GEORGE W. SAULPAW.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1959) for the relief of the heirs of George W. Saulpaw. It provides that there shall be paid to the heirs of George W. Saulpaw $7,000, in full compensation for the steamer Alfred Robb, taken by the United States for the use of the Government during the late rebellion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNIE CHAMBERLAIN.

The bill (H. R. 6776) granting a pension to Annie Chamberlain was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Annie Chamberlain, widow of James A. Chamberlain, late of Company D, Sixth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $8 per month.

J. V. DAVIS.

The bill (H. R. 2294) for the relief of J. V. Davis, of Alexandria, Va., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to J. V. Davis, superintendent of the Alexandria (Va.) National Cemetery, $500, to reimburse him for personal property destroyed by fire, incurred in his efforts to save the property of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM CRAMP SHIP AND ENGINE BUILDING COMPANY.

Mr. STEWART. The bill (H. R. 1605) for the relief of the William Cramp & Son Ship and Engine Building Company, of Philadelphia, Pa., was objected to by the Senator from North Carolina, and he informs me this evening that he withdraws his objection.

Mr. ALDRICH. That had better come up in its regular order.

Mr. STEWART. It will not be reached in its regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is on the Calendar under Rule VIII.

Mr. ALDRICH. Then it is not in order now.

Mr. TELLER. That has been objected to.

Mr. HEITFELD. I object to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being made, the bill goes over.

JOHN W. HORNER.

The bill (H. R. 11998) granting an increase of pension to John W. Horner was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of John W. Horner, late of Company C, First Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANCIS M. THOMPSON.

The bill (H. R. 13186) granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Thompson was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions, with an amendment, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "seventy-two" and insert "sixty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Francis M. Thompson, late of Company D, Twenty-first Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $60 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask that the committee amendment may be disagreed to.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GROTIUS N. UDELL.

The bill (H. R. 13329) granting a pension to Grotius N. Udell was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions, with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Grotius N. Udell, late of Company D, Sixth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $72 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Grotius N. Udell."

ELIZA R. CRAWFORD.

The bill (H. R. 4120) to pay Eliza R. Crawford the amount of a United States loan certificate issued in 1779 was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. ALDRICH. I think that had better go over.

Mr. WARREN. I think the unanimous-consent agreement requires the reading of a bill, and then the objection can be made after it has been read. I should like to have this bill read.

Mr. ALDRICH. I am willing to object to it on the title.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator from Wyoming desires it to be read, the bill will be read.

Mr. ALDRICH. It relates to a loan certificate issued in 1779. It seems to me that is a good while ago.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. I renew my objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill goes over.

LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF EDWIN DE LEON.

The bill (H. R. 2617) for the relief of the legal representatives of Edwin De Leon, deceased, for $8,000 due him for judicial services, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. If the title is changed, does the bill go back to the House?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The title ought to be changed, because it asserts that $8,000 is due for judicial services. I move to amend the title of the bill so as to read: "claimed for judicial services."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The title will be amended as suggested by the Senator from Connecticut.

The title was amended so as to read:

A bill for the relief of the legal representatives of Edwin De Leon, deceased, for $8,000 claimed by him to be due for judicial services.

MARGARET L. B. PARSONS.

It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Samuel Baughman, late of Company C, Sixty-sixth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $16 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move, in line 8, to strike out "sixteen," before the word "dollars," and insert "twelve."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ADMINISTRATOR OF MARY R. FROST.

The bill (H. R. 3696) for the relief of the administrator of Mary R. Frost, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to redeem, in favor of the administrator of the estate of Mary R. Frost, certain United States 4½ per cent registered bonds, with interest accrued and unpaid to the date of their maturity, the bonds having been lost in the mails after having been assigned in blank.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY BARRON.

The bill (H. R. 7072) granting a pension to Mary Barron was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mary Barron, widow of Francis Barron, late of the Third Battery, Iowa Volunteer Light Artillery, and to pay her a pension of $8 per month and $2 per month additional for the surviving minor child of the soldier until such child shall have arrived at the age of 16 years.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KATY KURTH.

The bill (H. R. 7688) granting a pension to Katy Kurth was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Katy Kurth, the helpless and dependent daughter of George Kurth, late of Company I, Eighteenth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELLEN PRATT.

The bill (H. R. 13173) granting an increase of pension to Ellen Pratt was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Ellen Pratt, widow of Albert Pratt, late of Company B, Fourth Regiment United States Artillery, war with Mexico, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ARTHUR CONNELL.

The bill (H. R. 573) for the relief of Arthur Connell was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to Arthur Connell, of Lynchburg, Va., $2,050, that amount having been collected by the Treasury agents of the United States from property belonging to Arthur Connell in Memphis, Tenn., and by them turned over to the Treasury Department.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What is the amount involved?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Two thousand and fifty dollars.

Mr. TELLER. I will say that a similar bill has heretofore passed the Senate and the House.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. A. B. MILES AND OTHERS.

The bill (H. R. 8032) to reimburse J. A. B. Miles, E. D. Kelly, and Rawlings Webster was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to James A. B. Miles $200, to E. D. Kelly $328.02, and to Rawlings Webster $440.79 as a reimbursement to them for moneys paid to the United States internal-revenue collector at Brooklyn, N. Y., to cover shortage in the adhesive-stamp account in the internal-revenue department in Brooklyn, N. Y., the shortage not having been caused by any malfeasance or dishonesty on their part.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOME FOR AGED AND INFIRM COLORED PEOPLE.

Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to inquire what disposition has been made of the bill (H. R. 10305) to provide a home for aged and infirm colored people. I was called out of the Senate by the business of the Senate. I am very anxious to have that bill passed, and I ask that the Senate may recur to it and consider and act upon it. The bill has been read, I am informed.

Mr. TELLER. It went over under objection.

Mr. ALDRICH. It went over on objection under the rule.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection was made, and the bill went over.

Mr. CHANDLER. I want to appeal to the Senator who made the objection to that bill to withdraw his objection, if he will. It gives $100,000 for a colored people's home in this city. The money is to be taken from money which would have accrued——

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I rise to a question of order.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator will do me the kindness to allow me to finish the sentence?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I hope the Senator does not want to violate the unanimous-consent agreement, by debating a matter which has already gone over.

Mr. CHANDLER. I do not. I wish to make a request for unanimous consent, if the Senator from Arkansas and the Senator who objected to the bill will allow it to be passed. If the Senator persists in his objection, I will say to the Senator from Arkansas that of course I shall not endeavor——

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I do not know whether the Senator who objected will persist in his objection or not, but I will if he does not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made, and the bill goes over.

Mr. CHANDLER. One moment. I ask to have printed in the RECORD a petition of the colored people praying for the passage of this bill, and the signatures to it. It is very brief, and the signatures are those of the very best and most influential colored people in this country. I ask that it may be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection. The Chair hears none, and the order is made.

The petition referred to is as follows:

C.

We, the undersigned citizens, renew our petition to the Congress of the United States, praying for action upon the subject to provide a national memorial home for the aged and infirm colored people of the United States out of the money now lying in the Treasury which is legally and justly due to the colored people of the country, as shown by the reports made by Congress in the Fifty-third, Fifty-fourth, and Fifty-fifth Congresses, and as this subject was favorably considered in the Fifty-third, Fifty-fourth, and Fifty-fifth Congresses, passed the Senate in the Fifty-fifth Congress, and was reported favorably in the House, and only failed for the lack of time; and as the proposed institution is much needed for the aged and infirm of our people, we pray, therefore, that it may have immediate action of the Fifty-sixth Congress.

MERIWETHER SNUFF AND TOBACCO COMPANY.

The bill (H. R. 2659) for the relief of Meriwether Snuff and Tobacco Company, at Clarksville, Tenn., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to reimburse Meriwether Snuff and Tobacco Company, manufacturers of snuff and plug and smoking tobacco, at Clarksville, Tenn., for $3,093.48 expended by that corporation for revenue stamps, and which were destroyed while affixed to 60,000 6-ounce bottles of snuff, 9,552 4-ounce bottles of snuff, 13,896 4-ounce cans of snuff, etc.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF MRS. TELLISSE W. WILSON.

The bill (H. R. 427) for the relief of heirs of Mrs. Tellisse W. Wilson was read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I should like to object for the present. Perhaps I will withdraw my objection when I can find what the nature of the claim is.

Mr. TELLER. I wish to say to the Senator——

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Is there a House report? I only want to examine the House report.

Mr. TELLER. There is. I have the report here.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Let it lie for a moment. I want to look at the report. [A pause.] I withdraw my objection.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to the heirs of Tellisse W. Wilson, late a resident of Corinth, Miss., $4,419.15 for property taken and used by the United States Army at Corinth, Miss., during the war of the rebellion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. P. OUZTS.

The bill (H. R. 8946) to pay to J. P. Ouzts $209.50 for services as deputy collector of internal revenue for the district of South Carolina was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AUSTIN A. YATES.

The bill (H. R. 6591) for the relief of Austin A. Yates was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to settle the accounts of Austin A. Yates, late captain, Fourteenth Veteran Reserve Corps, and to give him credit for the sum of $13,537.50, charged to him on the books of the Second Auditor's Office, that sum having been stolen from the safe of his office at Syracuse, N. Y., on the night of March 25, 1865, while he was acting provost-marshal of the Twenty-third district of New York.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JANE HUNTER.

The bill (H. R. 7995) granting a pension to Jane Hunter was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Jane Hunter, the dependent and helpless daughter of Thomas Hunter, late of Company D, One hundred and eleventh Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARTERS OF NATIONAL BANKS.

The bill (H. R. 12333) to provide for the extension of the charters of national banks was announced as next in order.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Let that go over.

Mr. ALDRICH. Will the Senator allow me to make a statement, not to take a minute?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Certainly.

Mr. ALDRICH. The present charters of the national banks expire from time to time, commencing July 14, 1902. The law is that new plates shall be issued to all banks in extending their charters. The preparation of these plates will take nearly a year, and it is desirable that this bill should be passed at this session. There can be no objection to it. It is simply a matter of form, as certainly the time of the charters will be extended in the next Congress.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I do not believe the charters ever ought to have been issued, and I am certainly opposed to their ever being renewed. I believe the system is a pernicious one and has a tendency to breed panic, to expand the currency when it ought to be contracted and to contract it when it ought to be expanded. Japan adopted this system and after thorough investigation repealed the law, and for this very reason.

Under this system, which is a branch of our financial system, the banks can produce a panic whenever they please and wreck the property of this country or of any other country where the system exists. The subject ought to be studied and thoroughly investigated. These charters never should be renewed, and a remedy should be offered by which we could have an elastic currency rather than one which produces too much when there is already too much, and too little when there is already too little, and puts the control of the volume of the money of the country in the hands of a combination of national bankers. I therefore object to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill goes over.

MELVINA GREENAWALT.

The bill (H. R. 3491) granting a pension to Melvina Greenawalt was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Melvina Greenawalt, widow of Abraham Greenawalt, late of the Quartermaster's Department, United States Army, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DEVISEES OF CASPER BARBER.

The bill (H. R. 11830) for the relief of the devisees of Casper Barber and their assigns from the operation of the act restricting the ownership of real estate in the Territories and the District of Columbia to American citizens was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, in line 4, after the name "Casper Barber," to insert "and to George E. King;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That all real estate lying in the District of Columbia heretofore purchased by and conveyed to Casper Barber and to George E. King, of said District, prior to the passage of this act be relieved and exempted from the operation of an act entitled "An act to restrict the ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens," approved March 3, 1887, and all forfeitures incurred by force of said act are in respect of such real estate hereby remitted.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH M. KILLEN.

The bill (H. R. 11303) granting a pension to Elizabeth M. Killen was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Elizabeth M. Killen, the dependent and helpless daughter of James Killen, late of Company D, Tenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH CAUSEY.

The bill (H. R. 7202) granting a pension to Elizabeth Causey was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions, with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth Causey, widow of Ajax Causey, late of Company K, Eighteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of Wiley Causey, helpless and dependent child of said Ajax Causey, the additional pension herein granted on account of such child shall cease and determine.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Causey."

WILLIS BRADY.

The bill (H. R. 12801) granting a pension to Willis Brady was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Willis Brady, late of Company F, Ninth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PENSIONS OF CERTAIN WIDOWS.

Mr. GALLINGER. The bill (H. R. 9886) to restore certain widows to the pension roll was objected to by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] on the ground that as the bill was to be amended it probably would not get consideration in the House. I am assured that it will be considered in the House if it is passed, and I now ask that we recur to that bill and take it up.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Is that a Senate bill?

Mr. GALLINGER. It is a House bill. It is the first House bill on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read.

The bill (H. R. 9886) to restore certain widows to the pension roll was read and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That section 4708 of the laws of the United States governing the granting of Army and Navy pensions be, and the same is, amended to read as follows:

The remarriage of any widow, dependent mother, or dependent sister entitled to pension shall not bar her right to such pension to the date of her remarriage, whether an application therefor was filed before or after such marriage; but on the remarriage of any widow, dependent mother, or dependent sister having a pension, such pension shall cease: Provided, however, That any widow who was the lawful wife of any officer or enlisted man in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States during the period of his service in any war, and whose name was placed or shall hereafter be placed on the pension roll because of her husband's death as the result of wound or injury received or disease contracted in such military or naval service, and whose name has been or shall hereafter be dropped from said pension roll by reason of her marriage to another person who has since died or shall hereafter die, or from whom she has been heretofore or shall be hereafter divorced, upon her own application and without fault on her part, and if she is without means of support other than her daily labor as defined by the acts of June 27, 1890, and May 9, 1900, shall be entitled to have her name again placed on the pension roll at the rate now provided for widows by the acts of July 14, 1862, March 3, 1873, and March 19, 1886, such pension to commence from the date of the filing of her application in the Pension Bureau after the approval of this act: And provided further, That where such widow is already in receipt of a pension from the United States she shall not be entitled to restoration under this act: And provided further, That where the pension of said widow on her second or subsequent marriage has accrued to a helpless or idiotic child, or a child or children under the age of 16 years, she shall not be entitled to restoration under this act unless said helpless or idiotic child, or child or children under 16 years of age, be then a member or members of her family and cared for by her, and upon the restoration of said widow the payment of pension to said child or children shall cease.

SEC. 2. No claim agent or other person shall be entitled to receive any compensation for services in making application for pension under this act.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I should like to hear read the report made in connection with that bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator from Mississippi allow me to make a brief statement?

Mr. SULLIVAN. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. This bill proposes to relieve the Committee on Pensions and Congress from passing a large number of private bills. We probably have passed twenty-five or thirty bills of this nature this year.

It simply provides that where a woman who was the wife of a soldier during the war has remarried and becomes a widow again, and is in utter destitution, she may be placed upon the pension roll at the rate she was receiving at the date of her remarriage. We are passing such private bills; there is no objection to them. This bill will simply send the matter to the Pension Bureau, and there will not be any more of them pensioned there than were pensioned here. It is a very meritorious measure, and it ought to be passed.

Mr. SULLIVAN. As I understand the Senator, then, this provision is that after she becomes a widow the second time and is left in poverty she may receive her former widow's pension?

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes; when she is in absolute poverty.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask the Senator from New Hampshire if ever such an application has been denied by Congress?

Mr. GALLINGER. I know of no instance. Let the bill be put on its passage.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment which has been read.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act amending section 4708 of the Revised Statutes of the United States in relation to pensions to remarried widows."

ESTATE OF PATRICK KAVANAGH.

The bill (H. R. 13068) to waive and release all claims of the United States by way of escheat to the real estate in the District of Columbia of which Patrick Kavanagh or his sons, Charles W. Kavanagh and William Kavanagh, died seized, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCOMAS. I ask that that bill may be passed. It has passed the House.

The Secretary read the bill, and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROOF OF EXECUTION OF WILLS.

The bill (H. R. 12331) to amend an act entitled "An act conferring on the supreme court of the District of Columbia jurisdiction to take proof of the execution of wills affecting real estate, and for other purposes," approved June 8, 1898, was read.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I object to that bill.

Mr. McCOMAS. I hope the Senator will not object. It simply allows unknown heirs to be included in a partition.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall insist on my objection at present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota objects, and the bill will be passed over.

AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

The bill (H. R. 13609) to incorporate the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists within the District of Columbia was read.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to know the necessity of this legislation. It seems to me these people can incorporate under existing law. If they can not, they certainly can under the code which we have just passed.

Mr. PROCTOR. This is a matter that has once passed the Senate in a more enlarged shape. Foreign countries generally have such bodies, and it is a great aid to the horticulturists of this country to have an official organization. It enables them to correspond and exchange seeds and flowers. It seems to me a very laudable purpose, and the bill is well guarded. There are scores of precedents for such incorporations. It is limited to the District of Columbia. There is to be no stock. It is to be supported by voluntary contributions.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall not object if the bill is amended by a provision that they shall not erect any building upon any of the parks of the city. With such an amendment I shall not object; otherwise I shall. I understand that several years ago we did pass a law giving a tract of land for a flower market, and if this is for the purpose of incorporating a company to occupy that park I object to it.

Mr. PROCTOR. It has no connection with it whatever.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The next thing they will be building a market for flowers, and so on, and occupy one more park in the city.

Mr. PROCTOR. There is no such purpose. The bill has no connection with that former proposition.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Then there will be no objection to my amendment.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I move to add the following proviso:

Provided, however, That this corporation shall not be permitted to occupy any of the parks of the city of Washington.

Mr. PROCTOR. I do not object to that amendment, if the Senator insists upon it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I do insist upon it, because I know that will follow if we do not amend the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Insert the amendment at the end of line 14, page 3.

The SECRETARY. At the end of line 14, page 3, insert:

Provided, That this corporation shall not be permitted to occupy any of the parks of the city of Washington.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES F. KRAMER.

The bill (H. R. 11828) to remove charge of desertion from military record of Charles F. Kramer was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Charles F. Kramer, late of Company G, Sixty-Seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and to grant him an honorable discharge as of the 29th day of December, 1862.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment.

Mr. CARTER. Let the report in that case be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

Mr. BATE. I will say that that bill was passed on by the Committee on Military Affairs without objection.

Mr. CARTER. The Senator from Wisconsin assures me that he has read the report and the bill, and it is all right.

Mr. BATE. I reported the bill.

Mr. CARTER. I withdraw the request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The request is withdrawn.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE A. WINSLOW.

The bill (H. R. 4204) to correct the military record of George A. Winslow was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to set aside the findings of the court-martial and revoke the orders issued against George A. Winslow, late lieutenant, Company M, Third Arkansas Cavalry Volunteers, and to issue to him a certificate of honorable discharge dated from the 9th day of May, 1865.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INDIANS IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

The bill (H. R. 10701) to amend section 6, chapter 119, United States Statutes at Large No. 24, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to amend section 6 of chapter 119 of the United States Statutes at Large No. 24, page 390, after the words "civilized life," in line 13, by inserting the words "and every Indian in Indian Territory."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes; recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 88, and agrees to the same with an amendment in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate; insists upon its disagreement to the other amendments upon which the committee of conference have been unable to agree; asks a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CANNON, Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts, and Mr. McRAE managers at the conference on the part of the House.

JOHN H. FINFROCK.

The bill (H. R. 2472) to correct the military record of John H. Finfrock was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of War to revoke the order dismissing from the military service of the United States John H. Finfrock as a captain of the Sixty-fourth Regiment of Ohio Infantry Volunteers, and to issue an honorable discharge for him, to date from the 22d of January, 1863; but no pay, bounty, or other allowances shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HERMAN VON MARSDORF.

The bill (H. R. 8270) for the relief of Herman Von Marsdorf, late a lieutenant of Company D, First Maryland Cavalry, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of War to revoke the order dismissing Herman Von Marsdorf as a lieutenant of Company D, First Maryland Cavalry, and to grant him an honorable discharge as of the date of said order; but no pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTION OF WILLS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I wish to withdraw the objection I made a few moments ago to House bill 12331.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has been read.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12331) to amend an act entitled "An act conferring on the supreme court of the District of Columbia jurisdiction to take proof of the execution of wills affecting real estate, and for other purposes," approved June 8, 1898.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SALLIE B. WILSON.

The bill (H. R. 10758) granting a pension to Sallie B. Wilson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Sallie B. Wilson, widow of Samuel B. Wilson, late of Company C, Eighth Regiment United States Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month, and $2 per month additional for each of the two minor children of said soldier, until such children shall have arrived at the age of 16 years.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AQUILLA J. DAUGHERTY.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 14028) for the relief of Aquilla J. Daugherty. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to cause to be investigated and examined the circumstances of the alleged burglary of the office of the collector of the fifth internal-revenue district of Illinois, at Peoria, Ill., on or about the 25th day of January, 1901, when it is alleged that United States internal-revenue documentary stamps of the face value of $24,974.15 and United States internal-revenue proprietary stamps of the face value of $6,902.31½ were stolen from the vault in the office of the collector, the stamps having been received by Aquilla J. Daugherty, collector of the fifth internal-revenue district of the State of Illinois, and in his possession as such collector at the time of the alleged burglary and the alleged stealing of the stamps; and if upon investigation and examination the Secretary of the Treasury is satisfied that none of the stamps were ever issued or used by the collector or his employees, and that all of the stamps were stolen and the office burglarized without the fault of the collector, then the Secretary of the Treasury shall credit Aquilla J. Daugherty with the number and value of the stamps and release him from further responsibility therefor.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HAMILTON M. SAILORS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 628) for the relief of Hamilton M. Sailors. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Hamilton M. Sailors, Company K, One hundred and first Indiana Volunteers, the difference in pay between that of a private and a second lieutenant from May 26, 1863, to October 10, 1863, he having performed the duties of the office under proper appointment and assignment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DEPOSITARIES OF PUBLIC MONEY.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 13195) to amend section 5153 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. It proposes to amend section 5153 of the Revised Statutes of the United States so as to read as follows:

SEC. 5153. All national banking associations, designated for that purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be depositaries of public money, except receipts from customs, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary, but receipts derived from duties on imports in Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands, and other islands under the jurisdiction of the United States may be deposited in such depositaries subject to such regulations; and such depositaries may also be employed as financial agents of the Government; and they shall perform all such reasonable duties as depositaries of public moneys and financial agents of the Government as may be required of them.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall require the associations thus designated to give satisfactory security, by the deposit of United States bonds and otherwise, for the safe-keeping and prompt payment of the public money deposited with them, and for the faithful performance of their duties as financial agents of the Government. And every association so designated as receiver or depositary of the public money shall take and receive at par all of the national currency bills, by whatever association issued, which have been paid in to the Government for internal revenue or for loans or stocks.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, I desire to present the conference report on the Post-Office appropriation bill, and I also desire, with the permission of the Senate, to make a brief statement regarding it.

Upon this important bill, which carries with it appropriations aggregating $125,000,000, there has been for some days a somewhat serious disagreement upon two amendments to the bill offered by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] and adopted by the Senate.

One of those amendments was to the effect that the Postmaster-General should investigate and report whether or not in municipalities and towns having a population of less than 10,000 or with postal revenue less than $25,000, but too large to be entitled to the benefits of free rural mail delivery, there should be an attempt to ascertain whether or not there might be, by means of boxes in certain portions of those communities, facilitation of mail delivery.

The other amendment was an amendment requiring the Postmaster-General to report to Congress as to the cost and feasibility of adopting as a part of the postal service of the United States the use of the telephone and telegraph.

Upon these amendments we have for a number of days differed. I feel bound to say that the conferees of the Senate have yielded in substance but preserved in form something of the amendments, and that what is left of them involves no appropriation whatsoever of money, but simply calls upon the Post-Office Department to report as to whether or not rural free mail delivery shall be applied to the smaller towns of the country, and as to whether or not, if he has the facts at his disposal, he would recommend the acquiring by the Government of telegraph and telephone facilities. Upon that we have differed day after day, and we differ still.

I believe that the conferees of the other legislative body and the members of that body will not see this great bill fail because of the insertion of these amendments which call for the appropriation of no money.

For the first time in the history of the Post-Office appropriation bill the Senate has not added a single dollar to the public appropriations. We have yielded upon every amendment calling for the appropriation of an additional penny. We have yielded to the House bill as it was presented to us, and I ask that the Senate vote to insist upon its amendments and ask for a further conference with the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The conference report presented by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13729) "making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

As to amendments numbered 2 and 3, the conferees are unable to agree.

E. O. WOLCOTT,
WILLIAM E. CHANDLER,
MARION BUTLER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

E. F. LOUD,
GEORGE W. SMITH,
CLAUDE A. SWANSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] moves that the Senate still further insist upon its amendments to the bill disagreed to by the House of Representatives and ask for a further conference with the House thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. WOLCOTT, Mr. CHANDLER, and Mr. BUTLER were appointed.

MONONGAHELA RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. BATE. Regular order, Mr. President.

Mr. SEWELL. I inquire if the order of the Senate has been executed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has not been. The next bill on the Calendar will be stated.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 13436) to authorize the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River; which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce, with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 1, line 3, after the word "That," to insert "the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company;" so as to read:

That the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, is hereby authorized to construct, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, line 9, after the word "water," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That any bridge constructed under this act and according to its limitations shall be a lawful structure and shall be known and recognized as a post route, and the same is hereby declared to be a post route, upon which, also, no higher charge shall be made for the transportation over the same of the mails, the troops, or munitions of war of the United States than the rate per mile paid for transportation over railroads or public highways leading to the said bridge.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, after line 17, to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That all street-railroad companies desiring the use of said bridge shall have and be entitled to equal rights and privileges relative to the passage of railway trains or cars over the same, and over the approaches thereto; and all telephone and telegraph companies shall be granted equal rights and privileges in the construction and operation of their lines across said bridge.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I present a conference report.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. How many bills are there left on the Calendar to be acted upon?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are a few bills remaining.

Mr. HOAR. I wish the Senator from Maine would not intervene until those bills have been disposed of.

Mr. HALE. It is important that the conference report on the naval appropriation bill should be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that under the order there are seven more bills to be considered.

Mr. BATE. There is one more bridge bill on the Calendar.

Mr. HALE. I submit a conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13705) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 3, 9, 10, 81, and 82.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 8, 25, 39, 40, 42, 65, 79, 80, 84, 85, and 86; and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$250,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$600,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 26, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of said amendment strike out the words "four hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "three hundred and fifty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 60, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of said amendment strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "one;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 61, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$6,775,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 67, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment, after the word "President," insert the words "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate;" and in line 38 of said amendment, after the word "be," insert the words "until further legislation by Congress;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On the amendment numbered 89 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

EUGENE HALE,
W. E. CHANDLER,
B. R. TILLMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

GEORGE EDMUND FOSS,
ALSTON G. DAYTON,
AMOS J. CUMMINGS,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. HALE. This is an entire agreement upon all the matters in the appropriation bill, with the exception of amendment numbered 89, as to which a disagreement is reported. That is the torpedo-boat amendment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I move that the Senate recede from its insistence upon amendment numbered 89, it being the amendment containing the appropriation for additional torpedo boats.

Mr. STEWART. I hope that will not be done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the report be agreed to?

The report was agreed to.

Mr. STEWART. I hope the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] will not prevail. It seems to me that to take this out of conference, without taking it back to the House in the usual way, is very extraordinary. It seems to me there has been a very zealous fight made against these torpedo boats. I do not see where it could come from. I have the testimony of a great many naval officers, and I state that every naval officer who has seen one of the torpedo boats commends it in the highest terms. The submarine torpedo boat which the Government now owns has been tested for some months.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to a question of order. What is the question before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon the motion made by the Senator from Colorado, that the Senate recede from its amendment relating to torpedo boats.

Mr. HOAR. I did not observe that that motion was stated by the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was stated by the Chair.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Colorado made the motion, but the Chair stated the question was on the acceptance of the report, and I was not aware that any other motion had been stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Possibly the Chair did not put the motion made by the Senator from Colorado. He will do so now. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Colorado, that the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 89, relating to torpedo boats.

Mr. STEWART. I hope that will not be done. If you will examine the testimony of Admiral Dewey and others, you will find they all concur that this is the best coast defense that has been or that can be, as we all know, gotten within a reasonable time. These torpedo boats have been tested. The Holland Company has a contract for the building of six, which is now being executed. The Government has one of these boats in use now. This amendment provides that there is to be no new contract made until one of the six shall have been completed and tried to the satisfaction of the Navy Department.

It makes the conditions very severe. The Navy Department need not accept them unless they come up to the conditions, but by providing for these boats this industry will be kept alive. The Holland Company has made wonderful experiments, which have met the approval of everyone who sees them. I believe those who have not seen a torpedo boat—the Construction Bureau—are against it, but everyone who has seen it, and every naval officer who has seen it, reports favorably upon it. Most of them contend that it is past the experimental point. Now, for a few hundred thousand dollars you can have your coast defense advanced more than you could for a great many million dollars spent on your ironclads.

It is cheap; it can be done speedily; and if the naval officers who have testified can be relied on at all, it has effectually passed the experimental stage. The reason why there ought to be an appropriation is in order that the industry can be kept alive. If we stop and there is an interval of six months or a year in which there is no construction going on, the experts will be dispersed, the organization will be broken up, and we will then have to commence anew. It will be a tremendous disadvantage.

I do not see why there should be this opposition. I have heard no statement against these boats. They have passed the experimental stage, according to the best testimony that can be had on the subject. No one has undertaken to testify against them. These three will enable the work to go on. I hope the Senate will insist once more. That is all I ask. The vote was very close in the House. On a vote of 250 they succeeded, by a very strenuous effort, in beating it only 14 votes.

The conferees refused to send it back. If it had gone back in the usual ways, it would have been disposed of hours and hours ago, and no words would have been said here. But they held out and demanded that the Senate should surrender. They held them up and demanded that they surrender or lose the bill. If they had taken another vote, the Holland boats would have succeeded. They knew it very well. That is the reason why they did not go back. This is not the way to legislate. I hope the Senate will stand by this amendment, and once more let the House vote on it, and let us see whether those people are scared or not. If it had gone back in the usual way, it would have been smoothed out long ago.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I think it well for the Senate to understand the situation. Last year, it will be remembered, the Committee on Naval Affairs, in making up their amendments, did not put any Holland torpedo boats in the bill. The House had not put them in. But when the matter came into the Senate and the facts were brought out as to the value of this new means of warfare, the House authorized a contract for six, thus overriding its Naval Committee. This year the matter came up before the Naval Committee again on a proposition offered by somebody to contract for seven more.

Mr. President, I have examined into the matter by being on board of a tug which went down the Potomac. Other members of our committee were present, at least a majority of them, and I was so much impressed with the value and utility of the Holland, the crude first experimental boat, that when the amendment was brought in before the Naval Committee this year to contract for seven additional boats I was disposed to give it my assent. I wanted to have more of these boats, because, as I will show before I get through, I consider them a very valuable adjunct to our national defense.

But with the proposition coming from the House of four more battle ships, or two battle ships and two armored cruisers, involving an expenditure of $5,000,000 each or thereabouts, and the opposition on the part of the authorities at the Navy Department—three of the bureau chiefs being opposed to any new boats, while Admiral Hichborn, the Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, was emphatic in his indorsement of them I agreed to compromise on a reduction of the number proposed to be contracted for this year from seven to three. The Naval Committee put in that number because we expected——

Mr. HANNA. May I ask the Senator from South Carolina a question?

Mr. TILLMAN. With pleasure.

Mr. HANNA. Was there any formal action on the part of the Naval Committee when those were inserted?

Mr. TILLMAN. There was formal action.

Mr. HANNA. By vote?

Mr. TILLMAN. By vote.

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes.

Mr. HANNA. Was there a quorum present?

Mr. TILLMAN. There was a quorum present.

Mr. HANNA. I was not aware of it.

Mr. CHANDLER. All of the members of the committee were not present. I think the Senator from Ohio was not there. There was a meeting of the committee with a quorum present. That is true.

Mr. TILLMAN. If we are going to have any such points made in regard to the action of the Naval Committee, we had better cut out all these amendments here, because the Senator knows that with the multiplicity of duties he is called on to perform, or thinks he is called on to perform, he has not very often honored us with his presence in the Naval Committee.

Mr. HANNA. I will say to the Senator that I have been there fully as often as he has, and I think more so.

Mr. TILLMAN. I will leave that to our colleagues, and we will not bring in question our relative importance in naval affairs or our knowledge of them.

Mr. HANNA. The Senator from South Carolina raised the question. I did not.

Mr. CHANDLER. I have never timed the Senator from South Carolina nor the Senator from Ohio, and therefore I can not testify.

Mr. TILLMAN. You have not timed us, but you can testify that I am always there.

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; and the Senator from Ohio is nearly always there when he is not absent——

Mr. TILLMAN. Oh!

Mr. HANNA. I should like to see the minutes showing this action.

Mr. TILLMAN. That is not the issue here. If the chairman will say that the action of the committee was not warranted and was not lawful and binding, and that it is not a committee amendment, then why does the chairman bring it in here? Why has he insisted twice on disagreeing to the House proposition to strike this out. There is your culprit, not I. I stand here saying it is the action of the Senate in putting on these three boats. But the question at issue is not whether the committee has done this officially and according to law, because nobody, I presume, doubts that except the Senator from Ohio. The question at issue is whether we shall stand by the Senate amendment putting on three boats or whether we shall recede; and that involves the question as to what is the use and value of these boats if we buy them.

We have six under contract and the experimental one now in existence. The six, let me call to your mind, will be completed in the near future—sometime in July, possibly—and they are being constructed under the most stringent contract that the opponents of the Holland boat could frame in the requirements as to what those boats should do. I have not the contract with me, but the opponents of this system of naval construction and of these torpedo boats framed the contract, the requirements of which are as exacting and binding as any set of men can possibly expect; and upon those conditions the Senate Naval Committee put in the three boats.

Why did we do that? I confess I know nothing about the Holland Torpedo Boat Company, and care nothing about it; but I have heard many pleas here for keeping alive and encouraging American genius and American manufactures and all that sort of thing, and I do not see why this enterprise should be knocked on the head. It involves only a small amount of capital, because I do not think the company have much capital.

I know nothing about it; but that company have told us—at least, I have heard it, more from the Senator from Nevada than anybody else, and you can see for yourselves—that if they are given no contracts to keep alive their organization; that if, after these six boats are completed, their men are to be thrown out of work and their company tied up, so to speak, with nothing more to do, their skilled mechanics, who have been experimenting with this system of submarine navigation, will have to be discharged or go to Europe if they can not get contracts here. I confess it appealed to me somewhat to think of this association or organization or corporation being, you might say, knocked on the head by this great Government.

But that is not the question here. The question is, Are these boats of any use to us? I desire to read you the testimony of Lieutenant Caldwell, who has been in command of the Holland, the experimental boat, as given in a letter to the Hon. R. B. HAWLEY, of the House Committee on Naval Affairs. I hope Senators will listen, and let us get at this thing in some judicious and proper spirit:

1. Q. How long have you commanded the Holland?

A. The Holland has been under my charge from June 25, 1900, to the present time. She was formally placed in commission under my command on October 12, 1900.

2. Q. What is the longest submerged run you have made in her?

A. About 1½ miles.

3. Q. Do you consider her durable, habitable, and reliable as a vessel of war for coast and harbor defense?

A. Yes.

4. Q. Commander Mason, of the torpedo station, says, in a report to the Secretary: "During the late combined maneuvers of the fleet, shore defenses, and the torpedo flotilla the Holland made a successful attack upon the fleet at night by herself, without convoy, at a distance of 7 miles out from the mouth of the harbor and with the naval crew alone in her." Did you command the Holland upon this occasion? If so, describe how you made the attack, and whether you considered it a success.

A. The Holland was under my command on the occasion mentioned. She left the torpedo station at sundown and was placed in a partially submerged condition, with the turret and about 6 inches of the hull above water, ready to dive at short notice. Cruised in this condition to southward and eastward of Brentons Reef light-ship. Sighted 2 vessels of blockading fleet and fired torpedo signal at them, but was not answered, and they disappeared before I could ascertain their identity. About 9 p. m., about 7 miles south-southeast from harbor entrance, sighted U. S. S. Kearsarge within range and fired torpedo signal. Followed her, and getting within 100 yards without being discovered, showed light, hailed her, and informed her commanding officer that she had been torpedoed. The Holland was not seen by any vessel of the blockading fleet or torpedo boat, although she was within torpedo range of 3 of the former and several of the latter. I consider that the attack was a success, because the Holland could, in all probability, have torpedoed 3 blockading vessels without being discovered.

Admiral Dewey says this is one of the most valuable of modern inventions for naval warfare. Commander Wainwright, at the Academy, is in favor of it. Three bureau chiefs are against this system, while Admiral Hichborn, whose genius as a practical shipbuilder is recognized everywhere, is in favor of it.

Mr. STEWART. Have any of those who are against the boat ever seen it operate?

Mr. TILLMAN. I do not know and I do not care. What is the cost of one of these boats? Mind you, the new boats are to be constructed, under the limitations of the committee amendment, after the Secretary of the Navy has examined the six that are now under construction, and has seen that they comply in every particular with the exacting conditions under which they are contracted for. Therefore, with the first one, the experimental one, giving us an example of its success, according to the testimony of its commanding officer, an accomplished naval officer of the United States, what is the reason why we can not build three more? We ought to build fifty more.

Here we are spending $5,000,000 on a battle ship, and the Senator from Ohio knows that he himself is doubtful whether the Gathmann gun will not sink it with one shell. We have appropriated a hundred thousand dollars for the Isham shell and for thorite, a new explosive, just simply to purchase the right to use them. Here is an implement of naval warfare. We will say it costs too much. I do not know what the cost is or what it ought to cost, but that does not make any difference.

If we want to throw it open to competition, or to build them in our own navy-yards by Government employees, let us do it. But what I am after is to get something that will relieve us of the burden of building a battle ship when nobody up to this time knows whether it can stand a shell such as two or three men claim they have invented and discovered; whereas, with these little boats—these little, sneaking snakes—that can dive and go under water for a mile and a half, with a turret shaped like a barrel, so that the boat can come up and they can get a sight and get some fresh air and dive again, and which is painted like the ocean, so that even in daylight, as I have been informed, you can hardly distinguish it—with these boats sneaking around in front of our harbors, what hostile fleet would dare approach?

The moral effect of having a large flotilla of such implements of war on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts would be such that any foreign navy under the sun would hesitate before it came in reach of our harbors, where these little snakes, as I call them, these water moccasins, could go out and go under water and approach with all the appliances which they have. The battle ship, the Kearsarge, and the other three vessels that were blockading in the maneuvers, were all on the watch—they were looking to see what they could discover—and yet Lieutenant Caldwell says that he torpedoed three of them, or could have done it.

The moral effect of having these vessels in our Navy would be good. Suppose we built fifty; there would be eight and a half million dollars, or something like that, at a cost of $170,000 each, which is the cost of one and a half battle ships; and I do not hesitate to say, so far as my opinion is worth anything—and I have tried, as a member of the Naval Affairs Committee, to do my duty there and to investigate these matters and to do what I can to build up the American Navy and make it a means of defense for this country—in my honest judgment the Holland boat in the entrance of any harbor in the United States is worth two battle ships for the defense of that harbor.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Mr. President, this is coming to be a question of very practical legislation. It is now after 7 o'clock of the last day and the last night of the session. There has been an intense disagreement between the conferees of the Senate and the conferees of the House upon this amendment. There has been some feeling about it. There was a time when the House conferees refused to report either an agreement or a disagreement.

That was reported to the Senate, and the Senate insisted that the conference should go on. The conference has gone on; an agreement has been made upon all the items of the bill except this one, and the question comes within sixteen or seventeen hours of adjournment, when the bill has to be engrossed fully and signed by the President or fail, whether the Senate shall stand out obstinately on this amendment, to the peril of the bill.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator from Connecticut allow me? I did not state it, and as the chairman did not, I will take the liberty of doing it. The Senate conferees have not come here asking that they be instructed to recede. They come here contending, as they have contended twice before, that it was a proper thing to do to put in these boats, and they have simply reported a disagreement again, and the Senate need not be imposed on with the idea that we want to be instructed to recede. The House only threw out these boats by a majority of 14, and if the Senate will stand fast and insist, and then the House also insists, I will be willing to give way. I do not think we ought now to be instructed to give way.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. A great deal of time will be consumed in that way—time which is needed for the enrollment of the bill. I beg to assure the Senator from South Carolina that I said nothing to the effect that the Senate committee was ready to recede or asked to be instructed to recede. I think it is best that we should recede and the bill be passed, and passed now.

I can not understand why the Senate committee and the Senate conferees should insist so strenuously that these three boats shall be contracted for. We have six boats under contract. When they are to be finished no one knows. The Senator from South Carolina hopes——

Mr. TILLMAN. They are all under contract, to be finished some time between now and August.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The Senator from South Carolina hopes they will be finished between now and August.

Mr. TILLMAN. They have to be, under the contract.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I did not interrupt the Senator from South Carolina when he was making his statement.

Mr. TILLMAN. I beg pardon.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I should like to be permitted to make mine.

I do not think, from what I have heard on this subject, that these boats have passed the experimental stage. I think this amendment, as it is contained in the bill, shows that the Committee on Naval Affairs do not think they have passed the experimental stage, because I find in the amendment a provision that the Secretary of the Navy shall not contract for these boats until the first boat already contracted for has been completed and tested and works satisfactorily, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Navy. I think that is sufficient evidence that even in the opinion of the Naval Committee the boats are still in an experimental stage.

The Senator from South Carolina says if we do not contract for these three boats the company and those building them will be out of employment, and may have to go to Europe.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator from Nevada said that.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I understood the Senator from South Carolina to say the same thing.

Mr. TILLMAN. I got my information from the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What is the effect of that argument? Have we to keep them at work always, whether the Government needs these boats or not? The Senator from South Carolina says there ought to be 50 built. I suppose there will come a time when he thinks no more will be required, and then they will have to go to Europe. But I do not wish to enter into a discussion as to the merits of these boats or the merits of the company that is constructing them, but I want to say that the time has come when we can pass the bill by receding from this amendment, and it does not seem to me it is so important that these boats should be contracted for now as that we ought further to delay and impede and perhaps imperil the passage of the bill. I hope the Senate will recede.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I am led to concur with my colleague by other considerations. I can name several gentlemen of abundant means who are ready—more than ready and more than willing—to build a submarine boat for $100,000, with which they think they can challenge the world, and they have not been able to get a hearing.

Mr. HANNA. Mr. President, I do not want to delay this matter except for a moment. I wish to say, being a member of the Committee on Naval Affairs, that I have taken fully as much interest in these matters as any of my colleagues, and experience has taught me something in regard to vessels. I was perfectly willing at the beginning to give this boat a fair experimental test, and in allowing the construction of the six boats we have been very liberal toward the inventors and those who are constructing them. The practical judgment of the Navy Department to-day, through the heads of the bureaus having in charge the construction of this work and the responsibility for it, has reported to the committee against the policy of ordering any more of these boats at present.

The fact that the Holland boat has been something of a success, and that the Government has adopted it to the extent of ordering six more, will and has stimulated the inventive genius of this country, and brighter minds are at work to-day in developing other methods of construction. I predict that inside of twelve months, before Congress will have another opportunity to vote upon the construction of these boats, the cost of this vessel, or something better, will be reduced more than one-half. I think it is poor policy at this time to urge the construction of any further number of these boats, particularly when it will delay this whole measure.

Mr. SPOONER. I should like to inquire why this proposition was incorporated in the bill. Did it come from the House in the bill or was it incorporated here?

Mr. HANNA. It was incorporated here.

Mr. SPOONER. Why was it put into the bill, if it is not advisable to construct the three additional boats?

Mr. HANNA. I do not know.

Mr. TILLMAN. I have given my reason.

Mr. SPOONER. If it ought to have gone in the bill, if it is in the public interest that these boats should be constructed, it seems to me the Senate ought, within reasonable limits, to insist upon its proposition. If the boats ought not to be constructed, the provision ought not to have been put in by the committee, and we should recede. I have not myself examined the subject, but I for one feel quite like insisting on the proposition reported by the Naval Affairs Committee, undoubtedly upon good, sound reasons of public policy. I do not think it would defeat the bill if there should be another conference.

Mr. ALDRICH. This is largely a question whether the Senate shall recede now or a little later, according to the statement of the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. TILLMAN. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. ALDRICH. The intimation.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator from South Carolina made no such statement.

Mr. ALDRICH. The intimation of the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. TILLMAN. I intimated, and I will repeat, so that there will not be any intimation, that in the event that the House of Representatives shall later on, on a vote, insist, as this is the only item left, that we shall recede, I shall be willing to do it. That is all.

Mr. ALDRICH. That was my inference. It seems to me more important that the bill should be passed——

Mr. TILLMAN. The bill will pass without any doubt.

Mr. ALDRICH. Than that this item should be retained in the bill; and I hope the Senate will recede.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, there is no danger about this bill not passing. There is no use to deal with this question on any such specious plea. As a member of the Naval Affairs Committee

I have taken every opportunity, when the committee has been invited, to inspect the operations of this torpedo boat, and from the first time that a demonstration was made to the committee I was impressed that it had possibilities of terrific influence upon naval warfare in the future.

I am convinced to-day that before we have another naval battle with any great naval power the chances are that our great battle ships on which we spend $5,000,000 apiece will be practically worthless, because they are such a target for an engine of warfare like the Holland boat that they will not dare to get where they can be hit. The only way to save the magnificent battle ships from going to the bottom will be to keep them tied up in sheds inside of harbors and to mine the harbor. If the development in gun cotton and other explosives to be used in torpedo boats goes on there is not a battle ship afloat that would stand the resistance of a torpedo shot from the Holland boat any more than a piece of cardboard.

That being true, why shall we continue to spend $5,000,000 on every battle ship that may be worthless, when we can build 40 of these Holland torpedo boats for what one battle ship costs?

Now, Mr. President, this is not a small question. This question is just as big as is the question of national defense. Let some foreign power have 50 of these Holland torpedo boats built and ready for action, and let us have none or practically none, and let them bring them against our whole fleet, and we have not got a commander or an admiral, as brave as they are, who would dare to let them get near enough to our fleet if he knew they would shoot a torpedo at it.

Shall we sit down when this has demonstrated itself as a success as the most terrific engine of warfare that the world has ever seen, not only terrific in its actual execution, but terrific in the fact that it goes up under its enemy, out of sight, and rises and fires a deadly shot within a few hundred yards, and dives again and is protected? Shall we allow foreign nations to build these and we stand still? I want to know what has gone with all the patriotic talk and feelings that we have heard about national honor and national defense and building up the Navy?

I have heard it ever since I came into the Senate. I have heard it from Senators who are to-day opposing these little Holland torpedo boats. When I have claimed that we were paying $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 extra to the armor trust, they have said the nation's honor may be attacked, or the national defense may be endangered, and we have had eloquent speeches. Now, what I want to know is this: From whence comes the opposition to this vote, and what is the motive behind it? That is what I want to know.

Mr. President, the thing that is significant is the opposition that has developed to this little boat that does not cost much money. There is a cat in the meal tub, and it seems like those who have caught that cat are those who have talked national defense in the past for buncombe or for a corporation that was making money out of the Government, and not for national defense.

Mr. President, I must say, for I believe it, that the opposition to this little, cheap Holland boat is not an opposition from healthy American sentiment, but it is some class or commercial interest of some other concern or interest that is fighting it, one that is sordid, coming from men who have regaled us with their patriotic speeches in the past when they were appealing to us to give $5,000,000 or $10,000,000 to the armor trust.

Is it possible that the armor-plate trust does not want it done? Let us build forty or fifty of these Holland boats, and let it be seen that they can destroy any battle ship, and the armor trust is out of business; it can never make another raid on the Treasury and get $7,000,000 at one haul. The ironclads are out of business. The great ship-subsidy trust is out of business unless they go into the torpedo-boat business.

Mr. President, here is the cheapest and most effective engine of warfare that any nation has ever had a chance to build. You can build 40 of them for what one battle ship costs. I say that it is almost criminal for us not to build these and have them ready for the emergency when we have a chance to do it. It comes in poor taste from those who have favored immense corporations for questionable means to oppose this pitiful appropriation for a worthy object—for a most effective engine of war, one that costs so little and that is worth so much in the hour of need.

Whence this opposition, and what does it mean? I want to say that if there was not some powerful interest and influence behind this there would not have been the stubborn holding out that there has been against this proposition. That is a thing which is significant to me. That is a scheme that deserves to be crushed, and I hope the Senate will do it.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, the Government has bought and owns the first torpedo boat, and it is a useful and, I think, an important implement of war. Last year the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] introduced a bill to build twenty more of these boats. The Committee on Naval Affairs reported against building any more, but in the Senate it was decided to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to build five more. So the bill passed in that form last year.

The Secretary of the Navy has made a contract for those boats. The company wants the United States to make a contract to build some more, and the Senate committee reported that three more might be contracted for, to be taken by the Secretary of the Navy in case the trials of one of the new five should be successful.

The company are presenting these torpedo boats upon the other side of the water; they expect to make contracts with foreign nations for the boats; and the question being up in the Naval Committee of this Congress upon the proposition of the Senator from Nevada that ten more should be built, and there being a difference of opinion in the committee, it was decided to report this amendment in favor of three more of the boats. It was a compromise report in the committee, and all the members of the committee who were present agreed to sustain the proposition that on the whole it would be wise to authorize the construction of three more of the boats.

Mr. President, the committee were the more willing to do this because the Senate committee reported in favor of striking out the provision for two battle ships and two armored cruisers. Instead of retaining the clause that came from the House, the committee deemed it advisable to report to the Senate a proposition that the Secretary of the Navy should report at the next session of Congress the plans for two more battle ships and two more armored cruisers, designed according to the latest improvements in naval construction. That proposition was adopted by the Senate and has been concurred in by a vote of the House of Representatives. So, if we do not authorize these three torpedo boats we shall authorize no increase of the Navy at this session of Congress.

Now, Mr. President, the committee concluded on the whole that that would be a wise thing to do, and it is my opinion to-night that the Senate had better insist upon its amendment. The vote against these torpedo boats, if I may be permitted to say so, was carried in the House of Representatives by a very small majority. If we vote now that we want these three torpedo boats the House will vote again, and after the votes in the two Houses have been taken it will be very easy for the conferees to determine whether or not the Senate should insist upon building the three torpedo boats. Now, that is the whole case. It is not a big question, and the committee, so far as I understand them, are willing that Senators should vote exactly in accordance with their judgment.

Whether, with the two battle ships and the two armored cruisers stricken out, we shall now continue the construction of the Navy to the extent of three Holland torpedo boats is all there is to the question.

Mr. President, I speak moderately on the subject because the place from which I speak and my surroundings are such as to impel me to moderation.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Before the Senator takes his seat, may I ask him a question? Do I understand that if this company that want the Government to contract with them can get a contract for three boats now they are not going to foreign countries to present their matter and get contracts there, when if they do not they are going to foreign countries?

Mr. CHANDLER. I do not understand the case to be as the Senator states it.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I thought the Senator so stated.

Mr. CHANDLER. I said, in view of the fact that they were going there, it would be an encouragement and a help to the company. Undoubtedly that is one reason for the anxiety of the company. If we need these boats, if these boats have passed beyond the experimental stage so that we can wisely contract for three more of them, we ought not to refrain from doing that because it will help this company in their transactions with foreign governments.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President, as a member of the Committee on Naval Affairs, I desire to say only one word.

This matter came from the House of Representatives in the bill making appropriations for the support of the Navy, and was presented to the Committee on Naval Affairs of the Senate. The amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada was duly considered by your committee, and we added three Holland torpedo boats to the bill out of policy, and, I might say, too, out of sympathy for the enterprise of the inventor of the Holland torpedo boat and those who are associated with him.

And yet parenthetically I want to say that the Government has dealt most liberally with the inventors or promoters of this peculiar line of coast defense. We have ordered one already, which we have bought, as they admit, for a very much larger sum than the vessel cost. We have contracted for six more. The contract is not yet completed. Therefore the Government has had no opportunity as yet of demonstrating their utility, although I am frank to admit that the experimental test which I saw in the Potomac River was most satisfactory, and I believe them to be a formidable armament of coast defense. Yet they are in that transitory state where improvements are daily being made.

There is no length of time required in which these boats may be constructed that would jeopardize or hazard the interests of our country were we at war with any foreign nation. You can build any one of these torpedo boats within ninety days, and while we wish to encourage the company, as they stated to your committee, they have had negotiations on foot for the purpose of introducing them into foreign countries. That was the principal motive which induced your committee to incorporate into the bill a provision for the three torpedo boats that had not yet been fully demonstrated by an experimental test.

I think, therefore, Mr. President, in view of the fact that the testimony before your committee was that there was a margin of profit of nearly $100,000 upon each one of these boats, and in view of the fact that we will have seven of them under contract, and that the House of Representatives having considered this proposition, have twice voted upon it, and they come direct from the people and are supposed ro represent the people's interests in this Government——

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. PERKINS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. TILLMAN. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from California to the fact that there was no evidence produced before the committee showing any such profit, because if there had been I for one would have never agreed to give any company $100,000 profit on a contract of $70,000.

Mr. PERKINS. Perhaps not, Mr. President, excepting by inference. Those of us who have had experience in the construction of maritime vessels know that a vessel of that dimension, with that displacement of tonnage, and the machinery in it can be built for from $75,000 to $100,000.

Mr. TILLMAN. Can the vessels the Senator speaks of dive and come up and swim under the water and go like a fish? Does this vessel have nothing new or strange?

Mr. PERKINS. That is simply pumping out the air of the vessel and filling the different compartments. The machinery—the power of propelling the vessel—is not more complicated than in the ordinary maritime vessel. But that is not the question now before us. We have had it in conference here for three or four days. My friend from South Carolina has been on the committee of conference with the conferees on the part of the House of Representatives. They have discussed it, and he has spoken, as he always does, in that logical and forcible manner which is characteristic of his nature, and he has failed to convince them that he was right and that they were wrong. The House of Representatives have twice voted upon it.

Mr. TILLMAN. Only once.

Mr. PERKINS. Once, then, Mr. President. This bill carries $70,000,000 with it. It means the support of the Navy of this great Government of the United States. It seems to me, with only twenty hours intervening between the present time and the close of this Congress, the Senate of the United States ought to recede from their amendment. No possible wrong, no possible injurious results can accrue to our Government by simply postponing this question until next December. In the meantime the six torpedo boats contracted for by our Government will have been completed. The test will have been made, the trial will have been completed, and then we will have it fully demonstrated whether it is business policy for the Government to build more of them or not.

I have upon my desk, or in my office, propositions from other contractors, who claim that they have great advantages over the Holland torpedo boat. But that is not the question now. The question simply is one of policy, one of expediency, one of advisability. Shall the Senate, which is only coordinate with the House of Representatives in the legislative affairs of the Government, recede, or shall we persist in the position we have taken? I for one shall vote to recede from our position and concur with the House of Representatives upon this proposition.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, I regret exceedingly to have heard from the Senator from California some statements made by him on the floor. We are compelled to rely to a very large extent on committees here for whatever we do in the transaction of public business. It is a physical impossibility for individual Senators to fully advise themselves with respect to all the details of important measures that come here for consideration. We are compelled to rely on the judgment and tact and common sense of the committees having charge of the different important measures.

I regret exceedingly that the Senator from California has stated that an amendment of this character, an important amendment, has been reported by the Committee on Naval Affairs to the Senate not because the public interest required it, not because the public good would be promoted by the adoption of the amendment, but from motives of sympathy for some contractor who was to do the work for the Government.

I think if the Committee on Naval Affairs have taken any such action as that, they are not entitled to the respect I have always accorded to that as one of the ablest, most upright, strongest, and best-informed committees of this body. I have believed that whenever they made a report here they reported what they believed in their consciences was best for the public good. When they came here and reported that there should be three more of these boats built, I thought it was because the public good required it and not because we proposed to give $300,000 of net profit to some company to do $450,000 worth of work.

Now, it seems to me the question is this: The Committee on Naval Affairs have reported in favor of putting these three torpedo boats in the bill. The Senate have adopted their suggestion. We have followed their judgment. I was willing to follow it because I was not informed, and I had faith in the men who compose that committee and who have had charge of the bill. When they made a report which led me to think the public interest required that it should be done, I was in favor of it.

When they go to conference, and the House is not willing to yield to their judgment, if they believed that the public interest requires that we should recede, I am willing to follow their judgment in that; and when they come to the Senate and say that they have disagreed, and they believe we should send the matter back to another conference, I am still willing to trust their judgment, although what has been stated by the Senator from California shakes me somewhat in that respect.

Mr. PERKINS. I simply desire to say to my friend from Arkansas, in justice to myself, that he somewhat distorts my remarks, at least those which I intended to make. These boats are in a process of development, of evolution. While experimental tests made on the Potomac River, of which I was an observer, seemed to satisfy us in a great measure of their utility and of their value, yet it has not been fully demonstrated. The Senator has been, I think he said a few days since, at times in his life engaged in agriculture. There are times when our crops look splendidly, when we have a fine cotton crop promised us, but a north wind or blight comes on, and our expectations are not realized.

So with these boats. I believe it to be a valuable vessel for coast defense. But it has not been fully demonstrated to the satisfaction of any scientific or practical nautical man, because they have never been in action. We do not know what the enemy, if there was one which they approached, would have to defend himself against their approach, and perhaps make that defense wholly inoperative and ineffective. That is all. My objection to increasing the number of the Holland torpedo boats is because we have not fully demonstrated to our satisfaction their great usefulness. The Merrimac was an experiment, and yet Ericsson's Monitor came down and demonstrated that she was not what her builders expected her to be, for the Monitor was far superior to her. So it is with the Holland torpedo boats. There are other builders of submarine vessels, who claim superiority over these vessels.

I want to say to my friend from Arkansas that I know how jealously he guards the interests of our Government, and all honor is due to him for it. I agree with him, for when he reports from his committee any proposition I accept it after he has thoroughly examined it, and I usually vote with the majority of that committee. So he only does right, in my opinion, to take the majority opinion of the Committee on Naval Affairs when they have investigated and given their best thought and their conscientious investigation and report to the Senate their result.

Mr. BUTLER. Will the Senator from California pardon me for a moment?

Mr. PERKINS. Certainly.

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator says these boats are in an experimental stage. I should like to ask him if the Naval Committee in our various conferences at the opening of the Spanish war did not time and again express fear about our battle ships and admit that they were experimental. Still we had been going on and building them at the rate of from two to four and five a year at $5,000,000 apiece, and we looked each other in the face across the committee table when that war was declared and said we knew not whether they were a success or not.

Mr. PERKINS. That is very true.

Mr. BUTLER. Now, the Senator says we are not fully convinced that these boats are up to perfection yet. Suppose we had waited to build battle ships until they satisfied us, when the Spanish war occurred we would not have had any, because we all admitted that they were experiments, and we had put over $5,000,000 in each one of these experiments.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President, the good battle ship Maine went into the harbor of Habana, and there, while swinging safely, as they supposed, at the buoy at her anchorage, in the twinkling of an eye, by the touch of an electric button, those on board that ship were launched into eternity and went to "that bourne whence no traveler e'er returns." It is believed that a submarine torpedo was the cause of the destruction of that vessel. So it is that our harbor at Newport News, the Potomac River, New York Harbor, and other points were guarded by torpedoes and the electrician who controlled them stood on guard day and night, and yet the opportunity did not come whereby we might demonstrate their great utility.

Mr. WOLCOTT. May I ask the Senator from California a question?

Mr. PERKINS. Certainly.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I share with him the splendid tribute and compliment he paid to the Senator from Arkansas when he referred to the fact that the Senator from Arkansas was the chairman of an important committee, which reported bills from time to time to Congress which the Senator from California was glad, to be sure, in voting in favor of. I have looked in vain to see what committee it was.

Will the Senator kindly inform me what committee it is that the Senator from Arkansas is chairman of, where we all follow blindly in his lead because we know his high character and intelligence would permit him to report only bills which we would want to vote for?

Mr. PERKINS. I will say to my friend from Colorado that in 1893——

Mr. WOLCOTT. Oh!

Mr. PERKINS. I had the pleasure of joining with my friend from Arkansas when he was chairman of a committee. Now he tries to throw the responsibility upon my friend from Colorado, and I try to follow him, but the path is so circuitous that I find myself sometimes in a darkness that I am unable to emerge from.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I still would like to know the name of the committee of which the Senator from Arkansas is chairman, whom we all follow so blindly. Will the Senator kindly inform me what committee it is?

Mr. TILLMAN. The national Democratic committee. [Laughter.]

Mr. PERKINS. The Committee on the Five Civilized Tribes. I have been down in the Choctaw Nation and the Cherokee Nation. My friend has never led me astray.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, in view of the fact that there has been some statement with regard to the experimental stage of the Holland torpedo boat, I wish to read some of the testimony on the subject. I do not care to discuss the question at any length; but it does seem to me if we can defend our harbors and coasts with boats that cost but $170,000, apiece which are more valuable than battle ships which cost $5,000,000, the change ought to be made, even if the armor-plate factories and great shipyards have to go out of business for the Government. I read from the testimony of officers of the Navy:

Commander N. E. Mason, United States Navy, in charge of the torpedo station at Newport, R. I., makes a lengthy report to the Department on the workings of the Holland, under date of October 1 last, in which he says:

"In my opinion, the Holland has been a grand success so far, and for some time the naval crew have had entire charge of her, under command of Lieutenant Caldwell, running and working her both night and day without the presence of any of the Holland experts."

Mr. ALDRICH. Will the Senator from South Dakota yield to me for a few moments?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. ALDRICH. I should like to make a motion that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock.

Mr. HOAR. There are three bills undisposed of on the Calendar, which I wish to see passed.

Mr. ALDRICH. Those will come up first in order after 11 o'clock.

Mr. HOAR. I should think the Senate would be willing to take them up now.

Mr. ALDRICH. I am afraid the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] would not consent to that.

Mr. HOAR. I hope the Senate will be willing to devote two or three minutes to the consideration of those bills.

Mr. ALDRICH. I shall not object, if the Senator from South Dakota does not.

Mr. HOAR. I hope the Senator from South Dakota will consent.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. We should like to know what is going on on the other side of the Chamber. We are afraid a recess will be taken without our hearing about it on this side.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] proposed that a recess be taken until 11 o'clock, and I called his attention to the fact that the Calendar of unobjected House bills, which had been taken up, was completed except three bills, which could probably be passed in three or four minutes; and I appeal to him to allow the Senate to deal with those. My particular interest in them is that one of them is a bill drawn by the Attorney-General, which is very important, and which nobody will object to. It is in regard to the custody of prisoners, and it is very important not only to their comfort, but to the Government of the United States. I hope that and the other unobjected House bills on the Calendar will be disposed of before the Senator from Rhode Island moves a recess until 11 o'clock.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I cordially agree with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], but I further wish to say that I do not know anything better that the Senate can do than undertake to dispose of the conference reports as they are presented one by one to the Senate. It seems to me the sooner they are disposed of the better it will be for the public interest. I can see no special purpose of taking a recess now until 11 o'clock. I think we had better dispose of the conference reports mentioned by the Senator from Massachusetts, and also the pending measures.

Mr. CHANDLER. I shall object to a recess until the conference report is disposed of.

Mr. ALDRICH. Let us have a vote on the conference report now, and then take a recess.

Mr. CHANDLER. That is right.

Mr. BATE. There are three House bills on the Calendar that ought to be disposed of, which will not take more than three minutes.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator must be aware that when we come back after the recess the bill of the Senator from Tennessee will be first in order.

Mr. BATE. I am not speaking of my bill particularly.

Mr. ALDRICH. All the unobjected House bills on the Calendar will then be in order.

Mr. CHANDLER. I call for the regular order, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The regular order is the motion to recede from the amendment in disagreement on the conference report on the naval appropriation bill.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I had the floor in the midst of this discussion. I have tried to hold it. I want to finish the paragraph which I commenced to read.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator from South Dakota allow me a minute?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will yield for a question, but I do not wish to be taken off the floor.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am not going to interrupt the Senator by a speech. I merely wanted to remark that the solicitude of certain Senators here lest this great naval bill fail is very remarkable, when they offered to throw away the time and burn it rather than discuss it.

Mr. ALDRICH. It is very evident to me, as it must be to the Senate, that the Senator from South Carolina and other Senators do not propose to have this conference report acted upon at any time in the near future.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator might get us into a temper when we would not have it acted on. We do not want anything of that sort. I am ready to vote now, but I am not going to take the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] off his feet.

Mr. ALDRICH. I appeal to the Senator from South Dakota——

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should have been through long ago if the Senators had let me alone.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will be in order. The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] has the floor.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I want to complete the reading from the testimony of Commodore Mason. He further says:

Having made several dives in the boat myself, with the naval crew alone, I am of the opinion that they are competent in every way to maneuver and manipulate the boat successfully.

During the late combined maneuvers of the fleet, shore defenses, and the torpedo flotilla, the Holland made a successful attack on the fleet, at night, by herself, without convoy, at a distance of 7 miles out from the mouth of the harbor, and with the naval crew alone in her.

If the boat is sent to some place like the Naval Academy for the winter months, a great deal of instruction could be given to the officers of the service in a boat which is bound to be one of the future types.

The testimony of other officers of the Navy is that this boat operated successfully; that she dived and reached the side of a battle ship 7 miles from the shore, and could have successfully torpedoed the battle ship before the persons on the ship knew of her presence.

The torpedo boat is not an experiment; it is a success, and it seems to me that if we want to defend our coast this is the cheapest way to it.

I could read from the testimony of Commander Wainwright, the testimony of Admiral Philip Hichborn, constructor of the United States Navy, all to the same effect, and even more emphatic. But still we continue to build battle ships, and you are afraid about spending $510,000 for three more of these boats, which, in my opinion, are the most effective engines of defense of modern times.

Mr. President, I do not care to go further. It seems to me, however, that this matter is important enough so that we should do what the members of the conference committee of this body ask us to do—adopt their report—send the bill back to conference, and make another effort to see if the House will recede.

It is rather remarkable that the members of the conference committee come in here and recommend one thing and then get up and make speeches advising us to do another thing, or else they get somebody to make speeches to induce the Senate to recede, when the conference committee report that we should insist upon our amendment. I do not know what their purpose is. It is hard to tell.

Mr. TILLMAN. The conferees have done nothing of the kind, but two members of the committee have opposed their own work.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I supposed the Senator from New Hampshire was on the conference committee. If I am mistaken, I apologize.

Mr. CHANDLER. I am in favor of the amendment. I am going to vote for that, and I am in favor of the ships.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. When I was on the floor some time ago, and was interrupted by the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS] for a question, when his question was finished I was so far from the beginning, that I suppose everybody else in the Senate except myself had forgotten that I had the floor. I want to finish what I then began to say.

I have entire confidence in this committee of conference, in their judgment, in their management, and in their integrity; and I believe the shortest way to dispose of this matter is to send it back to the conference committee. I have no doubt they will come here with a report, and that the report will be adopted without a word of debate.

I think the best way to do is to follow the committee; to show our confidence in and reliance upon them, and let them work the matter out in conference. They understand the sense and the feeling of the Senate; they understand what motives have moved the committee; and notwithstanding what has been said by my friend from California, whose judgment I am always willing to follow, I have faith enough in him to believe that, when the bill goes back to conference, he will manage to get the best thing for the country out of the situation, and that the report which will be made to the Senate will be adopted without trouble. I hope that will be done by general consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Will the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 89 to the naval appropriation bill?

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS]. Not seeing him present, I withhold my vote.

Mr. CLAY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], who is absent. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. HANNA (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS], which I transfer to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BAKER], and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK]. I see he is not present in the Chamber, and therefore I withhold my vote.

Mr. HEITFELD (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SEWELL (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS].

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. SCOTT. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. TALIAFERRO], who is not in the Senate Chamber. I do not know how he would vote if present, but in order to protect my pair, I will transfer my pair with the Senator from Florida to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. HEITFELD], so that the Senator from Idaho and I may vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. HEITFELD. Under that transfer of pairs I am at liberty to vote, and I vote "nay."

Mr. BURROWS. I inquire if the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that the Senator from Louisiana has not voted.

Mr. BURROWS. I am paired with that Senator, but I will transfer my pair to the Senator from Maryland [Mr. MCCOMAS], and vote. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 18; as follows:

YEAS—32.

Aldrich,	Fairbanks,	Kyle,	Proctor,
Allison,	Foraker,	Lindsay,	Scott,
Bard,	Foster,	Mallory,	Teller,
Berry,	Frye,	Money,	Thurston,
Burrows,	Hanna,	Nelson,	Vest,
Clapp,	Hawley,	Perkins,	Warren,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Pettus,	Wetmore,
Dillingham,	Kearns,	Platt, Conn.	Wolcott.

NAYS—18.

Bate,	Hale,	Kean,	Tillman,
Butler,	Hansbrough,	McBride,	Turner,
Carter,	Heitfeld,	Pettigrew,	Wellington.
Chandler,	Jones, Ark.	Shoup.
Gallinger,	Jones, Nev.	Stewart,

NOT VOTING—38.

Allen,	Daniel,	McEnery,	Quay,
Bacon,	Deboe,	McLaurin,	Rawlins,
Baker,	Depew,	McMillan,	Sewell,
Beveridge,	Dolliver,	Martin,	Simon,
Caffery,	Elkins,	Mason,	Spooner,
Chilton,	Harris,	Morgan,	Sullivan,
Clark,	Kenney,	Penrose,	Taliaferro,
Clay,	Lodge,	Platt, N. Y.	Turley.
Cockrell,	McComas,	Pritchard,
Culberson,	McCumber,	Quarles,

So the Senate receded from its amendment.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 11900) granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railway through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota;

A bill (H. R. 14163) to authorize the Portland, Nehalem and Tillamook Railway Company to construct a bridge across Nehalem Bay and River, in the State of Oregon; and

A bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

PROPOSED RECESS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the next House bill on the Calendar.

Mr. ALDRICH. I now ask unanimous consent that the Senate take a recess until 10 o'clock——

Mr. BATE. I hope the Senator will allow us to dispose of the few remaining House bills on the Calendar.

Mr. ALDRICH. With the understanding that at that time the order of the Senate in regard to the consideration of unobjected House bills shall be proceeded with.

Mr. HOAR. We can dispose of the unobjected House bills on the Calendar in three or four minutes, and I hope the Senator from Rhode Island will withhold his request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] asks unanimous consent that the Senate take a recess until 10 o'clock.

Mr. ALDRICH. On the urgent appeals of Senators around me, I withdraw the suggestion, but I give notice that as soon as the House bills on the Calendar are disposed of I shall then ask that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock.

Mr. BATE. Regular order, Mr. President.

CUMBERLAND RIVER BRIDGE.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the the bill (H. R. 14228) to authorize the city of Nashville, Tenn., to construct a free public bridge across the Cumberland River within the corporate limits of said city, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce, with an amendment, on page 2, after line 21, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 5. That the bridge constructed, maintained, and operated under this act and according to its limitations shall be a lawful structure, and shall be recognized and known as a post route, upon which also no higher charge shall be made for the transportation over the same of the mails, the troops, and the munitions of war of the United States than the rate per mile paid for transportation of said mails, troops, and munitions over the railroads and public highways leading to said bridge; and the United States shall have the right of way for postal, telegraph, and telephone purposes over said bridge; and equal privileges in the use of said bridge shall be granted to all telegraph and telephone companies.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, that amendment was put there, I think, by mistake. The very face of the bill shows it. I have consulted with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS] who had charge of it, and he agrees that the amendment be withdrawn. It is a free bridge, and the amendment provdes that certain tolls shall not be charged. That is inconsistent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator say that the committee authorizes the withdrawal of the amendment?

Mr. BATE. I say the Senator in charge of the bill. I can say nothing else. Perhaps the amendment had better be retained. I do not want any misunderstanding about it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment will be disagreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NAVAL EQUIPMENT FOR MILITARY SCHOOLS.

Mr. CHANDLER. I am directed by the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3003) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to loan naval equipment to certain military schools, to report it without amendment. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of that bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, that is contrary to the unanimous-consent agreement, and I shall have to object. Let the bill go to the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

RED RIVER BRIDGE.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 14093) to authorize the Paris, Choctaw and Little Rock Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across Red River, in the State of Texas.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ST. JOHN'S LODGE, NEWBERN, N. C.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I was absent from the Senate, engaged with a conference committee, when Calendar No. 2222 was passed over. I now ask unanimous consent that the bill be taken up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This is a bill which was objected to and passed over. The title of the bill will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 636) for the relief of St. John's Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, No. 3, of Newbern, N. C.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, that bill has been objected to once.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill was objected to.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], who is now absent from the Senate, is opposed to it and gave notice that he would object to it. On his behalf I object to the present consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made, and the bill goes over.

JAMES A. SOMERVILLE.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7603) to correct the military record of James A. Somerville. It directs the Secretary of War to remove the charge of desertion now standing against James A. Somerville, late of Company D, Fifth New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, on the records of the War Department, and to issue to him an honorable discharge dated December 10, 1862, but no pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, do these bills come under the unanimous-consent agreement?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes; they come under the agreement.

J. W. PEGLOW.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 14269) confirming a lease between J. W. Peglow and the Seneca Nation of New York Indians. It proposes that the agreement of lease dated October 11, 1900, entered into between the Seneca Nation of Indians in council assembled and J. W. Peglow, of Silver Creek, N. Y., on October 11, 1900, granting to said Peglow the right of excavating and removing sand from the premises described in the agreement be ratified and confirmed.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TRANSPORTATION OF CRIMINALS CONVICTED BY CONSULAR COURTS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 13396) to amend section 5546 of the Revised Statutes. It proposes to amend section 5546 of the Revised Statutes so as to make it read:

SEC. 5546. All persons who have been, or who may hereafter be, convicted of crime by any court of the United States, including consular courts, whose punishment is imprisonment in a District or Territory or country where, at the time of conviction or at any time during the term of imprisonment, there may be no penitentiary or jail suitable for the confinement of convicts, or available therefor, shall be confined during the term for which they have been or may be sentenced, or during the residue of said term, in some suitable jail or penitentiary in a convenient State or Territory, to be designated by the Attorney-General, and shall be transported and delivered to the warden or keeper of such jail or penitentiary by the marshal of the District or Territory where the conviction has occurred; and in case of convictions by a consular court the transportation shall be by some properly qualified agent or agents designated by the Department of State, the reasonable actual expense of transportation, necessary subsistence, and hire and transportation of guards and agent or agents to be defrayed from the appropriation for bringing home criminals; and if the conviction be had in the District of Columbia, the transportation and delivery shall be by the warden of the jail of that District, the reasonable actual expense of transportation, necessary subsistence, and hire and transportation of guards and the marshal, or the warden of the jail in the District of Columbia only, to be paid by the Attorney-General out of the judiciary fund.

But if, in the opinion of the Attorney-General, the expense of transportation from any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia in which there is no penitentiary will exceed the cost of maintaining them in jail in the State, Territory, or the District of Columbia during the period of their sentence, then it shall be lawful so to confine them therein for the period designated in their respective sentences.

And the place of imprisonment may be changed in any case when, in the opinion of the Attorney-General, it is necessary for the preservation of the health of the prisoner, or when, in his opinion, the place of confinement is not sufficient to secure the custody of the prisoner, or because of cruel and improper treatment: Provided, however, That no change shall be made in the case of any prisoner on the ground of the unhealthiness of the prisoner or because of his treatment, after his conviction and during his term of imprisonment, unless such change shall be applied for by such prisoner, or some one in his behalf.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ARBA N. WATERMAN.

Mr. ALDRICH. I am instructed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 523) for the relief of Arba N. Waterman, to report it favorably without amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask unanimous consent that that bill be immediately acted upon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be reached on the Calendar in a minute.

AMERICAN REGISTER FOR SHIP BALCLUTHA.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 13530) to provide an American register for the foreign-built ship Balclutha.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GRAND PORTAGE INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. NELSON. From the Committee on Commerce I report back the bill (H. R. 14138) to authorize the Pigeon River Improvement, Slide, and Boom Company, of Minnesota, to enter upon the Grand Portage Indian Reservation, and improve the Pigeon River in said State at what is known as the cascades of said river, and ask unanimous consent of the Senate for its present consideration.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It can not be considered now, under the rule.

Mr. NELSON. I ask unanimous consent. I trust the Senator will not object. I have to go out on a conference committee.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. A unanimous-consent order is now being executed by the Senate, and it can not be set aside.

Mr. TURNER. I insist upon the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go to the Calendar. The next bill on the Calendar will be stated.

NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS.

The bill (H. R. 11350) to establish the National Bureau of Standards was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has been read in full, and was placed on the Calendar on account of the unanimous-consent agreement.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EQUIPMENT FOR CERTAIN MILITARY SCHOOLS.

The bill (H. R. 3003) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to loan naval equipment to certain military schools was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ARBA N. WATERMAN.

The bill (H. R. 523) for the relief of Arba N. Waterman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue duplicate to Arba N. Waterman in lieu of United States 6 per cent coupon bond for $100, together with all unpaid coupons thereto belonging, and which said bond, with coupons attached, is alleged to have been lost.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GRAND PORTAGE INDIAN RESERVATION.

The bill (H. R. 14138) to authorize the Pigeon River Improvement, Slide and Boom Company, of Minnesota, to enter upon the Grand Portage Indian Reservation and improve the Pigeon River in said State at what is known as the cascades of said river, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 10454) to amend section 1 of an act entitled "An act to amend sections 5191 and 5192 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and for other purposes," was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

WASHINGTON TELEPHONE COMPANY.

Mr. ALDRICH. I renew the request which I made some time ago, that the Senate now take a recess until 11 o'clock.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I desire to make a motion which I hope the Senator from Rhode Island will allow me to make before he presents his request for a recess. I should like to have the motion pending.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Rhode Island yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. ALDRICH. I have no objection to the motion being made, and then I shall have to press my request for a recess.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I have no objection to the Senator making the request for a recess after I have made the motion. I should like to make the motion. The unanimous-consent order has been executed, I understand?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It has.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9047) to incorporate the Washington Telephone Company, and to permit it to install, maintain, and operate a telephone plant and exchanges in the District of Columbia.

Mr. ALDRICH. Pending the motion of the Senator from Arkansas, I renew the request I made that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock.

Mr. BERRY. One moment. I ask the Senator from Rhode Island to make it not later than 10 o'clock.

Mr. GALLINGER. I hope it will be 11 o'clock.

Mr. BERRY. It is important, on account of a bill with which the Senator from Minnesota is familiar, that the Senate should be in session before 11 o'clock, and if the request is made for a recess until 10 o'clock I shall not object. The bill will be back here from the House by 10 o'clock, and I shall not object to taking a recess until that hour.

Mr. ALDRICH. The bill to which the Senator from Arkansas refers is not likely to be before the Senate to be considered before 11 o'clock, and none of the conference reports will be. It seems to me it would be very much better to make it 11 o'clock; and therefore I ask the Senate to take a recess until that hour.

Mr. BERRY. It is not likely to be before the Senate, but I repeat that when it comes here it ought to be in conference, because the conferees will not get together until it does come, and 11 o'clock will be very late. It will be back here, I am told, in a short time.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senators can go on with their conference. They have been conferring upon this bill for two or three days without having a formal conference ordered, and I think they can probably go on for an hour or two longer.

Mr. MORGAN. I should like to know some reason for the recess.

Mr. ALDRICH. I insist upon my motion.

Mr. MORGAN. I should like to have some reason stated for the recess.

Mr. ALDRICH. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. MORGAN. What is the reason for the request?

Mr. ALDRICH. It is impossible to hear the Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will please be in order. The Senator from Alabama asks what is the reason for this request.

Mr. ALDRICH. To suit the convenience of Senators who desire to go to their homes for dinner or to look after other matters, and as there is no pressing business before the Senate, I supposed all Senators would be agreeable to that request.

Mr. NELSON. I suggest to the Senator from Rhode Island that we take a recess until 10 o'clock.

Mr. GALLINGER. I trust it will be 11 o'clock. We have been here for six hours, on the Sabbath day, and I think we ought to have a little chance to have some leisure.

Mr. ALDRICH. I will compromise on half-past 10.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island now asks that the Senate take a recess until half past 10. Is there objection?

Mr. BUTLER. I do not want to object to that, if the Senator from Rhode Island knows the state of public business so that he is satisfied I can have twenty to thirty minutes at least to make some remarks of which I have already given notice. Of course, if I can not make them at any other time I will make them on a conference report, but I do not want to interfere with the public business in that way.

Mr. ALDRICH. We will have twelve or thirteen hours after 11 o'clock. There will be no trouble about it.

Mr. BUTLER. I want the Senate to know that I have given notice, as I have given it, and that I expect to occupy the time.

Mr. President, before agreeing to the request I desire to give another notice. A few moments ago, when I asked the Senate to take up this little bill—and I want the attention of the Senator from Rhode Island—the Senator from Rhode Island objected because, he said, another Senator was absent.

I give notice now that I shall ask to take it up when we meet after 11 o'clock, and any Senator who feels it is his duty to object because that Senator is absent I hope will notify him and let him be here or not object, for I do not think it is fair, if Senators choose to stay away all night, that this bill should die. I wish to give notice now that I will call it up, and I do not think any Senator ought to object if that Senator is not here.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. What is the last proposition?

Mr. ALDRICH. For a recess until half past 10.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. For a recess until half past 10.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I can not see any good reason for stopping now two hours when none of us are going to sleep. During the next twelve or thirteen hours, to which the Senator from Rhode Island refers as existing after 12 o'clock, some of us will want to be asleep, or part of the time. It seems to me, when we are all awake and in the Capitol, it is unwise to take a recess; and I hope the Senator will not make the request.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator from Arkansas knows as well as I do that the only business that can possibly be disposed of to-night or to-morrow morning are conference reports. It is simply useless to try to pass Senate bills with an idea of sending them to the House and expecting them to be acted on there.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. There is one House bill which I think is quite important, and I should like to have it voted upon.

Mr. ALDRICH. I have not the slightest doubt that the bill to which the Senator refers will lead to prolonged discussion.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. If so, we had better be at it.

Mr. ALDRICH. That may be. If Senators want to stay here and discuss that bill, I have no objection. I believe that a vast majority of the Senate prefer to go than to take up that bill.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It can not pass. They do not propose to let it pass.

Mr. CHANDLER. We ought to have an executive session, and I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was rejected.

RECESS.

Mr. ALDRICH. I ask now that my request may be put.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island asks unanimous consent that the Senate take a recess until half past 10 o'clock to-night. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Thereupon (at 8 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until 10 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m., at which time it reassembled.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, insists on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 168, 219, 220, and 221, agrees to a further conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BURTON, Mr. REEVES, and Mr. CATCHINGS managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House further insists on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2 and 3 to the bill (H. R. 13729) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902; agrees to a further conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. LOUD, Mr. SMITH of Illinois, and Mr. SWANSON managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 6048) to amend chapter 559 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved March 3, 1891.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 9835) to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia; and

A bill (H. R. 13436) to authorize the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 5573) to amend section 203 of the act entitled "An act making further provision for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes;"

A bill (H. R. 2619) for the relief of Agnes and Maria De Leon;

A bill (H. R. 10698) to amend an act amending the act entitled "An act to authorize the receipt of United States gold coin in exchange for gold bars;"

A bill (H. R. 11350) to establish a National Bureau of Standards; and

A bill (H. R. 14093) to authorize the Paris, Choctaw and Little Rock Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across Red River, in the State of Texas.

WASHINGTON TELEPHONE COMPANY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending question is on the motion made by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES], that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9047) to incorporate the Washington Telephone Company and to permit it to install, maintain, and operate a telephone plant and exchanges in the District of Columbia.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I desire to ask the Senator from Arkansas if he intends to insist upon proceeding with the bill to-night.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I hope there will be no difficulty about it, Mr. President. It is a House bill, and I am ready to vote upon it without debate, as far as I am concerned. The first question is to take it up, and then the Senate can determine what it will do with it.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I am advised that quite a number of Senators desire to be heard upon this measure, and I submit to the Senator from Arkansas that in the very short time remaining of the session we can not do much in the way of debating a great question of this kind.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. As far as I am concerned, I would be delighted to have a vote without debate.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, this is a very important bill. It is manifestly not understood. I therefore request that the bill be read in full for the information of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I want to make one observation before that is done. The Senator from Arkansas suggests that this is a House bill. It is a House bill, Mr. President, but it did not get the support of a majority of the Committee on the District of Columbia, and is reported without recommendation. I want the Senate to understand that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill, and that motion is not debatable.

Mr. GALLINGER. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. CARTER. For the further information of the Senate I should like to have the report read, if there is a report on the bill.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The motion is not debatable, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is not yet before the Senate. The question is on taking it up.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (putting the question). By the sound, the noes have it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HANNA (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Utah, which I will transfer to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BAKER], and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] and withhold my vote.

Mr. HEITFELD (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. PETTUS (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY]. I do not know how that Senator would vote, and therefore I withhold my vote.

The roll having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 26, nays 28; as follows:

YEAS—26.

Bate,	Foraker,	Mallory,	Teller,
Berry,	Hale,	Martin,	Thurston,
Beveridge,	Jones, Ark.	Money,	Tillman,
Burrows,	Kyle,	Perkins,	Turner,
Carter,	Lindsay,	Proctor,	Warren.
Clay,	McComas,	Simon,
Dolliver,	McEnery,	Taliaferro,

NAYS—28.

Aldrich,	Foster,	Kean,	Pritchard,
Bard,	Frye,	Kearns,	Scott,
Butler,	Gallinger,	Kenney,	Shoup,
Chandler,	Hanna,	McBride,	Stewart,
Cullom,	Hansbrough,	Mason,	Wellington,
Deboe,	Hawley,	Pettigrew,	Wetmore,
Fairbanks,	Jones, Nev.	Platt, Conn.	Wolcott.

NOT VOTING—34.

Allen,	Culberson,	McCumber,	Quay,
Allison,	Daniel,	McLaurin,	Rawlins,
Bacon,	Depew,	McMillan,	Sewell,
Baker,	Dillingham,	Morgan,	Spooner,
Caffery,	Elkins,	Nelson,	Sullivan,
Chilton,	Harris,	Penrose,	Turley,
Clapp,	Heitfeld,	Pettus,	Vest.
Clark,	Hoar,	Platt, N. Y.
Cockrell,	Lodge,	Quarles,

So the Senate refused to proceed to the consideration of the bill.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I desire to make a statement to the Senate and to make an appeal to the Senate, which I have drawn up in writing in order not to consume any more of the precious time of this dying session of the Congress than is absolutely necessary. I ask the Secretary to read, if he pleases, the joint resolution that I reported to-day from the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the Secretary will read the joint resolution.

The Secretary read as follows:

A joint resolution (S. R. 166) to complete the agreements entered into with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica in regard to future negotiations for the construction of an isthmian canal by way of Lake Nicaragua.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States is authorized by law to complete the agreement entered into by him with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica in the words following:

"Protocol of an agreement between the Governments of the United States and of Costa Rica in regard to future negotiations for the construction of an interoceanic canal by way of Lake Nicaragua,

"It is agreed between the two Governments that when the President of the United States is authorized by law to acquire control of such portion of the territory now belonging to Costa Rica as may be desirable and necessary on which to construct and protect a canal of depth and capacity sufficient for the passage of vessels of the greatest tonnage and draft now in use from a point near San Juan del Norte, on the Caribbean Sea, via Lake Nicaragua, to Brito, on the Pacific Ocean, they mutually engage to enter into negotiations with each other to settle the plan and the agreements, in detail, found necessary to accomplish the construction and to provide for the ownership and control of the proposed canal.

"As preliminary to such future negotiations it is forthwith agreed that the course of said canal and the terminals thereof shall be the same that were stated in a treaty signed by the plenipotentiaries of the United States and Great Britain on February 5, 1900, and now pending in the Senate of the United States for confirmation, and that the provisions of the same shall be adhered to by the United States and Costa Rica."

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, the House bill No. 2538—the Hepburn canal bill—has had such treatment at the hands of the majority in the Senate, for reasons that seem to be entirely political, that I do not care to have the great nonpartisan vote that passed that bill through the House of Representatives again rebuked by the Senate, by its further refusal even to consider it.

This action exposes some rights and privileges of the highest possible value to the country, to secure which the President has concluded a convention with Nicaragua and Costa Rica, to repudiation by those States, if this session of Congress is closed without passing the resolution, which has been read at the desk. I can only perform my duty by asking for action on this important matter.

It seems to be a mistake that nothing can excuse to leave this matter open, and I decline to be responsible for it as a Democratic chairman of a Republican committee. That committee has reported this resolution, and it, at least, deserves the respect of a Republican Senate.

It is due also to the high reputation of this Congress that this dangerous situation should be provided for.

If there is a time for all things, "a time to plant and a time to pluck up that which is planted," we have in this hour a time in which the Senate can do more for the honor of our country by planting this canal across the Isthmus of Darien than it could have done at any moment during the life of the Fifty-sixth

Congress. Instead of that, we are about to tear up what the President has there planted.

This Congress is the golden link between the nineteenth and the twentieth centuries. It opened in the year 1899 and is about to close in 1901, I fear in dishonor. Its work, so far accomplished, announces distinctly a new era in American history.

2. Meeting a national and moral necessity which had compelled the United States to accept a war with Spain, which had resulted in the treaty of Paris, the Fifty-sixth Congress has proceeded to open up to the islands acquired under that treaty the opportunity for free, constitutional self-government, in which the basis of all true liberty is the separation of church and state. Our influence in the Spanish-American governments has made republics of them all, and our forced intervention in the islands of the Caribbean Sea and in the Philippine Archipelago has laid the foundation of this supreme political blessing, on which the happiness of those people will rest in perfect security.

The American people will never permit those foundations to be disturbed or the principles of our free constitutional government that we have implanted in those islands to be shaken.

The thrift of our people under laws that are administered with honesty and wisdom and organic institutions that permit their freedom of action and secure their enjoyment of the results of their labor and enterprise has made our country the granary, the clothier, the mechanician, and the scientific herald of inventive genius, in the forefront, if not in the advance, of any other country.

The Fifty-sixth Congress has a just claim to high eminence among its predecessors for vigorous and careful efforts to give support and encouragement to our people in this great and unexampled progress made by them in this brief period of its existence.

With the hands of the people, working out great destiny, this Congress has marked its era with monuments that can not perish from our national history.

It has but one vote to give, for which we are prepared by years of laborious study and debate, that the world is expecting with anxious solicitude and our people demand with one united supplication, to make this Congress supreme in reputation as the servant of a great country and the benefactor, the peacemaker, of all mankind.

Shall we, for the want of will, or in deference to a sense of national prosperity that is not only imaginary but is not just to our country, refuse to give that vote?

The legislative branch of our Government for twenty-six or more years has been dealing with this great question, without protest or criticism from any other government, including that of Great Britain. For sixteen years we have been dealing with the Nicaraguan Canal question in Congress, in aid of concessions made by Nicaragua and Costa Rica to our own people, and the Senate has passed bills, on that basis of right, twice, by very great majorities.

Congress, convinced that such a basis was not broad and secure enough to meet all the demands of our national necessity or the rightful claims for protection due to the commerce of the world, abandoned that basis and began to institute legislation to acquire national rights for the construction of a canal.

The Hepburn House bill is the outcome of this new line of action. After full deliberation the House of Representatives has sent it to the Senate, by a vote that is almost unanimous, and asks our concurrence.

This change in our line of legislative action is also in accordance with the fact that Nicaragua has declared that the concessions made to our citizens are forfeited, leaving no concessions recognized by Nicaragua as being in existence, either to the United States or to any of our people.

To obtain any canal rights or privileges in Nicaragua it is necessary to acquire them; and without such rights, either by agreement or conquest, it is not possible to construct a canal by the United States.

Seeing this situation, the President, in December, 1900, made an agreement with Nicaragua in identical terms, granting such rights upon the sole condition that Congress will authorize the President to acquire such rights and privileges. I will read one of those agreements—both are in the same words—which I had the honor to report to the Senate from the committee.

Protocol of an agreement between the Governments of the United States and of Costa Rica in regard to future negotiations for the construction of an interoceanic canal by way of Lake Nicaragua.

It is agreed between the two Governments that when the President of the United States is authorized by law to acquire control of such portion of the territory now belonging to Costa Rica as may be desirable and necessary on which to construct and protect a canal of depth and capacity sufficient for the passage of vessels of the greatest tonnage and draft now in use from a point near San Juan del Norte, on the Caribbean Sea, via Lake Nicaragua, to Brito, on the Pacific Ocean, they mutually engage to enter into negotiations with each other to settle the plan and the agreements, in detail, found necessary to accomplish the construction and to provide for the ownership and control of the proposed canal.

As preliminary to such future negotiations it is forthwith agreed that the course of said canal and the terminals thereof shall be the same that were stated in a treaty signed by the plenipotentiaries of the United States and Great Britain on February 5, 1900, and now pending in the Senate of the United States for confirmation, and that the provisions of the same shall be adhered to by the United States and Costa Rica.

In witness whereof the undersigned have signed this protocol and have hereunto affixed their seals.

This agreement is not only indispensable, but it must be a cause of anxiety on the part of the President, inasmuch as he made a part of it to take effect forthwith. The President was then engaged with Great Britain in the effort to remove any possible obstruction arising out of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty that might stand in the way of such an agreement.

He did not intend to affront Great Britain or in any way to affect any right she might have to the making of such a contract with Nicaragua and Costa Rica. To accomplish this great purpose, he copied into these agreements the text of House bill 2538, known as the Hepburn bill. He could not have done this and he could not have stipulated that the most important part of the agreement should take effect forthwith if he considered that the House bill is in conflict with any right of Great Britain or any courtesy due that Government.

It is an undeniable fact that the Hepburn bill is not in conflict with any right Great Britain could possibly assert arising out of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. Full power over all such possible claims remains to the President in his diplomatic powers and functions under these agreements and under the Hepburn bill.

We can not fathom the danger of letting these agreements fall by our refusal to confer on the President the authority to make them. This would be a fatal misfortune to the country.

In making these agreements the President, by implication at least, has consented to the attitude of Nicaragua in declaring all the concessions to our citizens are annulled, and we are left without any canal rights unless we get them under these agreements.

What is it that stands in the way of the passage of the House bill, which would resolve this perilous situation into one of safety and perfect respect to all the rights and sensibilities of Great Britain?

While Congress was rightfully legislating on the canal question and providing authority for the President to acquire canal rights and privileges in those Republics, the President employed his diplomatic powers to remove objections to the exclusive right of the United States to construct, own, and control a ship canal in Nicaragua and Costa Rica, as I suppose, and, as the whole world understands, to enable Congress to legislate on this subject without giving offense to Great Britain.

This intervention of the diplomatic branch of the Government had one of two purposes, namely, either to aid Congress in legislating or else to take the whole control of the subject out of the hands of Congress. If it was to aid Congress, it was legitimate, but unnecessary. If it was to usurp the control of this great subject in the hands of the diplomatic department, it was utterly inexcusable, and so it remains. The Senate acted upon the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, which is the outcome of this negotiation, and made amendments to it. I will not discuss these amendments.

The time fixed by treaty with Great Britain for exchanging ratifications of this treaty as amended expires on the 4th of March, as I remember. We are now within a few hours of the expiration of that time, and it is certain that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty as amended has failed. No other result is possible.

We must go forward and legislate to acquire the rights defined in the Hepburn bill and in these protocols of agreements with Costa Rica and Nicaragua, or we must abandon all effort to acquire these rights, and thus abandon the canal and the right to legislate on the subject until Great Britain shall give her consent.

It can not be that we are in such desperate straits that we must wait for the expiration of the few hours of this Sabbath day as a courtesy to Great Britain. She could not demand a delay so brief, with no indicated purpose on her part to use it in consenting to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, for it is now manifest that she does not mean to accept those amendments.

This attitude returns to us the horrid incubus of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, under which we have struggled with pain and national humility for a half century. I have no desire to travel over that dismal journey, and recall the resentments our people justly feel on this subject. I will leave that to those who are willing to adopt the shame of it and live another half century under its shadow.

There is no reason why this bill should not now pass, and every reason of justice and necessity why it should pass, unless it is that we have surrendered our rights as a nation, and an essential part of the sovereign powers belonging to us, into the keeping of Great Britain. Shall this Congress, great in its history, proud in its courage, and grand in its patriotism, chain itself to the will of Great Britain and link its destiny with so shameful an act, instead of completing its splendid record by an act that will make the pageant of to-morrow a proud delight to the whole American people?

May this Sabbath day, Mr. President, open a week in our national century which shall be followed by other weeks and months and years and centuries, in all of which the nations yet unborn will bless this Congress for a measure that is full of good for all mankind. It is a healing act that will cure us and the world of ills that no other act can heal, and will develop what is our manifest destiny—to march abreast with the greatest nations that have ever existed in all that can bless mankind.

We have long suffered with a paralysis that has caused us the loss of power on land and sea, in commerce, in sea power, and in ship communication with our own ports. The Master who hears us to-night, as we are working on this excepted day from labor, will bless us if we follow his example on that historic Sabbath, when he said to a paralytic Jew, "Rise, take up thy bed, and walk." But this blessing was not bestowed without objection by the Jewish lawyers who witnessed (to question the divine authority) this blessed miracle.

The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured: "It is the Sabbath day; it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed." The rejoicing invalid, who had been such for all his days, said: "He that made me whole said unto me: 'Take up thy bed and walk.'"

This Congress will vindicate its action before heaven and earth when it shall say to this people, so long imbecile under the paralysis of Great Britain: "Rise, take up thy bed, and walk."

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President——

Mr. MORGAN. I have not yielded the floor, Mr. President.

Mr. NELSON. I desire to make a request of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. MORGAN. What is it?

Mr. NELSON. Will the Senator yield to me to call up the report of the conference committee on the river and harbor bill?

Mr. MORGAN. In a very few moments.

Mr. NELSON. Very well.

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to ask unanimous consent of the Senate that they will consider and pass this resolution. If it is sent to the other House, I do not think that House can possibly fail to see that it is of the utmost possible consequence to the people of the United States. If we pass this resolution, we shall save those two contracts with Costa Rica and Nicaragua, without which they will be perfectly free to repudiate and turn aside from them. They are to give us all the rights that we desire in Costa Rica and Nicaragua, and without this agreement we can not get those rights. Those agreements provide that when the President is authorized by law to acquire those rights from Nicaragua and Costa Rica they will grant them and engage with us in treaty negotiations as to the terms upon which those agreements shall be fully executed.

A part of this agreement takes effect forthwith. What part? That part which defines the terminals of the canal; that part which gives to us what we tremble to grasp at and have been working to get for more than fifty years. Now the Senate of the United States, for some inscrutable reason, which appears to me upon its face to be one of political partisanship, turns aside from that and engages here to-night, Mr. President, in passing little bills of claims, pensions, and the like of that, when in ten minutes' time we could pass that great Nicaragua Canal bill, and gratify the people of the United States, by the passage of that great measure, more than they have been gratified since the Declaration of Independence.

I hope the Senate will consent to do it, and I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be put upon its passage.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama asks unanimous consent that the resolution which has just been read be taken up for consideration. Is there objection?

Mr. ALDRICH. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

PRINTING OF LAWS.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I ask for an order for a reprint of the usual number of public acts numbered 111 and 112. The copies are exhausted and, as I understand, they are very much needed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and the order will be made.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9886) to restore certain widows to the pension roll; asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. GIBSON, Mr. MIERS of Indiana, and Mr. CALDERHEAD managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; further insists upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 168, 219, 220, and 221, upon which the committee of conference have been unable to agree; asks a further conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had apointed Mr. BURTON, Mr. REEVES, and Mr. CATCHINGS managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3670) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent to the heir or heirs of one Tawamnoha, or Martha Crayon, conveying to them certain lands in the State of North Dakota, confirming certain conveyances thereof, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 6591) for the relief of Austin A. Yates; and

A bill (H. R. 13436) to authorize the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River.

WIDOWS' PENSIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9886) to restore certain widows to the pension roll, and asking a conference of the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments and agree to the conference asked for by the House.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. GALLINGER, Mr. SHOUP, and Mr. KENNEY were appointed.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. NELSON. I call up the conference report on the river and harbor bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives further insisting upon its disagreement to certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, and asking for a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes thereon.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, it is unnecessary to read the report. We have agreed upon it. There are only four items in dispute. The second disagreement is on but four items.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, the conferees this evening reported an agreement on all the items except four, or five rather, one being omitted by mistake. The report then went to the House that the Senate had insisted and asked for a conference.

The House refused to recede, and granted the conference. That conference was appointed. They again conferred and again disagreed, and reported the disagreement. It was reported to the House, and the House has again sent it over here, still insisting on its amendments. That is the condition.

Mr. SPOONER. What are the points of disagreement?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the motion of the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. NELSON. The motion is that the Senate further insist. The committee of conference have had another conference and still disagree in respect to the four items that we reported a disagreement on this evening, and I move that the Senate insist.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator state what the items are?

Mr. NELSON. Yes; but I stated it this afternoon.

Mr. SPOONER. I was not here then.

Mr. NELSON. The four items in dispute are these: The first item is to pay to the Brazos Improvement Company $400,000 for improvements that they made at the mouth of the Brazos River. The next item in dispute is the provision for a reservoir in the State of Wyoming, which has been examined and estimated for by the War Department. The third item in dispute is the one providing for a reservoir in Wyoming. That proposition has also been examined and looked into by the Geological Survey. The remaining item in dispute is the one providing for a small reservoir on the Sioux River in South Dakota.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator kindly state the amounts involved?

Mr. NELSON. The amount involved in the Brazos amendment is $400,000. The amounts involved in respect to the reservoirs are as follows: The first reservoir in Wyoming is $50,000 direct appropriation and $165,000 continuing contract. As to the second reservoir in Wyoming the direct appropriation is $50,000 and the continuing contract is $25,000. As to the reservoir on the Sioux River, in South Dakota, the appropriation is direct, $52,500. Those matters are in issue. It is evident from the work we have so far done that it is very doubtful whether the conferees can agree.

I move that the Senate still further insist on its amendments. I should like to have that motion discussed and debated here, and a yea-and-nay vote taken, so that we can get the sense of the Senate regarding it.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the report be first agreed to.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The motion, I suppose, is to accept the report, then the question of further insisting will be in order.

Mr. ALDRICH. That has been done.

Mr. BERRY. There is no acceptance.

Mr. WARREN. I understand the Senator from Minnesota moves now that the Senate insist upon its amendments, and ask for a further conference.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Has the report been accepted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The conferees simply report a disagreement.

Mr. NELSON. The report as to the other items which we have agreed upon has been adopted in both Houses.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Everything has been agreed to by the Senate except these four amendments, and the Senator from Minnesota moves that the Senate still further insist upon its amendments, and agree to the conference asked for by the House.

Mr. BERRY. I hope that question will not be put just yet. I thought the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] was going to debate the question.

Mr. WARREN. I have no desire to debate the question, unless the motion of the Senator from Minnesota is antagonized, when I should be glad to have a few moments to debate it.

Mr. BERRY. I want to make a statement, if the Senator will permit me.

Mr. WARREN. Certainly.

Mr. BERRY. We have had these items in conference and have debated them a great many hours. We finally reported a disagreement. The report came here, and the Senator from Minnesota moved that the Senate agree to it. It went to the House, and the House insisted on their disagreement by a large majority. It again went into conference.

We conferred about it, and the House members absolutely refused to recede from their position, stating that they were instructed by an immense majority not to agree, so we reported another disagreement. It went back to the House and was again voted down.

It is useless to meet the conferees again, because they will not agree. Therefore I hope the Senate will fully discuss this question, decide it on a yea-and-nay vote, and instruct the conferees in that way, because it is simply a consumption of time to talk to the House conferees further as matters stand.

They have all positively informed us that they could not under any circumstances agree to the Senate's proposition, especially after the House had twice by an overwhelming majority voted not to do so. Therefore I hope the matter will be settled now by a yea-and-nay vote, so that if the report does go back, the House conferees will understand that it has been after a full and fair discussion in the Senate.

Mr. STEWART. I should like an explanation of the $400,000 item that first comes up. I presume the Senate is uninformed on it.

Mr. BERRY. Some years ago there was an act of Congress passed authorizing the Brazos River Improvement Company to build certain works at the mouth of the Brazos River, in Texas, at their own expense, and to charge tolls. The company undertook the matter and a large amount of work was done, the value of which they claim amounted to more than a million dollars—I do not remember the precise amount.

In the course of time they had not succeeded in accomplishing all they started out to do. It turned out that the proposition would not pay, and they came back to Congress. In the original bill authorizing this company to act, it was provided that Congress might take the work up at any time by paying for it. They came here and wanted Congress to take it. Congress refused to do so. So it went on for some years, and finally an appropriation was made.

Before this, however, a board was sent down there to determine the value of the work. The board reported that it was worth $600,000. Still it was not paid for, the committee of Congress declining to report in favor of paying for it. Then an appropriation was made of $85,000 for an improvement, but not to be expended unless the company deeded their rights in this improvement to the Government. They did so deed them. They then claimed, and claim now, that while they made an absolute deed to us they always said to everybody that they would rely on Congress as to whether or not they would be paid for the improvement.

That is their claim. The committee refused to report to pay $600,000 for the work, but the matter was compromised, and afterwards the committee reported in favor of paying $400,000. That is the item. I do not care to debate the merits of it. There are other gentlemen here who will debate it. I leave that to others. I am one of the conferees.

I do not care to go into the matter. That is the general outline of it. The merits will be presented. What I insist on is not to go through the useless ceremony, without debate, of sending this committee up there to meet the other one whom we know will not agree to it. So I hope that the Senate will take up the matter and discuss it and determine by a yea-and-nay vote whether or not the items shall remain in the bill.

Mr. CARTER obtained the floor.

Mr. MORGAN. Will the Senator from Montana yield to me for a moment that I may ask a question of the Chair?

Mr. CARTER. With pleasure.

Mr. MORGAN. I desire to inquire of the Chair whether a motion to recede from these amendments is now in order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has no doubt that it is.

Mr. MORGAN. I enter that motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was said that there was no report here. There is a report here, and it will be read, if the Senator from Montana will wait a few moments.

Mr. CARTER. Certainly.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate, numbered 168, 219, 220, 221, and 222, to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 222, and agrees to the same.

As to amendments numbered 168, 219, 220, and 221, the conferees have been unable to agree.

KNUTE NELSON,
JAMES McMILLAN,
JAMES H. BERRY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

THEODORE E. BURTON,
WALTER REEVES,
T. C. CATCHINGS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Will the Senate agree to the conference?

Mr. BERRY. I hope the vote will not be taken yet.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The conference report should be agreed to, and then there will follow such action as the Senate pleases.

Mr. BERRY. That leaves the other question open.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the report.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. MORGAN. I move that the Senate recede from its amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama moves that the Senate recede from these four amendments.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Will the Senator from Montana yield to me for a moment?

Mr. CARTER. Is it as to a matter in relation to this bill?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I desire to make an inquiry.

Mr. CARTER. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I desire to ask some member of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to explain the reason for not reporting in some form or other the resolution which I was authorized to report from the Committee on Public Lands the other day and which was sent to that committee and of which I have not heard since. I should be glad to be informed.

Mr. CARTER. I desire to suggest to the Senator from North Dakota that the inquiry is scarcely germane to the subject under discussion.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I did not know there was anything under discussion, Mr. President, except the Senator from Montana.

Mr. CARTER. The question before the Senate is on agreeing to the conference report, I understand.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I beg pardon of the Chair. I understood the Chair to announce that the conference report had been agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes. Then a motion was entered by the Senator from Alabama that the Senate recede from its amendments.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I beg pardon of the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is the question before the Senate.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I have no hesitation in saying in the presence of the Senate that the basis upon which this bill and all river and harbor bills for a dozen years, within the scope of my knowledge, have been constructed is vicious and entirely contrary to just and equitable principles of legislation. Any Senator who will carefully read this bill and in conjunction with it the report upon which it is based will inevitably be driven to the conclusion, unhappy though that conclusion may be and humiliating as it is, that the bill is framed, constructed, and completed upon the despicable principle of division and silence.

This bill from first to last, and not a page of the bill need be excepted, is surcharged with items repugnant to the judgment of every Senator, items which every Senator is conscious are lacking in merit, and should not be incorporated in any bill appropriating money from the public Treasury.

The first 47 pages of the bill relate to harbors. These items carry large sums of money. They go to a great extent to swell up the aggregate of sixty-odd million dollars carried by this bill. Then follow a number of rivers.

But before taking up the rivers, let me call attention briefly to the harbors. I fully realize, Mr. President, that when a committee starts out to frame a bill of this kind it is the set purpose of every member of the committee to provide for those harbors that should be improved in the interest of commerce; it is the purpose of every member of the committee to expend public money only in the public interest in this behalf; but this bill grows from day to day and hour to hour until a sufficient number of States and districts are satisfied to secure its passage.

We start out, for instance, with an appropriation in the bill at Porcupine Island, in the State of Maine. I presume the waters in the vicinity of Porcupine Island should be considered, but if you will turn to page 26 you will find, very shortly after looking after the harbor in the vicinity of Porcupine Island, we take up Sakonnet Point, in the State of Rhode Island. It was necessary, in order to get Porcupine through, to get down to Rhode Island.

This is a new work—

Says the report. Listen to the persuasive eloquence of the report in this behalf, which calls for the sum of $10,000 from the public Treasury:

Sakonnet Point is a rocky headland on the eastern side of the mouth of Sakonnet River, and lies about 6 miles east of Newport.

Sakonnet Point, in connection with Churchs Cove, just north of it, forms an anchorage protected from the southeast to northeast, but exposed to storms from the south to the northwest.

About the year 1827 somebody concluded that they would build a little breakwater in connection with this point. That was abandoned for more than fifty years. Now we take it up as a new work and propose to put in the sum of $10,000, to be collected in public taxes to improve this work that was abandoned in the days of sailing vessels—the improvement of a harbor that can never be made of any avail whatever in this day of steam navigation and deep-water vessels. But this is a meritorious proposition compared with others that appear in the bill. I think this point ought to be improved if a thousand other things in this bill are to be taken care of at all.

For instance, we have the sum of $5,000 appropriated to take care of Mattituck Harbor, New York. Who ever heard of Mattituck Harbor before to-night? Where is Mattituck Harbor in New York? One of the Senators from New York is present. He may be able to locate it. But I doubt to-night if a single member of the Committee on Commerce can tell where this harbor is. And yet we are to put $5,000 of money in the improvement of that harbor. If you will turn to page 40 of the report, you will find where Mattituck Harbor is. The location of it is to be buried forevermore in this report that is to find its place in the crypt of the Capitol shortly after 12 o'clock to-morrow.

This harbor is a tidal inlet extending about 2 miles south from Long Island Sound to the village of Mattituck, on Long Island, about 70 miles east from New York City.

Now mark this unheard-of basis for an appropriation—astonishing revelation!

The natural depth of water at the entrance is from 1 to 2 feet

[Laughter.]

We are to start in with from 1 to 2 feet of water to dig out a harbor to get up to the village of Mattituck, unknown to anybody outside of the postal authorities of the United States and the persons living in the immediate vicinity.

Mr. CHANDLER. What is the depth of water we are to get?

Mr. CARTER. They want 30 feet of water at Mattituck Harbor. The Senator from West Virginia very aptly suggests to me at this point that the turkeys are required as towboats to tow the catfish out of that place when the water gets low. [Laughter.] The Senator from Maryland says to me we had better sink a well up there and pump the water out in order to get a harbor. This sounds ridiculous, but the naked, cold truth remains that out of the toiling millions whom we are empowered to tax we are to take $5,000 for this purpose.

That takes the opera-bouffe aspects from this case and makes it something of a tragedy. I will not touch all of these ridiculous propositions as we pass by, but only the high places where the low water is found. [Laughter.]

We have next:

For the improvement of the harbor at Carnarsie Bay, New York: Continuing improvement, $10,000.

That is found on page 43 of this report. I am free to say that I never before heard of that harbor, but I find from this report that in 1896, 50,000 tons of freight went into that harbor. This is something of a proposition possessed of merit. The maximum draft that can be carried is 6 feet in the main channel—I suppose 6 inches on the edges—and 3 feet in the south channel over the shoalest part.

Yet the estimated cost of this project to get ocean-going and coastwise steamers into that alleged harbor is $23,000 plus $15,000, and in this bill we provide for that particular harbor the sum of $10,000, the money to be collected in one form and another from the people of the United States.

We next find in the bill the sum of $5,000 appropriated for Flushing Harbor, in the State of New York. Flushing Harbor is dealt with on page 44 of the report. It appears that we are starting out to make a harbor at Flushing, with 3 feet and 9 inches of water to begin with. Will anybody explain, in an age when a steamship is from 300 to 620 feet in length, with a draft of from 20 to 30 feet, how much it is going to cost to get a harbor at Flushing, N. Y., with 3 feet and 9 inches of water to begin with?

But, Mr. President, we do not confine ourselves to the coast when we get to the State of New York. We are easy of our favors in the framing of this bill. We desire to interest everybody, and we naturally desire to throw bouquets at Senators; and consequently we take up the harbor at Peekskill, N. Y., amongst other places in that State, and I find upon page 11 this item, not inserted by the Senate. I have been reading from the original text of the bill. Up to this time I have not made any remark in relation to any Senate amendment to the river and harbor bill. It is a part of the original text of the bill as it came to us:

Improving the harbor at Peekskill, N. Y.: Continuing improvement, $5,000.

I presume that Peekskill is spoken of in terms of respect in this report. If it is not, it ought to be. I have never heard an evil report from the town of Peekskill. [Laughter.] This is the statement. I believe it is not flattering. I presume it is confined to the truth, as all stories relative to Peekskill have been:

HARBOR AT PEEKSKILL, N. Y.

This harbor is a prominent indentation on the eastern shore of the Hudson River at Peekskill, N. Y., about 45 miles above New York City. It has an area of about 1 square mile, approximately—

Not quite, I suppose, but approximately a square mile. [Laughter.] That is, the harbor—not Peekskill—east of the 12-foot curve of the river, and the outlying flats, 3,500 feet wide, have a maximum depth over them of 5 feet at mean low water.

There must be quite an extent of flat, or what the report terms "the outlying flats."

A narrow channel 6 feet deep at mean low water follows the shore from north to south past the town wharves. The range of the tide is 2.9 feet.

Very important, if true.

The original project for this improvement, adopted by the river and harbor act of June 3, 1896, consists in widening the channel along the wharf front to 100 feet and deepening it to 10 feet; also in extending it north and south until the deep water channel in the Hudson River was reached. The estimated cost was $50,000.

The amount expended to June 30, 1899, was $10,122.74. The condition of the channel in the harbor at that time was such that boats drawing 9.5 feet of water could be brought to the wharves.

I will not pretend to read the Peekskill case through, because of the many cases I have encountered in this report, outside of the large harbors of the country, Peekskill is one of the most meritorious, and if any item of this great mass of appropriations is to be retained I confidently hope and I earnestly plead for the retention of Peekskill.

But, Mr. President, I will not delay the Senate with any further reference to New York, save to refer briefly to two or three items. We have here, for instance, the improvement of Oak Orchard Harbor, $2,000. In the immediate vicinity of Oak Orchard Harbor the school children know of the harbor, but there is not anybody in the Senate who ever heard of it before. There is not anybody in my State who ever heard of it; and the population of Montana is a traveling population. [Laughter.] I find with reference to Oak Orchard Harbor, New York, for which we are to contribute the sum of $2,000:

The harbor is Oak Orchard Creek.

Not a river, but a creek. [Laughter.]

I recall a survey demanded by a member from Texas, during my brief service in the House of Representatives, of a river in that State, with a view to having some improvements made upon the river in the interest of navigation. When the engineer of the United States Army went down there to examine the river, with a view to having deep water for a hundred miles up through the channel, the member met him at the mouth of the river and said: "Do you think we would be more comfortable going up the river in a buckboard than on horseback?" [Laughter.]

I have no doubt that this Oak Orchard Creek is one of that class of public improvements. Is there anyone on this floor or anywhere in public life who would stand in the presence of men charged with public duty and attempt to justify the expenditure of $2,000 of the public money on a trifling proposition like this? Silence will reign everywhere in the presence of that question. That is not, however, a Senate amendment.

The improvement of Wilson Harbor, New York, is another of the class to which I have referred. Maryland has not been neglected at all. We have had Maine and New York. You will find Connecticut in here with rivers and harbors never heard of by mariner or landsman 20 miles from the location, for the improvement whereof bunches of money ranging from $2,000 to $50,000 are appropriated in this bill.

New Jersey has not been overlooked, and the Senators from New Jersey are unable to-night, I will warrant, without any fear of contradiction, to tell the Senate where half the places are located for which appropriations are made.

Mr. WELLINGTON. The Senator alluded to Maryland a moment ago.

Mr. CARTER. I will give specific cases in reference to Maryland.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I should like to hear them.

Mr. CARTER. I will take pleasure in giving specific cases.

If the Senator will turn to page 16 of the bill he will find the sum of $5,000 appropriated for the improvement of Rock Hall Harbor, Maryland, in accordance with the report submitted to the House in a document that no one has ever seen outside of the member from that district and the man who made it. Let us see how it is.

"The following is the report of the local engineer on a recent examination of this harbor." It is printed in House Document No. 99, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session. The substance of this document is that "in 1891, after a survey made under my direction, I recommended a channel 10 feet deep at mean low water and 100 feet wide from the channel in Swan Creek Inlet to the wharf at Rock Hall, at an estimated cost of $9,515."

Now, that has grown by subsequent estimates to the sum of $31,515, to be spent in and about Swan Creek, and for what purpose will that subserve the general commercial interests of the United States? I do not pretend to go over the case of Queenstown Harbor, Maryland, nor the improvement of Claiborne Harbor, Maryland, or the various other projects for Maryland. It is a sad commentary upon my geographical information, but I say, without any semblance of a blush, in this presence that I never have heard of three-fourths of these harbors.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Has the Senator never heard of Claiborne Harbor?

Mr. CARTER. I have heard of it here.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Has he never heard of it before?

Mr. CARTER. I probably have heard of Ocean City, where a town-lot speculation has been in progress for some time. [Laughter and applause in the galleries.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There must not be a repetition of applause in the galleries. That is against the rules of the Senate.

Mr. WELLINGTON. If the Senator has never heard of Claiborne Harbor he is very deficient in historical knowledge, so far as our State is concerned. But I made the inquiry for this purpose not to defend any of the appropriations so far as Maryland is concerned. I asked not one of them from the Committee on Commerce in this body, nor did I do anything in the other House to give one dollar for any of these projects.

I believe to-night that the river and harbor bill should not be passed by the Senate of the United States. It is one of those iniquitous measures that is attempted to be passed upon each and every occasion by interesting this, that, and the other Senator in this, that, and the other State. It is "the old flag and an appropriation." Now, I am not responsible for one of them, and I shall take great pleasure in voting against this bill. I believe it to be an iniquitous measure—to use the vulgar term, a steal.

Mr. CARTER. I am glad to have a recruit who is so enthusiastic as my friend from Maryland.

Mr. President, it would be tiresome to the Senate to go over these items in detail. What I wish to impress upon the Senate is that, beginning with the State of Maine on the northeast, through no fault of the committee dealing with this matter in either body, but in obedience to a custom so pernicious that it should be discontinued, the legislation has been framed upon a theory not based upon merit or discriminating judgment as to the interests of the public service, but with a view to getting votes, wholly without regard to the merit of many of the propositions involved.

I have passed from Maine to Massachusetts, from Massachusetts to Connecticut, from Connecticut to New York, from New York to New Jersey, from New Jersey to Delaware, and thence to Maryland. Strike the coast of Virginia, get down to North Carolina and South Carolina, Florida, turn the corner and come to Georgia, and you will find Doboy Bar, Georgia. Before this appropriation bill was brought to the attention of the Senate, whoever here in this body heard of Doboy, in the State of Georgia?

Now, it seems that this is a reasonably meritorious proposition for Doboy Bar. Instead of 1 foot of water to start with they have 12 feet. But the channel is very crooked, so that the entrance is not much used. The project for its improvement was adopted in 1899, and provides for creating a channel by dredging 24 feet deep at mean high water and 300 feet wide, at a cost of $70,000.

Mr. CHANDLER. Read the first two lines.

Mr. CARTER. I will read the whole of that item, to the end that the character of the improvement may be fairly understood.

In 1888, $5,795.40 was spent in harrowing and water-jet work on this bar without result.

Now, I have no knowledge of harrowing and water-jet work; I have put in a good deal of time harrowing for corn planting and wheat sowing and things of that kind, but I suppose there are Senators here who understand what harrowing and water-jet work on a bar means—without result. It is to me, as the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. THURSTON] suggests, a harrowing proposition. [Laughter.]

Failing in this harrowing and water-jet work, an effort was made to reach the Treasury for dredging purposes.

Dredging under contract began April 9, 1900. At the close of the fiscal year 47,000 cubic yards of material had been removed.

The amount expended to June 30, 1899, was $960.79.

The funds appropriated will complete the channel and maintain it until June 30, 1901. To maintain it the following year it is estimated that $30,000 will be necessary.

This brings up one of the peculiarities of this work. The original appropriation made to dredge out a swamp or to make a harbor where nature refused to aid the work, or any considerable part of it, involves an eternal battle with the elements. The currents of the ocean depositing sand along the coast throughout the years and centuries pursued their way in defiance of our edicts and laws.

It follows, therefore, that when we undertake to dredge a harbor out where a harbor does not exist we entail upon posterity the necessity of either abandoning the work improvidently commenced or else eternally seeking to dredge out what nature insists upon depositing in this artificial harbor. Each and every year the burden upon the Treasury will continue to increase, so that when one of these inconsiderate projects has been entered upon we must either abandon the investment made or continue useless investments for an indefinite time in attempting to do that which is repugnant to nature's general course of action.

But, Mr. President, I do not wish to go over these small harbors any further. You might follow around the line to Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, leap across the continent to California, Oregon, Washington, and every point of the United States that gives a vote in either House of Congress, and you will find that the whim of the member, the demand of a constituency in a locality, rather than the serious engineering aspects of the case, has constituted the rule of action.

But when we get to the rivers—and we must get to the rivers, Mr. President, because these coast States can not withstand the storm that would arise from the interior—we find in pursuing this bill that, beginning with Vermont, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Great Lakes, every little stream that can by any possibility be tortured into a basis for an appropriation is named in the bill. Not content with this, we go down the Mississippi River. Not content with going down the Mississippi River, we stop at every little creek and inlet that pours water into that majestic stream, and follow that creek or stream up to its source.

It is instructive to read the names of some of these streams. You will naturally think when you read the bill carefully that Maine was taken care of, but after taking care of the harbors, those points in which the nation at large is interested, we tramp over the States again and plaster the districts with little appropriations. So we go back to Maine, and we will find that we have here the sum of $25,000 to improve Lubec Channel, Maine. You will find the explanation of that on page 155 of the report. It is just as good an explanation as any of them; but listen to it.

Originally the channel was but 5 feet in depth at mean low tide and but 2 feet at low water at spring tide.

On the Lubec River, starting in with 2 feet of water, after providing for every estuary and place that could be called a harbor along the coast, we go back to the Lubec Channel and start with 2 feet of water and $25,000—to do what, or go where, or accomplish what? This is probably susceptible of a better explanation than many of the items which follow.

Here is the Bagaduce River, in the State of Maine, and I wish to advise the Senate again that I am not reading from a single Senate amendment to the bill. The Bagaduce River is spoken of on page 156 of the report. This stream empties into Penobscot Bay at Castine, Me. Most Senators have been at Castine. I venture to say that there is no commercial necessity of any kind, character, or description warranting the spending of $25,000 on the Bagaduce River.

But we will pass over Maine and go down to the Cocheco River, in the State of New Hampshire. The Cocheco River calls for an appropriation in this bill of $10,000, and it starts with 6 inches of water to dredge out a channel. Is this not running mad with appropriations of public money? Yet, Mr. President, the Cocheco River presents a most meritorious case.

Mr. GALLINGER. Has the Senator noticed that the tide rises 7 feet in that river?

Mr. CARTER. I know. We had better let the tide do its deadly work in that river. [Laughter.] Now, Mr. President, after this 6-inch river in the State of New Hampshire, we have the improving of the Exeter River in that State, and the reference to Exeter River will be found on page 160 of the report.

A survey of this river was made in 1874 from its mouth in Great Bay to the wharves at Exeter, a distance of 8¼ miles, and a project was submitted to obtain a towing channel with a minimum width of 40 feet and a minimum depth from the mouth to Oxbow, 5.6 miles, of 12 feet at high tide; that is in a country where the tide rises 7 feet; and from Oxbow to Exeter 10 feet, to remove bowlders all the way up between the 10-foot contour down to a depth of 10 feet below high tide at an estimated cost of $24,000.

A number of additional requirements were made; and it seems that we must put in an amount estimated to be required, for the completion, of $7,000. The amount that can be profitably expended this year is $7,000; and there is no pretense that there is any commerce whatever there, as far as this report shows, except that there are about 10,000 tons of fishing boats, I presume, passing up and down that whole stretch of river each year.

Mr. CHANDLER. Coal.

Mr. GALLINGER. Coal boats.

Mr. CARTER. Ten thousand tons of coal pass up and down this river every year. That would be about—well, two teams would haul it in a month.

But, Mr. President, why delay the Senate? Leave New Hampshire and get down to the Powow River in the State of Massachusetts. Who outside of Massachusetts ever heard of the Powow River?

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me, I want to suggest to him that he has taken the only two items in the bill given to the State of New Hampshire for rivers, so that we have not made a very heavy drain on the Treasury.

Mr. CARTER. Except the harbors.

Mr. GALLINGER. And not much on the harbors. In fact there are only three items in the bill for the State of New Hampshire.

Mr. CHANDLER. I am sorry my colleague takes the Senator from Montana seriously. He has not said anything serious yet.

Mr. CARTER. There is the Powow River, in Massachusetts, $12,000. I will not take up the time of the Senate reading the report with reference to the Powow River. I do not wish to have any trouble about it, but I do say that the commerce of the river is of no importance to the people of the United States, and that it is not fair, it is not just, it is not equitable that the people of Indiana should be taxed to spend the sum of $12,000 upon the Powow River, in the State of Massachusetts, from which they can never reap a farthing's benefit, directly or indirectly.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. President, I think the remarks of the Senator from Montana are very interesting, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEAN in the chair). The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Dolliver,	McBride,	Shoup,
Bard,	Fairbanks,	McComas,	Simon,
Bate,	Foraker,	McCumber,	Spooner,
Berry,	Foster,	McMillan,	Stewart,
Beveridge,	Frye,	Mallory,	Sullivan,
Burrows,	Gallinger,	Martin,	Taliaferro,
Butler,	Hale,	Mason,	Teller,
Carter,	Hanna,	Morgan,	Thurston,
Chandler,	Hansbrough,	Nelson,	Tillman,
Clapp,	Harris,	Penrose,	Turner,
Clay,	Heitfeld,	Pettigrew,	Vest,

PENSIONS TO SOLDIERS' WIDOWS.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9886) to restore certain widows to the pension roll, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendments and concur in the same.

J. H. GALLINGER,
GEORGE L. SHOUP,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

HENRY R. GIBSON,
W. A. CALDERHEAD,
ROBERT W. MIERS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13729) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 2163) granting an increase of pension to Mary L. Cramer;

A bill (H. R. 2617) for the relief of the legal representatives of Edward De Leon, deceased, for $8,000 due him for judicial services;

A bill (H. R. 9503) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Baughman;

A bill (H. R. 10302) to amend an act to promote the safety of employees, etc., by requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, etc., approved March 2, 1892;

A bill (H. R. 10334) granting an increase of pension to Nellie G. P. Koehler; and

A bill (H. R. 13080) granting an increase of pension to John F. Carbee.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 364) granting an increase of pension to Lewis Black;

A bill (H. R. 427) for the relief of heirs of Mrs. Tellisse W. Wilson;

A bill (H. R. 523) for the relief of Arba N. Waterman;

A bill (H. R. 13329) granting an increase of pension to Grotius N. Udell;

A bill (H. R. 13520) granting an increase of pension to Cornelia Hays;

A bill (H. R. 13550) to provide an American register for the foreign-built ship Balclutha;

A bill (H. R. 13794) granting a pension to Hix Patterson; and

A bill (H. R. 14138) to authorize the Pigeon River Improvement, Slide, and Boom Company, of Minnesota, to enter upon the Grand Portage Indian Reservation and improve the Pigeon River in said State at what is known as the cascades of said river.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, I ask permission to have laid before the Senate the report of the committee of conference on the Post-Office appropriation bill.

Mr. NELSON. I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that we have a conference now under consideration.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes; but I ask the Senator to yield to me for a moment for this report.

Mr. NELSON. Will it lead to debate?

Mr. WOLCOTT. There will be no debate at all, I think. I wish simply that the report may be agreed to.

Mr. NELSON. I yield for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEAN in the chair). The Senator from Colorado presents a conference report, which will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13729) "making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 2.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out said amendment and insert the following in lieu thereof: "The Postmaster-General is directed, if he has sufficient available information to enable him to do so, to report to Congress the probable cost of connecting a telegraph and telephone system with the postal service by some feasible plan;" and the Senate agree to the same.

E. O. WOLCOTT,
W. E. CHANDLER,
MARION BUTLER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

E. F. LOUD,
GEORGE W. SMITH,
CLAUDE A. SWANSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the conference report on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

Mr. CARTER. I will not detain the Senate by referring at length to the seven rivers in the State of Massachusetts. In addition to the Powow River, I will merely name the Mystic River, $50,000; the Mystic River above the mouth of Island End River, $5,000; Weymouth River, $12,000; Town River, $7,000; Taunton River, $2,500—very modest.

Then comes in Connecticut with a number of rivers. Rhode Island has its rivers as well as its harbors, and I notice quite a long string of Rhode Island and Connecticut rivers.

Passing from Connecticut we come to New York. I find about all the rivers in the State of New York that ever have been heard of, and a great many rivers that have never been heard of, are taken into consideration, receiving sums of money from the public Treasury, for useless improvements in most cases, ranging from $25,000 to $50,000.

We get down to the State of Pennsylvania. "Let me not pass Delaware," says the Senator from that State, who was kind enough to seek for an audience in my behalf.

We find the Delaware is very handsomely taken care of. It has not been overlooked.

Mr. KENNEY. What is that, Mr. President?

Mr. CARTER. I observed that Delaware has been very handsomely taken care of and has not been overlooked.

Mr. KENNEY. In what regard? I have been advised that Delaware was not taken care of.

Mr. CARTER. I find for the improvement of the Delaware River, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware, in accordance with the report printed, the sum of $450,000.

Mr. KENNEY. I wish the Senator would charge that to New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and not to the State of Delaware. The Delaware River is mostly in Pennsylvania.

Mr. CARTER. Mostly in Pennsylvania, I presume.

Mr. KENNEY. The fact is that the State of Delaware receives, all told, only about $33,000 of all the appropriations in this bill.

Mr. CARTER. It does not get a fair share, and there ought to be a better divide.

Mr. KENNEY. I am with the Senator from Montana on this proposition. I do not think that Delaware does get a fair share.

Mr. CARTER. I am glad to see that recruits are coming. [Laughter.]

I observe, as corrected by the Senator, that the sum of $1,600,000 is exclusive of the amount hereinbefore appropriated—that is, I suppose, exclusive of the $450,000 that has been appropriated. Pennsylvania is most handsomely disposed of.

Every river, great and small, in the State of Maryland is remembered in this grab bag.

Then we come to Virginia. The Potomac River we all know, and reasonable improvements on that stream all Senators will favor; but where is Machodoc Creek, in the State of Virginia, for which the sum of $2,100 must be appropriated? Where is New River, and what has it done in the way of prosecuting commercial enterprises upon that stream? Then my family had a creek named after them down there, and that creek is not forgotten—Carters Creek, Virginia—in accordance with the reports submitted in a document that no one has ever seen, $3,000.

Improving the Pagan River, Virginia, $10,870. Where is the Pagan River, and what kind of commerce is conducted upon the Pagan River?

Mr. BUTLER. Will the Senator yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. CARTER. I shall be glad to get some information relating to the Pagan River.

Mr. BUTLER. Will the Senator yield to me to make a request? This evening, under the unanimous-consent arrangement, while we were passing unobjected House bills, the Senate passed House bill 10701. I wish to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which that bill was passed, and request the House to return it.

Mr. THURSTON. What bill is it?

Mr. BUTLER. It is a bill to amend section 6, chapter 119, United States Statutes at Large, No. 24.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What is the nature of the bill?

Mr. KENNEY. Let the question be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] enters a motion to reconsider the vote by which a bill was passed.

Mr. BUTLER. I wish to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which a bill was passed, and to request the House to return the bill.

Mr. NELSON. I decline to yield. This is a privileged matter which is at present under consideration.

Mr. BUTLER. It will lead to no discussion. I want the bill to be sent back to the Senate, so that it will be in order. I do not press the motion now. I simply enter the motion.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator kindly state what the bill relates to?

Mr. BUTLER. It is, as I understand—I have not examined it—a bill amending the banking laws in Porto Rico and other places. It is a very important bill that was passed here by unanimous consent.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Will the Senator state the Calendar number of the bill?

Mr. BUTLER. The Calendar number is 2513.

Mr. NELSON. I decline to yield, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota declines to yield.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The bill referred to by the Senator from North Carolina is one simply conferring citizenship upon the Indians in the Indian Territory. It does not refer to the banking law at all.

Mr. THURSTON. The Senator from North Carolina has the wrong number.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The Senator evidently has the wrong Calendar number.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER] has the floor.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, Senators will find little instruction, but much of amusement in reading over the names of the various rivers provided for in the State of Virginia. The interest will increase when you pass Virginia, down to the coast of North Carolina. I would at this point like to have the aid of the Senator from that State who is present [Mr. BUTLER], in the vain attempt, which I shall make, to properly pronounce the names of some of the rivers which are provided for in a most bountiful manner here. First is:

Improving Scuppernong River, North Carolina, $14,000.

I desire to know from the Senator whether my pronunciation of that name is correct?

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator's pronunciation is eminently correct and very euphonious; but the Senator unfortunately is attached to a locality in a part of the earth so far west that he has never yet become acquainted with that luscious grape that is indigenous to North Carolina known as the Scuppernong.

Mr. CARTER. Oh, that furnishes ample justification for the proposed appropriation. I did not connect the grape with the river. [Laughter.] As happily suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], I was thinking of water and not of wine. [Laughter.]

Passing the Grape River, letting $14,000 pass down the stream, we come next to the Pamlico River. I have heard of that river; but the Tar River, never. And yet I suppose the Tar River is well known—in the locality through which it runs. [Laughter.]

Mr. BUTLER. Why, Mr. President, does not the Senator remember when he was a boy studying geography that the men who made geographies in those days were so ignorant that they put down in those geographies that North Carolina was noted for its production of tar, pitch, and turpentine. Surely in his youthful days the Senator was afflicted with geographies that were written by men who were so ignorant that they put that sentence in them as the things that North Carolina was especially noted for. If the Senator did not know that, if he had been in the Union Army in the late war he would have learned something about tar, because during that war the saying became famous that a soldier from North Carolina had so much tar about him that he would stick and never run.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I understood that the tar related to the heels of the citizens and not to the rivers of the State. [Laughter.]

But we must pay the sum. Now, Mr. President, mark the words: we must pay the sum of $25,000 out of the public Treasury to those comparatively unknown streams during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902.

The next river in North Carolina that is taken care of, to the extent of $15,000, is the Neuse River, an old timer——

Mr. BUTLER. Surely the Senator is familiar with that river.

Mr. CARTER. Yes; that is probably an old residenter. That is probably entitled to $15,000, if any of these rivers is.

Then comes the Trent River in North Carolina.

Then we come down to the creeks in North Carolina—Contentia Creek——

Mr. BUTLER. I will say to the Senator from Montana that while we call it a creek in North Carolina, he would consider it a river if it were in his State.

Mr. CARTER. I have no doubt of that.

Mr. BUTLER. We call ordinary rivers creeks.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, judging by the names in this bill, there are more rivers in the State of North Carolina than in any equal portion of the earth's surface anywhere to be found. [Laughter.]

We have then "improving the Northeast River," then the Cape Fear River, then another item for improving Cape Fear River, and then the Black River in North Carolina. Then we come down to the creeks again. We strike a place called Tom Creek, and we drop $1,000 at that point.

Then we come to the Waccamaw River, North Carolina. "For continuing improvement" we give them $5,000.

Then the Little Pedee gets a thousand dollars, and the Great Pedee gets $5,000.

I will not go further into the merits of the North Carolina case, but respectfully request Senators to turn to the report and carefully consider the merits of the respective creeks and rivers of that State. It is one of the most magnificently watered sections of the American Union. [Laughter.]

We pass then to South Carolina, and we have the Santee River, $20,000. Then the Wateree River. Here we are getting down to the genuine article—"water." [Laughter.]

Then, passing from the Wateree, we come to the Congaree, and the Congaree has $3,500 allowed for improvement—for what purpose is not stated.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. CARTER. I have no doubt the Senator from South Carolina can give me an ample and sufficient reason for the appropriation.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator from South Carolina is responsible for but two items in the bill. If the Senator from Montana will permit me, I will say for his benefit and information that Almighty God blessed our country with sufficient rain to give us a stock of water in the soil that will cause rivers to flow, and we do not have to dam up the melting snow in order to get reservoirs to endeavor to irrigate. I sympathize with the Senator, for I have been out through this country, and I never could see what it was made for except to hold the world together. [Laughter.]

The rivers which he mentions are every one of them larger than the Potomac after you get above the Georgetown bridge. The Santee drains three-fourths of the entire State of South Carolina, and the Wateree is a confluent of that stream.

You will understand that these are Indian names. Every one of the Indian names in our country ended with a double "e." There is the Pedee, the Santee, the Wateree, the Congaree, and another one which is called Salkehatchee, but we abbreviate it and call it "Saltketchee."

I hope the Senator will be able to get some water in his eloquent effort to-night; but he had better let South Carolina alone, because there is nothing in this bill for South Carolina that is not honest and decent.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I am very glad to have the Senator sustain his well-known reputation for good conscience and rectitude by disclaiming responsibility for these items. [Laughter.] The great abundance of water in South Carolina evidently led the Senator when charged with the destinies of that State to undertake to regulate the whisky traffic through the State authorities.

Now, we have for the Congaree, $5,000——

Mr. TILLMAN. I will say, if the Senator will permit me, that we do not have to import water to mix with our whisky. We can always get enough water; but the Senator would have in some portions of his State to carry it along with him.

Mr. CARTER. We do not drink at all. [Laughter.]

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator means that they do not drink any water at all. [Laughter.]

Mr. CARTER. For this item the Senator from South Carolina is not responsible, to wit, the Ashley River, $25,000; nor is he responsible for this item: Improving Wappoo Cut, $8,000. Now, I have no doubt——

Mr. TILLMAN. I am not responsible, but I will enlighten the Senator as regards that. From the harbor of Charleston clear through to the harbor at Port Royal we have inland navigation by reason of salt water estuaries behind the sea islands. This is not a river at all, it is merely an arm of the sea running around behind the sea islands; but in order to give a means of transportation for the smaller craft, which can not go out to sea, this inland navigation has been improved by deepening the shallow points in the estuary at Wappoo Cut. Does the Senator want any more?

Mr. CARTER. I would like to have the Senator explain this report, which purports to state the facts:

> Wappoo Cut in its original condition was a narrow, crooked tidal stream with not over 2 feet depth in some places. It connects Ashley and Stono rivers.

Now I realize, but I did not realize before, the necessity for the large appropriation. I could not readily comprehend why the amount should be so large—$8,000; but if you start with only 2 feet of water and are confronted with the engineering feat of getting 30 feet, then of course you have got to have $8,000.

Mr. TILLMAN. I do not know what scheme started that; but I have myself been through that cut in a steamer that was a couple of hundred feet long.

Mr. CARTER. Yes; and I suppose it had just 2 feet of water. So the report states. Possibly it may be deeper than that at certain seasons of the year.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator must recollect that tides in our State sometimes rise 7 feet; and a stream that is only 2 feet at low tide is 9 feet deep at high tide.

Mr. CARTER. That would be very natural, I should think, of course. [Laughter.]

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator had better turn his microscope in some other direction. He does not find anything in there that will give him much comfort in trying to dig up the snow out in the West.

Mr. CARTER. Let us see about this. Improving of Beaufort River, South Carolina, $2,000. Then we have "Improving Savannah River"—that is a good river—"above Augusta, $1,000;" and that is the maximum amount given to a good project. The large sums go to projects too small for anything.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator will permit me, the Savannah River flows between the States of Georgia and South Carolina, and above Augusta is navigable only for poled boats; that is, boats that are propelled by hand. There are a good many shoals in the river because of the falls, and I do not imagine that that thousand dollars will ever do any good, because there is a railroad up the bank, and it hauls pretty nearly all the produce carried up and down that part of the country. So far as I am concerned, I am willing to strike out that provision.

Mr. CARTER. I should think the Senator would be, for when we get down to preparing a way for ordinary skiffs and canoes to pass over the shoals and up the creeks, I think we had better stop.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator from Montana does not make any point on that.

Mr. CARTER. Not at all. There is only 2 feet of water there to start with. An ordinary canoe could hardly be paddled there.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Savannah River at Augusta, where navigation ends by reason of rocks and ledges, is larger than the Platte where it enters the Missouri.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. It will probably take the thousand dollars to buy poles.

Mr. CARTER. Yes; it is probably to buy poles. Now, I believe that the explanation of the Senator from South Carolina will be accepted by the Senate, and I will therefore pass on to Georgia.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am perfectly willing for the Senator to get to Georgia, but I want him to understand that South Carolina has not got any beef in that pot. [Laughter.]

Mr. CARTER. Under the truce, waiving no rights of any other Senator to comment further on the rivers of South Carolina, I wish to call attention to the Oconee River in the State of Georgia, for which we are to appropriate the sum of $30,000. I regret exceedingly that one of the Senators from Georgia is not in the Chamber at this moment, to the end that we might have some explanation upon a constitutional basis of the reason why $30,000 should be paid from the public Treasury to improve the Oconee River in the State of Georgia. If there is not a constitutional question involved in this class of expenditure, it is difficult to conceive where the Constitution can apply to expenditures within a State for purely local purposes. Probably in order to get a greater depth of water for the fish to swim in in that section of the country or to reelect a member.

There are some names in Georgia that were attached to the Indian tribe about the time that James Oglethrope landed in that part of the country and took possession, and I do not pretend at this time to tell just how the aborigines pronounced their names; but you will find by turning to page 64 of the bill the Altamaha River, a great highway of commerce unknown outside of the vicinity, which is to be improved by the expenditure of $10,000, money to be collected up in the State of Wisconsin and out in Michigan——

Mr. TILLMAN rose.

Mr. CARTER. And down in South Carolina, if you please.

Mr. TILLMAN. In the absence of the Senators from Georgia, as I live near by, I will give the Senator from Montana a little information on geography.

Mr. CARTER. I shall be glad to have it.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Altamaha is formed by the juncture of the Oconee with the Ocmulgee. These two rivers form a junction at or near Macon, Ga., some 200 miles from the ocean, and steamers can run up to Macon, Ga., from the ocean. We are not trying to dredge any channel through dry land down there in order to get river and harbor appropriations.

Mr. CARTER. You come pretty near it. This case comes within 1 foot of dry land. [Laughter.]

Mr. TILLMAN. Which river does the Senator allude to?

Mr. CARTER. I am referring to the Altamaha. Now, permit me to read from the report, for I submit to the Senate that the description that the Senator from South Carolina has furnished of the location of this river gives no general information to any person present as to where the river is, except that it is in the State of Georgia.

Mr. TILLMAN. It flows into the Atlantic Ocean, of course.

Mr. CARTER. Through some other stream?

Mr. TILLMAN. No; it enters into the Atlantic through its own mouth.

Mr. CARTER. It does? Now, if the Senator will permit me——

Mr. TILLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. CARTER. I will read the best statement that a gentleman could make. Sitting down, inspired by the silent surroundings, and the midnight oil burning, and peace and quiet prevailing everywhere, he deliberately wrote this about the Altamaha:

> The Altamaha is the most important river in Georgia, lying entirely within the boundaries of that State.

That would carry the idea that it was quite a river, but listen:

> It is formed by the confluence of the Oconee and Ocmulgee rivers, and has a total length of some 155 miles. It flows in a southeasterly direction, and empties into the Atlantic Ocean through Altamaha Sound, below the town of Darien.
>
> The chief obstructions to the navigation of the Altamaha River consist in rock ledges, sand bars, snags, sunken logs, and overhanging trees.

[Laughter.]

We have got to cut down the forests.

> The rock ledges were confined to the upper portion of the stream, while the other obstructions were found throughout its entire course. The low-water depths at some points did not exceed 1 foot.

I will not read any further from this report. I think that conveys a good general description to the Senate.

Mr. TILLMAN. It is not my funeral or my fun in any sense of the word, but the Senator's information in regard to Southern rivers is so lamentable in its deficiency that I wish he would come down there on a visit and see what sort of streams we have. The Altamaha River, of which he has just spoken, I have crossed up near the junction of the two, the Oconee and the Ocmulgee. It is something over a half mile wide. Of course it varies in depth according to the shallows or sand bars at various points; but I venture to say that there is not at any point in its whole course a place where the water ever gets so low as 1 foot deep clear across it or anywhere near it. I do not care what the engineers may say. Too much water flows through it.

These other streams, the Oconee and Ocmulgee, both rise in the Blue Ridge Mountains, 300 miles from the Atlantic Ocean, and they have confluence and tributaries which, flowing together, form a river as large or larger than the Hudson, until it gets way down nearly to Peekskill, of which the Senator has just spoken, and which they are improving.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It is only a foot deep, according to the engineer.

Mr. TILLMAN. I do not care what that thing says. I know it is not true.

Mr. CARTER. I suppose——

Mr. TILLMAN. I call the Senator's attention to this phase of the river and harbor bill: We have a large number of engineers who must be kept employed, and it is very probable that a great many Senators and Representatives have gone to the War Department and insisted that surveys shall be made of various streams, and that this and that improvement must be entered upon for the purpose of improving navigation. It is notorious that nearly every one of these schemes involves simply the possibility of securing lower freight rates by giving the towns on the rivers the possibility of running a line of steamboats which will force the railroads to give competitive water rates.

The Mississippi itself has quit having any steamboats on it almost, and the whole scheme of river improvement is a humbug and a steal; but if you are going to steal, let us divide it out [laughter], and do not go to complaining.

Mr. CARTER. With a frankness that has always characterized the Senator he comes to my rescue in this good work. I do not pretend to denominate these matters either as grand or petty larceny or as ordinary stealing, as the plain vernacular of South Carolina would put it, but I do say that in order to expose the monumental abuse that has grown up and around this bill it is only essential to go over its details. It appears ridiculous, utterly absurd, wholly indefensible from any standpoint whatever. It is an unhappy condition of things to contemplate when we are brought face to face with the fact that the harbor of New York, with its majestic commerce, the harbor of San Francisco, the harbor of Charleston, the great harbors around the country, upon which the nation at large depends for incoming and outgoing commerce, can not be honestly improved without filtering the public money out through these various little channels, causing men who realize the value of the money they are appropriating to blush in the act when the facts are brought before them.

Mr. President, I do not feel that we ought to stop at this point. To go through the State of Georgia is but to recapitulate another series of humiliating facts involved in this farcical compilation called an appropriation bill. There are meritorious items in the bill, items indispensable for the good of the country, indispensable to the development and maintenance of its commerce; but they are weighted down, not because of the merits of items, but because of the necessities, which I believe are only supposed necessities, connected with the passage of the bill through the respective Houses.

This bill has become known in the most remote corners of the United States, out in the villages and hamlets of the Rocky Mountains, throughout the Mississippi Valley, all along the respective coasts, as the pork bill of Congress. Every man who has a piece of pork in the bill is expected to keep his mouth shut, and to square his conscience with his duty under his oath as best he can. This bill will fail in each Congress in which it is brought up in the future, in my humble judgment, unless correct principles of legislation are employed in the preparation of the bill, and it should fail. Nine-tenths of the items are without merit, without justification.

No member of either body expects to do a wrong in insisting upon the insertion of one of these items. To rush upon the river and harbor bill has become a current mania. Any sort of showing, a foot of water in an unheard of stream, becomes the basis of a $25,000 appropriation in this bill. The meritorious items in the bill will ultimately suffer seriously unless this bill, like the sundry civil bill, like the Post-Office appropriation bill, like the bill for the support of the Army or the upbuilding and maintenance of the Navy, is constructed upon business principles, with due regard to the public interest and without this logrolling system which has heretofore been employed in getting through the river and harbor bill. It is regarded in this Chamber and elsewhere as a sort of pusher. Men have stood mute upon this floor during the present session of Congress, if I judge correctly, because they wished to get things out of the way of the river and harbor bill. The honest convictions of members have frozen on their lips because they had some trifling river appropriation or some little harbor snap in the river and harbor bill which they wished to bring home to their districts and deliver to their constituents.

But let us see what is left of Georgia. I am not through with it. Not at all. You will find these items, generally speaking, not based upon the merits of the respective cases, but generally upon the number of members of Congress from the State. I will not pretend to say that this holds absolutely good throughout the bill, for I have not analyzed it sufficiently, but there are about 36 members from New York. I warrant you will find about 36 items in the bill for the State of New York, and you will find just about as many items from the State of Georgia as there are members of the House and Senators from that State. If you look over the electoral college and determine the number of electoral votes from a State, you can tell about the number of items and the aggregate amount of the items, judged by general proportions, to be found in the river and harbor bill. It does not make any difference whether there is a foot of water or 6 inches of water or no water at all in the river in the State, the appropriation goes there by common custom.

This is an unfortunate condition of things; no one will gainsay that, and it must be stopped. Occasionally, in the few years past, a President of the United States, moved by a sense of duty, realizing the scandalous nature of this extravagant waste of public money, has vetoed this bill, and I believe that if the bill could be put before any President of the United States a sufficient number of days before the adjournment of Congress to enable him to scrutinize it with care, you could not get any President to sign any one of these river and harbor bills and make it part of the law of the country and a warrant upon the Treasury of the United States, but that the veto would be interposed every time this aggregation was thrown forward with a proposition that it be signed by the President.

Passing down through Georgia we have here the Chattahoochee River, $63,750. Then for the improvement of Flint River, in Georgia, a large amount of money. Strange to tell, Flint River, in Georgia, is to have the sum of $25,000 spent upon it. For whose benefit or for what purpose? No one can fairly answer. No one will pretend to. Each and every answer to these trifling projects will, in the end, come back to the fair and candid declamation of the Senator from South Carolina: "It is a general steal, and each fellow wants his share."

Here is the Oostenaula and the Coosawattee doubled up, and they are given $5,000. I suppose they extend out into the edge of another district. Then we come to the Skiddaway Narrows, in Chatham County. They had to give the county. When they came to Skiddaway Narrows they had to name the county in which it is located in order to enable the engineers to find it. It is a skid way, I suppose.

But Florida is not to be overlooked. You will find in going down through this list the most ample provision made for the State of Florida. The provision reflects great credit upon the representation in both branches of Congress from that far distant Southern State. The amounts appropriated are large and the rivers, generally speaking, are very small. The names are unpronounceable, and, speaking with reasonable accuracy, I will say they are unknown outside of the immediate vicinity through which these rivers wind their weary course to the sea. There are several pages devoted to the State of Florida. I do not know the aggregate amount, but that it is large goes without saying, because it is satisfactory to the delegation of Florida.

Then we come to Alabama. Now, mark you, they do not skip a coast State anywhere, nor do they leave out a State in the interior. All who come and demand will be served in this bill, providing they have votes to deliver in support of the bill. Take the State of Alabama, and the first river you find is on page 67, the Coosa River, in Alabama. This is to be improved between Wetumpka and the railroad bridge. They have to locate this by reference to a railroad bridge in order to enable the parties to know where to go to work.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. CARTER. I shall be glad to hear from the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. TILLMAN. The ignorance in geography of my friend is so lamentable that I must even go westward beyond Georgia to give him a little light. The Coosa River is formed by the Oostenaula and the Etowah, two other rivers which rise in the Blue Ridge and form a junction at Rome, Ga., flowing southwestward into Alabama for 200 miles; a very large stream—larger than the Potomac here—as soon as you get above the tidal summit, and it flows on down—it may be shallow in spots. I see my friend the Senator from Montana is looking it up. I am merely giving information. The Coosa River is navigable in the winter months when the cotton crop has to go out.

Mr. CARTER. Send it out on the ice.

Mr. TILLMAN. No; in summer it is not necessary to have any navigation much on this river, and I do not know that it is necessary in winter, because, as I said, the railroads are taking all the transportation in the South as well as elsewhere. But the Coosa River is a very respectable stream. It forms the Alabama, and it flows into the Gulf of Mexico at Mobile, some 500 miles from Rome, Ga. The Senator's geography or ignorance of geography tempts me to give him this information.

Mr. CARTER. I have been in Rome, Ga., and I have been on the Etowah River, but I am willing to take the written report, the official document, which is on file here and intended to support this bill, and upon that rely, rather than upon the memory of the Senator from South Carolina with reference to the geography of a country that he has not visited lately. I think I have been there since the Senator from South Carolina was there. But let me read a description of this river:

> The river was formed of a series of short, deep pools, seldom more than a mile in length, separated from each other by a series of rock reefs and shoals, some of which are as much as 12½ miles in length.

Here is a chain of pools, separated at times by rocks 12½ miles in extent. That does not apply during flood time, when the logs come down in spring, but that is the description upon which this appropriation is based.

> It was therefore not available for purposes of navigation.

They want to put some locks and dams on there in this era of steam and electricity.

Mr. TILLMAN. Have they not got locks and dams all through Pennsylvania, on the Allegheny and around there? I have been around there and seen them.

Mr. CARTER. Those were erected in the time of George Washington, or shortly after.

Mr. TILLMAN. In those days the South stood back and did not claim anything for public improvements, on the ground that it was unconstitutional, and our friends up North got all the swag. We have come to think that we are entitled to our share. That is all the Senator is complaining of.

Mr. CARTER. I do not wish to make any special charge against this particular river. It consists, so the report says, of a series of pools, sometimes disconnected by the intervention of 12 to 15 miles of rocks between the pools. It is the intention to appropriate money out of the public Treasury to connect these pools together and navigate the river that may thus be formed.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator will turn his eagle eye in the direction of Muscle Shoals, in the Tennessee River, between Chattanooga and Corinth, lasting 125 miles or more, he will learn that that great river, the Tennessee, heading way up in southwest Virginia and in western North Carolina and bending around down through north Georgia and on through northern Alabama, and then coming clear back to the Ohio, near Paducah, something like that, is obstructed by these very pools of which he speaks; and the Government has spent several millions in improving Muscle Shoals in order to try to make the river navigable. In our country we have a great many rocks, because the Blue Ridge Mountains and the slopes of the hills on each side are composed of the primary rocks, granite and gneiss, and all those, and these large streams of water are not navigable until they reach the long pine-belt region, or sand region, where the last belt of rocks gives out, and from there on to the ocean most of them have been navigable for steamboats until the railroads supplanted them. The Senator is not making a good case with those of us who know anything about it by those streams he mentions. He had better go back to New England or Long Island Sound.

Mr. CARTER. I have been impartial in my favors in the course of this discussion. Now, upon the theory advanced by the Senator, and that theory occurred to me some days ago, one of two courses is open in reference to this bill in so far as my action with respect to it is concerned. It occurred to me that the bill in all its monstrous features must be exposed. In order to operate upon the line on which the Senator from South Carolina operated, it would be necessary for me to provide for the arrangement of a dry dock up near the summit of the Rocky Mountains somewhere, upon the theory that it would drain itself if we could ever get the water into it, and thus save great expense to the Government. There is just about as much sense in building dry docks for battle ships at the summit of the Rocky Mountains as there is in the majority of these proposed appropriations.

I pass from this string of pools that we are to connect with an appropriation, not of $5,000, but of $75,000, and every dollar of that will be necessary to connect the first two pools you come to, and these two pools will be of no value when connected unless you connect the two pools below. Thus, I presume, before the Coosa River can be made available for navigation we shall have to put two or three million dollars into connecting pools between the Blue Ridge Mountains and the mouth of that river.

Then we have the Alabama River, $20,000, the Black Warrior River, and the Tombigbee. Continuing improvements on the Tombigbee, $275,000. Then we have the Tombigbee River in Alabama, $2,500; then the Tombigbee River in Alabama again, from Demopolis to Columbus, Miss., $2,500; and then the Tombigbee River in Alabama again, from the mouth to Demopolis, for connections, $15,000.

Then we will pass on; and I hope at this point to lose my friend from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], because he can not help me to pronounce any more. We come to the rivers of Mississippi, and we have in this bill one, two, three—I will not pretend to count—there is one full page and part of another page devoted to rivers with unpronounceable names, three-fourths of them not appearing on the map of the United States as published by the General Government, part of them creeks, little waterways of one sort and another, happening to be within districts where if the member demands his pound of flesh, the price of his silence, in conformity with custom the creek must go in and the money must go out.

But, Mr. President, we will pass over to Louisiana, and there you have a veritable harvest of rivers. I regret that the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] is not present, because we come to him next in the bill. Here we have an appropriation for improving the Ouachita River, Arkansas and Louisiana, for the construction of two locks and dams, one below Monroe, La., and the other below Camden, Ark., according to some report submitted in some vague and indefinite House document that is now buried, I have no doubt, under the accumulated dust of many, many long years.

We have what amount here? Three hundred thousand dollars to build locks and dams on a river that not two men in the Senate ever heard of before this appropriation was urged upon the Senate. It is not a navigable stream. The item shows that it has never been a navigable stream; and yet we are to appropriate $300,000 of public money to build locks and dams on this river of an unpronounceable name. Then we get in a number of other rivers, and then we get over to Texas, where we are taken care of in the most ample and satisfactory manner.

Mr. HAWLEY. Will the Senator pardon me for calling his attention to another point? He has cruelly omitted Little Carters Creek, in Virginia, $3,000.

Mr. CARTER. I paid attention to that in the course of my respects to the State of Virginia. Carters Creek was not overlooked. I suppose the member from that State having due regard to that district and due regard for the vote of the Carter family put the creek in for what it was worth, and a little more, too. [Laughter.]

Now, without any reference to the Constitution or economy, this enormous Arkansas appropriation was placed in the bill. I regret exceedingly that the junior Senator from Arkansas is not present to explain upon what theory he can, in the face of this item of appropriation, hereafter open his mouth in public discussion in the interest of economy in the expenditure of the public money. If this be not a loot of the Treasury, if this be not a wholesale manner of taking out public funds for private purposes, then it is difficult to conceive where you could find any method that can properly be characterized as a loot of the public Treasury.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House further insists on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, upon which the committee of conference have been unable to agree; asks a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CANNON, Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts, and Mr. MCRAE managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had agreed, with amendments, to the concurrent resolution of the Senate to print 30,000 copies of the hearings, including the majority report and the views of the minority thereon, before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and the House Committee on Agriculture, etc.; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 573) for the relief of Arthur Connell;

A bill (H. R. 628) for the relief of Hamilton M. Sailors;

A bill (H. R. 1215) granting a pension to Charles M. Neet;

A bill (H. R. 2163) granting an increase of pension to Mary L. Cramer;

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Montana if he will yield to me that I may make a conference report?

Mr. CARTER. With pleasure.

Mr. ALLISON submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have been unable to agree.

W. B. ALLISON,
EUGENE HALE,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. G. CANNON,
W. H. MOODY,
THOMAS McRAE,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to ask if there is any message from the House accompanying the bill.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I decline to yield to that other bill. Our bill is a privileged bill. It is a conference report.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator from Minnesota that I think this will not occupy any time.

Mr. NELSON. If it will not lead to debate, I have no objection; but if it leads to debate, I decline to yield the river and harbor bill.

Mr. ALLISON. It will not lead to any extended debate, I am quite sure. If the Senator will allow me to say a word or two in explanation, I will be glad for him to allow me. Otherwise I shall not do so.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the message accompanying the bill.

The Secretary read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, March 1, 1901.

Resolved, That the House further insist upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, and asks a further conference with the Senate on the remaining amendments.

Ordered, That Mr. CANNON, Mr. MOODY, and Mr. MCRAE be the managers of the conference on the part of the House.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask the Senator from Iowa to state to the Senate the items of difference between the two Houses, if he will.

Mr. ALLISON. As disclosed in the disagreement, there appears to be a number of items in difference, but in reality the conferees, I think, could agree upon nearly all the amendments of the Senate.

The real amendments in difference are amendments No. 62, which I will designate as the pasture amendment, upon forest reservations; No. 99, which is an amendment relating to the improvement of Governors Island—the erection of some military store buildings there; No. 105, the memorial bridge.

No. 129 comprises two amendments, one relating to the National Home in South Dakota and the other relating to an investigation of the Fort Sherman Military Reservation in Idaho, with a view to establishing a Soldiers' Home there.

No. 150 is an amendment relating to the change of the salary of an officer in Massachusetts, wherein the House instructed their conferees not to agree to this amendment, thereby placing them in a position where we could not consider the propriety of the amendment with them. So that is in disagreement.

The remaining amendment is amendment No. 151, relating to international expositions.

I think I might go further, perhaps, and say that these amendments will probably be composed with the exception of the single amendment relating to the expositions at St. Louis, Buffalo, and Charleston. That is the situation of the bill at the present moment.

I move that the Senate further insist upon its amendment and agree to the further conference asked for by the House.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. ALLISON, Mr. HALE, and Mr. COCKRELL were appointed.

ELIZA R. CRAWFORD.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator having the conference report on the river and harbor bill in charge is willing that I should interrupt its consideration for a moment. Will the Senator from Montana yield to me now?

Mr. CARTER. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. When unobjected House bills were under consideration, the bill (H. R. 4120) to pay Eliza R. Crawford the amount of a United States loan certificate was objected to. The objection is withdrawn. The bill has been read, and I now ask that it be put on its passage.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE OLEOMARGARINE BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to concurrent resolution of the Senate numbered 115.

The amendments of the House of Representatives were, in line 2, to strike out "thirty" and insert "six;" in line 8 to strike out "twenty" and insert "four;" in line 10 to strike out "ten" and insert "two;" so as to make the concurrent resolution read:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 6,000 copies of the hearings, including the views of the majority and of the minority thereon, before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and the House Committee on Agriculture, together with the brief submitted, relating to House bill 3717; 4,000 copies of which shall be for the use of the House of Representatives and 2,000 copies for the use of the Senate. The usual number shall not be printed.

Mr. PROCTOR. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, in order that the amendment to which I refer may be clearly understood, I will ask the Secretary to read the amendment on line 11 and ending upon line 3 of the following page.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Improving Ouachita and Black rivers, Arkansas and Louisiana: For the construction of two locks and dams, one below Monroe, La., and the other below Camden, Ark., according to the project submitted in House Document No. 480, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session, $75,000; and the Secretary of War shall construct said locks and dams at two of such of the sites selected by said plan as will, in his judgment, most effectually lengthen the navigation of said rivers: Provided, That a contract or contracts may be entered into by the Secretary of War for such materials and work as may be necessary to prosecute the work of constructing said locks and dams, or the required materials may be purchased and the work carried on otherwise than by contract, to be paid for as appropriations may from time to time be made by law, not to exceed in the aggregate $300,000, exclusive of the amounts herein and heretofore appropriated.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, according to the report the total amount expended on this project up to June 30, 1899, was $503,728.13, and the amount expended under the project of 1874 was $375,432.44. We are now to expend $300,000 more, $75,000 of which amount this bill immediately appropriates, to be available at the beginning of the fiscal year. This seems to be a stream from which the snags are to be pulled. They must have a stump machine down there to pull the stumps out of the river. The project was commenced in 1874. It contemplates the removal of snags, logs, wrecks, leaning timber, etc.

Now, just think, Mr. President, of the task we are putting the Government to. With nearly a million dollars heretofore expended, we are to put in here $300,000 more, going up a little stream and cutting off the overbanging trees and pulling out logs from the channel and dragging stumps out of the way of boats. This might have been proper enough one hundred years ago, but in this day of electricity and steam, with the railway running everywhere, with the rate per ton per mile for moving freight lower than it has ever been anywhere in the world's history, is it not positively absurd to spend more than a million dollars of the public money trimming off the overhanging trees from a little stream, for these overhanging trees with such a narrow stream will block the way of a boat going up and down the river—the creek, more properly speaking. Yet this is one of the appropriations that are to be made here at the behest of a Senator who is the arch champion of economy in this Chamber.

When we get down to Texas we find that proper industry has been displayed in getting every river in Texas that anybody outside of the State ever heard of properly taken care of, and a good many rivers that no one outside of the State ever did hear of before are appropriated for in this bill.

After taking up Texas, we drop in with Arkansas again. Arkansas comes both before and after Texas. There are the Arkansas River, the White River, the Black River, the Current River, the St. Francis River; and then we come up to the Tennessee River and get into the middle part of the country, to the end of Tennessee; and then on the Mississippi, and come around to the Ohio and follow up the little rivers that go in through Kentucky or down through Tennessee and through Kentucky and into the Ohio, and we appropriate for all of them.

But the most beautiful exhibition within my personal knowledge is to be found in the splendid appropriation made for the Big Sandy River, in the State of West Virginia. Not only the Big Sandy, mark you, but we are to take in the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy. Then after disposing of the Tug Fork we must take in the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy, all in accordance with an arrangement made, submitted in House Document No. 235, of the Fifty-sixth Congress, second session. Then immediately follows $112,500. I wonder why they did not just stop at $112,000. They had to put that extra $500 on in order to make it appear that the calculation was very close, that the Big Sandy River required just this amount, simply that and nothing more—nothing less on the Big Sandy. But the Big Sandy is a meritorious proposition compared with the most of them.

Now, then, we pass on from the Big Sandy, as first considered in West Virginia and Kentucky, and upon the next page we find again "Improving the Big Sandy River, West Virginia and Kentucky." On page 79, "Improving the Big Sandy River, West Virginia and Kentucky, including the Tug and Levisa forks, the sum of $12,500." Then, on page 80, "Improving the Big Sandy in West Virginia and Kentucky," $50,000 more.

After that we take up the Kentucky River. I might proceed, naming these rivers throughout the night, until I would finally get over every river in the country and reach the improvements that appeal so strongly to the great, big, liberal heart of my friend the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON], who seems to have been charmed likewise into acquiescence in the general project of appropriation by an appropriation in which Illinois was interested.

Mr. MASON. The Senator from Montana has yielded a moment, and if I can have the attention of Senators I will make a very brief explanation of the amendment which is one of the points of disagreement between the conferees of the House and the Senate. I will be just as brief as I can, considering all things, for I do not wish to delay the bill. I hope it will go back to conference at once.

Mr. CARTER. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. MASON. I understood that you were kind enough to yield. The amendment, which was recommended by the Committee on Commerce of the Senate, provides for a repayment to the channel and dock company, under the following circumstances:

In 1838 an act was passed which gave to this channel and dock company the right to build jetties at the mouth of the Brazos River and to collect tolls. That act, which I hold in my hand, provided, among other things, that if at any time the Government desired to take the jetties and auxiliary works, they should have the right to do so by paying to the said Brazos River Channel and Dock Company the value of their jetties. The company went on with the work. They secured 18 feet of water. They spent over a million and a quarter of dollars.

Since that time the Government of the United States has made an appropriation to enlarge and continue those jetties, having taken possession of them under a deed given by the company. The company has relinquished all its rights to collect tolls, and the Government referred to its own engineers the question to say not the cost of the jetties, but the value to the Government. With some of the officers of this company I am well acquainted—ex-Senator Farwell, who was my predecessor here, and ex-Congressman Taylor, and there are several hundred of the stockholders of the company living in my State and in my city. They bought the lands at the mouth of the river. They mortgaged the lands for all the money they could borrow to build these jetties under this contract with the Government that if the Government took it back it would pay not the cost, but the value.

It was referred to the War Department with instructions to ascertain the value to the Government and to report to Congress for its action. That is the language of the bill. Colonel Taylor, in addressing ex-Senator Mills, then a Senator from Texas, called his attention to the fact that—

> While this bill makes no provision for the payment to the company for the work they did there, you always informed me in the conversations I had with you that if there was not any provision made now that the next Congress will undoubtedly make an appropriation to pay the value of the work, as you stated it several times to me the Government would never take the property of private citizens without paying them for it. I would be glad if you would give me your views when you offer the amendment to the harbor bill in relation to how we would be able to obtain pay for the works after we had turned them over to the Government, as provided for in this amendment.

To that ex-Senator Mills replied that—

> The law requires the Secretary of War to have them valued and the same reported to Congress "for its action." I feel sure Congress will pay you what the works are worth to the Government.

That is the original plan contemplated between the company and the Government if the Government took the work. Since that time the Government has taken the work: since that time they have gone on with the improvements at the mouth of the Brazos River—a river 800 miles long. We all know its importance. The Government has taken possession and now has possession of the property of this company. Their own engineers estimated its value to be $600,000. They found it cost the company a large sum—over $1,000,000; but they said the value of it to the Government, if anybody was to build it with unlimited capital and without accidents, would be about $600,000.

The committee, however, finally unanimously recommended that a settlement or compromise be made, and instead of allowing the company $600,000 for what the Government actually gets in value by taking possession, they are allowed $400,000, which was satisfactory to the officers of the company. The conferees on the part of the Senate, as I understand, maintained the correctness of that. No one in the Senate would hesitate about it if it was a private matter.

The Government has this work; they have taken it from the company who built it. The company only ask in this amendment that the Government carry out the original plan contemplated, by paying this amount. The work is going on. This very bill contains an appropriation for the improvement, for the continuance and maintenance of the jetties, exactly as if the Government had taken that much coal, iron, or wood; and the Government gets the benefit of the use of these jetties.

While the company, as I say, has spent a million and a half of dollars, the only allowance by the Government engineers is $600,000, which the committee cut down, and recommended $400,000.

No more fair, no more equitable claim has ever been presented to a court of justice or to Congress. The Government has this work. It has taken it from the people who built it—these people having mortgaged their property to build it. If we are to go on improving the mouth of the Brazos River, as recommended by the Government engineers, no honest man can look his conscience in the face and say but that we ought to pay these people for the lumber, the labor, and the material they have put in this work. The price the Government agreed to pay to them when they entered into the contract in 1888——

Mr. KEAN. Did the Government make any agreement with the company?

Mr. MASON. Yes; the Government made an agreement with them that if it took the work it would pay the value of it to the company.

Mr. KEAN. Will the Senator kindly read the contract?

Mr. MASON. This is the contract:

> That if at any time during the construction of said jetties and auxiliary works, or after said jetties and auxiliary works shall have been completed, and said channel of 18 feet in depth has been obtained—

That has all been done—

> the United States shall have the right to pay the said Brazos River Channel and Dock Company the value of their jetties and other works constructed under and by the authority granted to said company by the State of Texas as well as by the authority of this act, and on such payment being made by the United States all right to said franchises and works on the part of said Brazos River Channel and Dock Company shall cease.

When Congress made the first appropriation, I will say to the Senator, it was provided that before they would go on with the appropriation and make it applicable to continuing these jetties the company must turn over to the Government the jetties and relinquish all right to collect toll, which they had done. Then the Government was to take possession.

Mr. KEAN. Has the Senator the original contract?

Mr. MASON. This is the contract between the Government and the company. The law itself made the contract.

Mr. KEAN. With whom?

Mr. MASON. Between the Government and the company.

Mr. KEAN. Where is that contract?

Mr. MASON. Here it is. [Exhibiting.] I can not furnish the Senator and the Senate any better explanation than to say that we passed a law that this company were to build these jetties, and they were given the right to collect toll, but the Government reserved the right to take the work away from the company and to pay for it. Since that time the Government has taken control; since that time they have used the work, and every dollar these people have spent the Government has had the benefit of it.

The Committee on Commerce examined into this matter and, I think without a dissenting voice, agreed that it was a just and righteous claim. The company have gone on and built those jetties and the Government ought to pay, not the cost, but the valuation fixed by its own engineers.

Mr. McCOMAS. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Montana to yield to me a moment.

Mr. CARTER. Certainly.

Mr. McCOMAS. I do not desire to delay action on this bill, and I do not intend to correct all the Senator's misinformation. I did not hear all of the Senator's remarks, but I heard him when he stated there were provided for in the bill Maryland rivers and harbors which he thought were unknown and undeserving of appropriation. One was a town of several thousand people, with two lines of steamers running to the harbor, and another a port on the Chesapeake which is the terminus of the Atlantic and Chesapeake Railroad.

I desire the Senator's personal attention to the only harbor of which, from his own statement, he has seen. He has talked of many places; he has not heard of but a few of them, but this is one, according to his own statement, he has seen. He must have seen the harbor of Claiborne, and that seemed to have his special animadversion.

For a very observant man, the Senator from Montana will be surprised to know that Claiborne is the port for the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway system, which gridirons the peninsula, reaching over from Maryland to Delaware, which is a harbor able to accommodate a large and growing commerce.

There were carried, as my friend might have seen, if he had not had the whole bill before his mind and part of it before his eyes when he read—to be more specific:

> The main commerce in Claiborne Harbor at present is due to its being the terminus of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company, whose steamers alone carried 44,025 tons of general freight, 67,500 passengers, 250,000 feet of lumber, 110,000 pounds of United States mail, and 9,000 tons of coal in the year ending August 31, 1899 as reported by the general superintendent of the company.

The Senator said there might be 500 passengers on that road in twenty years. It seems to me that the sum of $10,000 in this bill, the port of a large railway system, carrying 67,500 passengers, including my honorable friend the Senator from Montana himself, and all the revenues from the passenger traffic and that freight traffic, is not a very generous appropriation. Ten thousand dollars is given, that the large Government mail, these many thousands of people, and all this freight may be carried.

I trust the Senator has been more fortunate in other instances than in that one instance which I cite to correct his misinformation and want of observation, when he himself was there and embarked at that port on the steamer, and failed to see a fleet of coastwise boats with their sails flapping in the breeze, and boats loading and unloading, as I am sure he must have seen. I put Claiborne as an instance of proper appropriation in this bill.

My criticism of this bill—and perhaps the Senator in his analysis remarked that when I was out—is that the House conferees have failed in more serious matters. I believe the building up of these minor places within reason is a wise and proper thing to do.

My main objection is that the House conferees have struck out of this bill some of the larger measures. For instance, the proposition of the Senate committee to have a survey to deepen the channel of Baltimore to 35 feet—a mere survey, that the channel might meet the wants of the great commerce of the ocean, now rapidly increasing in that important port, already the first in grain and soon to be the foremost shipping port for coal on the whole continent of America.

Those important matters might at least have been allowed by the House conferees to be retained, and also the provision for a ship canal across the peninsula. A survey for it might at least have been allowed to rest, so that the report might have been made through the Secretary of War.

I do not share the Senator's idea about these matters. I believe that where water is on the coast it should be deepened in a harbor in the interest of commerce, and we should be liberal in our appropriations, and that where there are rivers the rivers should be laid open to commerce. These great ports should not be turned aside by the House conferees, and I trust that the failure to agree in this instance will not benefit those other instances in which the Senator finds special demerits. If this bill should fail, it had better fail when large and important propositions concerning the commerce not only of the State and the nation, but of a continent, reaching out to the commerce of the globe, are not provided for even to the extent of being surveyed, so as to open a way for improvements, so that vessels of great draft may enter the great harbors on our Atlantic coast.

I do not wish to further take the time of the Senate, Mr. President——

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, the observation of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. McCOMAS] harmonizes with my own. It must be admitted that this bill as amended in the Senate carries about $50,000,000. In one way and another the large sum named has been scattered about the country, as I have read, in little creeks and swamps and out-of-the-way places to such an extent that the harbor of Baltimore, with its splendid commerce, can not even be surveyed from the fund of $50,000,000.

My contention has been from the beginning, and is now, that the most liberal appropriation necessary to improve the actual harbors of the country should be made, that the navigable streams of the country should be kept in navigable condition, and that incidental obstructions to navigation should be removed by the General Government; but when the bill provides for connecting pools, separated by stretches of 10 or 12 miles of land, in order to get navigation down to the sea through rock, it is no wonder that the harbor of Baltimore can not be improved.

I am astonished at the meritorious amendment of the Senator from Illinois is for one moment challenged anywhere in a conference which passed this sort of bill through under its scrutiny.

Mr. SPOONER. Would it be agreeable to the Senator from Montana to rest for a few minutes while we transact some business in executive session?

Mr. CARTER. I have but a few more observations to submit; but still, in view of the pressure of public business and the necessity of disposing of certain nominations, I will yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. SPOONER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After eighteen minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. H. L. OVERSTREET, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 5943) to establish Lowelltown, Me., a subport of entry.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 3670) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent to the heir or heirs of one Tawamnoha, or Martha Crayon, conveying to them certain lands in the State of North Dakota, confirming certain conveyances thereof, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. 6048) to amend chapter 559 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved March 3, 1891;

A bill (H. R. 2617) for the relief of the legal representatives of Edwin De Leon, deceased, for $8,000 due him for judicial services;

A bill (H. R. 3003) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to loan naval equipment to certain military schools;

A bill (H. R. 4204) to correct the military record of George A. Winslow;

A bill (H. R. 9503) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Baughman;

A bill (H. R. 9886) amending sections 47 and 48 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in relation to pensions to remarried widows;

A bill (H. R. 12232) granting a pension to Hanna Martha Dusenberry;

A bill (H. R. 13186) granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Thompson;

A bill (H. R. 13396) to amend section 5546 of the Revised Statutes;

A bill (H. R. 13609) to incorporate the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists within the District of Columbia; and

A bill (H. R. 14228) to authorize the city of Nashville, Tenn., to construct a free public bridge across the Cumberland River within the corporate limits of said city.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURROWS in the chair). The pending question is on the motion of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN].

Mr. SPOONER. What is the motion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That the Senate recede from its amendments.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, when the Senator from Wisconsin suggested the propriety of going into executive session I was proceeding to comment upon the observations of the Senator from Maryland relative to the harbor of Baltimore. His contention in no sense antagonizes the view I have been endeavoring to impress upon the Senate. It is probably true that there may be merit in some of the cases to which I have referred in the course of the discussion to-night. I have passed over the great harbors of the country without comment, because it seemed to me the respective items providing for the improvement of well-known and well-used harbors were not excessive, and, as the Senator from Maryland suggests in the case of Baltimore, the appropriation was entirely inadequate.

The difficulty that seems to me to challenge the attention of the Senate in the framing of this bill has been of long standing and steady growth. I recall the appropriations made in the Fifty-first Congress. The river and harbor bill at that time was about $20,000,000. That was regarded as an extraordinary amount to be appropriated. This bill was raised to something upward of $60,000,000. The addition can be accounted for in some measure by the well-krown necessity for greater depth of water as the draft of heavy vessels increases. The depth of water that was entirely adequate at the mouth of a harbor twenty years ago is wholly insufficient now. That suggestion, however, will only apply to harbors visited by ocean-going steamers.

The general tendency of freight carrying, both on land and on sea, is to reduce the cost per ton per mile by increasing the carrying capacity of a ship and car or the drawing power of a locomotive. Twenty-five years ago a 5,000-ton ship was quite a large vessel. Ten thousand tons was subsequently regarded as a large steamer. Now 20,000 tons is regarded as the freight-carrying vessel of the future. In consequence of this continual increase of the draft of vessels, it is essential that certain work should be done at New York Harbor, but it does not follow that we must go over to Flushing, a point never visited by an ocean-going steamer, and a point never to be visited by one, and there undertake to dig out a harbor at the bottom of a salt marsh, with a foot of water to 3 feet at the mouth of the supposed harbor.

Passing from these harbors on the coast we come to the rivers. Senators upon the committee will say that these little rivers are of some value in a commercial sense, but I know of my own knowledge that appropriations were made steadily for the improvement of the Yellowstone River in Montana for about twelve years, the sum of $1,600 being appropriated each year, I presume to satisfy the Delegate from that Territory. There had not been a boat up that river for ten years before, and there never will be a boat upon the river. The water will all ultimately be taken out for irrigating purposes along the bench lands contiguous to the streams. In 1876, about the time of the Custer massacre, the last boat went up the Yellowstone River. For twelve years from 1876 appropriations were steadily made in the river and harbor bill for the improvement of the Yellowstone River. Who did the work, how the money was expended, no one knows. The country was not settled, and I suppose the boys went out there and, finding the fishing pretty good, remained along the stream improving the navigation.

We may go to the West coast, to the South coast, to the East coast, and through the interior of the country, and by critical analysis of this bill we will find that a majority of the items constitute a useless waste of public money. The Mississippi River has been cited as a great highway of commerce, and yet, Mr. President, with all the millions upon millions of money spent upon that river, notwithstanding the fact that the current flows freely and continuously, the railroad running by the riverside carries the freight and carries it cheaper and quicker than the boat running upon the river can carry it. The disappearance of commerce on the Mississippi and upon all rivers in the country can be accounted for by the fact that the improvement in railroading has enabled the railroad people to carry a ton of freight a mile for less money than it can be put upon the steamboat, taken off, and carried between the two points.

It is suggested that the river constitutes a regulation on freights. The perishing—practically—of the towns along the Mississippi River, with a few exceptions, constitutes a standing contradiction to that statement. There is no competition by the river with the railroads. As illustrating that, the city of Ottumwa is about 60 miles from Burlington, Iowa. Burlington is on the Mississippi River. A carload of grain will be carried from the city of Ottumwa to the city of Chicago, 186 miles northeast of Burlington, for less money than it will be dropped off at Burlington. Why? Because the railroads discriminate in favor of the railroads and against the river transportation. The river transportation constitutes no check. The Illinois Central road, running up and down the Mississippi, carries the freight. There is only a boat now and then.

But I do not wish to detain the Senate by an extended discussion of this matter beyond reasonable limits. If what I have said will serve to challenge the attention of the Senate and in some measure the attention of the country to such an extent as to cause in the future a radical departure from the unfortunate policy that has grown up to govern the framing of these bills, what I have said will serve a good purpose. No other legislation appears upon our statute books that emanates from the same vicious system underlying the framing of the river and harbor bill.

The appropriations during the present session of Congress, Mr. President, are large, unusually large. I presume the amount will reach something in the neighborhood of $800,000,000. This is an enormous sum. It would be better, in my humble judgment, for this Congress in its expiring hours to retrace its steps as to fifty millions, most of which, in my judgment, will be improvidently expended under the terms of this bill. The continuing contracts have been taken care of properly as required by law. Many of these projects are new. A little survey, a light appropriation, constitutes but an entering wedge for larger appropriations to follow from year to year. Unless a radical departure is made in this behalf, it will be difficult in the future to secure the passage of any bill which will make reasonable provision for the necessary improvement and make maintenance in good form for our real commercial harbors.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I do not want a final vote to be taken upon this measure without making some remarks upon the matter at issue. As I understand it, the issue really before the Senate at this moment is the motion made by the Senator having this bill in charge, which is that the Senate shall insist upon its amendments.

Mr. FRYE. The other motion takes precedence.

Mr. WARREN. I do not know how we are going to proceed orderly and transact our business if a man can prefer a motion and go off to bed. I do not believe that it is good logic or good parliamentary tactics to admit that there is a motion before us when the mover of it is not here and has not been here for many hours; he has receded already. Therefore I contend that there is no motion to recede before us.

Mr. FRYE. The motion did not go to bed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair holds that the pending motion is that of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. WARREN. Then I will ask if it is in the power of the Senator who has charge of the bill to withdraw the motion and make the other one.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks not.

Mr. WARREN. Then we are to understand that if a man makes a motion and goes home, or goes to Europe or somewhere else for three or four weeks or six months, it binds the Senate.

Mr. CARTER. I suggest to the Senator from Wyoming that he ask unanimous consent that the motion be laid on the table.

Mr. WARREN. I desire, in the interest of the public business, to have this matter go again into conference. I want to say just a word before it is sent to conference. I wish to express at this time my appreciation and my thanks to the Senators who have served on the conference committee. They have done their duty well, no doubt, but there are many who think that there can still be obtained from the House the concession that will bring this bill to an end with the amendments of the Senate sustained. Therefore I want to see it go to conference again, and I will take no time in arguing the question now if I can arrive at that conclusion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Of course, I should be willing that the bill should go into another conference, and I am of opinion that it would facilitate a disposition of the matter. The whole matter is foreclosed if we recede, and believing that the Senate will recede and knowing nothing to the contrary and recognizing the fact that we are in a situation where no one has control over the motion made by an absent Senator, according to the ruling of the Chair, I will have to continue to discuss the question.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator from South Dakota yield to me for a moment?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move to lay the motion of the Senator from Alabama on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire moves to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BERRY. I hope the Senator will not make that motion.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have made it.

Mr. BERRY. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. FRYE. I hope the Senator from Arkansas will not demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. BERRY. I withdraw the call for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Alabama.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FRYE. The motion made by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] was that the Senate further insist upon its amendments and ask for a further conference.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is before the Senate.

Mr. WARREN. I hope that motion will carry. I think it will facilitate the disposition of the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON], that the Senate further insist upon its amendments and ask for a further conference with the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate at the further conence; and Mr. NELSON, Mr. MCMILLAN, and Mr. BERRY were appointed.

SAFETY APPLIANCES ON RAILROADS.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The Senate this afternoon passed the bill (H. R. 10302) to amend an act to promote the safety of employees, etc., by requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, etc., approved March 2, 1893.

I am informed that the Senate amendments were accepted by the House, and that the bill was enrolled and placed in the hands of a messenger to bring to the Senate, and on the way, or somewhere, it has been lost. In other words, there seems to be an effort to steal the bill.

Mr. LODGE. In connection with what the Senator from South Dakota is saying, I desire to say that I have been engaged in trying to find that bill. My attention was called to the fact that it was lost. It was announced to the Senate that the House had concurred in the amendments of the Senate.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The bill was enrolled.

Mr. LODGE. The bill was enrolled in the House, it was signed by the Speaker, according to the records of the House, was given to the Chief Clerk of the House, Mr. BROWNING, and that is the last of it. Mr. BROWNING says he delivered it here. There is no record of it here at all. It can not be found. I have been personally to the room of the Committee on Enrolled Bills and looked over the bunch of bills that was sent, and the bill is not there. I do not know what can be done, but the bill has disappeared between the two Houses.

Mr. SPOONER. Can it not be reenrolled?

Mr. LODGE. The Speaker, I am told, on one occasion, when a bill had disappeared in that way, declined to sign the bill again. It has disappeared between the two Houses.

Mr. SPOONER. It can not be, if a bill is lost before it has been signed by the officer of the other House and this, that Congress is powerless about it. Both Houses have passed it.

Mr. LODGE. Certainly they have.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not see any reason why it can not be reenrolled.

Mr. PETTIGREW. If the bill is lost, it is lost on purpose. There is no question about that. That might do for some half-civilized community, but for the Senate of the United States it is a pretty tough proposition.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say to the Senator that in the case of another bill lost like the one to-night I think it took nearly an hour to find it, and possibly this bill can be found. I hope so.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. There is certainly a copy of the bill in the possession of the Senate. Everybody knows the exact language of the bill, and I can see no reason why it should not be substituted.

Mr. LODGE. We have no enrolled bill. We have nothing but the bill as concurred in by the House. The original bill was amended by us and concurred in by the House, and it is in the possession of the House, where it was enrolled. The enrolled bill has disappeared and we have nothing.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. There can be another copy enrolled. There is nothing sacred about one copy of a bill.

Mr. LODGE. I hope the Senator will suggest some method by which that can be reached. That is just the end I want to reach.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. If the Clerk in enrolling a bill should spoil one, that does not destroy the bill.

Mr. LODGE. This bill had been signed by the Speaker.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I presume the Speaker would not hesitate to sign another bill.

Mr. SPOONER. We can pass a resolution that it has not been received and has not been signed here, and instructing a reenrollment.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. That would justify the Speaker in signing another copy of the same bill.

Mr. LODGE. Let us pass a resolution and send it to the House

Mr. PETTIGREW. I offer the following resolution and ask for its immediate consideration:

Resolved, That the House of Representatives be informed that H. R. 10302, which was passed by both Houses, enrolled, and signed by the Speaker, has not been received by the Senate, and the House be requested to cause the said bill to be reenrolled, signed by the Speaker, and transmitted to the Senate for the signature of the President pro tempore.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

ST. JOHN'S LODGE, NEWBERN, N. C.

Mr. BUTLER. I ask for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 636) for the relief of St. John's Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, No. 13, of Newbern, N. C. It has been read.

Mr. KEAN. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] desires, as I understand, to discuss that bill.

Mr. BUTLER. He is present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURROWS in the chair). Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I objected to the bill on a former occasion because I thought it was a bill that should not pass. My reason for doing so I will explain. I will ask, first, that one or two letters and statements in regard to it may be read as a part of my remarks, and then I will give my own reasons for it. I have no personal objection to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts sends to the desk a paper, which will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

[The Worcester Spy, Thursday, February 7, 1901.]

A PUBLIC STEAL.

Last Friday the House of Representatives at Washington passed a bill for the relief of St. John's Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Newbern, N. C., calling for an appropriation of $6,000. This is an outrage upon the citizens of the United States, an act of public corruption that should not pass unpublished. The facts have been plainly stated, and although forty years have passed since the alleged damage was done, there are plenty of witnesses still living who can prove the rank injustice of this claim.

The Worcester papers, through Capt. Joseph B. Knox, of this city, have had occasion several times to protest against this bill, which has been knocking at the doors of the National Legislature for many years. Captain Knox was serving as commissary of the prisoners at Newbern when the city was occupied by the Federal troops on March 14, 1862. He was one of three trustees appointed to take charge of the Masonic property, and while stationed there a lodge was convened among the Northern soldiers and occupied the meeting place until the close of the war. Gen. A. B. R. Sprague, Gen. Josiah Pickett, and other Worcester men were members of the lodge and are familiar with the facts.

The lodge maintained a fund by letting a hall for entertainments, and was put in much better condition during occupation by the Union troops. A new carpet was purchased and laid, and platforms were put in, and in every respect the property was in much better condition than when the Confederates abandoned it. After the close of the war the jewels, which had been sent to the Grand Lodge of the State of Massachusetts, were returned through the instrumentality of Captain Knox, and at the regular annual meeting of the St. John's Lodge he had the pleasure of returning the jewels in person, being the only Union man present.

There was no loss whatever, and the property was improved. The only excuse for paying this lodge a cent of money would be to pay for rent while they were driven out of the city by military occupation. It would be establishing one of the most absurd and dangerous precedents ever heard of to pay this lodge for rent of property occupied as this hall was.

Captain Knox is a prominent Mason, and his fellow-Masons who have knowledge of this fact are the most indignant of all at this unprincipled attempt on the public Treasury. It is to be hoped that it is not too late to stop this misappropriation of public funds, but it should be done this time so as to rule the offenders out of court altogether. Otherwise, in ten, fifteen, or twenty-five years we may expect a repetition of this sort of claim. It seems to us that if such a claim were granted that lodges and churches and institutions in the South, as well as private property destroyed in the course of hostilities, should be paid for. It certainly would be more just to pay for churches and property actually destroyed than for that which was merely occupied and benefited by the occupants.

Mr. LODGE. I now send to the desk another paper which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

KNOX TO PAYNE—WORCESTER MAN WRITES TO CONGRESSMAN—MASONIC BILL IS AT ISSUE—NEWBERN LODGE WANTS ALLEGED WAR DAMAGES PAID—CAPTAIN OPPOSED TO THE BILL—WAS ON THE GROUND HIMSELF AND SAYS HALL WAS LEFT IN GOOD CONDITION.

Capt. Joseph B. Knox has objections to St. John's Lodge of Masons, of Newbern, N. C., getting $5,000 from the United States Government for the use of its property by the United States Army during the civil war. There is now a bill pending before Congress providing for the payment of this amount to St. John's Lodge. It came up on Friday and was hung up by Congressman SERENO E. PAYNE, of New York, who raised the shout of "no quo rum." Captain Knox has written Representative PAYNE thanking him for his action, and telling him some things about the property during the civil war.

Captain Knox served as commissary of prisoners at Newbern when the city was occupied by the Federal troops, on March 14, 1862. He had a dispensation from the grand lodge of Massachusetts as worshipful master of Fraternal Lodge, No. 3, with authority to convene a lodge of Masons in the Army. A lodge was convened at Newbern, N. C., and the hall owned by St. John's Lodge was used as a meeting place. Captain Knox states that the building was left in better condition at the end of the war than when it was taken possession of by the Union Army. Platforms for the officers' chairs were built and a carpet for the lodge room bought and laid.

Gen. J. J. Peck appointed Captain Knox one of the three trustees of the building March 18, 1864, and as such he was pretty well informed on the condition of things. He says there is no justice in the claim of the North Carolina lodge, and he has the facts to prove his statement.

Many prominent Army men attended meetings of the lodge while Captain Knox presided over it. Generals high in authority in the Army would attend the meetings, but while they were in the lodge room they were obedient to the commands of the master. Many Worcester men attended the meetings of the lodge, among them being A. B. R. Sprague, Gen. Josiah Pickett, and Capt. F. E. Goodwin. Captain Knox took charge of the jewels of the lodge and sent them to Massachusetts for safe-keeping during the war. Later he returned them to the lodge.

The letter Captain Knox has written to Congressman PAYNE follows:

WORCESTER, MASS., May 21, 1900.

Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE,
United States House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I notice in the report of the doings of the National House of Representatives on the 18th instant, on a bill to pay "St. John's Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Newbern, N. C., $5,000 for use of its buildings during the war," that a point of no quorum, made by yourself, prevented action on the proposition. I thank you for action on your part. Such a bill should not be imposed upon Congress, as to my certain knowledge the property in question was in much better condition at the close of the war than it was when abandoned by them and occupied by members of the Federal Army.

Newbern, N. C., was entered by us on Friday, March 14, 1862. Being appointed commissary of prisoners, I was very busy the next day, but on the second (the Sabbath) I started to learn if there was a Masonic hall in the city, which I soon discovered. It had already been entered, and the jewels and some other lodge furniture had been removed. I at once had a guard detailed and placed in the building to prevent further depredation. The jewels were recovered and sent for safe-keeping to the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts by myself. I had the honor of holding a dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts as worshipful master of Fraternal Lodge, No. 3, with authority to convene a lodge of Masons in the Army.

Afterwards this building was used for hospital purposes for a few months, and then Fraternal Army Lodge occupied these premises until the close of hostilities. We had the room cleaned up and platforms built for the chairs occupied by the first three officers, after which the brethren raised by voluntary offering $220 and had a Masonic carpet made in Lowell, Mass., which, with the assistance of a gentleman now living in Boston, was placed on the floor of the main hall by our hands.

A small theater underneath this hall was fitted up and rented to a troupe of minstrels, composed of quartermaster's clerks, and the proceeds expended to keep the property in repair. While the property was in possession of the Army lodge, by an order from Gen. John J. Peck (a copy of which is herewith inclosed) a board of trustees was appointed, of which your humble servant was one, to look after all the Masonic property, which they did, and I, later on, had the satisfaction of returning the lodge jewels in person on the floor of the same hall.

And now, after thirty-five years, an attempt to filch from the Government $5,000 in such a case as this appears to me as highly dishonorable. I can fully substantiate the above statement if required.

Sincerely, your obedient servant,

JOSEPH B. KNOX,
Formerly Brevet Captain, Signal Corps, U. S. A.

—Worcester Evening Gazette, Monday, May 21, 1900.

Mr. LODGE. On receiving those clippings from the Worcester papers, which were sent to me calling my attention to it, I wrote to Captain Knox and asked him for further statements before I did anything in regard to it. I have some letters here which I desire to read:

WORCESTER, MASS., February 20, 1901.

Hon. H. C. LODGE, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: I have your esteemed favor of the 18th instant and hasten to reply, that you may have the facts in the case in question. I inclose a copy of a letter which I wrote Congressman PAYNE, of New York, last May, which gives the main facts.

That is the letter which has just been read from the desk.

Mr. PAYNE acknowledged the receipt of my communication and solicited further information, had I any to offer. I responded, stating that a large hall in the same Masonic hall building and owned by St. John's Lodge was, when we took Newbern, being used by the Confederates for manufacturing cartridges and clothing for the Southern army. I have in my possession a metal cartridge which I took from that hall. In the main hall, where there was any defacement of the walls (which was very slight) while used as a hospital, we had an artist retouch every spot, so that when the property was turned over to the owners it was in as good condition and better than when they left it. When I in person returned the lodge jewels, a vote was passed to have my portrait painted and hung on the wall of their hall as the savior of their lodge.

The trustees rented a small theater under the hall to a troop made up of quartermasters' clerks as minstrels for $10 per night. I have the written contract in my possession and used the proceeds in keeping the property in good condition.

Pardon me if I state that your humble servant sent you the paper instead of Mr. Nutt, to whom I gave the facts. I also sent, the same date, to Senators HAWLEY, of Connecticut, DEPEW, of New York, and FORAKER, of Ohio, hoping to reach someone who would be interested in preventing such a barefaced steal.

Very truly, yours,

JOSEPH B. KNOX,
492 Main Street.

CITY OF WORCESTER,
OFFICE OF THE LICENSE COMMISSIONERS,
City Hall, February 20, 1901.

MY DEAR SIR: I am cognizant of the facts as stated in the letter of Captain Knox, pertaining to the premises of St. John's Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, of Newbern, N. C., and cordially indorse his statement.

Very respectfully, yours,

JOSIAH PICKETT,
Brevet Brigadier-General, United States Volunteers.

Hon. H. C. LODGE,
United States Senate.

OFFICE OF THE COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS,
Port of Worcester, Mass., February 20, 1901.

SIR: It gives me pleasure to vouch for the statement made by Capt. J. B. Knox. All the facts as stated by Mr. Knox I am fully acquainted with, being an officer with him in the Masonic Lodge who occupied the hall as per statement made by him.

I am, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. E. GOODWIN,
Deputy Collector, United States Customs.

Hon. H. C. LODGE,
United States Senator, Washington.

THE WORCESTER MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK,
Worcester, Mass., February 20, 1901.

MY DEAR SIR: I indorse the statement made by Capt. J. B. Knox in the matter of St. John's lodge room at Newbern, N. C. I was a member of the Army lodge that occupied and cared for the property, and the facts are perfectly fresh in my memory.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. B. R. SPRAGUE,
Brevet Brigadier-General, United States Volunteers.

Hon. H. C. LODGE,
United States Senate.

General Sprague is well known to me. He is president of the Mechanics' Savings Bank in Worcester and he was several times mayor of the city. He is one of the best known men in the city of Worcester and in the county of Worcester. He is known throughout the State as a man of the highest character. The other gentlemen are also known to me, General Pickett and Captain Goodwin. I do not think I have met Mr. Knox personally.

On receiving those letters it seemed to me they made a very clear case that there was no damage done to the property for which it is sought to base this claim of $6,000. It was used as a cartridge factory, it appears, before our troops took possession of it. When they did take possession of it they put it in good condition and left it in better condition than they found it.

It was on information of that sort that I have objected to the bill, merely because I desired when the bill came up to lay these facts before the Senate. These men are all reputable men of high standing, whose word would be taken wherever they are known. They held high rank in the Union Army. I think in the presence of letters of that sort in regard to this claim we should be very slow to pass it without further investigation, or without at least referring it to the Court of Claims for a proper judicial adjudication.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, what the Senator from Massachusetts has put before the Senate is just what Mr. Knox put before the House through Mr. PAYNE, and will be found on page 1798 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of February 1. Mr. Knox has been very industrious, it seems, for some cause, in trying to prevent the passage of this bill. He has written numerous letters and had himself interviewed and furnished sundry material to the newspapers. I do not know why he has felt it his duty to be so extremely industrious against this bill. But all of the matter the Senator from Massachusetts has felt it his duty to put in the RECORD is already in the RECORD.

Mr. LODGE. I beg the Senator's pardon; the letters from General Sprague and General Pickett were not in the RECORD. They were personal letters to me.

Mr. BUTLER. Those were supplementary letters referring to Mr. Knox's letter.

Mr. LODGE. All those gentlemen were personal witnesses of the occupation and use of the property.

Mr. BUTLER. But the very fact that is claimed to be established by those letters is already in the RECORD, and was fully discussed, and was discussed over a period much longer than I would care to take the time of the Senate to discuss now. As Mr. Knox himself says in his letter, his first letter served the purpose of spurring Mr. PAYNE to the point of defeating the bill at the last session of Congress by calling for a quorum. Congress adjourned with the bill pending. Mr. Knox goes to work industriously to write more letters to have them read at this session of Congress. When this session met this bill was the unfinished business pending in the House, and, here are his additional letters furnished for this session, and, after a full discussion and with a quorum called more than once, the House voted on this question and the vote is as follows: The motion was to table. There were only 49 votes for defeating this bill. There were 142 votes in the House in favor of it.

Now, Mr. President, what are the facts? Mr. Knox no doubt thinks he is correct, but he simply is mistaken. Sworn affidavits from men as good as Mr. Knox, and men who know the facts better, who lived in Newbern then and have lived there ever since, state the facts to the contrary; and the House committee and the Senate committee, with this matter before them, made a unanimous report in both cases in favor of this claim. The claim was $13,000. The committee cut it down to $6,000.

But the committee states that this lodge was occupied by the United States authorities from March 14, 1862, to April 18, 1865, as a hospital. When the United States authorities took charge of it, what did they do? This is the official report from the affidavits furnished the committee.

That all the seats in the lodge were removed; that all the scenes and curtains were removed; that the theater building underneath, which was rented by the lodge to support it and raise its funds, was dismantled, and that all of the furniture—mind you, all the furniture—was removed from the lodge room and other rooms in the building. All of the furniture from every room in the building, including the lodge, including the theater and other rooms, was removed; and the entire building—not simply the theater part, not simply the lodge part, but the entire building—was occupied for hospital purposes for nearly four years. Now, what else do this committee find from the affidavits before them?

Your committee find further that all these rooms were handsomely and expensively decorated, and were necessarily much damaged by the removals as aforesaid and by fitting them up for hospital purposes.

It further says:

It appears from the affidavit of John D. Whitford—

Any man who has ever lived in North Carolina knows there is not a man in the United States of higher character than Col. John D. Whitford. He would not swear to a lie for all of Massachusetts and North Carolina put together. He is a man of great ability and high character, and a man who has been honored by the people of the State on many occasions, from his early youth up to his old age. What does he swear to?

That prior to the war he was the chairman of the building committee of St. John's Lodge; that, as such chairman, he imported scene painters, decorators, and fresco painters to improve and decorate the lodge building; that he also purchased costly chandeliers, mirrors, grates, door frames, and orchestra seats for said building; that said building was very handsome and expensively fitted up and decorated, there being used at least $500 worth of gold leaf; that the original expense incurred in decorating and fitting up the lodge room, theater, and public hall was about $15,000.

Just before the war the lodge turned in to make it one of the handsomest in the State, and they spent $15,000 making it as handsome as they could make it. Now, what else is shown by the affidavits of Col. John D. Whitford and other members of this lodge and officers of it? The committee goes on to say:

Besides the petition on file, signed by the worshipful master and secretary of the lodge, under the lodge seal, there are filed the affidavits of John D. Whitford aforesaid and E. M. Pavie.

E. M. Pavie is a Northern soldier of as high character as Mr. Knox; a man who went down there when Mr. Knox went; a man who stayed after the war, and is down there now as a citizen of the State. Here is his affidavit as a Union soldier against the ex parte statement of Mr. Knox. What do they testify to under oath?

The report further states that at the time of the capture of Newbern by the Federal forces and the taking charge of this lodge by Federal authority the damage resulting to the lodge and to the other rooms in the building amounted to $4,000, covering the destruction of property and damage to the walls alone.

Here are the sworn statements of men who were then there; who were there after the war; who saw it all through, and knew what condition the building was in when the Federal troops took charge of it; saw the damage, and saw what it took afterwards to put it into proper repair.

What else appears by the affidavits of these gentlemen? It also appears from their affidavits that that theater hall was worth $250 a month to the lodge; that that was the revenue the lodge got from the theater for its support. For nearly four years the United States troops not only occupied the whole building as a hospital, resulting in $4,000 damage, but they robbed this lodge of this $250 a month rent for the whole time, which amounts to nearly $9,000.

What does the committee say? They say that the claim as originally filed was fairly put at about $13,000, but the committee cuts that down, and says:

Your committee think it would be fair and beyond controversy to allow the sum of $2,000 for injury and damage to the lodge building and furniture, being one-half the amount asked by the petitioner and by the bill, and that there should be further allowed for rent of the lodge building the sum of $4,000, being for the use and occupation of said building for three years.

Mr. GALLINGER. Was it a one-room building?

Mr. BUTLER. No; it was a three-story building, owned by the lodge, with many rooms, having one large lodge room and another room which was used as a theater. The lodge supported itself largely from the rent of the rooms.

Mr. GALLINGER. Did the lodge own the building?

Mr. BUTLER. Yes; the lodge owned the building, and its income from the building averaged $250 a month. For nearly four years, during which time the Government had charge of it, the rent would have amounted to nearly $9,000, and the damage to the property, according to all these sworn statements, was $4,000.

Mr. WARREN. Do I understand the Senator to state that while the United States troops were occupying a part of the building another part of it was rented, and the United States received the rent for it?

Mr. BUTLER. The United States had the entire charge of the building, and whatever they got they kept. The affidavits show that the Government used the whole building as a hospital; and the letter of Mr. Knox said that some of the officers had used it for private theatricals, or something of the kind, for their own entertainment. I think it was not used at all as a public theater during that time, but probably private theatricals were held there by the officers of the Army.

Mr. President, there are a number of affidavits in this record. I will not read them all, but here is one from the master of the lodge; here is one from another member of the lodge, the present master, and I have the originals in which they testified that Mr. Knox was mistaken when he said the furniture was taken out and was subsequently put back in better condition. These gentlemen testified under oath that there never was any of that property put back into the lodge.

They say the only thing ever returned to the lodge and put back was what? The jewels. Mr. Knox refers to the jewels seventeen times in these articles, if I have counted correctly. He seemed to lay great stress on the fact that the jewels were preserved by him and returned. What are the jewels? There are the jewels that we have heard so much about. [Exhibiting.] One is a little piece of plate, and then there are two coppers and one Mexican dollar, all of them worth less than $5; and yet Mr. Knox rings the changes over and over again on the jewels of the lodge that he preserved; that he took them North, put them in charge of a lodge there, and had the honor himself to take them back and return them to the lodge in Newbern, and they were greatly indebted to him for the return of the jewels.

I do not care to take the time of the Senate any further. Here is a unanimous report from the Senate committee and a unanimous report from the House committee. The matter was fully discussed in the House and there is no question of doubt as to the damage of this property being as much as these affidavits show. There is no question about what the building was worth to the lodge. The amount of the claim is cut down one-fourth, when these sworn affidavits show that it was worth four times as much as the committee allowed.

Mr. President, this is a small thing. The lodge was ousted from its building for nearly four years. The Government had charge of it, and every dollar of the money which Congress is asked to appropriate goes to that lodge, which is one of the first lodges in the State. It has been in existence ever since 1772. It is a lodge with a long line of distinguished men, and they were men who took great pride in their lodge room.

Mr. President, it is a small thing for us to be higgling over here, when we have paid within the last six months claims running from $50,000 to $150,000 to Masonic lodges and Odd Fellows' lodges in various States whose buildings were used as hospitals by the United States Army during the war. We have been doing that right along.

The other day, when the Senator from Massachusetts objected to the bill, there were two cases on the Calendar, one just above this bill and another below it, proposing to pay for the use of Odd Fellows' buildings which were, I think, occupied by United States officers during the civil war, running up to tremendous amounts, and here is but a little pittance. Mr. President, I do not care to discuss it further.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] inquired as to the character of this building. The report states that it is "a large brick structure 45 by 80 feet and three stories high."

The Committee on Claims have treated claims for the use of lodge rooms upon the same plan that they have treated the occupation of schools or churches. They are not commercial bodies, nor are their buildings used for commercial purposes, but they are used for social and educational purposes.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will allow me to ask him a question, I understand a third of this claim is for loss of rent. Are we in the habit of paying for loss of rent in buildings of this kind?

Mr. TELLER. We have paid for the rent of churches and schoolhouses; that is, we have paid damages.

Mr. LODGE. No; I mean is it claimed that the lodge rented a part of this building, as the Senator from North Carolina says, for $250 a month, and that they are to be paid for the loss of that rent during the Government occupation?

Mr. TELLER. Who rented it?

Mr. LODGE. The lodge rented part of it.

Mr. BUTLER. The claim of the lodge was that the rent from their building averaged $250 a month.

Mr. LODGE. They were getting a commercial value out of the building; that is, they had rented it for a shop or something else, and part of this claim is that we shall pay them for rent during that period. Now, I ask for information, not being familiar with the principle of these claims, do we pay rent in cases of that kind?

Mr. TELLER. We pay for the damage sustained, for the loss that occurred, and we have sometimes considered the question of how much the property would have rented for and how much the Government would have had to pay for it if the Government rented it, and we thus arrive at the amount to be paid. I suppose the Government would have paid $250 a month for it. Evidently a building of that kind ought to rent for that amount, and the Government occupied it for about four years.

I am sure it is unnecessary to show before this body that a lodge room, fitted up and decorated as this one was, could not be returned to the lodge in the condition it had been, after it had been used for three years as a hospital. Everybody knows it could not. There must be some mistake about that. The men who have filed affidavits in this case are the men who ought to know the facts better than anybody else. They were there then and they are there now; they are men who were then connected with this organization, as they are now; and I do not believe that there is any reason to suppose that they have attempted a game of robbery on the Government of the United States. Mr. Whitford, the chairman of the committee of St. John's Lodge, says that—

> As such chairman, he imported scene painters, decorators, and fresco painters to improve and decorate the lodge building; that he also purchased costly chandeliers, mirrors, grates, door frames, and orchestra seats for said building; that said building was very handsomely and expensively fitted up and decorated, there being used at least $500 worth of gold leaf; that the original expense incurred in decorating and fitting up the lodge room, theater, and public hall was about $15,000.

Mr. LODGE. Was that before or after the occupation?

Mr. TELLER. That was before. That was the character of the building the Government occupied as a hospital. Does anybody suppose that in the returning of that building it would be in the condition that it was after the expenditure of this $15,000, and that it could be put in the condition it originally was? They say that the original cost of the decorations was $15,000; and as to the building, as it is 45 by 80 feet, three stories high, and all brick, it must have cost considerable money; I do not know how much. They got the building back.

Mr. ALDRICH. It seems hardly conceivable that $15,000 could be spent for decorations in a building in a small town in North Carolina.

Mr. TELLER. It is not at all. In those days, when times were flush, I have known gentlemen connected with such associations who took great pride in them and who gave many thousand dollars for the purpose of decorating and fitting up halls of this character.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The Senator will allow me to suggest that there were a great many wealthy men in that community at that time. As has been said, it is a lodge over a hundred years old, and it was nearly a hundred years old at the time the property was taken. They took great pride in that lodge, and it is one of the most distinguished lodges anywhere in that section of the country.

Mr. TELLER. Not very far from where I live there is an organization of this character, which owns a very fine building which was fitted up, decorated, painted, and filled with pictures at very great expense, and I know of some gentleman who paid large sums of money for that purpose.

The gentlemen who made affidavits which were before our committee and which were before the House committee knew what they were talking about, and the committee carefully scanned the evidence. Mr. E. M. Pavie, a Northern man who went to Newbern at the time of its capture by the Federal forces, and who is there now, makes affidavit, and another gentleman makes affidavit, showing that the damage done to the furniture amounted to at least $4,000.

I think, Mr. President, this is one of the cases we ought to pass.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I only want to say a word. The action of the House, on which the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] dwelt so much, does not, it seems to me, concern us. We are here as an independent body to make up our own minds. We are not to be guided by votes in the other House or discussions there.

When this matter was brought to my attention, the bill was still in the Committee on Claims, having only just come over. I sent word by my clerk to the clerk of the Committee on Claims to call attention to the bill, and to say that I should like to be heard on it. The bill was so carefully scanned by the committee, as the Senator from Colorado told us, that it was reported the next day, and I never had an opportunity of appearing before the committee. I dare say the committee carefully scanned the bill, but I have never had the opportunity of presenting the information contained in the papers which had been sent to me.

It seems to me that there was very strong evidence that damage had been done before our troops took possession; that the building had been put in good repair by the army lodge which occupied the building, and that with such a conflict of testimony it is hardly proper for us to pass this claims bill when the amount, small or large, does not bear upon the principle at all. I think it is hardly proper for us to pass this claims bill without a careful investigation of this testimony. The letters which I have read here from gentlemen were not before the committee, and that side of the case was not heard before the Senate committee in any way that I am aware of. A House report was simply put in here. It seems to me that a matter of this sort ought to have had a proper hearing on both sides or else it ought to be sent to the Court of Claims. We can send it to the Court of Claims.

Another point, it seems to me, is that this paying for rent lost during the occupation is rather a dangerous precedent to establish. I think that should be properly considered by the Court of Claims. I have no objection to the claim being sent there, and if the court shall decide that it is a good claim I shall cheerfully vote for it; but with this conflict of testimony, by reputable men, I am willing to admit, on both sides, it seems to me the bill ought not to pass in its present form. I do not think in any event we ought to pay that rent.

Mr. TELLER. There is no statement that this is charged for rent lost.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from North Carolina said that was the case.

Mr. TELLER. In determining the value, and in considering what the Government ought to pay, the committee considered what the building would rent for.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will look at the report I think he will see that the damages were assessed by these people themselves at $4,000. The balance was $9,000 for rent, which raised the total claim to $13,000.

Mr. TELLER. This is what the committee say:

> Your committee think it would be fair and beyond controversy to allow the sum of $2,000 for injury and damage to the lodge building and furniture, being one-half the amount asked by the petitioner and by the bill, and that there should be further allowed for rent of the lodge building the sum of $4,000, being for the use and occupation of said building for three years.

Mr. LODGE. That is what the committee say—$4,000. I thought it was $2,000, but it now appears that we are to give to this lodge $4,000 for rent. Are we in the habit of paying rent for buildings occupied during a state of war?

Mr. TELLER. I think the Senator ought to be able to understand what I have said once or twice. We determined in passing upon these claims, in the case of churches and schoolhouses, that a proper basis of ascertaining the damage would be to allow a fair price for rent and to have the Government pay that. I think that is an equitable way of determining what the property is worth. You can not always rent churches or schoolhouses, but you can determine what the Government would pay for these accommodations, and therefore that would be a fair price to allow. That is all that is done here.

This is not a case of the Government renting a building and a claim being made for the rent. It is said in the affidavits "that the reasonable rental value of the building during the time it was occupied was $250 per month," but we are not allowing anything like that.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I think that in such claims we have been paying simply for damages. It is said the damage in this case was $2,000.

Mr. TELLER. We have in many instances paid more than the amount of damage to a particular building. We never have made such a rule as to churches at all. We have paid four or five times and ten times this amount in some cases.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Then I think we have been going on a wrong basis.

Mr. TELLER. No; we have not been going on a wrong basis. We have been trying to right the wrongs we have done to that kind of property. Of course we were not obliged to pay any church; we were not obliged to pay any college. For a time we refused to pay them. I made myself a report very early here in which I took the position that by law we were not compelled to pay even for the use and occupation of a church, and that position was well supported. Later, under the direction largely of the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], we took up the William and Mary College case, and, after a thorough debate, in which the Senator from Massachusetts—I believe he was then a member of the Committee on Claims, and I am not certain but that he was chairman of the committee—took the lead, we decided we would make an exception in such cases and that we would not apply the question of loyalty where a church or a schoolhouse was concerned; and we put lodges on the same basis for the reason that they are not commercial organizations, but are social and educational in their nature, and I may say, also, religious.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, the act of July 4, 1864, provided for the payment of certain claims in the Quartermaster and Commissary Departments coming from the States which were not in rebellion. It seems that the claims for churches and schools were presented in large numbers; and were for a time, perhaps, a mooted question. We have here a record of the claims that were so presented, and all that we have a record of amounts to about $250,000 that are unsettled. But it seems that the Government commenced paying very soon after that for both damage and rent. It appears that this practice was commenced in 1874. I ask to have read a paragraph from the report of the Committee on Claims in regard to claims under the Bowman Act, as it pertains to this matter.

Mr. ALDRICH. That is, claims from States not in rebellion.

Mr. WARREN. After the practice commenced, other claims have been since taken up and have been paid by allowances like this. We were speaking of churches and schools. Merely for information as to when we commenced paying claims for rent, I desire to have the paragraph I have referred to read at the desk.

Before the paragraph is read, however, I desire to say to the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] that, as chairman of the Committee on Claims, this is the first I ever heard of his desire at any time to appear before the committee; and I regret very much that the Senator was not heard.

Mr. LODGE. I have no doubt that the clerk of the committee overlooked it.

Mr. TELLER. I want to say the same thing. I never heard of the Senator's request to appear before the committee in relation to the bill now under discussion.

Mr. LODGE. I sent word by my clerk to the clerk of the Committee on Claims; but I have no doubt that in the multiplicity of business my request has been overlooked.

Mr. WARREN. I want to say further that the Committee on Claims is always glad to have information from any Senator on any claim pending before it.

Mr. LODGE. I should like to ask the Senator if this bill ever came before the full committee?

Mr. TELLER. It did. I will not say that every member of the committee was present, but it came before the committee when it was in condition to act. I remember very well when the case was reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN].

The Secretary read as follows:

CLAIMS FOR USE AND OCCUPATION OF CHURCHES AND SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

In the consideration of these claims it was found that a considerable number were presented from States and districts declared to be in insurrection during the war of the rebellion.

It was the custom of the War Department to place churches in the same condition as when they were taken possession of by the United States, natural wear and tear excepted, or allow a reasonable amount in money in lieu of such repairs. No general instruction for the payment of such claims appears to have been given, but each claim was decided on its merits. This practice, however, had the approval of the Secretary of War, as such cases were submitted to and approved by him from time to time. Up to 1874 it was uniformly held by the Quartermaster-General that no rent should be paid for churches, there being no law authorizing such payment. On March 30, 1874, the claim of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church, of Washington, D. C., for rent, stated at $2,250, was referred to the Third Auditor of the Treasury for settlement, having been recommended by Assistant Judge-Advocate-General Dunn and approved by the Secretary of War. A number of other claims for rent of churches were paid subsequently by the direction and approval of the Secretary of War.

Mr. LODGE. If the motion is in order—and I suppose it is—I will move to refer this bill to the Court of Claims under the Bowman Act.

Mr. BUTLER. I hope the Senator will not do that.

Mr. WARREN. I presume the Senator means under the Tucker Act. It could not go to the court under the Bowman Act.

Mr. LODGE. I meant under the Tucker Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the claim represented by the pending bill be referred to the Court of Claims under the provisions of the Tucker Act. [Putting the question.] The "noes" seem to have it.

Mr. LODGE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I hope the Senator will not do that.

Mr. LODGE. We must have a quorum here to consider the sundry civil conference report.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DEBOE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE].

Mr. HANNA (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS], which I will transfer to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BAKER] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. HANSBROUGH (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. HEITFELD (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. McBRIDE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY].

Mr. PETTUS (when his name was called). I have had a pair ever since I have been in the Senate, and this is the first time I ever regretted it. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. I am sorry that I can not vote against this motion.

Mr. PRITCHARD (when his name was called). Inasmuch as the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MCLAURIN], with whom I am paired, reported the pending bill favorably, I take the liberty of voting. I vote "nay."

Mr. PROCTOR (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY].

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY], who is absent. I suggest to the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PETTUS], who is paired with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], that we transfer our pairs, so that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY] will stand paired with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. I vote "nay."

Mr. PETTUS. I vote "nay."

Mr. TALIAFERRO (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. SCOTT]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ALDRICH. I would call the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] to the fact that by the peculiar arrangement he has made he gets two votes in the negative for this bill. I assume that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], if present, would vote in the affirmative.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not know how the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY] would vote, and I do not know that the Senator from Rhode Island knows how the Senator from Massachusetts would vote.

Mr. ALDRICH. I think the Senator from Massachusetts would vote in the affirmative if present. I ask the junior Senator from Massachusetts if that is not so?

Mr. LODGE. I think it likely that my colleague would so vote if he were present.

Mr. SPOONER. If there is any objection, I will withdraw my vote.

Mr. ALDRICH. The change of pairs would result in making two votes for the negative side.

Mr. SPOONER. It is objected that the effect of the transfer of pairs which I announced would be unjust.

Mr. BACON. I do not think that is a good point at all.

Mr. SPOONER. Without any change of pairs, I am informed that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY] would vote "nay," and I vote "nay."

Mr. HANSBROUGH (after having voted in the affirmative). The Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], with whom I am paired, has not voted, and therefore I desire to withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 23, nays 28; as follows:

YEAS—23.

Aldrich,	Clapp,	Gallinger,	McMillan,
Allison,	Clark,	Hanna,	Nelson,
Bard,	Cullom,	Hawley,	Platt, Conn.
Beveridge,	Depew,	Kean,	Quarles,
Burrows,	Dillingham,	Kearns,	Simon.
Carter,	Fairbanks,	Lodge,

NAYS—28.

Bacon,	Harris,	Pritchard,	Thurston,
Berry,	Jones, Ark.	Sewell,	Tillman,
Butler,	Lindsay,	Shoup,	Turner,
Clay,	McComas,	Spooner,	Vest,
Cockrell,	Martin,	Stewart,	Warren,
Culberson,	Perkins,	Sullivan,	Wellington,
Foraker,	Pettigrew,	Teller,	Wetmore.

NOT VOTING—37.

Allen,	Foster,	McCumber,	Proctor,
Baker,	Frye,	McEnery,	Quay,
Bate,	Hale,	McLaurin,	Rawlins,
Caffery,	Hansbrough,	Mallory,	Scott,
Chandler,	Heitfeld,	Mason,	Taliaferro,
Chilton,	Hoar,	Money,	Turley,
Daniel,	Jones, Nev.	Morgan,	Wolcott.
Deboe,	Kenney,	Penrose,
Dolliver,	Kyle,	Pettus,
Elkins,	McBride,	Platt, N. Y.

So the motion of Mr. LODGE was not agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAFETY APPLIANCES ON RAILROADS.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I desire to say a word in regard to the lost bill with respect to which we passed a resolution not long ago. I was informed while the debate was in progress on the North Carolina claim bill that the bill had been found in a desk in the enrolling room of the House of Representatives. It seems to have slipped into the drawer of the desk. I wish to say this in justice to the clerks and officers of the Senate. It never came here.

Mr. CULLOM. It has not yet come, I believe.

Mr. LODGE. It has not yet come. They have found it, and it is coming over in the next installment of bills.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 17, 26, 30, 35, 36, 41, 42, 49, 62, 70, 71, 82, 89, 93, 105, 108, 110, 111, 112, 113, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 128, 129, 130, 132, 133, 134, 135, 149, and 150.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 6, 20, 28, 81, 91, 99, 101, 102, 127, 131, and 152; and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the sum of $332,500 where it occurs in lines 3 and 4 and in lines 19 and 20 of the matter inserted by said amendment, and insert in lieu thereof the sum of $300,000; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 84, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$950,770;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its amendment of the Senate numbered 88, and agree to said amendment amended as follows: Strike out all after the word "acre" in line 8 of the matter inserted by said amendment and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"And the Secretary of the Interior is further authorized, if in his judgment advisable, to exchange such portion as he may deem equitable of the agricultural land now owned by the Government, or of the farm opposite Alexandria and known as Godding Croft, for 80 acres, more or less, lying immediately adjoining this said 60 acres and south of the present building site of the hospital. In case such exchange is made, the Secretary is also authorized, in his discretion, to grant a roadway along the south side of said tract, from Nichols avenue to the river, not exceeding 90 feet in width. Any of the buildings authorized in the sundry civil appropriation act approved June 6, 1900, for the Government Hospital for the Insane may be erected on land now owned or that may be acquired hereunder by the United States for the Government Hospital for the Insane."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 94, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$860,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 95, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$35,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 96, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$35,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 97, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$35,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 98, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$35,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 114, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said Senate amendment amended as follows: On page 103 of the bill, in line 23, after the word "upon," insert the following: "or exercised by;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On amendment 151 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

W. B. ALLISON,
EUGENE HALE,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. G. CANNON,
W. H. MOODY,
THOMAS C. McRAE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the report.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, there is one amendment, as will be seen from the report, still in disagreement, namely, the amendment relating to expositions. We have labored faithfully to secure an agreement upon this amendment, but have failed to obtain the assent of the House conferees. I think I may say to the Senate that there is no possibility of an agreement upon that amendment, and we have reached a point in the bill where it can not afford to fail. I therefore move that the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 151, which is the amendment relating to the expositions at St. Louis, Buffalo, and Charleston.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa moves that the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 151.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I desire to address the Senate. What I shall say, perhaps, will not be very pertinent to this matter, but it is the only opportunity I shall probably have to make the remarks I desire to submit.

Some days ago I placed in the RECORD a statement in regard to the Philippine Lumber and Development Company. The president of the company has since made the following statement in the House of Representatives:

I will say to the gentleman from Tennessee that I am the same man that is connected with the Philippine Lumber Company, and that I have something invested in that enterprise. I will say further to this House that I have not, nor has that company, ever asked one favor of the Government of the United States; and we do not propose to do so. Our dealings there are with men who have titles in fee simple of long standing. The business is entirely legitimate.

And I want to say to this House and the country that whenever the time comes that I am not permitted to invest in a legitimate enterprise I would prefer to leave Congress to being a drone, dependent only on politics for my living. [Applause.] I will say further to the gentleman from Tennessee, and to this House, that while the campaign was on the company with which I am associated called a halt in their enterprise and notified every one of the stockholders that if Bryan should be elected not one dollar would we invest in the Philippines, but if McKinley should be elected we would invest all the money that we pleased, believing it would have a favorable return by the restoration of order and good government in the Philippines. [Applause on the Republican side; derisive applause on the Democratic side.]

Bryan's election would mean disorder and anarchy in the islands. McKinley's election would mean order and thrift.

Under the one I would not be willing to invest in any legitimate enterprise; under the other the ax and the sawmill would be encouraged, labor benefited, and civilization advanced.

Now, why? Because the one man was trying to run the country on wind and the other believed in legitimate enterprise. [Great confusion in the Hall.] I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. President, that is a very remarkable state of affairs. The Philippine Development and Lumber Company has its offices in room 812, Merchants' Loan and Trust Company Building, 135 Adams street, Chicago. Its president is J. A. T. HULL, whose remarks I have just read; John Bradford, vice president; Stewart Spalding, secretary; John Gibson, treasurer; Frank S. Bourns, representative of the company, Manila, P. I.; B. B. DOVENER, attorney for the company. I am reading from their prospectus. The directors are: Mr. HULL, president, member of Congress, Seventh Iowa district—he is so described—Des Moines, Iowa; John S. Bradford, Bradford & Sons, bankers, Greenville, Ill.; Stewart Spalding, secretary and treasurer Calumet and Chicago Canal and Dock Company; Frank Phillips, stocks and bonds, Chicago, Ill.; George Bogart, president Shenandoah National Bank, Shenandoah, Iowa; M. L. Severance, Eastern representative of company, Middlebury, Vt.; F. W. Craig, director Capital City Bank, Des Moines, Iowa; Isaac Bassford, stocks and bonds, Chicago, Ill.; and G. A. Vawter, capitalist, Cambridge, Ill.

The prospectus goes on to say that the object and purpose is to deal in Philippine lumber, and this says they have a very fine quality, and plenty of mahogany and rosewood and ebony, and so on. They are also to cultivate the soil, to produce fiber, and manufacture it. I have the articles of incorporation. It was incorporated under the statutes of West Virginia, and I telegraphed to a very reputable gentleman in Chicago and asked him if this company had an office there. He sent a reputable gentleman to the office, and I know that both of these people are men of character and standing and entitled to credit and belief. The gentleman sent to the office makes this statement:

CHICAGO, February 26, 1901.

I had a long talk with Mr. John Gibson, treasurer of the Philippine Lumber and Development Company, who is president of the Iowa Savings Bank, at Creston, Iowa.

He says the company have immense timber rights, embracing great quantities of mahogany, ebony, logwood and other valuable timber. That they shipped via steamer Coptic from San Francisco on December 2 a sawmill of 12,000 feet daily capacity, which should be there by this time. That the E. P. Allis Co., of Milwaukee, are now making another sawmill of 30,000 feet daily capacity (hardwood), which mill will be shipped March 22, and that day after to-morrow they will order another similar mill, which will give them a capacity of 72,000 feet per day. They have plenty of money in treasury for this and other necessary purposes. That Congressman BABCOCK of Wisconsin and a number of other prominent members of Congress and the Senate are interested, and all on an equal basis. There are no commissions being paid on sale of stock, and all stock is sold at $25 per $100 share until 5,000 shares shall have been disposed of, after which it is to be sold at par, and then he offered to pay me a commission on the sale.

I endeavored to ascertain something about the said timber rights, saying that my inquiry was from a doctor in Iowa, who had heretofore purchased lots from me and would probably want to know something about the basis for security if he should think of investing in stock.

I was unable to get any definite information in regard to any one timber right of any kind which they actually have, although he intimated that through political influence they would obtain grants of great value, and that they had already contracted with owners for some timber rights, but of this he could give me no definite details, as it is all in the hands of Major Bourns, who is the head of the Liberal party in Manila, and was general health officer of the Army.

Mr. GALLINGER. Is that Major Burns?
Mr. PETTIGREW. It is spelled B-o-u-r-n-s.
Mr. BEVERIDGE. Frank S. Bourns, a good man.
Mr. PETTIGREW. The letter continues:

He said the first sawmill was sawing on Government account to build a post and sanitarium in the Benguet region, 40 miles east of Dagupan, and that they expected to keep this and one other mill continuously sawing on Government account for some time to come.

I inclose copy of his letter head, showing the various officers of the company.

And further deponent sayeth not.

I find that Mr. Bourns has written several letters, which are given out by the company to induce people to invest. Here is a letter from Agent Bourns, in Manila, dated December 14, 1900:

Hon. JOHN GIBSON, Chicago, Ill.

DEAR Mr. GIBSON: On my return from Zamboanga last Saturday night I found your cable of November 23—"$5,000 sent. Loomis starts January 1." I also have your cable of the 11th stating "Mill ordered." I am very glad to hear this news, as it means we shall soon get started. As soon as the portable mill gets here I shall get it up into the Benguet region, if possible. The first move that is to be made by the Government is to construct a wagon road from Benguet to Dagupan, which will follow the line of the proposed railroad. This road will be about 50 miles long and will cost at least $50,000, gold. Every probability is that the railroad will speedily follow. I am informed by the engineer in charge that he desires to begin building from both ends and that he will use pine for the bridges, etc., in the Benguet region. If I am on the ground, therefore, I should come in for a share of this. Building will undoubtedly begin almost immediately. The whole prospect for the region is excellent, in my opinion.

So it appears this letter was written December 14, and now on the 28th of February the mill is running, exclusively sawing for the Government. So, after all, it would appear that there is some relation between the officers of the Government and this enterprise. Of course the enterprise can succeed, because the appropriation bill is prepared by the Military Affairs Committee in the House, and the chairman of the committee boasted that he would not be a drone; that this is a legitimate enterprise.

I do not care to comment upon it at all, but it seems to me a deplorable state of affairs that these things can exist and are satisfactory to an Iowa constituency. The larger the Army in Manila, the more money appropriated, the greater the profits of the Philippine Lumber and Development Company; the more roads built, the more shekels pour into the pockets of the people who vote the appropriations out of the Treasury of the United States.

These letters are on various subjects connected with the enterprise, but I will not read them in full. They describe the timber, and they describe fine bodies of timber on the island of Mindanao and a fine bay that they propose to take possession of. There is nothing said about private ownership there, however.

No connection with the Government! An entirely legitimate enterprise!

Here is another letter:

I submitted a preliminary report in my last in regard to the Benguet region. I can now complete that. There is now no doubt that the Government will establish an extensive sanitarium and health resort there. Therefore I believe it to be an excellent policy to make an attempt to get some sort of a sawmill on the spot as soon as possible. After looking the ground over carefully, I am convinced that a portable sawmill would be best. It would be cheaper; we could get it in place much sooner; and, as the pine forests are rather thin, we could easily transfer it from place to place as occasion might require. Again, it is quite probable that the railroad will be considerably delayed in getting up there, and the Government wants to begin building before it is finished, or as soon as possible, say in a few months.

To facilitate this a certain amount of money will be laid out on the old Spanish military road leading up there. When this is done I believe it will be possible to get a portable mill up there. It will be a difficult task, but I believe it can be done, and I also feel pretty sure that we can depend upon a certain amount of aid from the Government, such as mules, etc. Of this I can not speak with certainty, but as the Government will be interested in having lumber on the spot I feel pretty sure of this, even should we be unable to get the mill up as soon as the railroad is through; but I feel confident that we can get it through, as I have been over the road.

It appears they got it through, according to the later statement.

Mr. BURROWS. From whom is that letter?

Mr. PETTIGREW. From Frank S. Bourns, the manager of the company, at Manila.

Mr. BURROWS. And health officer?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Yes; that is what they say he is. Here is a letter dated Manila, January 10, 1901. He quotes some one here:

The demand for lumber is very great here. In conversation with the engineer of the Department of Southern Luzon I find that the Government finds it almost impossible to get the timber needed and is paying almost any price for suitable wood—from 75 cents to $1.25, gold, a cubic foot. He gave it as his opinion that there could be no risk in the investment of a considerable sum of money in a lumber plant, as the Government wants lumber badly and will be glad to contract with anyone who can agree to furnish desired timber within a reasonable time limit.

I do not care to pursue this question further, but I desire to put in the RECORD as a part of my remarks the certificate of incorporation of this company in the State of West Virginia.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the paper will be printed in the RECORD.

The paper referred to is as follows:

CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA:

I, William M. O. Dawson, secretary of state of the State of West Virginia, do hereby certify that an agreement, duly acknowledged and accompanied by the proper affidavits, has been this day delivered to me, which agreement is in the words and figures following: The undersigned agree to become a corporation, by the name of the Philippine Lumber and Development Company, for the purpose of purchasing or leasing from persons having title thereto timber lands in the Philippines, Jolo, or Sulu islands; also the acquisition of such other lands, real estate, and other property, either personal or mixed, in said islands and elsewhere, as shall be deemed necessary for the needs and purpose of said corporation; also to carry on, in said islands and elsewhere, the manufacture and sale of all kinds of lumber and of all products which can be produced from the timber on said acquired lands; to make, sell, and deliver railroad ties, cord wood, charcoal, tar, turpentine, and saw logs; to manufacture and sell rubber and gutta-percha and all principal and by-products to be obtained from any growth upon said lands; also to erect and to continue from time to time the erection and maintenance of all such houses, sawmills, factories, charcoal furnaces, rubber-boiling vats, gutta-percha kettles, and other structures, improvements, and machinery as shall be required in the successful operation of the business of said company; also to cultivate said lands when cleared of timber; to plant cane and to manufacture sugar; to raise hemp, tobacco, and other agricultural products; to raise horses, cattle, sheep, and other live stock, or to lease lands for any of above or other legitimate purposes; to carry on mining in the Philippines, Jolo, or Sulu islands; also of conducting such general merchandising, banking, exchanging, express, and transportation business as may prove necessary and convenient in the prosecution of the company's business; of maintaining roads, tramways, dams, ditches, irrigating waterways, and to construct and operate railroads, and to make other internal improvements necessary to further the best interests of said company in said islands; erecting wharves and warehouses in said islands; owning, operating, and building sailing vessels and steamships for the transportation of the productions and manufactures of said corporation, and for the transportation of passengers and freight to any ports touched by said sailing vessels and steamships, upon such terms as may be fixed by the officers of said corporation; enjoying all the rights and privileges and assuming all the duties and liabilities, and receiving all the profits and revenues arising from and growing out of and in any manner connected with said business, wherever conducted and in any and all its stages and ramifications; selling and transferring its lands and other property, franchises, and concessions, but no sale of the entire property of the company shall be made unless the holders of three-fourths of the capital stock of the corporation which has been issued shall vote to make such sale, said vote to be taken at a meeting of stockholders called to consider such proposition of sale, and of which meeting thirty days' notice shall be given by circular, addressed to each stockholder at his last post-office address, as known by the secretary of this corporation; purchasing of and from Frank S. Bourns, of Manila, the land, timber, rights, leases, and concessions acquired by him in the Philippines, Jolo, and Sulu Islands for the sum of $3,000,000 in the stock of this corporation.

Which corporation shall keep its principal office or place of business at Chicago, in the county of Cook, State of Illinois, and is to expire on the 1st day of May, A. D. 1950, and for the purpose of forming the said corporation we have subscribed the sum of $1,000 to the capital thereof, and have paid in on said subscriptions the sum of $100, and desire the privilege of increasing the said capital by the sale of additional shares, from time to time, to $5,000,000 in all.

The capital so subscribed is divided into shares of $100 each, which are held by the undersigned, respectively, as follows, that is to say: J. A. T. Hull, Des Moines, Iowa, 2 shares; John Gibson, Creston, Iowa, 2 shares; John S. Bradford, Greenville, Ill., 2 shares; Stewart Spalding, Chicago, Ill., 2 shares; Frank Phillips, Creston, Iowa, 2 shares.

And the capital to be sold hereafter is to be divided into shares of the like amount.

Given under our hands this 25th day of April A. D. 1900.

J. A. T. HULL.
JOHN GIBSON.
JOHN S. BRADFORD.
STEWART SPALDING.
FRANK PHILLIPS.

Wherefore the corporators named in the said agreement and who have signed the same, and their successors and assigns, are hereby declared to be from this date until the 1st day of May, A. D. 1950, a corporation by the name and for the purposes set forth in said agreement.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the said State, at the city of Charleston, this 3d day of May, 1900.

[SEAL.] WM. M. O. DAWSON, Secretary of State.

[Testimonial.]

OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF STATE, to wit:

I, William M. O. Dawson, secretary of state of the State of West Virginia, hereby certify that the foregoing, writing, dated the 3d day of May, 1900, is a true and correct copy of the certificate of incorporation of Philippine Lumber and Development Company, a corporation created and formed under the laws of said State, as appears from the records of corporations in my said office.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the said State, at the city of Charleston, this 7th day of May, 1900.

[SEAL.] WM. M. O. DAWSON, Secretary of State.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I also desire to print in this connection a clipping from a Manila paper in regard to how the Federal party that we are talking about is built up. This man, who is a representative of the lumber company at Manila, Frank S. Bourns, they say is the head of the Federal party there. I have here an article from The American, Manila, P. I., Tuesday, January 10, 1901. It is headed:

Take the oath or go to Guam—No rebel can work for Uncle Sam—American soldiers and civilians are running the "amigos" down.

This paper is evidently an American paper. The article is as follows:

There is a ripple of excitement in employee circles of the Government, especially in the Quartermaster's Department. An effort is being made to compel native workmen to take the oath of allegiance, or be cast from the Government pay rolls. It seems soldiers and ex-soldiers have tired of work ing with Tagalogs without knowledge of their loyalty to the flag.

The action of Ecsmilla at a club dance, a few weeks since, in refusing to drink to the health of the President of the United States, and the late action of Governor-General MacArthur in a general order of malcontents into exile to Guam, has aroused the proper spirit, and all true-blue Americans are asserting it.

The fact is, Americans in every department of the United States Government in the Philippines agree that all native employees should take the oath of allegiance to the flag or suffer deportation to Guam with Mabini, Pio del Pilar, and the party of rebels that accompany them.

The feeling is general in Manila that Governor-General MacArthur has taken the right step, initially speaking, and that he should extend it to every department of service in the Philippines where native help is employed. There seems to be no objection to the Tagalog, wherever he gives evidence that he is a loyal subject of the United States.

Soldiers and civilian employees of the Quartermaster's Department are emphatic in the expression that all Tagalogs employed there shall take the oath of allegiance.

COMPULSORY ALLEGIANCE.

That is the sort of Federal party supporting the United States that we seem to be building up in that country. The other day I read some letters from the island of Cebu, where we imprisoned the officers of a town until they would come out and take the oath of allegiance. Now, I want to go further for a few moments into some other matters in connection with this, as they ought to go in the RECORD. These people were our allies and they helped us fight Spain under our flag and their flag. Now they are being deported because they love their country.

Mabini was deported. He was not a prisoner of war. He was a cripple, an invalid, the victim of Spanish cruelty. We sent out a squad and captured him and brought him into Manila, and when he refused to swear allegiance and wrote articles high in character, full of patriotic spirit, we deported him to Guam as a prisoner along with 31 others. Mr. President, I believe that I shall live to see the day when there will be a monument built by the people of the United States in this capital to Mabini, as there ought to be.

Now, how are we carrying on the war? MacArthur's report shows that during the last ten months our losses have been 268 killed and 750 wounded; the Filipino losses, 3,227 killed, 694 wounded. Who ever heard of anything of the sort before in the history of the world? It indicates that we give no quarter, that we are engaged in the butchery of men in that country.

Now I am going to read from a letter signed by Capt. D. S. Crawford on that same subject. I will not read the whole of it, but I will read those parts of it which touch this question of barbarity. This is an account of operations in the island of Mindanao. I want to read first what Captain Crawford says, that they were instructed to kill everybody, to give no quarter, to take no prisoners:

Capt. S. D. Crawford writes as follows from Santa Anna, Mindanao, P. I., under date of December 23, 1900:

"While we rest I will write you. I am reduced to a few scraps of paper and a 2-inch pencil, which Major Taggert gave me. This is one of the most remarkable expeditions in my experience. December 16, after having every man examined from head to foot by the surgeons, I started as one of eight companies and the mounted detachment with Colonel Birkhimer in command for the enemy's stronghold. We started at 4.30 a. m. and by daylight the column was moving on its way from Cagayan to Tagalaon, 15 miles. Before we reached that place we were fired upon from the high ridges. At Tagalaon we ate dinner, and then having landed Company A from the cutter on the other side of the river, we forded the swiftest strean I ever crossed. The water came above my waist and it was a wonder that some of the small men were not drowned. That put us into the San Martin, where we spent the night. My bed was at the foot of a cocoanut palm. The spearmen attacked our outposts, and the men killed one. He

YELLED LIKE A STUCK PIG.

We have more dread of the spearmen than anything else.

"At daylight we started for Santa Anna, 3 miles inland. This is a small town of less than three hundred houses. The enemy left it without firing on us, but they opened up on us from the hills. At 1 o'clock we started with the Maxim-Nordenfeldt gun in the column for Pamplona, 15 or 20 miles into the mountains, to one of the strongholds. We made a false movement in the direction of the much-talked-of fort on which they had worked for months, and then turned to the left and began the ascent of the mountain, reaching it in good condition. We then descended to the River Quimaya, which zigzags through a canyon which is from 2,000 to 3,000 feet deep, with precipitous sides. The insurrectos kept along at the top, shooting at us whenever they could see the column. This was a terrible journey. We crossed that stream 31 times before midnight. It was terribly swift, but only came to the belt. The mule gave out and the men had to drag that gun, and men never did harder work. The night was inky black and we had to gather phosphorus sticks and put them in the men's hats so that we could see the trail. When we got into Pamplona we camped out in the long, wet grass, and the rain fell until daylight. This town was also deserted. At 6 o'clock we started for Malabug over the mountain, and it took several hours to reach the summit, going through the wildest of forest. Shortly after starting 2 spearmen, one decorated with ribbons—a chief, I suppose—attacked a man in the rear of my company. They hurled their spears, which he dodged, and he then shot one and clubbed the other with his gun. They were armed with knives. After crossing the mountains we struck the Malabug River, and then the enemy began firing on our column from the steep mountain side. We could not reach them and had to march along under their fire for about 5 miles.

"That tried men's nerves, but the men stand it all right and get even by swearing at the enemy, which of course makes the enemy feel badly. It was not long after reaching Malabug until the pigs began to squeal and beautiful fields of corn showed animation. I went to sleep about 1 o'clock; did not wake up until nearly dark. The colonel just allowed us to make ourselves comfortable. How we do drink water on this island! The rivers are swift; the water is pure and actually cool. We had outposts, and at night I had a camp guard to protect my men from the spearmen, for they creep up like snakes. Yesterday morning we set out to make a rear attack on Fort Santa Anna, on the summit, going down the valley, 5 miles from where we found a small fort which had been vacated and burned. The trail up the mountain was so steep that we had to rest every hundred yards, and did not get to the summit until noon. We were now directly in the rear of the fort. The day very hot. After a hasty meal we inspected the arms and ammunition and advanced to what we thought would be a bloody battle, but imagine our disappointment and chagrin, when we advanced upon the strongest fortification and best strategic position any army could ask for, to find it entirely deserted. The enemy had even left their cannon in their haste to get away. The men were so angry that they swore like demons. Well, we went at that fort, which consisted of a stockade over a crest about 125 yards long, with trench in the rear, deep trench in front set full of spear-pointed bamboos covered with brush and grass.

"Well, I ran out of paper and had to borrow some Japanese wrapping paper. Had we attacked that fort from the front, as the enemy expected we would do, our loss would have been very heavy. Their entire front was full of mantraps; poisoned arrows were set behind trips; long, spear-pointed poles set on spring poles lay concealed in the grass to pierce us when the strings were touched, and all sorts of devices to wound and kill—everything that savagery could suggest or that ever existed in the dark ages. We went at that fort and mantraps and tore them up and burned everything in sight. They had an especially peculiar arrangement which would have troubled us in deploying into line of battle. It consisted of a lot of stakes set in the ground. These were split into quarters in the top, and fastened in those splits were long brier vines—a natural barbed wire. These thorns were very sharp; and set behind these vines were sharpened bamboo sticks set in the ground to pierce you as you fell. I inclose a piece of that barbed-wire fence.

WERE THERE TO KILL.

We started for Santa Anna after wrecking that fort, and a more tired lot of men you never saw. I had two go sick—Charles Lee, of Erie, for one; but he is just played out, and a few days' rest will fix him up. The colonel had no reveille sound this morning and everybody slept just as long as they wanted to. We have squads out now looking for fresh meat, chickens, etc. We are now in an enemy's country, and are here to kill every man who is found armed or in the vicinity of the enemy. We have orders to accept no surrender unless to turn over a rifle. These people are different to those in Luzon. These Visayans are intruders on this island. They are not wanted here by the Moros, and we are going to stick to them until we kill them or make them surrender with arms. This is the most beautiful country in the archipelago."

Mr. GALLINGER. Who is Captain Crawford?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will tell the Senator who he is. I have a statement here. I do not know what State he is from. He signs this letter. It was published in the Erie Morning Dispatch, a leading Republican paper in that part of Pennsylvania, I suppose, "containing a letter from Capt. G. S. Crawford of the Twenty-eighth Infantry. Captain Crawford is of this city," that is, of Erie. He goes on to say:

SATURDAY, December 22.

It is no man's land, and here is grazing country for millions of heads of cattle. The large table-lands at the top of the canyons are covered with nutritious grass. A large native beef sold here last May for $5 in gold; they are now $15 in gold, and we can not get them at that just now, so we will get them with Kraga. I inclose you some flowers which grow at my front door. I have a house now with two rooms and a kitchen. It is a little out of repair, but when it rains I can move my bunk over to the other corner. The floor is bamboo slats, with inch spaces; the sides and roof nipa. We have a delightful sea breeze here after the middle of the day.

HEARTBREAKING TRIP.

SANTA ANA, December 23, 1900.

I thank the Lord we are home again, after one of the most eventful and successful expeditions ever sent out in this archipelago; and we did not lose a man.

I wrote you after we returned from a three days' expedition into the interior, and the destruction of the big fort on the top of the mountain. That was Wednesday, December 22. Thursday we rested, but that night got orders to get ready for a forced march of 30 miles into the mountains to Silo, one of the insurrecto strongholds. Our feet were sore and badly cut from the previous trip, and some men were barefooted, and we were all very sore and tired, but when you locate your enemy you can not lose time. Friday morning we had an attack about 1 o'clock, but the fools fired from the hills and did not hit a man of us. I tell you it was confusing to be attacked in the night. You grab for your shoes every place but where they are. You can not strike a light, for that locates the officers, and if the spear men are in under your shack or close by they will get you before you can get on your fighting clothes.

I have slept in my wet clothes and shoes so much that I become desperate and undress partially. Well, we started at 5 o'clock and made a forced march, passing the fort we had reduced on Wednesday and got into Malabug at 10.30 a. m. Half an hour's rest started us on the worst mountain I ever climbed. About a dozen of my men were so prostrated by the heat and fatigue that we had to make frequent stops, but fortunately found a mountain stream about noon or 1 o'clock. We were then away on top of the mountain. It was a grand sight, but it was mighty hard on us. We got water, and when at the summit stopped to eat. The insurrectos fired on our rear after we got a short distance from Malabug, but only one shot came in my vicinity and that struck about 10 feet ahead. We descended on the town of Silo, on the Silo River, and surprised a force of insurrectos. We shot a few, but the rest escaped up the canyons.

BROKE UP A FUNERAL.

They were holding a funeral in a little nipa church when we approached. They left the dead body in the church and took to the canyons. I got a Remington rifle and an officer's sword, a very fine Spanish weapon, which the colonel has given me. We found large quantities of stores and supplies, and having an abundant supply of fresh beef and chickens, as well as rice, we fared well. In the morning at 3 o'clock we cooked breakfast, loaded the men with choice tobacco, and then set fire to every house in the town except the church where the dead body lay.

They had captured this town while a funeral was going on, and the people attending the funeral had fled. So they did leave the dead body in the church, and they did not burn that, but they burned everything else.

This paper I am writing on belonged to a Visayan colonel, whose sword I captured, or rather picked up from where he had dropped it as he fled from our fire. There were two American deserters in the town, but they got away. One of them left his watch and clothes. If we could get our hands on those five wretches who deserted, we would not make them prisoners, but would riddle them with bullets, and they know it. We found a strata of fine chalk, also a vein of anthracite coal, near Silo. We reached the top of the mountain before the sun got very hot and stopped for a half hour's rest and then started for Malabug. We found a big herd of fine, fat cattle, but they got away from us. We got into Malabug about 11 o'clock and spent the afternoon and night there.

We butchered a lot of cattle, goats, and pigs and had a feast. While we were enjoying the feast the Gugas showed up on the mountains, but we made it so hot for them that they did not bother us any more, and we had a peaceful night. The day before we were so close on them in that town that an officer left his shaving outfit and his men left half a beef in the plaza, which was our meat. This morning, when we left the town at 5 o'clock, we burned every building, and a large herd of their horses, which all tried to corral, got away from us.

A DESERTED FORT.

We came down the canyon instead of going up over the hill by the fort which we had reduced on Wednesday, and we found another fort, which we took without firing a shot. They had deserted it the day we got in behind them. Had we undertaken to have captured that fort by a frontal attack, they would have butchered us. They had a trench across the canyon with palisades 10 feet high, with a trench in front fitted with sharpened bamboo sticks set up on end and covered with grass. The Malabug River was barricaded in the same way. They had loopholes through the stone wall for rifles and their cannons on the side of the mountain, commanding the left of their works. About 50 feet up they had trenches and cannon.

On the right bank they had cannon trained on the pass and bags of grape shot, each bag containing 90 grape shot. Had we come up that canyon, as the insurrectos expected we would, they would have slaughtered us, for we would have had to deploy in a very swift river filled with slippery stones, and could not have formed a front of 30 yards. Farther down they had other trenches. We tore down their works and burned their houses, and coming down the canyon burned every house in sight or reach. Now, this we did not do in Luzon excepting where they fired on us from the houses. The whole expedition has been one

UNDER DIVINE GUIDANCE.

First, we fooled the insurrectos by taking another canyon and going into their rear into the interior 30 miles. We captured some Visayans who had been compelled to work on the mountain fort three months without pay, and they said they would show us the fort by way of revenge on the cruel Tagalos from Manila. Then we captured three others, Bolo men, who located the other fort, which we destroyed to-day, as well as the headquarters.

Bang! There goes the outpost, and some fool spearman is biting the dust by this time. They creep up to spear our men at the outposts. It is now 9 p. m. We have marched, under fire a part of the way, for over 130 miles; have captured and reduced to ruins two strong forts, and have burned two insurrection strongholds and have not lost a man. A most remarkable record, and, barring the men who were hurt by man traps or are suffering from sunstrokes, we are all right, but very tired, and in fact worn out for a few days. Colonel Birkhimer's superior strategy, under the guidance of God, has enabled us to crush the Tagalo movement here and to force Aguinaldo's followers to fall back onto some other town. I hear that our regiment is coming down from Cagayan to go into camp down on the beach at San Martin or at Tagaloan, across the river. I am glad of it, for we have no natives here, no women, and no liquor to injure the men. We have the very best of mountain water here, flowing at torrent pace down through the rocky canyons. Now, I must close to-night and turn in, for I am just paralyzed. So good night.

Monday, December 24.—I am very tired to-day and have not the courage to move farther away than from my quarters to those occupied by our men. The mounted detachment went out to-day and brought in the large brass cannon which we found yesterday in the cannon fort. I am sorry to say that one of my men who was stricken by the heat yesterday has not recovered consciousness yet and is sinking. Another of my men has recovered consciousness and will recover. Fortunately the sky is overclouded to-day and I think we are going to have rain. We sent out details to-day to shoot cattle, and my men will have fresh meat for supper and breakfast. The sweet potatoes here are very good—better than they are in Luzon. The corn is also better. The farming sections are very beautifully laid out. The plateaus on the high land, or above the canyons, are covered with delicious grass, and there are millions here for men who have the means to stock a ranch.

This would be a great sheep-growing country. The Moros, they say, are very prosperous and have very fine farms. We have not seen any of them yet, as the Tagalos and Visayans have driven them back. At Llegan the Moros come in and trade with the soldiers, and are very friendly. I inclose you some leaves and beans from the coffee trees in our yard. The trees are very beautiful, and the berry, before it gets brown, looks like a big, red cherry. I also send you some flowers which look like clover. The landscape and foliage here is far more beautiful than it is in Luzon.

I hear to-day that the entire regiment is to be brought down to Villanuevas, on the bay. They say that that is a beautiful place, but I hope the Colonel will allow us to stay here in Santa Ana until we move around the bay to Butuan, our next place. The air here is very pure, and we have but few mosquitoes, but they are horrid in Cagayan. The heat here is quite intense between 9 and 11 o'clock, but after that there is a good breeze, unless you happen to get into a canyon or mountain pass, where the circulation is shut off.

DESERTER LEFT SHOES.

While we were reducing the fort in the canyon yesterday one of the men found a letter written by a Visayan insurrecto to his girl. It was full of loving expressions and wishes. We found a pair of shoes left by one of the American deserters. Those deserters were what we call vino fiends—that is, men who are fond of vino de cocos, a very strong liquor made from the milk of cocoanuts. Their desertion was arranged by Visayan senoritas. The deserters received $500 (Mexican) for their guns and ammunition and the deserter then gets a senorita and all the vino he wants, besides a position on the general's staff. They also have servants to arrange for their comfort.

Our men are wild to get at the enemy when they see a man who looks like an American. We saw one who stood out on a crest watching us when we marched around in the rear of their forts, but he was up too high for our range, and we had to let the cur go. Another sat away up on the side of the canyon and shot at the mounted officers as long as there was one in sight. My men have just come back with three quarters of a beef and their shirt fronts full of onions (green). While they were out there—a mile from camp—the "Gugus" showed up on the ridge and opened up on our men, but never hit one. The men held onto their meat and brought it in. I am just now in receipt of our highland cream, six cans, and we are going to have crackers and milk and fresh beef for supper. We are regular gourmands when we get in, for when we are out we do have to fly light. I often make a meal on hard-tack and water, and am thankful for that.

So he describes the capture of cattle and the destruction further of property, and he also describes the country. He speaks of its fertility and the cultivated fields, abandoned by the people for fear of the "benevolent assimilation" which we seem to be imposing upon that country.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa moves that the Senate recede from the remaining amendment.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, before the vote is taken, I wish to make a brief statement:

Last summer, or in the spring, I introduced a bill providing for an exhibit to be made by the Government at Charleston similar to that at Buffalo, at a cost of $250,000. A favorable report was made on it, and the bill was placed on the Calendar. In the first week of the session, in December, it passed the Senate. It went to the House, and was smothered in committee.

When the independent bill for the St. Louis Exposition was passed by the House and sent over here, I offered the Charleston Exposition bill as an amendment to that bill, and the Senate very kindly and justly, as I thought, put it on unanimously. The bill went back to the House and the Charleston amendment was stricken out, and that bill, I believe, is in conference; at least, the Senate has appointed its conferees and the House never agreed to any conference, as I understand it. Is not that the case, I ask the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. LODGE. No; the House conferees and our conferees met. We had one conference. It went back on a disagreement, and, I believe, has been sent back again into conference.

Mr. TILLMAN. Well, the bill fell in a deadlock in the conference?

Mr. LODGE. Yes.

Mr. TILLMAN. I have never contended for anything in regard to this exposition business except what I thought to be simple justice. I did not believe that it was possibly the right thing for the Government to spend so much money on this kind of thing. I rather thought we were going into the exposition business rather extravagantly. But I did feel that if Buffalo had received $500,000 and St. Louis was to receive $5,000,000, it was nothing but a just proposition that Charleston should receive the little pitiful sum of $250,000, which was all she asked. I have insisted on that view. I have demanded what I believed to be equality, not of amounts, but equality of principle; in other words, that the city in my State should not be considered as an outcast and treated differently from these other two.

I am perfectly willing to have all of these exposition amendments go out of the sundry civil bill if it is necessary for the bill to become a law. Of course I shall vote "no" against the motion to recede, because I do not understand how it is, and why it is, that the Senate must bow down and yield to the dictation of the House in a matter of this kind.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, it seems to me the minority has nothing to lose in an extra session and they have everything to gain. If they would defeat the sundry civil bill it would compel an extra session and compel the Republicans to stay here and discuss this Filipino question. I believe the time has come when the people of the United States are getting sick of it. They are coming to discover the barbarities they are practicing in that country. They are discovering that we have no commerce with that country, and can not have, and will not have. They are coming to find that we shot the first shot and began the war and we are fighting our allies; that we are committing an act of treachery and national infamy and dishonor.

It seems to me the minority can afford to stay here and talk about it. I have felt so all winter, and it seems to me now that they could gain an advantage. They can get together themselves and cease to be a ragged, straggling crowd here that does not belong to any party. They are approaching that, and if they would stay here for two or three months and discuss this question there would be a Democratic party once more in this body; and it would be a good thing for them; and then it would divide the Republicans. The dissatisfaction and discontent of the Republicans were witnessed in the defeat of the subsidy bill, which was defeated by Republicans who could not be whipped into line by their bosses. Half of them nearly were dissatisfied with the bill, and they did not want to vote for it, and were glad of an opportunity to escape.

Another thing, the Republican party have come to a point where they will not defend the course of the Administration in the Philippines. They will not stand up here and defend or argue any longer. They do not want to talk about it. They simply line up, and they are getting sick of that.

It seems to me that the Senator from South Carolina, instead of being so anxious to surrender on this bill in order to get it through, ought to be anxious and take the opportunity and talk the time out until 12 o'clock, and compel the Republicans to stay here and compel them to hear these things, and fight out this great issue, in which is involved the honor of the American people and what there is left of the honor of the Administration.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. TILLMAN. If it had been determined by those on this side with whom I consulted that it was wisest and best to force an extra session rather than to submit to the legislation on the Army bill, I would have been the last man to yield on that question. In consultation with my colleagues we were confronted with the condition that if we forced an extra session after we had thoroughly ventilated the entire proposition and shown its infamy, and had given every evidence that men could, to the people of this country, that it was a departure from all the time-honored principles of our Government and our traditions as a people, after we had done everything that could cast odium upon those who were guilty of it, then if we forced the extra session, we would be met with a larger majority than we now have in both branches, and one which was elected at the time the President was elected by a larger majority than he had when he was first elected, and that we would have only delayed the time by a few weeks when, from mere exhaustion, we would be overpowered and this same Philippine amendment would go through.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I did not yield for a speech. I am willing to have the Senator speak as long as he chooses, and I will yield the floor in a moment.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator is opening up a very large question here.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am perfectly willing to yield the floor and let the Senator talk about all he has a mind to, but I do not like to hold the floor and interrupt him.

Mr. TILLMAN. I just want to set myself right.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I should like to finish.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator refuses to let me finish, of course I will have to yield.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I do not know when you would finish, and I would expect to have to stand here.

Mr. TILLMAN. We are not apparently very much interested in this thing under discussion. I should like to get through. I will get through in two minutes.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will yield the floor with the understanding that I will resume if the Senator wants to make his speech in the middle of my speech.

Mr. TILLMAN. But I want to get through my statement now.

What I was going to say was this: The extra session would have brought with it a larger majority and one which possibly would have perpetrated a great deal more that was contrary to the Constitution and more outrageous in its character than the present Congress has done; and therefore we would have gained absolutely nothing as a matter of principle except that we had forced an extra session upon the country.

I was going to say it had been charged in the papers that I had been bought off by the exposition appropriation.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Nobody believed that.

Mr. TILLMAN. Those who undertook to start that lie knew it was a lie when they began it. No man has ever dared approach me with any hint that I could be seduced or induced to cast any votes here because of money that my State was getting. I do not care a thrip about the exposition money or anything else in that regard. I simply abandoned the idea of filibustering to prevent the passage of the Philippine amendment and the Cuban amendment because I thought we had gone far enough to show to the country that the Republicans were bent—hell bent, so to speak—on that, and it was useless to resist.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Now, Mr. President, there was no minority report on the Army enlargement bill. There was no minority report on the Philippine amendment, by which we revolutionized this Government and coupled with the Republic an empire.

I am glad to see that there are signs of reviving life; and I believe in the future there will be a minority party. The American people have a minority party, and there ought to be one in this body, and there will be. So, I say, it would be a good thing to stay here and let the minority discuss these questions and keep them before the American people, for not only the Republicans are getting sick of it, but you can make great political capital and gain great advantage to yourselves and do a great patriotic duty. You have the chance to do it and you ought to do it. I would be very glad, indeed, to join with you in doing it, and kill both these bills.

The river and harbor bill is a job. There are some meritorious appropriations in it, and a good many that are not. It is more stupendous in its proportions than the subsidy bill. It involves more money. That involves $9,000,000 a year, but this starts off with $50,000,000. You would save a vast sum by the defeat of this measure. Both measures ought to be defeated, one for the purpose of securing an extra session and the other because it never ought to become a law. I would be very glad to see it done, and I would be glad to join with the minority in securing that result.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Iowa.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House still further insists upon its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, upon which the committee of conference have been unable to agree, asks a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BURTON, Mr. REEVES, and Mr. CATCHINGS managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 10302) requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to make full reports of all accidents to the Interstate Commerce Commission; and

A bill (H. R. 13729) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION AT ST. LOUIS, MO.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the communication from the House of Representatives conveying to us the report of the conference committee upon the St. Louis Exposition bill made day before yesterday.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives.

The Secretary read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, March 1, 1901.

Resolved, That the House agree to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9829) to provide for celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the purchase of the Louisiana territory by the United States by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the products of the soil, mine, forest, and sea, in the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri.

Mr. DEPEW submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9829) to provide for celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the purchase of the Louisiana territory by the United States by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and products of the soil, mine, forest, and sea, in the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreeing vote on Senate amendment numbered 1, and agree to the same.

That the conferees have been unable to agree to Senate amendment numbered 2, providing for the erection of a Government building and the making of a Government exhibit at the Interstate and West Indian Exposition in the city of Charleston, S. C.

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW,
H. C. LODGE,
GEORGE G. VEST,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. A. TAWNEY,
GEORGE W. STEELE,
JOHN S. WILLIAMS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. VEST. I move that the Senate recede from amendment numbered 2, which has just been laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri moves that the Senate recede from amendment numbered 2.

Mr. LODGE. Before that vote is taken, it should be understood that moving to recede from amendment numbered 2 kills the Charleston Exposition appropriation and passes the St. Louis Exposition appropriation.

Acting on behalf of the Senate, the Senate conferees adhered to that Charleston appropriation. I still think that it ought to be made. I do not think it is fair to cut it off. I have not changed my mind from the vote I gave in conference. I merely wished to say this so that the Senate might know on what it was voting.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, I simply wish to say that at the last session of Congress, as we all know, the Senate unanimously agreed that if the people of St. Louis should raise $10,000,000 and the Secretary of the Treasury should certify to that effect, then that the Government would advance $5,000,000 for the purposes of that exposition. Every Senator who was present then and voted for that proposition pledged himself on his honor and that of his constituents to this contract.

This is not an original proposition as to the expediency of the action had at the last session of Congress, but it involves the good faith of the whole people of the United States. Because of this legislative action the people of St. Louis went to the last limit in their financial ability and resources, having no doubt that Congress would redeem at this session, if they succeeded in raising the $10,000,000, the pledge then made.

Now, Mr. President, I have no feeling except the kindest possible one toward the proposition in regard to the exposition at Buffalo and that at Charleston. We have a right to expect from both these places the same kindly sentiment which the people of St. Louis and of Missouri entertain for those localities. When Charleston some years ago was visited by a terrible calamity and many of her citizens were almost in a state of destitution, the people of St. Louis were amongst the first to give their earnest sympathy and their liberal contributions to that suffering community; and I appeal now, with all the earnestness of which I am capable, to the Senate, to the representatives of New York and of South Carolina, that this act of simple justice shall be carried out and the contract fulfilled on the part of the Government, the conditions of which have been complied with on the part of the people of the city of St. Louis. I ask this, and I shall be greatly mistaken in the feelings that I know actuate every Senator if what I have said falls to the ground and is without effect.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I have only a word to add to what I have already said. I am at great disadvantage here, because there is no one who regrets more than I do to have the appearance of opposing the Senators from Missouri. They are men of national reputation, with great minds and characters. They have been here a long time. They have many friends; they have many more friends than I have; they have more influence, and I hate to even appear to antagonize them. The appeal is made that we simply do justice to the city of St. Louis in carrying out an act which every man knows went through here by sufferance, because one objection would have knocked it out. It went through the other House under a condition of paralysis of the tender consciences of those men who are now claiming to be watchdogs of the Treasury. These honest patriots have stood guard to-night to see that Charleston gets nothing, and that Buffalo gets nothing additional; but those men, I say, stood guard over there and declared by their action, if not by their words, that the Charleston Exposition bill should not be placed upon a similar condition of legality with the St. Louis Exposition. It was a more modest scheme and an equally just one.

Therefore, when the Senator from Missouri says he appeals to us to do justice, simply upon the technical proposition that we have passed an act by which we promised to do thus and so, it is not altogether right or fair that Senators should take it into consideration. We will have to get down to bed-rock principles here.

The United States has spent, I think, something like $11,000,000 on expositions. It is now proposed to spend $5,000,000 more on another exposition. My State has never had any of the largess of the Government. It has been a kind of outcast, a disinherited daughter, ever since 1865, and when we come here to simply ask that the United States Government, under whose flag in the Spanish war South Carolinians rallied as promptly as citizens of any other State, shall give this little pitiful sum of $250,000 to assist her development I leave it to Senators whether they are disposed to give to one city $5,000,000 and to give us nothing.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. President, I desire to say but few words on this subject. I do not believe that the Senate of the United States or Congress should give to South Carolina, or to any city there, a quarter of a million dollars, to Buffalo, N. Y., half a million dollars, and to St. Louis, Mo., $5,000,000 and leave standing at the doors of the Senate those to whom this Government owes hundreds of thousands of dollars, and has owed these debts many years, denying them justice, denying them the right to be heard, or to have a single cent paid to them for honest dollars that have been due these many years.

I have talked here in vain to this Senate; I have sought to get the claim of Eli Ayres allowed; I have appealed time and again for a hearing, yet I have not had that hearing. In 1834 his property was taken from him by this Government, converted into money, and the money put into the Treasury. He was robbed, plundered, pillaged. All these years have gone, and not a cent has been paid back. It seems to me the opportunity ought to be given sometime, somewhere, somehow, when we should inquire whether or not this Government shall be lavish in giving away money taken out of the pockets of the taxpayers, or whether it shall pay its debts.

It appears to me that this is a very fitting time to make the inquiry, whether or not we will pay our debts and be honest, or whether we shall be overgenerous to every corporation that comes along asking some concession, and to every person who wants to put his hands into the public Treasury.

A few days ago when this question came up I observed then that there were Senators who were very astute to make points of order to kill off this or that or the other amendment to the bill; but when this appropriation for a half million dollars came up it went onto the bill; and I thank God that the House, in its wisdom, has seen proper to reject all three of these propositions. I want to see the time come when this Government shall pay its honest debts before it goes to giving out money in this way. I am tired of seeing honest claims held up and denied here year after year—yes, not only year after year, but for fifty and seventy-five years—and yet any kind of an arrangement can go through here when some one, with such propositions as these, comes along and he may be accommodated and money loaned. I will be most happy if it shall occur that all three of these claims, these petitions, these propositions of donation, be defeated.

Sometimes I think, as I sit here and listen to the numbers of private pension bills that are passed, not by the dozen, but by the hundreds—not under the general law that prevails, but by special legislation, to take out of the Treasury money, when the appropriations for pensions now run up to one hundred and forty-five or one hundred and fifty million dollars—what a pity it is that our people will not stop first and pay the honest debts that are justly due, and then afterwards be generous.

I would not withhold a single cent from anybody to whom it was due; but I do want to say here and now, we should be a little more careful about the appropriations to pay bills of the character now under discussion, and first pay those which have been long since past due. If this were done, this Government, which boasts of its desire to stand before the world as never repudiating a debt, would appear in a much better light.

So far as I am concerned, I think the point of order made the other day as to the Buffalo Exposition should have been sustained; and I repeat that I am glad the whole matter has been rejected in the House. I hope the Senate will concur in that opinion. I think we had first better pay our debts, and afterwards be generous.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST].

Mr. TILLMAN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BURROWS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY].

Mr. DEBOE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. HANNA (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS], which I will transfer to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BAKER], and vote "yea."

Mr. HANSBROUGH (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL].

Mr. HEITFELD (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. McBRIDE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY]. If he were present, I should vote "nay." I do not know how that Senator would vote if present.

Mr. PETTUS (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. I must withhold my vote, as I do not know how he would vote.

Mr. PRITCHARD (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MCLAURIN]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. PROCTOR (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY].

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. TURLEY], who is absent. I am informed if he were present, he would vote "yea." I therefore feel at liberty to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. TALIAFERRO (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS], and therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 38, nays 10; as follows:

YEAS—38.

Aldrich,	Culberson,	Jones, Ark.	Spooner,
Allison,	Cullom,	Kean,	Teller,

Chilton,	Kenney,	Platt, Conn.	Tillman,
Daniel,	Kyle,	Platt, N. Y.	Turley,
Deboe,	McBride,	Pritchard,	Wolcott.

So the motion of Mr. VEST was agreed to.

SENATOR FROM MONTANA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Presiding Officer has received a telegram from the lieutenant-governor of Montana, and is inclined to think that it is fairly entitled to be read to the Senate. It will be read, if there be no objection.

The Secretary read as follows:

[Telegram.]

HELENA, MONT., March 5, 1901.

Hon. WM. P. FRYE,
President of the United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

As the presiding officer of the joint assembly of the seventh legislative assembly of the State of Montana, I desire to inform you and the honorable body over which you preside that the election of the Hon. William A. Clark as United States Senator from the State of Montana, on the 16th day of January, 1901, was the culmination of the expressed wish of the people of this State. Senator Clark was an issue in our late campaign, and the members of this legislative assembly, representing the fusion force composing the Democrats, the Populist, and the Labor parties voted unanimously for the return of Senator Clark to your honorable body.

Any person or persons protesting against the admission of Senator Clark as a member of your honorable body takes a position entirely unwarranted and a reference to the returns at the polls during the recent State election will show this fact, which has subsequently been emphasized by the solid vote of his party and its fusion allies in the legislature. The late campaign in the State of Montana was a hard-fought struggle, yet it was honorable and honest, and it is the firm and honest belief of the undersigned that Senator William A. Clark stands to-day before your honorable body vindicated by the people of this State, and any effort to besmirch his character or oppose his admission to your body is wrong, and can not be supported by any legal testimony.

FRANK HIGGINS,
Lieutenant-Governor of the State of Montana.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. In connection with the telegram which has just been presented to the Senate, I have a telegram which I deem it my duty also to present to the Senate.

There was a protest against Senator Clark's right to a seat in the Senate by H. R. Knapp a day or two ago, which was ordered to be printed and lie on the table. I have a telegram, addressed to myself, from Helena, Mont., under date of March 2, 1901, as follows:

H. R. Knapp, who prefers charges against Senator Clark, is not a citizen of Montana. He is a blackmailer and an adventurer. No credence should be given any statement made by him. The election of Senator Clark was hearty, and not one dollar used to secure the same.

JNO. S. M. NEILL,
Member National Committee, Montana.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I desire to say only a word about this telegram.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Mr. President, of course I do not for a moment question the judgment of the Chair in laying the telegram before the Senate, but it is not in accordance with the rules of the Senate that a petition should be printed in the RECORD, and I take it that the telegram which has been presented is nothing more than a petition from the individual or the officer who sends it.

SAFETY APPLIANCES ON RAILROADS.

Mr. PETTIGREW. A while ago we passed a resolution in regard to the bill providing for safety appliances on railroads, which was supposed to have disappeared. The resolution has not been delivered to the House of Representatives, and perhaps it will be as well to reconsider the vote by which it was passed so as to make the record clear.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from South Dakota, that the vote by which the resolution referred to was passed be reconsidered? The Chair hears none, and that order is made.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. NELSON. I present the conference report on the river and harbor bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate numbered 168, 219, 220, and 221 to the bill (H. R. 13489) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective House as follows:

On amendments numbered 168, 219, 220, and 221 the conferees have been unable to reach an agreement.

KNUTE NELSON,
JAMES McMILLAN,
JAMES H. BERRY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

THEODORE E. BURTON,
WALTER REEVES,
T. C. CATCHINGS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the report of the conference committee.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. NELSON. I desire to make a brief statement. The conferees on the part of the Senate have made a diligent effort to come to an agreement with the House conferees, but it is perfectly evident to me that it is useless to attempt any further conference. The river and harbor bill will fail unless the Senate will recede from its amendments which are in disagreement. On that account I feel that it is proper for me to make a motion that the Senate recede from its amendments disagreed to by the House of Representatives.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to know what matters are involved?

Mr. NELSON. The four amendments of the Senate to which I have heretofore referred—the three reservoirs and the Brazos River improvement item—the four amendments we have had in conference all day.

Mr. WARREN. I ask if the condition is exactly the same as when the first conference report was made?

Mr. NELSON. Yes. I will say further, if I may parliamentarily speak of the proceedings in the other body, that I can very well understand why the conferees on the part of the other House refused to agree to these amendments and why there is no hope of their ever agreeing to the amendments. Unless Senators want the river and harbor bill to utterly fail, all we can do is to recede from these four amendments.

Mr. CLARK. In other words, we are being held up.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I am very, very sorry to hear the statement made by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON]. I am sorry for him and for his fellow-conferees, who have labored so faithfully, in such good faith, and in so good a cause. I have sympathy for the Committee on Commerce of this Senate, the largest committee in numbers, and the peer of any committee in this Senate or in any parliamentary body in the world.

With great unanimity, as I am informed, that committee indorsed the proposition of having two or three or more reservoirs built in the arid and semiarid States, so that we might know from actual working tests whether it is feasible to conserve with reservoirs the waters of the United States for the double purposes of irrigation near the head waters of streams and to prevent floods and overflows along the lower portions, so that practical tests may be made and definite conclusions reached upon these two propositions.

I am also sorry to hear the Senator's statement on my own account, for I can truly say that there has been no bill before the Senate or before this Congress, there has been no measure in which I have felt a greater interest than in these particular amendments providing reservoirs for the West, which are a part of this measure. My disappointment is keen and bitter, and I feel more distressed over the prospective failure of the provisions of this bill providing relief for the people of my State and of the West than over the failure of any of the meritorious measures which have been before this Congress and for one cause or another have failed to pass and become laws.

And I am not alone in my disappointment. At my home and at many places in my State there are men and women anxiously awaiting the result of our deliberations to-night. They are sitting up all this livelong night, with ears at telegraph and telephone, breathlessly awaiting news upon this question, for they know its failure means more long years of waiting for recognition of their needs, and, on the other hand, its success means early realization of their hopes.

They believe that upon our settlement of this matter to-night depends, in a measure, the industrial life or death of their State; and if tidings reach them in the early daylight, as they read the news of the closing hours of Congress, that we have done nothing for them and have refused to recognize their modest request for one or two hundred thousand dollars for this laudable purpose, they will share with me my profound and disheartening disappointment.

Our people in the great West have asked nothing unreasonable in their request for this appropriation to grant them that which in every political convention, in every commercial congress, in every convention or meeting of organized labor, and in nearly every publication in the country is conceded and freely admitted without argument is their due.

What do the political parties say of this request in their platforms? And I mean their latest platforms, the ones upon which every member of the incoming Congress was elected and nearly all members of the present House of Representatives, voting upon these very propositions, were elected. Listen to them: The Republican national platform of 1900, adopted at Philadelphia, contains this plank:

In further pursuance of the constant policy of the Republican party to provide free homes on the public domain, we recommend adequate national legislation to reclaim the arid lands of the United States, reserving control of the distribution of water for irrigation to the respective States and Territories.

And the Democratic platform adopted at Kansas City recites:

We favor an intelligent system of improving the arid lands of the West, storing the waters for purposes of irrigation, and the holding of such lands for actual settlers.

And the Silver Republicans also wheeled into line the same day and at the same place as their Democratic brethren and said:

We believe the national Government should lend every aid, encouragement, and assistance toward the reclamation of the arid lands of the United States.

So you see it is not a dogma of one party; it is not a dogma of two parties, but it is a proposition agreed to by all parties. There is no political party to-day that dare go before the people with a platform that should contain in it anything adverse to this proposition.

Every member of the present House of Representatives who will go into the next House, whatever his party, was elected upon a platform which pledged him to aid reclamation of arid lands, pledged him to do something toward building reservoirs at Government expense, pledged him to do just what the Senate has given him an opportunity to do when it invited his vote and support in behalf of these amendments. How many of these members so pledged by their party platforms have kept the faith?

The answer comes in the vote of the House to-night rejecting ignominiously these Senate amendments, embodying as they do precisely the precepts and principles enunciated in the platforms of three political parties.

Nor is Government construction of reservoirs at the head waters of streams a new proposition. We know that for years it has been considered proper and entirely reasonable to provide in river and harbor bills for building reservoirs on the head waters of the Mississippi. And why not on the head waters of the Missouri? Because, forsooth, the struggling farming and ranching industries of the West might be benefited, and because opulent power is always disposed and willing to strangle and crush with its mailed and cruel hand the weak and defenseless.

And in the House of Representatives we are weak and defenseless. We have in the House from wholly arid-land States and Territories but seven Representatives and two Delegates; from the semiarid States and Territories not more than 25 Representatives and Delegates—a total House representation from a section of the country comprising more than two-fifths of the area of the United States of about the number representing, for instance, the State of New York.

What wonder, then, that the State of New York, with her great delegation, can, if she chooses, in combination with other States with large delegations, secure the passage of a bill with so much so-called pork in it that they can divide it around among such States and districts as they decide upon, and in the arrogance of their power can say, "this great Western empire shall not have a dollar to develop a national industry in which every poor man, every family seeking a home, every pioneer struggling with the hard conditions of frontier life, may have a share"—the oleaginous pork obtruding from every pocket fore and aft, that can snap their fingers at us if they will.

There is not a single good excuse for such action; not a single valid argument can be offered in its support. The House has offered nothing to justify its vindictive action save the nonsensical plea that if the farmers of the arid regions are benefited they will come into competition with the farmers of the East and thus injure them. As well might New York say that the growth of San Francisco will take away some of her industrial and commercial standing.

We are mutually dependent. What helps one section helps all. When part of our country prospers all other parts prosper likewise, and if the farmers of the West gain, in the same proportion will their brethren of the East gain. In fact, the House offers no argument against this proposition of conservation of the waters of the West. It simply stands flat upon the dictum that "might is right," and in this river and harbor bill dictatorially and obstinately rejects what I consider one of the most meritorious items it contains.

Mr. President, I want to predict that before another river and harbor bill passes and becomes law there will be reservoirs built or provided for by this nation, either in the river and harbor bill or on some other appropriation bill or in an independent measure.

I do not say this as a threat, for the West is not vindictive. It always takes the knock-out blows administered to it in good part and comes up smiling every year ready to do its share in the nation's work whether what it does is appreciated or not. But I do not believe this nation, which has grown great mainly because it has always helped the weak, will abandon this great principle and allow this great Western domain to suffer simply because, under the form of law governing representation in the House of Representatives its extent, resources, and capabilities have so small a number of Representatives to protect and secure its rights and requirements.

This great domain, nearly 2,000 miles across and extending from the northwest possessions of the Dominion of Canada on the north to the Republic of Mexico on the south, is settled by those who pushed westward with gun in one hand to protect against Indians and ax in the other to blaze the trail of civilization; and it is the part of your country from which you get, in proportion to population, the largest quota of soldiers to fight your wars. You get from its mountains and great elevated plains better soldiers than any other nation in the world has put in its ranks.

From its grazing grounds you get the hardiest horses for cavalry service to be found upon which to mount your soldiers, so hardy and enduring that Great Britain, Germany, and Mexico have their representatives among our horse growers of the West purchasing mounts for their cavalry. From this great domain you get the beef and mutton to feed not only your soldiers, but the great bulk of the population of the entire country, and the wool, also, to clothe them, and from its bounteous mines you get the gold and silver forming your monetary standard, making it possible to conduct the great commercial business of the country and to pay the enormous appropriations you are making here.

And right here I would remind those who so arrogantly, and I might say so flippantly, vote down, year after year, any and every proposition looking to arid-land reclamation by the Government of a fact which perhaps has escaped their notice. The Government receives annually from sales of the public lands in the arid and semiarid West over $4,000,000, and yet with this great income pouring in year after year not a penny can be spared to aid in the work of improving these or the remaining unsold public lands of the West. In the twelve or fifteen years the West has been before Congress asking for recognition its people have paid into the National Treasury for public lands an amount greater than the aggregate appropriations of this river and harbor bill, and in return have never received a penny for actual land reclamation.

I should like to ask some of those who believe that we of that district have no rights, how long they expect the Senators from the States comprising it to stand in their places here and vote "yea" time and time again on every river and harbor bill, on every bill to support the Navy, on every other bill that affects other parts of the country when, as a matter of fact, their own part gets nothing at all, and is sent home hungry and stripped and naked whenever it knocks at the door of the Treasury of the United States, through Congress, and asks for appropriations in aid of meritorious, beneficial, and practical purposes. How long are they to ask for bread and receive a stone? Not as a threat, but as a prediction, I say the time will not be long.

Mr. President, the Western country receives the benefits of protective tariff legislation on a few items—perhaps three or four in one State, half a dozen in another, and ten or twelve in another. But it is called upon to do its share in supporting a protective tariff upon some four or five thousand articles in each of the New England and Middle States. We do this willingly and cheerfully as we willingly and cheerfully pay our part of every appropriation made by Congress.

And in asking this appropriation we do not ask it to establish a precedent, so that we may have recognition on the river and harbor bill and then follow the usual custom of debauchery, of building up and inordinately adding to the amount of this appropriation every subsequent year. We simply ask that the Government may build two or three reservoirs—models, if you please—to demonstrate what may be accomplished by such works. In appearing before the Commerce Committee I want to say—and I know they will bear me out in my statement—I asked appropriations for no particular location and no particular State.

I said that if they could leave out the State I represent and find a better locality elsewhere, they could do so. I simply wanted to prove that there was or was not merit in the proposition of reservoiring water. The committee put on one reservoir that had been provided for through a survey made by authority of a clause in the river and harbor bill of 1896 providing the small appropriation of $5,000 for the examination of sites by the War Department, and report upon the practicability and desirability of constructing reservoirs necessary for storage and utilization of water and to reenforce the flow of streams. They put on another reservoir project surveyed by the Geological Survey. They put on a third which had been given attention and examined both by officers of the War Department and the Interior Department.

We want to demonstrate just what others want to demonstrate in respect to any industry—the feasibility of our model, if you please—before we commence to manufacture the article in great numbers. In other words, applying it to mining, we want a mill-run test and not an analysis. We know what water will do. We know what we can do with reservoirs in a small way. We want to know what it will cost to actually build and put in operation and use a reservoir that can be filled at one time of the year and emptied at another.

We want to know whether the rocks and soil underlying the reservoir will retain and hold the water from the flood time until the time of drought. We want to know what the action of the water and the wind may be upon the earth work, embankment, and masonry walls, and how they will stand. We want to know what the evaporation will be throughout the year. We want to know the quantity of water we can actually discharge after husbanding it in flood time, and the effect upon the streams at low water.

Mr. President, we are not asking this as individuals. We are not asking it because it does us good individually or as States. We are not asking that anything unreasonable shall be given us. It is not unreasonable to ask the United States to do one thing or the other with its lands—either improve them herself or make laws whereby States or individuals can improve them. The United States, under the present system of land laws, is in the position of the dog in the manger. Laws made for settlement of land in humid sections are inapplicable in arid sections. Under the present laws the land lies there, nearly 700,000,000 acres.

The waters run on by it every year, and it is beyond the possibility of individual effort and it is not practicable under the law for the States to proceed in the work of getting the water from the streams onto the land without aid. We simply ask the Government to husband the water, to apply it to its own land, apply the cost to it, and let us have a settlement wherein and whereby full reimbursement can be had. If it were possible we would say to the United States, "Take your land up and move it away." But there we all are.

This is no new matter with those of us who come from those States. As long ago as the time when Jefferson Davis was an engineer officer and actually in the service he reported that it was entirely feasible, by a system of reservoirs at the head waters of the streams, to do away with the overflow of the Lower Mississippi River and the Missouri; and I fail to see why, in a river and harbor bill, if you give it out as a principle that you can take water off from land under the river and harbor bills you can not as consistently provide for putting water on the land. And why do you take it off the land? Why, to improve the land, of course.

You have appropriated hundreds of thousands of dollars—yes, many millions of dollars—in this river and harbor bill, and in every river and harbor bill that has preceded it, for the sole purpose of taking water off from land, so that the land may be productive. It seems to me if it is legitimate to take water off of land to make it productive in the Southern States, it is just as legitimate to put water onto land to make it productive in the Northern States. In the latter we have this advantage, that when you take the water off the land in the Southern States and make the land from which you take it valuable, that is the only good that you effect with it. On the other hand, when we put water on the land to make it fertile in the high northern arid country we are also removing the cause of the floods in the lower country.

We are, by reservoiring the water and holding it back and fructifying land, in the meantime making it unnecessary to drain the land below and to expend millions upon levees and dikes. In conserving water for irrigation purposes we are incidentally protecting the lower river lands from floods and inundations, or, if primarily such reservoirs are built for preventing floods and inundations, we are incidentally aiding irrigation. Build the reservoirs primarily for irrigation or to prevent floods and you accomplish two desirable results, both deserving national aid.

I know there is nothing further I can do or say at this time to remedy the matter or improve the situation confronting us. I can only repeat what I have said before that I consider the action of the House on this measure one of the most monumental exhibitions of vindictiveness and stubbornness that has ever been witnessed in the Congress of the United States.

I thank God that standing out in contrast to the action of the House on this economic question the United States Senate time and time again has stood by and voted with its magnificent Committee on Commerce in support of its honest effort to give encouragement to the weak and struggling in our Western States. Unlike the House, it stands ready to extend the helping hand to those who have shown by their faith and their works they deserve such help.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, I am not going to prolong this discussion. I simply wish to call the attention of the Senate to the very serious opposition that has been exhibited during the present Congress to irrigation. In the Indian appropriation bill there was a proposition to irrigate lands for the Indians and for the whites alike, a very rare location, where a hundred or a hundred and fifty thousand acres of very valuable land, the best in the world, could have been brought under cultivation. It was beaten on the ground that it might be an entering wedge to commit the Government. The Government of the United States would undoubtedly have got back more than it expended in the enhanced value of the land. The Indians would have been provided for.

Here it comes again. It seems that it is desired to have a demonstration on the part of some people in the East of ill will to the West. It looks like that. It is not all the people of the East. I incorporated in my speech extracts from papers from every State in the Union, showing a kindly sentiment to do anything that might reasonably be done. There is no doubt that this amendment for the irrigation of these lands for the Indians and the whites alike would have been adopted if it had not been for the intimation that the East was favorable to irrigation. You put it in your platform and in your papers that you are in favor of irrigation.

I do not believe the sentiment exhibited by the action of the other House in regard to irrigation at this session is the sentiment of the country. I know it is not, if you take the whole press of the country into account, and if you admit that it expresses public opinion. I do not believe it is the sentiment, and I do not want it to go out West that the people of the East are governed by a spirit of hostility to this movement. I do not believe the people are, although these votes might indicate it.

[Mr. BUTLER addressed the Senate. See Appendix.]

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, I do not feel as if I ought to take further time of my colleagues on this matter. I believe the conferees representing the Senate and the committee of which I have the honor to be a member have done all that could reasonably be expected of them to secure favorable action upon one of the amendments which I have offered.

I feel that a great injustice has been done to several hundred people who have put their money into the enterprise. It is admitted that the Government has taken their property. I am informed that in the other Chamber some members of the conference committee stated that the claim was perfectly just, perfectly equitable; that the Government had taken this property and was using it and improving it for Government purposes. I call the attention of the Senate to the contract originally made by the act itself, under and by which the Government reserved the right to take it, and saying to the stockholders of this stock company that they would take it at its actual value to the Government.

I have shown to my colleagues that there was a great and a serious loss; that an unfriendly engineer made an estimate of about one-third, and that the committee finally, as a compromise, reduced it one-third, and now I am informed that at least one member of the conference takes the position that rather than pay for what the Government has already taken from my constituents he would rather see this river and harbor bill defeated. I can hardly believe that one in charge of the bill at the other end of the Capitol could have that sentiment. However, the course of the conference seems to indicate that that is probably his position.

It is exceedingly unfortunate that I should be placed here within six hours of the end of the session, where I can not present fairly before a committee and before the Senate the merits of the amendment which has been lost in conference, if the motion prevails that is offered by the Senator from Minnesota. It is not pleasant to be put in a position to abandon a fight or stand, like a dog in a manger, and say: "If I can not have what my constituents need and deserve, I shall refuse the right of others to have anything under this bill." I do not propose to take that position. I never have taken it here, and I do not propose to begin now.

I am glad to have had even this opportunity to explain the merits. I believe if this measure could have been considered at the long session, and a fair and full discussion had, there would have been no reason at this time for the Senate conferees to abandon the amendment which they very properly presented and so fairly fought for.

I have, therefore, Mr. President, after conferring with my colleague from my State, no desire to prolong the discussion upon this matter, and I have no desire to oppose the motion made by the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President, I have a few words to add to the proceedings of this experience meeting. Early in the session to-night I made a request of some member of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to explain why it was that a resolution reported by the Committee on Public Lands and sent to that committee had not been reported back in some form or other. Up to the present time I have failed to get a reply from any member of that committee.

Now, Mr. President, I desire to say briefly that the information which has come to the Committee on Public Lands in regard to the conduct of the public-land system in the Territory of Hawaii—I was about to say is a little less than scandalous, but I will say that it presents a very interesting situation. The Committee on Public Lands of the Senate, dealing with public-land questions constantly, must necessarily be advised on that subject. That committee is overrun with communications, complaints, etc., from the people of Hawaii in regard to the conduct of the public-land system of that Territory.

I have conferred with the Department of the Interior on the subject and addressed the Secretary a letter, which he referred to the Commissioner of the General Land Office. Both of those officials replied to the committee to the effect that they know nothing whatever in regard to the public-land system of the Territory of Hawaii, and the Secretary of the Interior urged that a committee of one or the other branch of Congress should visit that island and ascertain the true situation in regard to the public-land system there. Upon that I offered a resolution, which was agreed to by the Committee on Public Lands, having jurisdiction of these questions and being familiar with the subject. The resolution was read, referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, and that committee, which I do not care to criticise, have deemed it best not to say anything about it, but to allow it to be smothered there.

Now, Mr. President, I say this in justice to the Committee on Public Lands. As its chairman I was authorized to report that resolution and I have urged that we get action upon it. Personally I do not want to go to Hawaii to investigate the public-land system of that Territory, or for any other purpose. I have other engagements for the coming summer. But I deem it a public duty for some member or members of the Senate to go to those islands and make an investigation and inquiry into the system of public lands prevailing there, because there is not a Senator here who can get one particle of information from the Secretary of the Interior, for the reason that he has no information to give on that subject. I have the documents here in my desk from the Secretary of the Interior to show that he is totally ignorant of what is going on in those islands to-day with respect to the public lands, which are to all intents and purposes under a foreign jurisdiction.

Mr. President, they have in the Territory of Hawaii—and it is a Territory the same as Arizona, the same as New Mexico, the same as Oklahoma—about 2,000,000 acres of public land, about 1,000,000 acres of it the very best agricultural land. Those lands are to day totally in the hands of the sugar planters, and as I believe, and as the members of my committee believe, the Territorial officers there who have the control of these public lands are likewise in the hands of the sugar planters. I say, Mr. President, there should be some investigation of this subject, and it is the duty of the members of this body or the members of the other House to make such investigation.

With these statements I wash my hands of the affair, and the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate may take the responsibility.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President, I know it is an ungrateful task at this early hour in the morning, after a night session, to say anything upon any measure, but I believe it to be a duty which I owe to myself and my constituency to say a word or two upon this bill.

I shall find no fault with the managers of the conference of this measure upon the part of the Senate, because I believe that so far as they were concerned they did the best they could, under the circumstances, to cut down objectionable appropriations and make the bill more acceptable to the people of the country. It was due to their efforts that the bill was cut down from $59,000,000 to $50,000,000.

Mr. NELSON. To $49,000,000.

Mr. WELLINGTON. To $49,000,000. The amount was $50,000,000, as stated in the report.

Mr. NELSON. It was reduced to $49,000,000 in conference. It was cut down $1,000,000 in conference.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I stand corrected. They cut down the bill $10,000,000. That is greatly to their credit, because, as we look around and about us year after year, we see that the expenses of the Government are constantly increased. Year after year we see in every Department of the Government increasing figures for carrying on that Department. And we have reached the high-water limit in this Congress, where the appropriations will be anywhere from $750,000,000 to $800,000,000.

A few years ago, I remember, there went up in this country the voice of the people protesting against the billion-dollar Congress. We have far exceeded that. This Congress has expended more than $1,500,000,000 for the various departments of our Government. This disagreeable fact makes it necessary that some one should look about and endeavor to cut down governmental expenses and to bring economy, if it be possible, into all branches of the Administration.

It may be said that a great many of the items of these increased appropriations of the present Congress are made necessary by the enormous expenditures which are chargeable to our foreign wars and the consequent augmentation of our Army any Navy. With that view I feel compelled to disagree. I do not believe that it was necessary to have war with Spain, and the slaughter of the Filipinos is still less defensible.

I do not believe that it is necessary to increase our Army, as we have done, to four times the number that was found sufficient previous to the late war, nor do I favor the transformation of the volunteer into the regular soldier. Further, I disapprove the increase of our Navy by the building of great hulks, which have already been proven worthless by the fact that our own shot and torpedo boats can puncture and destroy them.

But be that as it may, the fact is patent to everyone here that expenditures are increasing enormously, and that therefore appropriations are going upward as well.

I give this note of warning to the Senate of the United States, and to the House of Representatives now assembled, that the people will not longer submit to this sort of unwarranted increase. There must be a day of accounting and reckoning. They will call upon us, their representatives and servants, and demand to know why it is that they must assume the ever-increasing burdens of taxation, and why we have added to the appropriations by hundreds of millions of dollars when the actual necessity for so doing is not apparent. Therefore I commend, first, the committee, and then the conferees upon the part of the Senate. They have doubtless worked faithfully and honestly.

I am opposed to this bill in toto, because I believe it to be the very worst of its kind and character that has ever been attempted to be passed by any Congress—and there have been bad bills of this kind and character before. I can remember when a river and harbor bill was passed some years ago, and the people rose up against the Congress which enacted it, and defeated for reelection perhaps a hundred members of the legislative body that had engaged in that measure. But this bill is worse than its prototype of former years.

It goes far beyond the limits then set. I do not propose to favor the measure because, perchance, there are in this river and harbor bill some items that were asked for by the people of my State. I did not ask for the items that are in the bill for the benefit of our people, because I knew from the beginning that I would vote against it if given an opportunity. Unfortunately, during the time in which this bill was reported in the Senate and hastily put upon its passage I was absent by reason of illness and was prevented at that stage from opposing it.

It is for that reason that I have risen in this morning hour to sound the note of warning to you, to tell you that the people will not forever stand silently by and see this reckless, this wasteful expenditure of their money. It is a measure that can not be defended by Congress. It is a measure that should be defeated by Congress, and I hope we shall be able to defeat it.

Upon what do we base this theory that it is necessary for the General Government to go out and improve the harbors and the rivers and the creeks and the attenuated streams that are found throughout the country? Upon what principle do you do it? Upon the great principle asserted by Henry Clay, the illustrious commoner, many, many years ago.

His idea of the development of the vast resources of our country was that we Americans should build up America and develop the vast resources of our country by pressing forward to the westward, by using every force that we could command in this endeavor. For that reason he said we must have internal improvements. The first internal improvement that was given to the country was the great national road. That was before the coming of the steamboats. It was before the coming of the steam railroad and the still later electric railway.

They first endeavored to open up the great West by the national road. That was a great measure of internal improvement. It was well that it should be done. It did not belong to one little locality or to one State. It went through numbers of States, and its great object was to facilitate transportation and advance the development and settlement of our great country, then in its infancy. It was intended to send over the Allegheny Mountains the great stream of dauntless settlers to the westward, and it did so. This was the first great measure of internal improvement by the National Government.

But attention was next directed to the improvement of waterways. Harbors were enlarged, great rivers, deemed useful in commerce and trade, were improved by widening and making deeper their channels, and later came the building of canals. In these works the General Government aided.

Then came the era of railroads, but there the Government stopped. The Government built no railroads. That was left to private enterprise and to private capital. Yet the great system of railroads which, with its splendid network of lines, now extends over our land was built, and following that came the wonderful development of electric power, utilized and employed in transportation. I was never more impressed with the history of the progress made in this line of advancement than the other day, when, upon my journey homeward, I looked out upon the scene before me. Upon my left ran the waters of the Potomac, the river which the Potomac Company attempted to make a waterway to the Allegheny Mountains, as suggested by General Washington.

I then saw, to my right hand, the great national road, built under the auspices of Clay. I saw between them the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal; and running parallel with it the steam railway; and beyond, the electric railway, the latest improvement.

Before me was the story of a century. Since the beginning of the scheme of internal improvement there has been a change in the conditions of our country; and there ought to be, and there must be transformation in the country's policy. There is no need to expend public money on attenuated streams in West Virginia, or Wyoming, or Maryland, or Florida, or California, under pretense of internal improvement, as attempted in this bill. It is unconstitutional, for it was not contemplated to better purely local streams.

The idea of expending vast sums of money for the improvement of insignificant streams, such as those cited and noted, one after the other, by the Senator from Montana, in his masterly address, makes the scheme laughable and ridiculous. Sir, the time for it has passed by, because instead of benefiting the country by such attempts, the system has become a stench in the nostrils of honest people. The bill before us is a bill of jobs.

It is a bill of big and little steals, in which one man helps the other in looting the Treasury. No man can gainsay this statement. You know the bill is built upon the fact that State after State is provided for by an appropriation; that each State receives something by which its representatives in the House and the Senate are expected to stand up and vote for the whole measure. Forty States receive consideration; some in large, others in small amounts.

Take my own State. As I said in the beginning, I did not ask for a single dollar. I did not believe it was right to do it when I had determined to vote against the bill. I refused to go before the Committee on Commerce. Yet there are appropriations there for Maryland, and some of them I believe to be just and fair and honest, and possibly for the good and advancement of those communities for the harbors and waters of which appropriations are made. But rather than vote for this bill I will permit the State to lose these appropriations, because in my heart and soul I do not believe that it is a just bill, and I for one will vote against it.

As I said, this scheme for the development of our country originated in the mind of the great commoner. He put the twin doctrines of internal improvement and a protective tariff together. Both are good in their way, but you can go beyond the true line. You can by American protection kill foreign competition, and that is good; but the original idea was that by so doing you would build up in this country a competition of our own, and that it would be American competition.

However, the latest developments have shown in all the ramifications of trade that you have killed off the foreign competitor, but the American manufacturers combine together and the great aggregation and amalgamation of capital destroy home competition and create in the country a monopoly. So it is that instead of being a benefit it becomes poisonous to the national system and ruins the classes intended to be benefited.

There are other ways of internal improvements beyond the river and harbor, and in this bill the most meritorious items, to my mind, are those that go toward the new plan—that of irrigation for our arid lands. A great Republican has said that the grandest thing the American citizen can do for the material development of his country is to go out into the arid States and there, by his brain and arm and brawn and muscle, let loose the water upon the sand and make that live which before was dead.

This bill attempted to do that. It attempted to give to the State of Wyoming some water foundations—reservoirs—something by which they could contain their water there until the proper season came and then divide it and distribute it, and call forth life from what was dead. That I have counted to be a meritorious measure, and if anything would have convinced me that I should vote for the measure, that would have been a strong reason.

But, sir, this measure will not do as it now stands. You give to Ohio $5,000,000 for the development of her harbors and her streams, but you can not give to Wyoming three or four hundred thousand dollars for the development of her arid land. In the reclamation and quickening of the vast body of arid land lies a great future for the country.

Instead of turning your attention to the conquest of the Filipinos, to the subjugation of the Cubans, to the maltreatment of the Porto Ricans, let them alone, let them have the right to enjoy that which we have—liberty, freedom, and self-government, and turn your attention to the vast empire that lies to the westward. Do what that great Republican said. Let all your vigor and your attention, your brain and your muscle, be turned in the direction of irrigation. It will pay abundantly to make out of the wilderness an oasis that shall cover the whole desert.

Now, sir, I will not further go into details of this measure, except that as there was reference made to my own State, I will cite those items that are in the bill.

One of the largest is that of Curtis Bay Channel, Baltimore Harbor, $50,000, and a contract of $146,000, which would make about $200,000 in all. So far as that is concerned, if this policy of internal improvement is to be honestly carried out, I believe here is an honest item.

The great city of Baltimore, over yonder in my native State, is the metropolis of the South. It has water advantages that few cities have. It has safe harbors. It lies yonder where ships can go out to all parts of the world; and if there is any harbor in this country that should have assistance, that should be deepened and widened, it is the harbor of Baltimore.

Then the other item that I see here is improving Rock Hall Harbor, Maryland, in accordance with the estimate, $5,000. Rock Hall is down on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, upon the Chesapeake Bay, and it is a place where a safe harbor can be made. It is a place that already commands commerce, and there is undoubtedly merit in the proposition for its benefit.

And so it is with the harbor of Queenstown, as also Claiborne Harbor. My friend the honorable Senator from Montana said he had not heard of Claiborne Harbor. I am sure he has reconsidered that. On his journey to Ocean City he entered this port. Maryland, one of the earliest settled of the original States, with her sister colony, Virginia, had many disturbances and troubles, and Claiborne is the one great name that remains there as the disturber of the peace. Therefore, as the name was ever in their remembrance, the inhabitants of the section named it Claiborne Harbor.

It is a place that is growing in importance every day. But, sir, local benefit must give way to the general good. These appropriations have merit, but they are bound up with iniquitous measures, and I will vote against this bill with these items included. Rather than see the country robbed out of the major portion of the $50,000,000, I will see these appropriations for my State buried with the dead body of this bill, which I will aid in defeating.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I do not desire to be considered ungracious or unkind or inconsiderate. The cordial treatment I have received for six years in this Chamber, the uniform kindness and courtesy extended to me, impels me strongly and irresistibly to yield in kindness to my fellow-Senators. Nothing but a sense of duty in connection with this measure could impel me to offer any further objection to its passage. I feel now that a public service will be performed in preventing this bill from becoming a law.

I do not feel warranted in speaking for any other Senator, but I do feel justified in saying that, in my humble judgment, confronted this morning with the appropriation of $50,000,000 for such items as I took the pains to recapitulate last night, there are few Senators in this Chamber who do not falter, and there are many who would openly, vigorously, and unreservedly oppose the bill were it not for the pernicious manner in which the bill itself is framed. Senators feel compelled to stand mute because of local interests that this bill is calculated to serve. It would take time for each Senator to explain in a manner satisfactory to his constituents the reasons for his general opposition to the bill. In each and every locality, however unworthy in itself the project may be, the neighbors round about, who furnish supplies for the men at work, who furnish the labor, who execute the project, feel that the project has some merit; and, however small it may be, the Senator from the State is supposed to have been in some sense derelict in his duty, is supposed to have in some measure failed to comprehend the public interest and the interest of the community in opposing such a bill.

Mr. President, the hours are fast passing. The Senate Chamber must be prepared for the ceremonies to occur here at the hour of 12 o'clock. Senators are weary and anxious to procure some little rest before the fatigues of the day incident to the ceremonies to follow; and I wish to say now that it is probably as prudent for those who have this bill in charge to consent to a recess to such hour as will enable the Senate to dispose of the routine business, which must be transacted before the reassembling of the Senate at the hour of 12 o'clock. I should be glad to yield for a motion to take a recess, but for no other purpose. [A pause.] I do not wish to make that motion, and if the Senate does not care to take a recess, I shall be glad to proceed.

Before going forward and addressing myself to the merits of this question, I wish to briefly call the attention of the Committee on Contingent Expenses to the resolution referred to by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH].

We had considerable declamation here some days ago relative to public lands in the Philippine Islands. Most stringent restrictions were placed upon the proposed civil government there with reference to the disposition of those lands and the timber growing upon them, yet the public lands of the Hawaiian Islands are in a much more satisfactory condition than would be the public lands in the Philippine Islands under the local government to be established there.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. PETTUS. I ask the Senator if he will allow me to make a request?

Mr. CARTER. I will yield temporarily for that purpose.

Mr. PETTUS. I am not going to do anything more than to make a request.

Mr. CARTER. Very well.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, we have a long day's work before us. We are almost in a condition where we might take a recess for a few minutes, and I appeal to the Senator from Montana to allow us to have a half a minute's rest before we commence the new day.

Mr. CARTER. I have suggested to the Senate that it would be well to take a recess until 10.30 o'clock to give that rest to the Senate.

Under the joint resolution to provide for the annexing of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States, approved July 7, 1898——

Mr. NELSON. If the Senator from Montana will allow us a chance to vote on the bill, then we shall take a recess. I ask the Senator from Montana to let us vote, and then we can take a recess, as he suggests.

Mr. CARTER. I do not wish the Senator from Minnesota to misunderstand the purpose of the recess which I proposed.

I do not think this bill ought to become a law. That is a radical and unqualified statement; and, so believing, I shall do what lies in my power to prevent the passage of this bill between now and the hour of 12 o'clock. The bill will pass if my strength fails me to such an extent that I can not longer occupy this floor; and I am in a pretty fair state of health. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, the joint resolution to which I have referred provided:

> The existing laws of the United States relative to public lands shall not apply to such lands in the Hawaiian Islands, but the Congress of the United States shall enact special laws for their management and disposition: Provided, That all revenue from or proceeds of the same, except as regards such part thereof as may be used or occupied for the civil, military, or naval purposes of the United States, or may be assigned for the use of the local government, shall be used solely for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands for educational and other public purposes.

It will be perceived that that joint resolution left all matters relating to the disposition of public lands in Hawaii to special legislation by Congress. Congress discharged its trust in that behalf under the terms of an act which organized a civil government for the Hawaiian Islands, as found in chapter 339 of the Session Laws of 1899–1900, entitled "An act to provide a government for the Territory of Hawaii." That act in section 73 provides:

> That the laws of Hawaii relating to public lands, the settlement of boundaries, and the issuance of patents on land-commission awards, except as changed by this act, shall continue in force until Congress shall otherwise provide.

That left in force the Hawaiian act of 1895. I read now from section 17, on page 9, of the pamphlet containing the law, a portion of part 4, relating to public lands:

SEC. 17. The commissioners may, with the consent of the executive council, sell public lands not under lease, in parcels of not over 1,000 acres, at public auction for cash. Upon any such sale and the payment of the full consideration therefor, a land patent shall be issued to the purchaser.

And they may, with such consent—

That is, of the executive council—

sell public lands not under lease, in parcels of not over 600 acres, at public auction, upon part credit and part cash, and deliver possession under an agreement of sale containing conditions of residence on or improvements of the premises sold, or of payment by installments or otherwise of the purchase price, or all or any of such conditions.

Which agreement shall entitle the purchaser to a land patent of the premises upon the due performance of its conditions.

The commissioners shall have authority to fix any upset price for all such sales for cash or part credit and part cash.

All such sales shall be held in Honolulu, or in the district where the land to be sold is situated. Any person designated by the commissioners may act as auctioneer at such sales without taking out an auctioneer's license.

Provided, however, That land patents may be issued in exchange for deeds of private land or by way of compromise upon the recommendation of the Commissioners and with the approval of the executive council without an auction sale: And Provided further, That the President may, in his discretion, upon such recommendation and approval, execute quit-claim deeds for perfecting the titles of private lands where such titles are purely equitable or where such lands are suffering under defective titles, or in cases of claims to use of lands upon legal or equitable grounds.

In that country of limited area it will be perceived that public lands are being sold by the commissioners at public sale in tracts of not over 1,000 acres, and with the consent of the commissioners or the council lands are sold that are not under lease in parcels of not over 600 acres.

We hesitated, Mr. President, to extend the homestead laws to the Hawaiian Islands because 160 acres of land, allowed by the homestead law of the United States, was deemed too large a tract to be sold in those islands of limited area and dense population. Yet under a law of Congress, which we approved, because the Hawaiian act of 1895 becomes the act of Congress in this behalf, and under the approval of Congress, tracts of land are being sold in Hawaii at public auction for cash 1,000 acres in extent, or 600 acres under certain other conditions. The natural consequence of this situation is that the average man in Hawaii is deprived of the privilege which every citizen of the United States on the mainland enjoys, of going upon the public domain, improving a tract of land, and making his home thereon. These tracts are put up at public auction and sold for cash.

I wish to say to the Senator from Arkansas, who certainly disapproved in the most emphatic terms of the proposition to allow the public lands of the Philippines to be disposed of under a civil government, that this condition of affairs in the Hawaiian Islands, now in operation under force of Congressional enactment, is leading to the complete, and inevitably leads to the complete monopoly of the public lands of that country by the sugar-planting monopoly having its home in the States, and principally upon the west coast.

If on our own extensive public domain on the mainland it should be made to appear that by any chance a law had crept upon the statute books allowing a thousand acres of land to be sold in a body for cash, without any condition of settlement attached to it, Congress would, with as much speed as possible, repeal the law and remedy the evil. Yet when called upon to permit a committee of the Senate to inquire into the operations of this law, so repugnant to our own theories relative to the public domain, the expense is consulted, and in the meantime the sugar trust proceeds to purchase whatever is of any value in the Hawaiian Islands, to the exclusion of the natives and such of our citizens as may go there without the means to attend these sales and make purchases.

I do not know upon what theory those who oppose the granting or selling or disposition of lands in the Philippines can stand idly by and refuse to interfere in this scheme of land monopoly of the Hawaiian Islands. Since the old Oregon donation act, which only gave 640 acres of land to a settler, there has been nothing approaching this system of wholesale distribution of lands in large bodies to the people attending the sale who are apt to have the most money. I desire to put these statutes in the RECORD of to-day, to the end that the observations of the Senator from North Dakota, relative to his resolution providing for an investigation, may be thoroughly and clearly understood.

Now, sir, as to the bill. It consists of 135 pages. It is accompanied by a report of 423 pages. It appropriates, in round numbers, $50,000,000. Numerous items appear upon each page. The bill has been prepared at the short session of Congress. We will assume, for a more direct understanding of the procedure, that the bill should pass within five minutes. What opportunity, I pray you tell me, can the President of the United States have to inspect this bill with a view to determining how he may properly exercise his part in this legislation? The bill would be enrolled and passed up for his signature shortly before 12 o'clock noon to-day. He can not read it. It will be impossible for him to examine the report, and he therefore must practically abdicate his function in the legislation, except the formal work of attaching his signature.

The bill passed this body with its 135 pages and $50,000,000 in one afternoon, with scarcely two dozen Senators present when it was read. During the evening I took occasion to call attention to some of its provisions, and the Senate was amused at the ridiculous features of the bill as disclosed by a mere reading of the report on the respective items. A Senator told me an hour ago that there were items in this bill so much more ridiculous than those referred to that they would be entitled to a place in a comic almanac—items not referred to by me at all—as, for instance, as to one item said to be in this report. The engineer who inspected the proposed improvement is alleged to have stated that the only way to improve the stream was to cut down all the brush along its banks, pull out the snags, and when the river went dry to pick up the logs in the bottom, pile them, and burn them, and having done that to just put a dam at the lower end of the river, sink an artesian well, and fill the place with water. [Laughter.] I do not know that that is in this report; but I have been informed that something in substance such as I have stated was read in the other Chamber in connection with the consideration of this bill.

As a sample of some of the things that were not read this evening, I will call attention to Trinity River in Texas, and let us see what the Trinity River is. There is quite a handsome appropriation for Trinity River—$12,500 being provided for that stream.

This stream discharges into Galveston Bay through several mouths or passes.

I suppose, a sort of delta at the mouth of the river—

Opposite each of these a bar existed, over which there was a depth of but 3.5 feet at mean low tide, which was not sufficient for purposes of navigation, at least 5 feet of water being required.

Now, let us see about the matter. We start there with 3 feet. We had one place this afternoon with only 1 foot to start with, but this has 3 feet and 5 inches!

The improvement of this stream has been limited to that portion lying between the mouth and Liberty, at the head of tide water, a distance of 39 miles.

The project adopted for this improvement on June 18, 1878, consisted in the removal of snags from the river below Liberty and in dredging a channel 80 feet wide by 6 feet deep across the bar at the mouth of the pass then in use by vessels. The estimated cost of the work was $22,581.40. On May 4, 1889, an amended project was adopted. It contemplated the erection of two parallel jetties at the mouth known as the Middle Pass, placed about 275 feet apart and extending about 7,750 feet into Galveston Bay; also in closing the other two principal passes by submerged dams, the object being to create and maintain a channel 6 feet deep at mean low tide at the mouth of the river.

Now, mark.

The revised cost of the improvement was placed at $89,500.

The amount expended on this improvement to the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, was $69,444.76.

At that date the west jetty had been completed, its length being 7,359 feet, and a channel 100 feet wide by 5 feet deep had been secured at the mouth of the river.

Owing to rises in the river twice during the fiscal year, log jams have had to be removed from the Middle Pass of the river and once from Browns Pass, to enable boats to go up the river. The cost of removing these jams was $941.57.

Work done during the fiscal year was limited, for the reason that there was sufficient depth of water on the bar at the mouth to accommodate all vessels heretofore navigating the river.

By act of Congress approved March 3, 1899, an appropriation was made for the construction of a dredge boat and snagging outfit in connection with the improvement of Brazos River between Velasco and Richmond, West Galveston Bay Channel, Double Bayou, and the mouths of adjacent streams, which, by the law, will be available for use on the Trinity River.

With the $7,000 appropriated by river and harbor act approved March 3, 1899, a survey was made from Dallas, Tex., to the mouth, and a log jam at Browns Pass removed. The report upon the survey is printed in House Doc. No. 409, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session; also in Report of Engineers for 1900, Part IV, page 2318 et seq.

The following is from the letter of the Chief of Engineers transmitting the report of the engineer in charge of the survey:

"The length of the river from its mouth to Dallas is 511 miles, and Captain Riché states that for the proper improvement of the river it will first be necessary to cut down and remove all timber along the banks which would be likely to be washed into the river in times of flood, to remove by burning during low water all drift that has collected in the bed of the stream, and to remove all snags from the stream, which work would give a clean river from Dallas to the mouth, making it possible for light-draft steamers to traverse the entire distance at high water, and for intermittent navigation; but by canalizing the river by means of locks and dams, with the addition of an artificial water supply in the upper reaches of the river, to be obtained by storing surplus water during the wet season, or by sinking additional artesian wells"—

Here is the very same statement—

"or by a combination of the two methods, it will be possible to obtain a navigation which will be continuous at all seasons, except possibly for a short period during years of excessive drought.

"Captain Riché considers the improvement of the river for a 4-foot navigation from Dallas to its mouth not only advisable, but urgently necessary; and he presents a project for improvement to that depth in the manner indicated above, the estimated cost being—

For cleaning the river	$500,000
For 37 locks and movable dams	3,175,000
For artificial water supply	200,000
For bank protection	100,000
For dredging	25,000
Total	4,000,000

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13705) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 4120) to pay Eliza R. Crawford the amount of a United States loan certificate issued in 1779; and

A bill (H. R. 13705) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, does this not really pass belief that we are entering upon a project to spend $4,000,000 of public money, enough to buy over 6,000,000 bushels of wheat in Minnesota, in order to make navigable a stream from which you must first take out the logs in the bottom and burn them, then clean out all the logs on the banks so that they will not roll into the river again and block it?

Mr. WELLINGTON. Swamp navigation.

Mr. CARTER. Swamp navigation. Then, strange, startling, you have not water to run in the river until you dig artesian wells at the head of it. I will stay here until this time to-morrow night, if need be, to prevent that item from going on the statute books of the United States, and I think it is the duty of every Senator in this Chamber, measured by my view, to join me in the effort.

Mr. President, $4,000,000 for Trinity River, starting in at the mouth with 3 feet of water—a river full of logs. Do not fail to remember that the first thing to be done with this river is to burn all the logs or destroy all the logs on the slopes leading down to the river, and, I suppose, cut the timber off, so that other logs will not bother you in the future. When you have done that, of course, you must burn the brush, because the brush might get in the river. Would it not be necessary? Of course.

It is a narrow, crooked little stream evidently, in which logs jam readily. After you have taken the brush off the hillsides and piled them on the logs and burned all the logs on both sides of the stream for 135 miles, you must then start in—no, I believe under the engineer's report you take a rest at that time and wait until the stream goes dry and then burn the logs that you find on the bottom of the stream. As a Senator behind me suggests, they would need about all the water in the stream to get up steam in the boilers. But let me not be understood as overstating this report. Mark the statement of the engineer. He states that—

For the proper improvement of the river it will first be necessary to cut down and remove all timber along the banks which would be likely to be washed into the river in times of flood.

That is one proposition. Second—

To remove, by burning during low water, all drift that has collected in the bed of the stream, and to remove all snags from the stream, which work would give a clean river from Dallas to the mouth, making it possible for light-draft steamers to traverse the entire distance at high water, and for intermittent navigation.

He then proceeds to say:

But by canalizing the river by means of locks and dams, with the addition of an artificial water supply in the upper reaches of the river, to be obtained by storing surplus water during the wet season, or by sinking additional artesian wells—

I assume they have some artesian wells there at present, and yet the stream goes dry—so dry that this engineer thinks we could burn the logs in the bottom of it during the dry season.

A slight computation will show that the $4,000,000 to be spent on this project, upon which we are to enter, would buy I do not know how many pounds of cotton. Cotton is probably worth 10 cents a pound. I do not know what the market price of it is at the present time, but it is easy to compute that it would buy a very large amount of cotton. Hence it will probably take the cotton crop of half a dozen counties in the State of Arkansas to make up the tax that will have to be paid for this foolish and silly enterprise. It will take the wheat crop of a Congressional district in the State of Minnesota. It will keep a good-sized army of working men toiling day in and day out for a year to make the money to pay the taxes to build this trifling, silly improvement.

Mr. President, it is difficult to be patient with an item of this kind. I wish to give due credit to this honorable body. I wish especially to give thanks to the Senate committee for striking out the item of $50,000 appropriated for this river. That was the appropriation to begin the work as it came to this body. The Senate committee cut that item down to $12,500, and the limit was sought to be placed upon it for the aggregate work of $556,657, "exclusive of the amount herein and heretofore appropriated."

It would seem that that limitation of something over a half million dollars would protect the Government. But such is not the case. It would until that amount had been spent, whereupon, with much force, indeed, some one would come up from that district and insist that inasmuch as we had spent more than a half million dollars cutting the logs off the hillside, burning the brush, cleaning up the bed of the stream, burning the logs there in dry time, it was eminently proper that we should follow up this half million dollars with the full amount estimated by the engineer as necessary to accomplish anything at this point.

The half million dollar item here provided would, according to the engineer, barely clean out the river. He says "for cleaning the river, $500,000." When you have spent the $500,000 you will have burned the logs on the bank, and probably you will have burned the logs in the channel of the stream; but the estimate goes on to say that is of no avail. You must have locks and movable dams, or else the $500,000 spent in cleaning the stream will have been utterly wasted. You can not afford to throw away the $500,000. Here you have a great stream, Trinity River, cleaned up, the logs taken from the banks and from the channel of the stream. Then you must have 37 dams, and when you undertake to get the 37 dams you must spend $3,700,000.

After you have the dams erected, you have not anything to put in them. So you must dig artesian wells up at the head of the stream to get some water to fill the space above the dam. Then you have to have a hundred thousand dollars for bank protection—whatever that may mean; then for dredging, $25,000. After we have dug the artesian wells, built the 37 locks, cleaned out the stream, and burned the logs, and have our four millions invested in Trinity River, you will have saddled upon the Government of the United States an everlasting expense in keeping it dredged and keeping the locks in repair. How much is it going to cost each year? On this one item alone this bill should fail.

Let us get down to the mouth of the Brazos River:

Continuing improvement, $30,000.

I suppose that is more of a river. Let us see what the engineer says about it. He says:

The river and harbor act approved March 3, 1899, contains the following item: "Mouth of Brazos River, Texas: For dredging and such other work as may be deemed most effective in the judgment of the Secretary of War in improving and developing the harbor, $85,000: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until the Brazos River Channel and Dock Company shall file with the Secretary of War a transfer to the United States of the jetties and auxiliary works; also a release of all rights and privileges conferred upon said company by its charter or by the act of Congress approved August 9, 1888, to charge or collect tolls for the use and navigation of said river; and the Secretary of War is directed to have an examination made of the mouth of the Brazos and the jetties and report to Congress the estimated cost of extending the jetties one-half mile, and the estimated depth and width of the channel to be obtained by such extension, and the estimated cost of obtaining 20 feet of water and a channel 150 feet wide."

This is a former item approved, and a contract was entered into.

"(a) Estimated cost of extending the jetties one-half mile, $1,100,000, in addition to $165,000 required under existing project for repairing and completing the present jetties, the estimate being based upon the supposition that the extension work can be placed under one contract.

"(b) The extension of the jetties one-half mile would not of itself improve the channel, but if supplemented by dredging and a system of spur dikes to contract the channel to about 440 feet between jetties, estimated to cost $200,000, a channel depth of 20 feet and width of 150 feet could be practically constantly maintained by an expenditure of $30,000 annually.

"(c) Estimated cost of obtaining 20 feet of water and a channel 150 feet wide: (1) By jetty extension, spur dikes, and dredging, $1,300,000, and $30,000 annually for maintenance, or (2) by dredging alone, $375,000, and $40,000 annually for maintenance."

In the opinion of Captain Riché, concurred in by the division engineer, the best method of improvement is by dredging alone.

The report was transmitted to Congress and printed in House Document No. 652, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session; also page 2426, Report of Engineers for 1900.

Now we have Brazos River again. These millions roll up:

BRAZOS RIVER BETWEEN VELASCO AND RICHMOND, TEX.

The Brazos River, Texas, from Richmond to Velasco, flows in a generally southerly direction, the distance between these points being 89 miles. It flows through Fort Bend and Brazoria counties and empties into the Gulf of Mexico about 5 miles below Velasco.

The river and harbor act approved March 3, 1899, provides as follows:

"For the improvement of the Brazos River between Velasco and Richmond, West Galveston Bay Channel, Double Bayou, and the mouths of adjacent streams, $65,000, out of which said sum a suitable dredge and snagging outfit may be provided to carry on said work and to be used on other approved projects on the Texas coast, including streams emptying into the Gulf of Mexico and bays connected therewith.

Heretofore the projects embraced in this improvement have been independent (see improving Brazos River, Texas, between Velasco and Richmond, Annual Report of the Chief of Engineers for 1895, p. 1838 et seq.; improving channel of West Galveston Bay, Annual Report of the Chief of Engineers for 1892, p. 1556 et seq., and improving Double Bayou, Annual Report of the Chief of Engineers for 1898, p. 287 et seq.).

The object of the improvement, in part, is to obtain and maintain a navigable channel depth of from 4 to 6 feet across the bars at the mouths of most of the streams and bayous along the Texas coast by dredging and snagging, the plant to be owned and operated by the United States.

Now, 4 to 6 feet of water. There are a number of these bayous, and for that purpose we start in here with an item of $30,000, and the further item of $400,000 is to be appropriated for the Brazos River Channel and Dock Company, etc., an item which was stricken out in conference, I believe.

The first item of this Brazos River is $30,000. The second item is $50,000, and then there is an amendment providing the sum of $50,000. The $50,000, the $100,000, and the $30,000 are to get 4 feet of water, and the report nowhere shows that the water, when it is procured to the depth of 4 feet, will be of any special value to the country or to the State of Texas. It would certainly be a waste of considerable money from the Treasury of the United States.

Now, passing by Trinity River and the rivers I have just named, we take the Upper White River, in the State of Arkansas. You will find there is very little of merit in it, I think, by reference to the report.

UPPER WHITE RIVER, ARKANSAS.

The original condition of this portion of White River and the previous projects for its improvement are given in the report for White River.

The approved project for this work, based on a report printed in the Annual Report of the Chief of Engineers for 1897, page 1992, contemplates providing slack-water navigation from Batesville to Buffalo Shoals, a distance of 89 miles, by means of 10 fixed dams with concrete locks. The locks are to be 175 feet long between hollow quoins and 36 feet wide, with a lift of about 14 feet, and with a depth of 4 feet on the lower miter sills.

The total estimated cost is $1,600,000, based on having sufficient funds on hand to construct one lock and dam complete each working season.

Up to June 30, 1899, there had been expended on this work $535.79. Plans were in preparation for the first lock, and the survey of pool No. 1 was nearly completed.

During the year ending June 30, 1900, the survey of pool No. 1 was completed and the exact locations of Dams Nos. 1 and 2 determined. Plans have been completed for the locks and dams at sites Nos. 1 and 2. Owing to delay in procuring land at the site of Lock No. 1, below Batesville, construction could not be begun last season. The land was procured in December, 1899, and the plant has been installed, and work upon the cofferdam for Lock No. 1 is well under way.

Here we have a stream without sufficient water in it to float anything. We must put in locks and dams and practically build a canal without any showing here of commerce on the river or anything to indicate why we should appropriate the money. I wish to be entirely correct. Nine thousand tons of material passed over this river in 1899 and 39,000 tons in 1900. The interest on the money invested in this improvement would pay for the entire tonnage, I venture to say, that passes over this river every year.

Mr. President, I submit that no business man, no company or organization conducted upon business principles, would for one moment entertain the idea or thought of investing this large amount of money in the proposed project. It would be deemed utterly ridiculous.

Why not build an electric railway up and down the stream and use what little water there is for generating electricity? You can build the railroad for less than you can build the locks and dredge out the stream; and then it would be of some use to the country through which it passes. If we stopped with the loss of money on the expenditure, it would be one thing; but when the improvements are made they must be maintained. Each and every year, as long as time runs, the Government will be required to invest a certain amount of money to keep the people who make their living out of dredging employed in dredging the channel in the stream and keeping the locks in repair. That certainly can not be a mistake. So White River in Arkansas is about as bad as Trinity River in Texas, although it does not appear from any report that it would be necessary to cut the logs down on both sides of the stream, or to burn the logs in the channel of the stream during the dry time in the summer when the creek runs dry.

Mr. McBRIDE. Where is that river?

Mr. CARTER. I was referring to White River in Arkansas. We have St. Francis River in Arkansas provided for—a very important stream, with some water running through it, and for it we are going to appropriate $8,000. Let us see what the St. Francis River is:

ST. FRANCIS RIVER, ARKANSAS.

This river rises in southern Missouri, flows in a southerly direction, and enters the Mississippi near Helena, Ark.

In its original condition this stream was not navigable at any stage above Lester Landing, between Lester Landing and Marked Tree navigation was possible at high stages only, and below Marked Tree it was difficult at medium stages. Snags and fallen timber were the principal obstructions.

The original project was to improve navigation below Lester Landing by cutting a channel through "The Lake" and clearing the river of obstructions by snagging operations. The present project (adopted October 21, 1884) is to remove drift, logs, and snags from the channel and overhanging timber from the banks from the mouth to Kennett, Mo. (279 miles), and close chutes and sloughs in the "Sunk Lands," so as to make the river navigable at high stages to Kennett, Mo., at medium stages to Marked Tree, and at low stages to a point about 30 miles below Madison, Ark.

The amount expended up to the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, was $58,908.65.

The condition of the river below Marked Tree on June 30, 1899, was good for navigation at a 4-foot stage or over. Above Marked Tree a fair high-water channel had been made through the "Sunk Land."

Operations during the year ending June 30, 1900, consisted of cutting overhanging timber and removing snags from the mouth to 15 miles above Madison, or 85 miles above the mouth. This part of the river was left in good condition.

Now, Mr. President, here we have another proposition to cut down the trees that overhang the banks, trim off the willows, burn off the brush, and take the loose logs far enough back into the interior from the river banks to prevent their falling into this little stream and blocking it up. That process has gone on for a few miles up the river, and we are expected to put about $8,000 more in the continuance of that work for the present season. Of this sum of $8,000 it is provided that—

$1,000 may, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be expended in removing obstructions in L'Anguille River, its tributary, from its mouth to the town of Marianna.

So that $7,000 will be devoted to this brush work along the St. Francis River in Arkansas. This is to get 4 feet of water. There is no commerce about that. There can be no pretense that this is in aid of any national improvement. Yet, Mr. President, we are asked to support this bill which from beginning to end is replete with just this class of items.

Yet, Mr. President, with all these items, lacking in merit to such a degree, we find the strange condition of refusing to provide a small appropriation, which once made will endure, with a view to enhancing the value of the public lands of the United States. I do not believe that the time has come to fully and completely deal with the arid-land question, but, when the time does come, I hope the question will not be dealt with in such a manner as the items herein contained appear to be handled. Let merit be the test; let river and harbor bills fail; let Senators and Members defeat them mercilessly, until such time as a river and harbor bill possessed of actual merit, and that kind of a bill alone, shall be presented for the consideration of Congress.

I do not wish to be understood as casting, or attempting to cast, any reflection upon any committee of Congress, nor upon any member of either body. The committees work conscientiously and faithfully in an effort to perfect a bill of this kind. They are the victims of a vicious system. They work on the bill as the preceding bills were worked upon. Each person having a little project is encouraged with a small appropriation to begin with. The engineers being somewhat good natured, anxious, as the employees of the Government generally are, to extend the scope of their operations, give the best reports they can upon each new project surveyed. It is a very rare thing indeed for an engineer to report on a survey adversely.

And yet with the disposition to do the very best possible to give a good report, we find such statements coming here as the basis of appropriation as this relating to Trinity River, and White River, and the various streams to which I have referred, where, with the most lenient hand, the most considerate judgment in favor of the bill, the engineer, in deference to his sense of duty, is compelled to yield to the country in his report such facts as would, in the judgment of Congress, condemn the project without any sort of reservation.

The engineer who made this report on Trinity River did the best he could to wash the thing through. If his own keen, deliberate judgment had been called for by a private capitalist or by a company intending to work this project for profit or to some advantage, he would, without any qualification, have condemned the project. I think it may be said, and that, too, without any stretch of the imagination, that taking these reports and going through them fairly and impartially from a plain business standpoint, without any reference to getting votes or helping the bill through, this bill would be cut down to $10,000,000. Fifteen million dollars would be the outside limit, cutting off the useless items. Fifteen million dollars will cover every reasonable project outlined in the bill.

Why should the $35,000,000 be thrown away? It might be asked why should any Senator take a stubborn stand upon the bill? I believe that it is the duty of every Senator to take a stand against this bill, and unless that is done these bills will grow from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000, from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000, and in the course of a few years it will be found that aside from any new projects, any new development, any new work, we will have a fixed charge upon the Government for dredging out these useless streams in a vain attempt to utilize and protect the property which we have attempted to bring into existence by the lavish expenditure of money, without rhyme or reason in many cases.

If you will take the $35,000,000 thrown away in the muddy waters of these little streams and build reservoirs in the arid regions of the United States you will bring about conditions which will furnish homes for hundreds and thousands, yea, tens of thousands of deserving American citizens anxious to find homes upon the public domain, and who are unable to do that because unable to provide the capital to reclaim the desert at the beginning. With the $35,000,000 wasted, the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] appealed in vain for a small pittance for experimental work in this direction. The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] appealed in vain.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEAN in the chair). Does the Senator from Montana yield?

Mr. CARTER. Certainly.

Mr. PETTUS. I just wanted to ask the Senator a question. I have been supporting your arid-land notions ever since I have been here. Do you not know that you are making it odious in the eyes of all mankind? How can I go along with a set of men who are conducting themselves in the way that the business of the Senate has been conducted this morning? There must be something radically wrong about it, and all mankind——

Mr. WELLINGTON. I ask the Senator from Alabama what there has been out of the ordinary in the conduct of the Senate here except that there has been confusion upon confusion by Senators who did not occupy the floor. He need not lose his temper because he has been here all night. We have been here, and it does not stand him in hand, and it is not just, and it is not fair, to intimate that there has been conduct in the Senate that has not been proper. There has been nothing done in the Senate, so far as we are concerned, in support of the position we have taken that has not been fair, honest, just, and correct.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, if the price of the reclamation of the desert is to involve such a reckless expenditure of public money as this bill proposes, then the desert will not be reclaimed. The Senator from Wyoming I cited as presenting a meritorious project which was little headed and vigorously opposed. Compared with Trinity River, compared with the appropriations made for the rivers in Alabama, it stands up as a monumental proposition judged by the elements of merit.

I do not think that it is ill-mannered or unjust to the Senate to resist the passage of this bill. I do not believe that the bill can be defended in any school district or any Congressional district or in any State in the Union. You will find some sympathy for it in the immediate localities where the expenditures are to be made; but let me say to the Senators who challenge the conduct of those who oppose this bill that they will falter if confronted with the request to have this report and bill published in their States. I should like to have the Senator from Alabama confronted down in some school district of that State with this Trinity River proposition and inquired of concerning his reasons for supporting it.

Mr. PETTUS. I have never said one word in its support, in any way, shape, or fashion.

Mr. CARTER. The Senator would not, I am quite sure. He would not defend it, yet he blames me for condemning it. Nobody will try to defend the poor item that is about as meritorious as hundreds of other items in the bill.

Mr. PETTUS. The Senator calls on me for an answer. I tell him I have never blamed anybody for their opposition to any bill, not in the slightest degree.

Mr. CARTER. I am thankful to the Senator for that.

Mr. PETTUS. So far as this bill is concerned, I have expressed no opinion about it; but I have an opinion, and a very decided one, when a man holds up a Senate in this fashion on a day when we have to inaugurate a President. I have a decided opinion on that conduct.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I suggested at the beginning of my remarks that it would be desirable and very agreeable to me to take a recess until 10.30 or to such other hour as seemed to the Senate appropriate to the transaction of the routine business preceding the inauguration ceremonies. I would be delighted now to yield to the Senator from Alabama for the purpose of making a motion to that effect, or for asking unanimous consent that the Senate shall stand in recess until 10.30.

But, Mr. President, if the price of my silence is to be the passage of this bill I will not hold my peace. I think I am doing my country a service right now. There is not a solitary one of these projects that will suffer during the coming summer. Every one of the river and harbor improvements possessed of any merit has been taken care of in the sundry civil appropriation bill. That statement may require qualification. There are many meritorious items in this bill, but they do not predominate, in my judgment.

Let the Senate take this question up next December, at the beginning of a long session, a session that will not be terminated by inaugural ceremonies, debate the bill from stem to gudgeon, take the pruning knife and cut these spurious items out without mercy, and compel Senators to stand on this floor and under the sanctity of their official oaths attempt to defend these little items, small in themselves but in the aggregate making up nearly $50,000,000.

Why, Mr. President, if the time has come when we must be silent because we are weary and allow this kind of legislation to go unchallenged, the Government is at the mercy of courtesy, courtesy ever yielding and complaisant, willing to do the nice thing rather than the just thing, willing to yield to the amenities rather than to follow the strict path of duty.

Mr. PETTUS. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question by way of relieving him? I see that he is tired.

Mr. CARTER. I am not very tired.

Mr. PETTUS. Did the Senator ever say one word against this bill until the measure for the relief of arid lands was voted down? Did he ever mention in any way, shape, form, or fashion his opposition to this bill in the Senate?

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I will be perfectly frank with the Senator. I fully expected that this bill would be under consideration in the Senate for two or three days. The day it passed this body I happened to be engaged on the Committee on Appropriations—on a subcommittee, looking after another bill. To my astonishment upon entering the Chamber, not over two hours, I think, after the reading commenced, I learned that the bill had passed. With that I find fault; and the fault I find with the system which permits a thing of that sort. It is in the system of distribution which creates an invidious and commanding influence. With that system I am at war, and until the system is broken down there will not be an honest river and harbor bill prepared.

Mr. President, is it not useful to have some understanding before the country and the Congress as to what will be done in the future with this class of legislation? Conceal it as we may, the fact remains that these small items creep in because Members and Senators importune the committee, and importunity failing, they threaten and combine, and, to use the old-time phrase born in former days, they bulldoze to some extent, and finally force the item in. Sometimes it is expected to cut it out in conference, but if that fails the Government suffers, no community is much benefited, and the wasteful process goes on. Beat these bills time and again, cut them to pieces in debate on the floor. Let it be understood that a proposition lacking merit can not go through on this bill any more than it can go through on the sundry civil or the deficiency bill. When that condition is reached committees can deliberate coolly, logically, patriotically—provide for that which is necessary and refuse to make provision for that which is unnecessary.

For many years I have witnessed the growth of this bill. The country has witnessed it. There need be no mistake about that. This river and harbor bill is known to people in the backwoods counties of every State in the Union as "the pork bill." Men who have never seen a harbor know that there is something wrong about the way this bill is put together. And yet no one is to blame for it any more than we are to blame for the customs which we inherit. But I do think that there ought to be a reformation at some time or some place. This bill will be $75,000,000 next trip. It raised its brazen head to $60,000,000 or thereabouts this time. Through most strenuous efforts the committee of the Senate reduced it a little below the $50,000,000 mark. I should not stand here for one moment in the way of the passage of this bill if its passage was demanded by any public interest whatever.

But the Government, Mr. President, will go on just as well. The Treasury will be $50,000,000 ahead. No one employed need be discharged. The contract work in the river and harbor system of contracts will continue, appropriations having been made in the regular sundry civil appropriation bill. I think that there will be no difficulty with the country. There is no danger whatever of anybody suffering. There may be a few contractors disappointed, but no Senator will be injured in his State if this bill fails to pass.

Surely no one will suffer if the harbor at Stamford, Conn., is not troubled this year with the ten thousand and additional dollars sunk there. Greenwich, Conn., will be quite as well off if they do not get the $14,000. Then Montauk, N. Y., continuing improvement, starting in with 1 foot of water, will be just as well off without the sum of $5,000 which this bill proposes to spend in that stream. For the harbor at Huntington, N. Y., $2,500; the contractors will miss it, but the Government will be in that amount. Here is a little item for improving harbor at Glencoe, N. Y., continuing improvement, $7,000. Glencoe will do quite as well without that money sunk in the harbor up there. It is not demanded by any commercial interest, and no one will suffer except the contractor who will fail to have work there through this season. Let him find employment somewhere else for the time being and give the Government a rest.

I am quite sure that our commerce will be in no sense checked or interfered with if we do not start in to try to make a harbor in the marsh pond at Flushing, where we have 1 foot of water to begin with.

Even my learned friend the Senator from New York [Mr. DEPEW] will not complain very seriously if the harbor at Peekskill, on the Hudson, is not benefited to the extent of $5,000 during this year.

But let me read the list of these harbors to some extent to show that there is scarcely a harbor that anybody ever heard of outside of the immediate neighborhood which is mentioned in this bill:

Improving the harbor at Ogdensburg, N. Y., $150,000.

There is no necessity for that this year.

Improving the harbor at Cape Vincent, continuing improvement—

Fifty-eight thousand dollars in money is to go into that.

Improving harbor at Oswego, N. Y.: Continuing improvement, $48,000.
Improving harbor at Great Sodus Bay, New York: For maintenance, $5,000.
Improving harbor at Little Sodus Bay, New York: For maintenance, $4,000.
Improving harbor at Charlotte, N. Y.: For maintenance, $10,000.
Improving Oak Orchard Harbor, New York: Continuing improvement, $2,000.
Improving harbor at Wilson, N. Y.: For maintenance, $2,500.
Improving Tonawanda Harbor and Niagara River, New York: Continuing improvement, $193,275, including the dredging of Tonawanda Harbor in Erie County.

You have to locate that by reference to the county.

Improving harbor at Dunkirk, N. Y.: For maintenance, $20,000. Improving harbor at Buffalo—

Here is a harbor that probably needs and merits consideration for an improvement, but we only give it $50,000. That will do very little for the harbor at Buffalo, but the commerce of that harbor will go on just the same.

Then:

Improvement of Buffalo Harbor: For extending breakwater south, to be let under contract, not exceeding $200,000.

Improving Lake Erie entrance to Black Rock Harbor and Erie Basin, New York, in accordance with certain House documents, $150,000.

That is an important item.

Improving channel between Staten Island and the New Jersey shore, New York and New Jersey: For maintenance—

But only the sum of $10,000 is provided. That will have very little effect in extending the harbor between Staten Island and the Jersey shore—New York and New Jersey—and of that sum, mark you, $1,000 may be expended on Lemon Creek. So that would leave for New York in this bill only $9,000. Lemon Creek would get $1,000 of that.

Improving Arthur Kill, or Staten Island Sound, from Kill van Kull to Raritan Bay, New York and New Jersey—

In accordance with reports submitted in House documents referred to of the Fifty-sixth Congress—

$50,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Montana to the engineer's report on that subject.

Mr. CARTER. I should be very glad to have the report upon that read, Mr. President, and I think it ought to be read, because certainly I know something of that section, and I do not recall this Kill van Kull country at all; but there is probably some reference to it in the report relative to improving the harbor of Kill van Kull, or Staten Island Sound, from Kill von Kull to Raritan Bay, New York and New Jersey.

MEMORIALS.

Mr. SHOUP. Will the Senator yield to me to present certain memorials?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. CARTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHOUP. I present memorials from the legislature of the State of Idaho, and ask that they may be inserted in the RECORD, and one referred to the Committee on Commerce and the other to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The memorials will be printed in the RECORD and referred as indicated by the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I ask that the memorials may be read. They are memorials from a State legislature, and should be honored by being read in the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I object. Let us have the regular order, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas objects.

Mr. CARTER. I do not wish to raise any objection, but I think it is unusual to refuse the reading of a memorial from a State legislature. I think the uniform practice has been to the contrary.

Mr. WELLINGTON. It would be an indignity upon the legislature of Idaho not to have their memorials read. The rule requires it, and it is right.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I call for the regular order, Mr. President.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Does the Chair refuse to have the memorials of the Idaho legislature read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] has demanded the regular order.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I understand when those memorials were presented they became the regular order, in so far that, under the rule, they should be read to the Senate; and I insist upon their being read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no rule requiring a memorial to be read to the Senate.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I understand from a Senator on my left that one of the memorials is in relation to rivers and harbors, so that it is pertinent to the subject now under consideration.

Mr. President, it seems to me that under all the circumstances the memorials ought to be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] has demanded the regular order.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President, I must appeal from the decision of the Chair upon that ruling.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the appeal of the Senator?

Mr. WELLINGTON. I appeal because, in my opinion, the rule requires the reading. It is due to the legislature of a sovereign Commonwealth in this country that, when it sends a communication to the Senate of the United States, we must do it the honor of having its communication read in full.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator kindly point the Chair to the rule which so prescribes?

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President, upon the insistence of several Senators I will withdraw the appeal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The memorials will be printed in the RECORD and referred as indicated by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHOUP].

The memorials are as follows:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
SECRETARY'S OFFICE, STATE OF IDAHO.

I, C. J. Bassett, secretary of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint memorial No. 5, by Mounce and Triesch, a resolution asking Congress for the opening of the Snake and Columbia rivers to navigation, which was filed in this office the 20th day of February, A. D. 1901, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 25th day of February, A. D. 1901.

[SEAL.]

C. J. BASSETT,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial No. 5, by Mounce and Triesch, asking Congress for the opening of the Snake and Columbia rivers to navigation.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

Your memorialists, the governor and legislature of the State of Idaho, would respectfully represent that a canal around The Dalles-Celilo Rapids of the Columbia River would open up the Columbia and Snake rivers to navigation and promote the settlement and development of the Pacific Northwest, and especially the Columbia River Basin, known as the inland empire, comprising a territory richer in wheat than the Dakotas, already producing over 5,000,000 bushels, and, with an open river to the sea, easily capable of producing 25,000,000 bushels, thereby of itself swelling the present magnificent total of 35,000,000 bushels of the inland empire to 55,000,000; the latter comprising a territory as rich in cattle and horses as Colorado; a territory as rich in choice timber as Michigan in her palmiest days; a territory richer in gold and copper than California or Montana, only awaiting transportation; a territory rich in fruits, rich in coal, rich in silver and lead, rich in lime, marble, and granite.

The products of the Columbia River Basin above The Dalles-Celilo Rapids in 1900 approximate 80,000 carloads, which the railroads frankly admit they have not the facilities for handling. And yet the resources of this section are as yet only beginning to be developed.

The Clearwater country embraces about 6,200,000 acres, including the northeastern corner of Oregon; Asotin County, Wash.; Nez Perces, Latah, and Idaho counties and part of Shoshone County, Idaho. It is drained by the Snake and Clearwater rivers and their tributaries, and its only natural, logical, commercial outlet is by way of the Snake and Columbia rivers to the Pacific Ocean, already navigable from the heart of this territory to the seacoast, excepting only at The Dalles-Celilo Rapids and a few insignificant bowlder obstructions.

The population of this district is fully 50,000 people (while that of the inland empire as a whole to be directly benefited by an open river is 350,000 or more, and the territory is easily capable of supporting a population of 10,000,000 souls).

The agricultural wealth of this territory is of first importance. Its grain belt is estimated to comprise 2,200,000 acres. Its capacity of production of cereals for export is conservatively estimated at 25,000,000 bushels annually. About 700,000 acres of this land were fenced, but only 375,000 acres were cultivated during the year 1900, including 25,000 acres in cultivated grasses, and all classes of hay lands. This leaves 1,500,000 acres classed as first quality of grain lands, which are still unfenced waste. These lands are largely remote from the transportation facilities which alone are required to promote rich annual harvests.

The yield of cereals in the Clearwater country for 1900 is estimated at 5,450,000 bushels of wheat, 1,120,000 bushels of oats and barley, and 284,000 bushels of flax, a total of 6,854,000 bushels. Of this grain nearly 6,000,000 bushels should be exported before the next harvest; this would load over 7,000 cars, and the existing means of transportation are inadequate to move even the crop of this year.

The wheat soils of the plateaus adjacent to the Columbia and Snake rivers are certainly the richest on the continent, crops of 40 to 60 bushels per acre being not uncommon and 30 bushels being an ordinary average for large areas.

Bordering the grain belt are valleys and benches that are adapted to fruit growing and the cultivation of vegetables. This area of fruit land approximates 100,000 acres. The irrigable bottom lands approach 25,000 acres, and the benches and plateaus suited to apples, pears, cherries, prunes, plums, etc., aggregate a very large acreage. The shipments of fruits and vegetables for the year equal 400 carloads, including Upper Snake River. The capacity for the production of tonnage from orchards and gardens is very great, the average, when in full bearing and thorough cultivation, being 1 carload per acre. This industry, however, is, in a measure, still dormant, because it is dependent upon ready market facilities more than almost any other; it must wait for the extension of railroad and steamboat traffic routes. There are, perhaps, 2,000 acres in the district now cultivated to fruit trees which are fast approaching the age from which profitable crops may be anticipated.

The live-stock industry is next to agriculture in importance, measured by the year's returns. There is a record of the shipment of 12,000 head of cattle since January, 1900, valued at $450,000. This cattle industry is increasing. The large herds have been reduced on the ranges, but the raising of cattle on farms and in inclosed pastures has increased in still greater degree. There has been an increase of exports during the year, while the accumulation of stock cattle has increased fully 25 per cent. The limit of the output will not be reached for many years. These rich soils are prolific of a variety of crops suited to economic beef production. The shipments of sheep and hogs from the Lewiston district equal about 55,500 for this year. The flocks on the ranges count up fully 400,000 sheep. The wool shipped and in public and private warehouses amounts to about 2,000,000 pounds, valued at over $200,000.

The record of shipment of horses shows 3,425 head. Although range horses have decreased in the past five years, yet horse breeding is reviving on the farms, with a class of horses much improved over those which roamed the ranges a few years ago. It is believed from information gathered from stockmen that the horses of this district number fully 150,000.

Our timber interests are very important. The famous Idaho white pine belt is along the Clearwater River.

The State holdings of timber land alone amount to 170,000 acres in this belt, and over 100,000 acres have been entered by individuals as homesteads and by scrip for the timber. This land will average as stumpage 10,000 feet to the acre, a grand total of 2,700,000,000 feet of lumber in the Clearwater white pine belt. This vast product awaits transportation to make it valuable. The variety and quality of this timber make its value so high that it will be shipped to the Far East at a profit whenever practicable facilities are provided for its transportation.

The white-pine forests are in proximity to the Clearwater River, which requires only a small outlay to make it navigable for drives and rafts. A yellow-pine timber belt lies along the Grand Ronde River in Oregon and Washington, beginning 15 miles from the mouth of that stream and 40 miles from Lewiston. The Grand Ronde is suitable for log driving without improvement other than the booms for the control of logs afloat. The extent of this yellow-pine forest is fully 250,000 acres, estimated at 1,600,000 feet to the quarter section, a total of 2,500,000 feet of merchantable lumber. This timber is the most available large supply of common timber for the farming districts and the cities of the inland empire. This Grand Ronde pine belt must find a market by the Snake River water route or wait for a railroad from Elgin or Lewiston. These two forests aggregate over 5,200,000,000 feet of white and yellow pine, and in addition there are large quantities of tamarack, cedar, red fir, white fir, and lower grades of pine, covering nearly 3,000,000 acres. There is an almost unlimited amount of the timber, and also of soft woods suitable for paper pulp, and all within easy reach of waterways on which it may be floated to Lewiston as a shipping center.

The vast mining interests of this territory are still largely unproductive for no other reason than the absence of transportation. In extent and superficial values this district is claimed to excel any other mineral belt in the United States. There are now some 7,500 mineral locations with a legal status upon the county records within the district. Every one of these locations records the fact that mineral has been found in place. The universal opinion of experts is that these prospects, while they cover a vast area, present an average surface value greater than the average of any other district in America. Only with favorable transportation advantages can these prospects become profitable, producing mines. The mineral ores must be accessible to reduction works to be mined profitably. The average ores of Cripple Creek, Leadville, and the Coeur d'Alene would be valueless in the bins of any camp in this district. These millions of tons of ores must remain a dormant resource till transportation facilities are extended to the Snake River, Salmon River, and Clearwater River camps.

Until the present year one need of all this interior country has been a sufficient coal supply. This want now promises to be supplied by newly discovered coal measures. Good evidence of a coal vein of very great extent has been revealed within the year. The "blossom" of this vein has been traced across the whole plateau from the Bitter Root Mountains to the Blue Mountains, a distance of over 100 miles. On the Grande Ronde River it has been fairly well demonstrated that coal exists in large quantities and in merchantable quantity. This adds value to our mineral prospects, and also to our farm lands and all other commercial interests.

We can not, however, reap the benefit of this variety of resources without improved transportation facilities. Our ores and coal, our forest, range, farm, garden, and orchard products must be brought together to make them valuable. With the greatest natural wealth of any district in the United States of equal extent, we are held in a state of comparative inactivity by the absence of transportation facilities.

An open waterway to the ocean would so stimulate settlement, development, and production in all the industries named above that several railroads would, perforce, quickly follow and gridiron the territory described, and thus aid in upbuilding the richest portion of the inland empire, which would then easily rank with the most productive, most prosperous, and most progressive sections of America.

The inland empire as a whole posesses grain lands worth $200,000,000 when under favorable transportation conditions; live-stock interests now valued at $50,000; fruit lands prospectively worth $100,000,000; lumbering interests awaiting cheap transportation to have a valuation above $150,000,000; a grand total in these items alone of $500,000,000, not counting the millions in coal and ores and manufacturing, all awaiting the life-giving influence of an open river to the sea and consequent ample and economical transportation facilities. Even in this end of the year of 1900, with development in its infancy, the grand total of 80,000 carloads of these products have been crowding for shipment.

Wherefore we respectfully and earnestly memorialize the Congress of the United States to make adequate appropriations for the construction of a canal around The Dalles-Celilo Rapids of the Columbia River, thereby opening the Columbia and Snake rivers to navigation, and thus developing the greatest portion of the Northwest.

I, C. J. Bassett, secretary of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint memorial No. 4, by Scott, a joint memorial to Congress to create a branch of the National Soldiers' Home at Fort Sherman, Idaho, which was filed in this office the 20th day of February, A. D. 1901, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 27th day of February, A. D. 1901.

[House joint memorial No. 4, by Scott, in regard to a Branch of the National Soldiers' Home at Fort Sherman, Idaho, by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Idaho.]

A joint memorial to Congress to create a Branch of the National Soldiers' Home at Fort Sherman, Idaho.

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

Whereas by act of Congress and the orders of the War Department the troops have been removed from Fort Sherman to the newly established military post at Spokane, Wash.; and

Whereas the present site of Fort Sherman, with all its buildings and improvements, is worthless to the United States and can not be sold for any great amount of money; and

Whereas it is located in a healthy part of the State, at the north end of Coeur d'Alene Lake, a most beautiful body of water, upon which are many steamers, with Coeur d'Alene City near by, with good railroad facilities; and

Whereas there is not a National Soldiers' Home in the extreme Northwestern States:

Therefore we earnestly ask that you give this matter due consideration and establish a National Home upon the site of Fort Sherman, in order that those men that defended the country's flag in time of peril may have a pleasant, healthy place to spend their last remaining days on earth; and that a copy of this memorial be sent to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress, and that they are urged to give their best influence toward the accomplishment of the matter herein set forth.

This house joint memorial No. 4 passed the house of representatives on the 1st day of February, 1901.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, proceeding with these items, I reach: "Improving Claiborne Harbor." I presume Claiborne can wait.

"Improving Queenstown Harbor, Maryland."

Mr. WELLINGTON. Claiborne Harbor can wait.

Mr. CARTER. I presume it is in a very fair condition.

"Improving Rock Hall Harbor, Maryland." I presume that is not a matter of pressing necessity.

"Improving harbor at Keyport, N. J."—probably an important matter, but only $5,000 are allowed for that, and it will practically keep until the fall or winter or next year.

"Improving the harbor at Erie, Pa."

That is quite an important center of trade, but still it was thought proper to materially reduce that item. I presume that the commerce of Erie will continue during the summer just as well without this improvement as with it.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Will the Senator yield to me to make a motion?

Mr. NELSON. I call for the regular order, Mr. President.

Mr. WELLINGTON. It is a motion that is in order.

Mr. NELSON. Regular order, Mr. President.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I question the presence of a quorum, and demand a roll call. That passes the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland has not addressed the Chair, and has not been recognized.

Mr. NELSON. The regular order is the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER].

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President, allow me; did I fail to address the Chair?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator failed to address the Chair.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I question the presence of a quorum, and ask for a roll call, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary (at 8 o'clock and 10 minutes a. m., March 4) called the roll; and the following Senators answered to their names:

Butler,	Frye,	McBride,	Sullivan,
Carter,	Gallinger,	Mason,	Taliaferro,
Clapp,	Harris,	Nelson,	Thurston,
Clark,	Hawley,	Perkins,	Turner,
Culberson,	Heitfeld,	Pettigrew,	Warren,
Daniel,	Jones, Ark.	Scott,	Wellington.
Fairbanks,	Kean,	Shoup,
Foster,	Lindsay,	Stewart,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty Senators have answered to their names—not a quorum.

Mr. FRYE (Mr. KEAN in the chair). I move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine moves that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators. The question is on that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant-at-Arms will execute the order of the Senate.

At 8 o'clock and 14 minutes a. m. Mr. COCKRELL entered the Chamber and responded to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 15 minutes a. m. Mr. SIMON entered the Chamber and responded to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 20 minutes a. m. Mr. BERRY entered the Chamber and responded to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 21 minutes a. m. Mr. MARTIN entered the Chamber and responded to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 44 minutes a. m. Mr. DEBOE entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 45 minutes a. m. Mr. CLAY entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 47 minutes a. m. Mr. CHILTON entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 49 minutes a. m. Mr. BARD entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 51 minutes a. m. Mr. CHANDLER entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 55 minutes a. m. Mr. PRITCHARD entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

Mr. PETTIGREW (at 8 o'clock and 56 minutes a. m.). I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. CARTER. I hope the Senator from South Dakota will not insist upon that motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was rejected.

At 9 o'clock Mr. MCCUMBER entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 9 o'clock and 5 minutes Mr. HANSBROUGH entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 9 o'clock and 8 minutes Mr. PLATT of New York entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 9 o'clock and 10 minutes Mr. BATE entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 9 o'clock and 15 minutes Mr. TELLER entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEAN in the chair). Forty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum has responded.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 636) for the relief of St. John's Lodge Free and Accepted Masons, No. 3, of Newbern, N. C.;

A bill (H. R. 9829) to provide for celebrating the one-hundredth anniversary of the purchase of the Louisiana territory by the United States by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the products of the soil, mines, forest, and sea in the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri;

A bill (H. R. 9835) to establish a code of laws for the District of Columbia; and

A bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

Mr. WELLINGTON. I ask the Senator if he will allow me to move that the Senate take a recess until 10.30.

Mr. CARTER. I yield for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEAN in the chair.) The Senator from Maryland moves that the Senate take a recess until 10.30.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, I call for a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison,	Clay,	Kean,	Shoup,
Bard,	Cockrell,	Martin,	Simon,
Bate,	Fairbanks,	Mason,	Stewart,
Berry,	Foster,	Pettigrew,	Taliaferro,
Butler,	Frye,	Pettus,	Teller,
Carter,	Gallinger,	Platt, Conn.	Turner,
Chilton,	Harris,	Platt, N. Y.	Wellington.
Clapp,	Hawley,	Pritchard,
Clark,	Jones, Ark.,	Scott,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-four Senators have answered to their names. There is not a quorum present.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant-at-Arms will carry out the order of the Senate.

Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. QUAY, Mr. KYLE, Mr. HALE, Mr. MALLORY, Mr. WARREN, Mr. PERKINS, Mr. SULLIVAN, Mr. DEBOE, Mr. FORAKER, and Mr. NELSON subsequently entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Forty-five Senators have responded to their names. There is a quorum present.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, in the course of the remarks which I have had the honor to make to the Senate during the last few hours, I have found it necessary, in order to elucidate the nature of my objections to this bill, to quote from the text of the bill at some length, and likewise from the report of the committee which accompanies the bill, to the end that there may not be any basis for suspicion, even, that points of particular weakness have been taken out for appropriation.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Will the Senator yield to me to make a motion for a recess until 11 o'clock?

Mr. CARTER. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I move that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock. It seems to me it is nonsense to go on with this discussion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota moves that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock. The question is on that motion.

The motion was rejected.

Mr. CARTER. I am gratified that the Senate has refused to take a recess at this moment, for the reason that I desire to complete the statement I was proceeding to make at the time the Senator from South Dakota made the motion for a recess.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator will speak a little louder, we would get more benefit from his speech.

Mr. CARTER. I will speak louder as I warm up to the text. [Laughter.]

To the end that there may be no basis whatever for charge or suspicion that the quotations made from the bill and the report of the committee, which accompanies it, I deem it proper at this time to insert the full text of the bill, and likewise the report which accompanies it, to the end that the country may know the precise text of the bill and the causes urged in the report for its passage. To that end, not wishing to weary the secretaries nor to annoy the Senate with any direct request, I will proceed to read the bill, Mr. President:

An act (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums of money be, and are hereby, appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be immediately available, and to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers, for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of the public works hereinafter named:

For construction of breakwater from Mount Desert to Porcupine Island, Maine: Continuing improvement, $12,500—

As amended by the Senate it reads, "$25,000"——

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, is the Senator from Montana entitled to read this bill without making comments upon it? He has undoubtedly the right to read it and comment upon it, but has he the right to take a bill of that size and read it, and, while reading, say nothing?

Mr. CARTER. I shall be glad to enlighten the Senate upon some of the provisions of this bill between the lines. I have no desire to read the bill, but would prefer to insert it as a part of my remarks. I think it is important that the country should know what this bill is. I know there is very little hearty support for the measure in this body. I know that if it should be passed upon—as other bills are passed upon—on its actual merits, the bill would receive a very meager vote in this Senate; but it has fallen to my lot to oppose the bill during the night, and I have quoted sufficiently from it to, I think, convince those who may read the RECORD that the bill should not pass, because it is inherently lacking in the merit entitling it to the favorable action or consideration of the Senate.

But with reference to the observation of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], I do not wish to consume the time of the Senate in commenting upon the bill during the reading.

Here, Mr. President, we have, beginning on line 5, page 2:

Improving harbor at Camden, Me.: Completing improvement of outer harbor in accordance with the report submitted in House Document No. 263, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session, $7,500.

I presume that is a meritorious appropriation. The next is—

Improving Bucksport Harbor, Maine, in accordance with the project submitted in House Document No. 275, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session, completing improvement, $20,000.

I presume that is a meritorious appropriation.

Improving harbor at Isle of Shoals, Maine: For completing improvement in accordance with the report submitted in House Document No. 255, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session, $30,000.

It would be interesting to read the report in that connection.

Improving harbor of refuge at Little Harbor, New Hampshire: Completing improvement, $13,000.

Improving harbor at Burlington, Vt.: For the immediate renewal and repair of the existing breakwater, $37,750.

Improving harbor at Newburyport, Mass.: Continuing improvement, $30,000.

While each one of these appropriations may have merit, I insist that they will not suffer sufficiently during the few months remaining of this summer after June 30, to warrant the Senate in passing them with the enormous weight of improvident legislation associated with them in the bill.

Improving harbor at Rockport, Mass.

Improving harbor at Gloucester, Mass.

Sums are appropriated in the first instance of $22,481.80, and in the second instance, that at Gloucester, $75,000.

These points are points of shipment for large quantities of granite. It is important that there should be good harbor facilities there, and it is not likely that any special or serious accident will occur at that place or either of these places to seriously retard the development of the continuation of commerce in the harbor. Nothing that has happened will prevent the coming and going of vessels after June 30 precisely as before June 30.

These items illustrate my contention that there is no present necessity for the passage of this bill, and that the bill should not pass, because it has not been considered as it should be considered.

Mr. ALLISON. Will the Senator yield to me that I may offer a resolution which it is necessary to pass?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. CARTER. Certainly.

STANDING AND SELECT COMMITTEES.

Mr. ALLISON. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the standing and select committees of the Senate, as constituted at the end of this session, be, and they are hereby, continued until the next regular session of Congress, or until their successors are elected.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

CUSTOMS OF CONFERENCE COMMITTEES.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to present, from the Committee on Appropriations, a statement respecting the customs of conference committees, in response to a resolution passed at the last session. I ask that it may be printed as a document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be printed as a document, if there be no objection.

Mr. CARTER. I ask that the document be read for the information of the Senate. I should like to hear it. I understand it is a statement giving the amounts of appropriations at this session. It is an important paper, and it should be read.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator that it is not a statement of appropriations, but it is a statement in conformity to a resolution which was adopted on the motion of the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] respecting the usual customs of conference committees of the two Houses. Perhaps it will be more fully explained if we add another chapter to it. The statement was prepared some months ago.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Let the statement be read, Mr. President.

Mr. CHANDLER. It is impossible to hear the statement of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], so as to know what the document is.

Mr. ALDRICH. Let it be read.

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; let it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is impossible to have order with the galleries being occupied as they are at present.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, at the last session of the Senate the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] offered a resolution asking the Committee on Appropriations to make inquiry respecting the customs of conference committees. The statement I present is in response to that resolution, and has been prepared by the clerk of the Committee on Appropriations. I only ask that it may be filed and printed as a document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The statement will be printed as a document, if there be no objection.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I object, unless it is read, so that we may know what it contains.

Mr. ALLISON. Well, Mr. President, I will withdraw the statement for the present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa withdraws the statement.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11830) for the relief of the devisees of Casper Barber and their assigns from the operation of the act restricting the ownership of real estate in the District of Columbia to American citizens.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 5715) granting a charter to the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 5943) to establish Lowelltown, Me., a subport of entry;

A bill (S. 5715) granting a charter to the General Federation of Women's Clubs; and

A bill (H. R. 11830) for the relief of the devisees of Casper Barber and their assigns from the operation of the act restricting the ownership of real estate in the District of Columbia to American citizens.

MEMORIAL.

Mr. KYLE presented the following joint resolution of the legislature of South Dakota; which was ordered to lie on the table, and to be printed in the RECORD:

STATE OF SOUTH DAKOTA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of South Dakota, Secretary's Office:

I, O. C. Berg, secretary of state of the State of South Dakota, do hereby certify that the attached instrument of writing is a true and correct copy of joint resolution No. 6, as passed by the seventh legislative assembly of South Dakota, as the same appears of record in this office and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of South Dakota. Done at the city of Pierre this 27th day of February, 1901.

[SEAL.] O. C. BERG, Secretary of State.

House joint resolution No. 6.—A joint resolution and memorial requesting the Congress of the United States to treat with the Indians for the cession and opening for white settlement and free homestead entry all that portion of the Rosebud Indian Reservation lying within the boundaries of Gregory County, S. Dak.

Be it resolved by the house of representatives of the legislature of South Dakota (the Senate concurring):

Whereas there is in the organized portion of Gregory County, S. Dak., about six Congressional townships, said tract being too small in area, population, and assessed valuation to successfully maintain a county government without causing such government to become unduly burdensome; and

Whereas there is also within the boundaries of said Gregory County, S. Dak., about 23 Congressional townships of agricultural land which forms a part of the Rosebud Indian Reservation, and upon which are living a few Indians who have all taken their allotments in severalty; and

Whereas it is understood that the Indians are willing for a reasonable compensation to cede all that portion of the reservation herein mentioned to the Government; and

Whereas the ceding of said portion of the reservation to the Government would still leave a sufficiently large and suitable territory to meet all the requirements of an Indian reservation, while at the same time the ceding and opening to white settlers of all that portion of said reservation above referred to would add to the productive farming land of the State, enlarge the area of Gregory County to a proper and desirable size, and greatly lessen the expense of maintaining the government of said county: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we respectfully petition and memorialize the Congress of the United States to treat with the Indians at the earliest practicable date for the cession of all that portion of the Rosebud Indian Reservation lying within the boundaries of Gregory County, S. Dak., and that said tract be open to free homestead entry by white settlers; and be it further

Resolved, That we hereby request our Senators and Representatives in Congress to use their best efforts to effect the object prayed for in this memorial; and the secretary of state is hereby instructed to forward copies of this memorial to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, this bill, which I have proceeded to read and will finish reading if the time is sufficient, merits opposition, as I have stated, from every Senator who believes in scrutinizing with jealous care all appropriations of public money.

I regret, indeed, that through the hours of the night the voices of the Senators on the opposite side of this Chamber have not been heard to remonstrate against the passage of this bill. I listened here some time ago to a long-continued and spirited debate, confined to a few able Senators, upon a bill which became known on that side of the Chamber as the subsidy bill. That bill was intended by those who framed it to provide for the reestablishment of the American merchant marine. The principle involved in the bill had been for a long time an elementary principle of Republican faith. The principle embodied in that bill had been favorably commented upon or ratified and reratified in the national platforms of the Republican party for a long, long time.

It was known everywhere that the Republican party intended, when placed in power, to pass a law granting a reasonable bounty upon tonnage for the purpose of developing the ocean steamships floating the American flag. The principle was not new. The people had passed upon it. Since 1889 a bill substantially the same as the bill recently presented in this body has been urged, persistently urged, by the Republican party. The well-known party position upon this question and the persistent efforts to crystallize that principle of party faith into the law were such that the opposition in the Chamber was not taken by surprise when the bill was presented.

Ample time was taken for debate. Every provision of the bill was gone over with the utmost care. Just criticism led to appropriate amendments, and finally the bill was prepared for passage. Apparently every Senator in the Chamber who desired to speak to the merits had spoken. The burden of the song of the opposition was that that bill, which would tend to uplift the American merchant marine, which would send our commerce over the seas under our flag, could not be favorably entertained by the opposition because it carried $9,000,000 per year out of the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Will the Senator from Montana allow me a question at this point?

Mr. CARTER. I shall be glad to hear the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Is it not true that not only was there a silent opposition to the subsidy bill in this Chamber, but that throughout the country Republican newspapers and prominent Republicans rose up against it? I hold in my hand a pamphlet which is devoted to the ship-subsidy bill. In it I find an extract from the Indianapolis Journal, a good Republican newspaper, I believe, in opposition to that bill. I find that the Dubuque (Iowa) Times, in an issue of December, is opposed to the ship-subsidy bill; I find that the Chicago Tribune, in December, 1900, was opposed to the ship-subsidy bill; I find that the Portland Oregonian was opposed to the ship-subsidy bill; I find that the New York Press was opposed to it; I find that the Chicago Times-Herald was opposed to it; I find also that the New York Evening Post was opposed to it, and in it there is an interview by Phillips, of Pennsylvania, which is in itself a complete denunciation of the bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator from Maryland allow me to ask him a question? Did the fact that these newspapers, Republican newspapers, if they were, were opposed to the ship-subsidy bill justify filibustering upon this floor in order to defeat it, because that is the question?

Mr. WELLINGTON. That may be the question, and I take pleasure in answering the Senator from New Hampshire. I believe there are times when anything that can legally be done under the rules is right to be done to defeat a vicious measure, and it ought to be done. I have tried to answer the question of the Senator from New Hampshire.

I desire, Mr. President, if the Senator from Montana will permit, to read some of these extracts. For instance, the Indianapolis Journal, of December, 1900, said this:

[From the Indianapolis Journal, December, 1900.]

THE PEOPLE OPPOSED TO SUBSIDIES.

Not only is there no popular demand for a subsidy measure, but there is no reason to believe that it would benefit any person outside of those engaged in building and running ships, and of these classes it would benefit only those who least need it—the large builders and ocean liners, and not small ones.

Congressmen must not mistake the atmosphere of Washington for that of the country at large, or the clamor of a few shipbuilders and owners and their lobby for the voice of the people. Let Republican members go back to the platform of 1896, which demanded the upbuilding of our merchant marine and carrying trade by other methods than a money subsidy.

I wish to read in addition to that, if the Senator from Montana will permit, from the Dubuque Times, and I do this because if there is an ultra Republican State in the Union, it is the State of Iowa, and this, I believe, is one of the leading newspapers of the State of Iowa. It is published in Dubuque, the home, I believe, of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. The Dubuque Times in December, 1900, said:

[From the Dubuque (Iowa) Times, December, 1900.]

SHIP SUBSIDY BILL.

The ship-subsidy proposition is less popular than the tariff, for at least two reasons. One is that nobody can be induced to believe that the foreigner pays the freight, when the bill itself expressly provides that it shall be paid out of the national Treasury in cold cash. The other is that the word "subsidy" has an unpleasant sound, suggestive of the Credit Mobilier and land grants for railroads that were never built.

The subject is one little understood by the people; and even if the subsidy principle be conceded, only those familiar with the condition of the shipbuilding industry and the condition and needs of the merchant marine can undertake to say whether the pending bill has been framed on the lines best calculated to increase this nation's importance in the carrying trade at the minimum of cost to the Treasury. There are conflicting interests in the trade, some being interested in one class of vessels and some in another, and each desiring a bill in its own interest.

If the pending measure becomes a law it will be heard from in the next campaign. No inconsiderable part of President McKinley's support in the recent election came from those to whom the subsidy idea is extremely distasteful.

[From the Chicago Tribune, December, 1900.]

SUBSIDY SCHEME NOT VOTED ON IN NOVEMBER.

Discussing President James J. Hill's intensely interesting prophecies of what the merchant marine of the nation is approaching in development, the Chicago Tribune editorially says:

"It was not understood when the spellbinders were urging the people of the Northwest to vote in favor of the reelection of President McKinley that one of the first items on the Senatorial programme when Congress met would be the passage of a 'shipping-subsidy' bill which contemplates annual expenditure for thirty years for the special benefit of a number of rich men residing in Eastern cities. There is nothing whatever in this adroit resolution (the shipping plank of the Republican national platform of 1900) about 'subsidies.' The word 'subsidies' was carefully omitted from the platform.

"Nor was anything said during the campaign in regard to the extension of our merchant marine by a scheme of public expenditure continuing for a generation. Nobody can recall an instance of a public meeting at which the shipping-subsidy bill was made the subject of fair, candid argument or any argument at all; nor were the claims to public aid of the persons interested in such legislation ever explicitly set forth. * * * The Republican party should not be in favor of one set of measures prior to November 6 and in favor of an entirely different kind of measures subsequent to November 6."

FACTS AGAINST THE SUBSIDY.

By the time Congress is again in session conditions will be much less favorable for the passage of a shipping-subsidy bill than ever before. Every shipyard of importance in the country is running to its fullest capacity, and many new ones have come into existence, with some of the old doubling and trebling their facilities for turning out vessels. Contracts for mercantile craft alone on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts amount to $30,000,000, and it is now almost a certainty that more new tonnage will go into the water under the American flag in 1901 than in any previous year in the history of the country.

The fact that America is building ships for foreign governments, which have had the world for a market in which to buy their ships, shows plainly that there is an advantage in our favor on the first cost of the ship. The fact that building and sailing American ships in competition with the fleets of the world has enabled a few Americans to pile up colossal fortunes shows that we can operate the ships as cheaply as the foreigners can operate their craft.

Of the grain ships en route to Portland at the present time 25 fly the German flag, while Great Britain, for the first time in the history of the port, has dropped back to second place, with but 23 ships.

Over two-thirds of these German ships were built and owned by the British until a short time ago. As a matter of fact, half of them have passed from the British to the German flag within the past three years. No subsidy was asked or needed when Germany decided to increase her merchant marine; but she said to her subjects: "Go forth into the markets of the world and buy ships wherever you can buy them the cheapest." If American capital could have secured the same permission from our Government, all of these ships which Great Britain supplanted with steamers would not now be flying the German flag.

THE SHIP-SUBSIDY JONAHS.

In justifying the distribution of this grant under the proposed law the champions of the bill can employ something more of talent and energy than they have yet displayed. They have greatly improved their law since its first introduction, when, in the language of Mr. Hill, of railroad and Pacific trade fame, it gave three-quarters of the annual $9,000,000 to "nine gentlemen, all my good friends," the owners of the International Navigation Company or American Line. But, though the bill has been bettered since then, there is too much of the "nine gentlemen" in it yet.

As a matter of fact, the subsidizing of fast mail boats, a proper object in itself—if they are really fast—does not rightly come within the purview of this measure. Its preamble states its purpose as a response to a demand made by the "profitable employment of the surplus productive power of the farms, factories, mines, forests, and fisheries of the United States for the increase of its foreign commerce." The "nine gentlemen" of the American Line are engaged in an entirely legitimate business. They are carrying American mails, and they ought to be paid so that they can carry them in American Deutschlands and Oceanics, instead of sticking to little, slow old Parisses and New Yorks.

They should not be let off again with the building of St. Pauls and St. Louises, but compelled to the construction of vessels which the Post Office would select with the sole eye which it is bound to have to celerity of service. The increase of the mail subsidy to 21 knot vessels when 23 knots is the typical speed of the fast mail boat of the day is a farce, not to call it something harsher, upon its face. But, whatever it is, let the Government deal with it separately upon its merits and not muddle it up with a measure designed to freight the surplus products of American "farms, mines, forests, and factories" which these vessels, having no cargo space for grain, coal, lumber, and locomotives, never carry.

With this separation the bill would be without logical opposition in Congress or the country, and we fail to see why it should lose the votes of the many Senators and Representatives whom the American Line has been carrying to Europe and back every summer for the last ten years in anticipation of this particular roll call. It may be true of our Government, as Hamilton said of the English, that it can not be worked without bribery, but there is no reason why the measures and men which require bribery should be mixed up with those which do not. There is no reason why a shady scheme to make some slow, old boats of a native line pay dividends which under the competition of their alert foreign rivals they can not earn even with their present grant should smirch a clean legislative project to facilitate the entrance of American capital into the ocean carriage of American products.

If it is necessary, let the leeches and their lobbyists take their $7,500,000 and go off in a corner with it. Then let the other $7,500,000 be employed in encouraging the construction of as great a number as may be of slow cargo boats—12 knots is good, but 9 is better—which shall reclaim the freightage of the 90 per cent of American exports which now floats in foreign bottoms. This, with the involved salvage of at least $100,000,000 a year, is the great purpose of the measure under discussion. It can never be served, but rather will it be thwarted, and above all will it be gravely clouded as long as it is coupled with another and palpably suspicious proposal to increase the mail pay of a steamship line which has ceased to compete in fast mail service and wants to be rewarded for so doing. Through the very dissimilarity of their purposes and objects the "nine gentlemen" of the American line are the Jonahs of the ship-subsidy bill.

I desire to read an editorial from the Chicago Times-Herald, published in Chicago December 15, 1900:

[From the Chicago Times-Herald, December 15, 1900.]

THE WEST AGAINST THE SHIP-SUBSIDY BILL.

Senator HANNA'S speech in favor of the ship-subsidy bill Thursday was the most effective presentation of his side of the proposition that has yet been heard in the Senate. It appealed to the only consideration that renders the proposal to spend $9,000,000 a year in the attempt to build up the American merchant marine tolerable to the American people—natural pride and natural business instincts. In his own words, it was an "appeal to the American people for the reestablishment of the great shipbuilding industry."

"I want," said he, "to put it on higher grounds than mere dollars and cents. It is away and beyond that point in patriotism and pride in our national life. As to the popularity or unpopularity of this measure, I stand here to say that every line of it is in the interest of the American people. Upon that basis I make my appeal."

There is no room to question Senator HANNA'S sincerity and mastery of his subject. His own connection with the shipping industry of the Great Lakes for the past forty years has given him a familiarity with the details and development of the business that served to make his speech a revelation of accurate knowledge and experience to his fellow-Senators.

But, unfortunately for his main argument, that knowledge and experience was gained under conditions altogether different from those that prevail on the ocean. Nature has given to the United States a practical monopoly of the carrying trade of the Great Lakes. We have the coast line, the commerce, the ports, and the cash. All we have had to do was to build the ships. What competition there is has been all among ourselves. Canada has not had the ports, the incentive, nor the means to compete with us.

On the lakes the natural laws of supply and demand have been with us, on the ocean they are against us. While they favored us our shipbuilding industry flourished and our flag floated on every sea and in every port. When, with changing conditions, those same laws were against us, our ships and flag gradually vanished from the foreign carrying trade of the world.

HANNA ANSWERED BY FRYE.

It was Senator HANNA'S misfortune to follow Senator FRYE'S exhaustive two days' effort on the same side of the question, whose speech affords all the ammunition that the opponents of the ship-subsidy bill need for answer to the appeals of the Ohio Senator. For instance, Mr. HANNA asks:

"Why should we not put some of our idle capital into the building of ships and sailing them for the benefit of our producers and manufacturers?"

Senator FRYE afforded the explanation when he said: "Our ships, costing 25 per cent more than those of England and Germany, with operating charges at least 40 per cent greater by reason of higher wages and better living, unprotected, are compelled to compete with those protected."

The use of the terms "protected" and "unprotected" here is a clever avoidance of the words "subsidized" and "unsubsidized," which are obnoxious to the American ear. But by whatever term it may be described, it cuts a very insignificant figure in diverting the carrying trade of the world from channels into which it has fallen through natural causes.

According to Senator FRYE the following amounts were paid by the nations named annually to encourage their respective merchant marine:

Country.	Year.	Amount.
Great Britain	1899	$5,857,525
Germany	1899	1,894,620
France	1899	7,632,242
Italy	1899	2,185,209
Russia	1899	1,371,187
Austria	1899	1,724,249
Spain	1896	1,629,927
Netherlands	1898	250,971
Norway	1899	136,943
Sweden	1898	31,844
Denmark	1899	82,455
Japan	1899	3,492,107

NOTE.—These figures include mail subsidies and construction, navigation and fishing bounties. In 1899 the United States paid $968,211 in mail subsidies.

In order to show what an insignificant part "protection," "bounties," "subsidies," or whatever you choose to call it, plays in the building up of a merchant marine, it is instructive to glance at the following statement of the merchant navies in 1850 and 1898 of some of the nations mentioned by Senator FRYE:

Country.	1850, tonnage.	1898, tonnage.
British	4,232,962	13,988,508
German		2,453,334
French	688,153	1,242,091
Italian (1870)	1,012,164	875,851
Austro-Hungarian (1870)	329,377	380,414
Dutch	392,576	455,600
Norwegian	298,315	1,694,230
Swedish (1870)	346,862	605,991
Danish (1870)	178,646	511,958

These two tables taken together prove that the enormous subsidies paid by France have been ineffectual to retain her proportion of the carrying trade of the world, while the merchant marine of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark, with insignificant government aid, have moved up until combined it occupies a second place to that of Great Britain.

What is the explanation of this? Senator FRYE in a single sentence furnishes the only true and incontrovertible solution, to wit: "The Norwegian ships can beat the world to-day in cheapness of carrying." If the operating charges of American ships are at least 40 per cent greater than those of English and German ships, what show have they to compete with Norwegian ships, which cost 25 per cent less than ours and can be operated cheaper than those of England or Germany or any other nation?

But Senator FRYE is also authority for the statement that the effect of American competition, when subsidized, on the carrying trade of the world would be to reduce freight rates 25 per cent, and that "on the Atlantic ships are carrying, or two years ago were carrying, as low as they could profitably."

He also said "It has been utterly impossible for an American citizen under existing conditions to invest his money in American ships to engage in the foreign carrying trade." In short, investment in American ships is not profitable under natural conditions with normal freight rates, and yet Mr. FRYE would have us attempt to make it profitable by taking $9,000,000 a year out of the Treasury to foster a competition that would have the immediate effect to reduce the present unprofitable freight rates "at least 25 per cent."

If the Senator will permit me to conclude, the Times-Herald further says:

This is so preposterous a proposition that it is a conclusive reply to the strong appeal of Senator HANNA for some legislation that will restore our merchant marine on the ocean. * * *

In the matter of voting money for building a Navy the West, which has not an inch of coast to protect, has proved its national spirit by supporting every appropriation asked. It is not affrighted by the word "subsidy," but it balks over a proposition to take money from the National Treasury to render the conditions of a self-supporting merchant marine more unprofitable than ever.

If the ships of other nations, in a competition open to all, can carry our exports and imports more cheaply than we can ourselves, let them play the rôle of hod carriers at the wages of hod carriers.

If what we pay to other nations for carrying our freight enables them to buy our products and manufactures, they are welcome to it so long as we have more profitable employment for our capital, brains, and industry.

I desire to read an interview, or part of an interview, by Thomas W. Phillips, formerly a Representative in Congress from the Twenty-fifth district of Pennsylvania, a member of the Industrial Commission, and a business man of note, who has the courage of his convictions, as is shown by the comments made to the correspondent of the New York Evening Post:

[From the New York Evening Post of December 18, 1900.]

WASHINGTON, December 18.

Good Republican testimony to the iniquity of the ship-subsidy bill is not so scarce as one would suppose, though for reasons of party discipline it is often hard to get Republicans of high standing to repeat in public what they freely say in private conversation. Thomas W. Phillips, however, formerly a Representative in Congress from the Twenty-fifth district of Pennsylvania, member of the Industrial Commission, and a business man of note, has the courage of his convictions, as is shown by these comments made to your correspondent:

"The supporters of the ship-subsidy bill, in Senate report No. 473, explain its introduction by saying that we need more American vessels engaged in foreign trade. They cite the fact of a great decline in American shipping and give as the reason therefor, first, that the cost of construction is greater in the United States than in Great Britain or Germany; second, that the cost of operating vessels under the American flag is greater than under foreign flags; and as a third reason they cite causes based on foreign legislative encouragement.

COST OF BUILDING AND OPERATING STEAMSHIPS.

"They then propose as a remedy this bill, giving a subsidy of $9,000,000 annually for twenty years to American shipowners under very peculiar and astonishing conditions. To show that these claims are incorrect one need only remember that one of the principal items in the cost of construction of steel ships is the steel plates of which the whole ship except her machinery and rigging is built. According to the last report of the Commissioner of Navigation the price of steel ship plates in the United States in September last was $24.64 per ton and in Great Britain $38.88 per ton, so that the principal material used in the construction of a ship was over one-third cheaper in the United States than in Great Britain.

"Another great item in the cost of building a steamship is her machinery. It is a fact well known and conceded to-day that American machinery is now made better and sold cheaper in all the markets of the world than the corresponding product of other nations. Therefore, both in ship plates and in machinery, America is now able to compete with the world. The rate of wages is somewhat higher in American shipyards than in British, it is true, yet it is admitted that American workmen with American machinery turn out a much greater product per man than foreign workmen. Add to this the fact that American workmen in this industry generally work one hour per day longer than the British, and we then understand why shipbuilding experts like Mr. Cramp say that a steamship can now be built as cheap in America as in any country.

"Again, the cost of operating vessels under the American flag is practically no greater than under the British flag. Insurance is only 12 per cent higher here than in Europe, interest is the same, and there is less difference between British and American wages than between British and continental wages; yet Britain builds and sails more ships than all the rest of the world combined. Furthermore, under this bill American shipowners are specifically permitted to hire three-fourths, or even more, of their crews in foreign ports at as low wages as their foreign competitors.

SUBSIDIES ALREADY HIGH.

"The seagoing tonnage of the world in 1899 was 18,880,000 tons, and of the United States 810,000, giving 22⅓ times as much for the rest of the world as for the United States. As stated in the Senate report, American subsidy payments are $1,400,000 annually, and foreign subsidy payments $26,000,000 annually, showing that while foreign tonnage is 22⅓ times as great as American tonnage, foreign subsidies are only 18½ times as great, the United States already paying an average of about 20 per cent more than the rest of the world.

"If this bill becomes a law we shall be paying more than one-third of the world's subsidy, with less than one-twentieth of the tonnage. There is no assurance that our tonnage will be increased by this, for some of the nations which, like Norway, pay the smallest subsidies make the greatest increases in the growth of their shipping. We are now paying a greater subsidy per ton than other nations, and our shipping increases less rapidly. These facts show that shipping does not increase in proportion to subsidies, and dispose of the last of the three arguments made in behalf of the bill."

Mr. CARTER rose.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I do not want to intrude too long upon the Senator, but if he will permit me, I think it is interesting reading in connection with the ship-subsidy measure. I will continue:

STANDARD OIL STEAMSHIP TRUST IN PROSPECT.

But there is a fourth reason for the ardent support which this particular subsidy measure is receiving in certain quarters. It is a reason not set forth in the bill itself or by its supporters, yet it is potent with the promoters of the measure, and one that should receive the careful consideration of American lawmakers before they vote. This unmentioned cause is the expectation that the bill will materially aid in the creation of a great ocean steamship trust.

One need only read the names of the men and corporations originating and advocating this bill in order to grasp the purpose which lies behind it. Here are some of them, as given in Senator FRYE's speech on December 5: C. P. Huntington, railway magnate; Charles H. Cramp, shipbuilder; C. A. Griscom, president of the International Navigation Company, which is controlled by the Standard Oil Company and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; Aaron Vanderbilt; Harvey Goulder and Frank J. Firth, of the Lake Carriers' Association, and a number of others of like connection. The House minority committee's report throws still further light on this feature of the case. It quotes from the Chicago Tribune to give an idea of the extent to which the prime movers of this subsidy bill are concerned in and backed by other trusts:

Among the officers of this so-called American Line Company are Clement A. Griscom, president, and W. H. Barnes, Alexander J. Cassatt, and W. E. Elkins, directors. That is not the only directory, however, of which these gentlemen are members. They are also directors of the Pennsylvania Company, and Cassatt is president of that company.

RECESS.

Mr. HANSBROUGH (at 10 o'clock and 30 minutes a. m., Monday, March 4). Mr. President, I move that the Senate take a recess for thirty minutes.

The motion was agreed to; and at the expiration of the recess (at 11 o'clock a. m.) the Senate reassembled.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 2d instant approved and signed the following acts:

S. 3283. An act for the relief of Isaac R. Dunkelberger;

S. 2933. An act authorizing the appointment of James A. Hutton to a captaincy of infantry in the United States Army;

S. 4687. An act for the relief of Richard H. Townley, a lieutenant (junior grade) on the retired list of the United States Navy;

S. 4509. An act extending to the city of Everett, Wash., a subport of entry, the privileges of the act approved June 10, 1880, governing the immediate transportation of dutiable merchandise;

S. 3670. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent to the heir or heirs of one Tawamnoha, or Martha Crayon, conveying to them certain lands in the State of North Dakota, confirming certain conveyances thereof, and for other purposes;

S. 6048. An act to amend chapter 559 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved March 3, 1891;

S. 2866. An act to extend the provisions of section 8 of the act entitled "An act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, concerning prosecutions for cutting timber on public lands in California, Oregon, and Washington;

S. 5715. An act granting a charter to the General Federation of Women's Clubs;

S. 5573. An act to amend section 203 of title 3 of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes;

S. 5943. An act to establish Lowelltown, Me., a subport of entry; and

S. 5484. An act to provide for subports of entry and delivery in the Territory of Hawaii.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13169) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President, at the time of the recess I was engaged in reading. I will proceed.

John D. Archbold * * * and Henry H. Rogers are also directors of the International Navigation Company. The first named is a prominent director, and the last named director and vice-president of the Standard Oil Company. There is a concern known as the National Transit Company, which is a part of the Standard Oil trust and controls its oil-distributing business. Its relations with the Pennsylvania Company are exceedingly intimate. Among the directors of the National Transit Company are J. D. Archbold, H. H. Rogers, and Clement A. Griscom. The latter is the connecting link between the International Navigation Company, the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the Standard Oil Company.

Will the farmers, workingmen, and legitimate business men of the United States submit to be taxed $9,000,000 a year as a gift to aid such a coterie of distinguished trust magnates in their latest scheme to secure a monopoly of ocean transportation as well as on the land and on the lakes? This scheme would leave the farmers, miners, and manufacturers at the tender mercies of the new monopoly, just as the Standard Oil trust now controls the production and distribution of petroleum, where profits are governed only by greed.

As late as December 9 James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad, in a speech at Chicago, said that he had made some inquiries concerning the building of boats in this country and on the Clyde, and found that he could have them constructed here at a much lower figure than in Scotland.

THE FOREIGN-OWNERSHIP FRAUD.

This bill, as described by its authors, is "a bill to promote commerce," etc. The title is a misnomer. It should be called "a bill to destroy competition and create a world-wide transportation trust controlled by the millionaire monopolists of America." The conclusive evidence that this is what it is intended for is contained in the measure itself, and in the facts set forth in House and Senate reports. For example, the bill provides that the $9,000,000 subsidy per year shall be distributed among vessels owned and built in the United States, and among such foreign-built steamships as were on the 1st of January, 1900, engaged in foreign commerce and owned and contracted for by American citizens or American corporations or by foreign corporations of which the majority of the stock is owned by American capitalists.

This provision is a palpable act of favoritism in the interest of those privileged individuals or corporations who for a considerable time prior to January 1, 1900, had the exclusive information that this provision was to be inserted in the law. This section, together with other features of the bill which make it necessary for a new ship to be built within five years in order to get the full benefit of the subsidy, gives those capitalists who possess "inside information" in advance an opportunity not only to make their contracts for foreign-built ships previous to January 1, 1900, but also to make contracts with American shipyards so as to monopolize the capacity of the yards during practically the full period of five years. Of both these opportunities they may have availed themselves, thus shutting out all other Americans from either having their foreign-built ships registered or getting their home-built ships constructed in time to take advantage of the benefits of the subsidy.

With this bill enacted into law, and contracts already made securing to them annually a gift of $9,000,000 of the people's money taken in taxes, they will be in a position to complete the organization of their ocean-ship trust and to use the subsidy as a weapon to exterminate all competitors. That they will do this can not be reasonably doubted, when it is known that the men behind the job are the Standard Oil officers and their associates, who have largely destroyed free competition in transportation, both in the oil trade and in other industries in the United States, through large discriminations. They also heavily dominate the transportation franchises of the great cities.

GIVES AUTOCRATIC POWERS TO SECRETARY OF TREASURY.

Another danger involved in the bill is the autocratic power which it vests in a single Government officer—the Secretary of the Treasury—to decide questions and controversies arising under its operation, thus making him judge, jury, and executioner. The far-reaching effect of this power and the other features of the proposed law is seen in the fact that the operations of the shipowners under it will be in the nature of contracts with the Government, which the bill specifically provides can not be abrogated for ten or twenty years. Its supporters say that under such a law ocean freights would be lowered, but there is nothing in the bill exacting a pledge from the shipowners that they will reduce rates. They claim that all its benefits will go to the shippers and farmers, and not to the vessel owners. If this were true the shipowners would not be spending so much time to get the bill passed.

It may be important to observe, moreover, that there is nothing in the bill to prevent American owners of stock in the corporations benefited under this law from selling their stock to foreigners. The defenders of the bill are vigorously attacking other proposed plans of legislation to aid American shipping. It is not now a question of other plans, but is this plan good or bad? The subsidy plan is not made good by the fact that some other plan is bad. The bill affords opportunity for fraud by providing that a vessel can draw subsidy if her cargo space is sold or contracted for, even if no freight is carried.

The argument that the bill would aid in the export of agricultural products to the temperate zone in Asia is absurd, since the agricultural products of the temperate zone of Asia are already in competition with us in the world's markets.

SLOW VESSELS DISCRIMINATED AGAINST.

The bill discriminates against the sailing vessels and in favor of steam vessels, against small steamers and in favor of large ones owned by great corporations. It puts the sailing vessels and smaller steamers at the mercy of the big monopoly, which will get the bulk of the subsidy because of the excessive premium paid to the fast mail and passenger ships owned exclusively by the great corporations.

It is obviously designed that existing ships and those contracted for may absorb the whole of the $9,000,000 subsidy, leaving no inducement to build new ships. Tank steamers, which are numerous, are making large profits now, and will get a great part of the subsidy. They are nearly all owned by the Standard Oil Company.

There is no provision in the bill stipulating that American labor shall get any share of the subsidy, which, it is claimed, is to be paid out for the benefit of labor. Our highest duty commercially is to protect American citizens from discriminating laws and to prohibit monopoly.

Both parties voted for the anti-trust bill in the House, and denounced trusts in their national platforms this year, yet the anti-trust bill is now relegated to the rear and a bill creating one of the greatest of all trusts is urged to the front. Was this programme designed to fool some of the people before election, or all of the people after election?

Mr. President, before I take my seat I should like to ask the Senator from Montana if he will permit me to make one suggestion to him?

Mr. CARTER. Certainly.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Before I interrupted the Senator he was devoting his attention to a description of a river, the Trinity River, in Texas, I believe, a river that is 135 miles in length, and he gave us to understand that this river was to have $4,000,000 for its improvement.

I was struck by an idea in this connection. Do you know, sir, that 135 miles of railroad could be built of the very best rails that can be obtained in this country or in England, 80-pound rails, for $2,700,000 for all that length? Then why not let the river alone and take the railroad, which is the modern style of transportation, and especially when you can get it for half the money?

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, the question of the Senator from Maryland became more extended than I anticipated when I yielded the floor for a question. [Laughter.]

Mr. WELLINGTON. I beg the Senator's pardon for having interrupted him at such length.

Mr. CARTER. I am gratified to know through that observation made by the Senator——

Mr. HOAR. I desire to ask the Senator to yield to me for a customary resolution.

Mr. CARTER. I will yield to the Senator.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. HOAR. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, for which I ask immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts offers a resolution, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Chair, to join a similar committee appointed by the House of Representatives, to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses, having completed the business of the present session, are ready to adjourn unless the President has some other communications to make to them.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair appoints, under the resolution, as the committee on the part of the Senate the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL].

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I submit at this point a parliamentary inquiry, not wishing to transgress the rules of the Senate. Since the resolution just adopted announces that the business of this Congress has concluded, I inquire whether it is proper for me to proceed with my remarks. [Laughter.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator from Montana had asked the Chair that question several hours ago, he might have given some information in regard to the subject. [Laughter.] He does not think it necessary now.

Mr. CARTER. I am very much gratified and very thankful to the Chair for permitting me to go forward, notwithstanding the pressure of business and the conclusion of business as well. [Laughter.]

I am much gratified to know, Mr. President, that the digression made by the eminent Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLINGTON] was not in any sense calculated to divert from its proper course the line of remark I was proceeding to make upon the acts of the opposition in this Chamber during the debate on the shipping bill. I will recapitulate, to the end that the facts may be fresh before us.

A bill which had been repeatedly pressed before the American people and the Congress assembled during the last ten to fifteen years was finally perfected, passed through the House of Representatives after full and free debate, was presented in this Chamber for consideration after the most mature deliberation by a committee, which gave painstaking attention to every detail of the bill, and not within the history of legislation within my experience in this Chamber has any bill been accorded more thorough and entire attention by the country and by Congress than the shipping bill, which has been lain to rest by the action of the opposition.

That bill, Mr. President, represented one of the cardinal principles of Republican faith. For a generation the party had claimed in and out of season that the inevitable result of enacting a law along the lines that bill laid out would be the prompt revival of American shipping, and it was so insisted during the consideration of the bill on this floor. Our friends on the opposite side of the Chamber disagreed with the principle. They believed in free shipping, one of the tenets of the Democratic party, and yet, sir, during the discussion of that bill little or nothing was said of the principle of free shipping and no effort was seriously made to conduct the debate on party lines on the part of the respective parties with reference to this great question.

I submit here now that the chief object, the main point of assault, and the thought iterated and reiterated day in and day out, was that the bill carried $9,000,000 annually from the Treasury of the United States. The bill was opposed chiefly and with greatest force upon the question of public economy.

I take no issue with the Senators who repeated their speeches, and who deprived the majority in this Chamber from casting their votes in favor of the measure for which the majority stood. But I do take issue, Mr. President, with the right of Senators who invoked the privilege accorded to the minority here, of resisting to the death a measure deemed to be radically wrong or impolitic, to rise now and criticise the action of any Senator, or any number of Senators, in attempting to defeat this bill, which is charged and surcharged with indefensible items from page 1 to page 135. I say to the Senate here assembled now that no Senator can rise in his place and defend the items appearing in the aggregate on any single page of that bill.

The Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLINGTON] has referred to Trinity River in Texas. That is only one of many cases. When we undertook to read the report during the night, members were somewhat startled by the frequency with which these items appeared. The Trinity River, a case in point, was this; and this is the engineer's report. Trinity River, a narrow, shallow stream, with 3 feet of water at its mouth, is to have $12,500 appropriated as an entering wedge to a $4,000,000 job; and for what?

The engineer says that the first work to be done is to cut the trees and logs off of the hillsides, so that they might not roll down into the river and choke it up. Then, says the engineer, after you have cut away the brush and disposed of the logs on the hillsides, you can, during the dry weather of the following summer, burn the logs that are in the bottom of the stream. [Laughter.] Still, you have not a navigable stream, because, startling as this may appear, ridiculous as it seems, the fact is that the engineer says that when you clean the logs and brush from the hillside and burn the logs in the middle of the stream in dry weather, you must make artesian wells up at the head of the stream to get water to fill it. [Laughter.]

That is the statement of the engineer—an engineer of the United States Army sent there to inspect that work—and this is not a single item standing out by itself, an item that might enter into this general aggregate by mistake or oversight. Not at all. There is a whole herd of these things. The bill is full of them.

Mr. President, a bill made up of such truck as this the Senate ought not to entertain with seriousness, but the seal of unmitigated condemnation should be put upon items like this in an appropriation bill.

Under our Constitution, sir, it is not the privilege of the President of the United States to select out these various items and veto them. If so, the weeding process might go on under the Executive hand in participating with us in the legislative function, but the bill must be accepted as a whole or vetoed entire. This, of necessity, presents to the Executive a most embarrassing alternative.

Had provision not been made in the sundry civil bill, which has recently passed, and which will ere a few minutes be a law, to provide for continuing contracts where river and harbor work is necessary, I should regard the defeat of this bill as a subject of regret; but as it is, sir, Senators will take home from this Chamber, after mature reflection, a sense of deep satisfaction in contemplating the work of this day on this river and harbor bill. Fifty million dollars will be saved to the Treasury of the United States and no injury done to any living human being anywhere.

Further still, a lesson will have been taught, which I certainly hope will not soon be forgotten. This bill, growing up on the principle of division and silence, has sprung from trifling proportions until it appeared, delivered to our table, carrying $60,000,000 for distribution in all the States, small and great, and on rivers never heard of outside of the locality until their names appeared in the river and harbor bill.

This lesson, Mr. President, if considered for what it is worth, will amply compensate the country for the little inconvenience that will follow the stoppage of work on these small streams and insignificant harbors between the 30th day of June and the time the next Congress can take this matter up.

Another proposition: With a bill containing so many items based upon such a great diversity of fact, each item having a basis of its own, subject to and requiring investigation, it is neither fair nor just that the Houses of Congress should be called upon in the last hours of a session to go through the details of this work.

Let this become the unwritten law, if you please, that river and harbor bills will hereafter be presented only at sessions of Congress not destined to be terminated by an efflux of time. Here, sir, we have a bill of 135 pages, containing many amendments, carrying, as I have said, in the neighborhood of $50,000,000, providing that those dollars shall be mixed in every little muddy creek from Maine to California and clear around the coast, not only to improve the rivers, but to dig artesian wells to supply rivers with water, to the end that the dam may have something to do. [Laughter.]

I say, sir, that there ought to be unlimited time, and there should be unsparing and relentless criticism. If, unhappily, these people have become educated to believe that the river and harbor bill is one of the things that regularly emanates from the Government biennially, and sometimes annually, they expect the coming of the river and harbor money in the neighborhood, not because it is going to improve anything, but because it is going to employ somebody in the neighborhood. Thus it is that each district, stimulated by something of self-interest in the immediate locality where the money is spent, gets up something of a sentiment in favor of the bill.

Let no Senator imagine that this sentiment is very deep seated or widespread, for such is not the fact—such can not be the fact. It would be, I believe, impossible to find a dozen men in any district in the United States who, in their sober senses, would approve of that Trinity River item as a separate proposition; not a member of the committee of conference nor a member of the Committee on Commerce would approve it as a separate proposition.

How does it find its way here, then? By the way so many items get into this bill—by a system of swapping and trading and the exercising of all such influences as follow swapping, trading, and bartering. No one intends to do wrong in this connection. Nobody feels that he is injuring the Government, because the abuse is so old that the custom has gained some degree of respectability by the passage of time.

The bill has grown steadily from a few million dollars not many years ago until now $60,000,000 passes this year without challenging an item. The next bill will come up boldly and brazenly with $75,000,000 to be taken from the public Treasury. The next bill will be $100,000,000.

The rivers are not increasing in number; the harbors are not increasing; but, Mr. President, we are starting out to make rivers where rivers do not exist. [Laughter.] Each and every piece of work that is done involves the necessity of continual maintenance. So this bill, speaking of little creeks down in the country, provides for maintenance of what? Not navigable water—nay, not so; because, as some Senator aptly said last night, the little boats that skip up and down many of these alleged rivers would pass over the country on a fresh field of dew without any river at all—would skate along.

We do need large expenditures at the chief commercial ports of the country. Those large expenditures are not made in proportion to the necessities of commerce at the central commercial places. Great harbors are neglected, to the end that votes may be procured to pass this bill through without challenge.

Think of it, Mr. President! This bill carries, as I say, $50,000,000. It is accompanied by a report of over 400 pages, passed through the Senate with a couple of dozen members present, about put as quickly as the clerks could read it. I feel quite confident it passed in less than four hours; I think in less than three hours.

I expected to say something about the bill at that time, supposing that this great measure, carrying $50,000,000 for all sorts of different and indifferent things, would naturally be debated, and the committee itself would feel constrained to offer some explanation to Senators for these weak-kneed items; but such was not the case.

I passed out to the Committee on Appropriations to attend a meeting there, and was gone a few minutes, and came back and found the river and harbor bill had passed. I am quite sure the yeas and nays were not called. Nor was there much formality about its passage. It was informally placed in conference, if I remember correctly, yesterday morning. The conference committee reported here after dark last night.

Senators were expected to read the 135 pages of the bill and the four hundred and some odd pages of the report, advise themselves of the righteousness of these various items, enlighten their judgment, and satisfy their conscience within, I suppose, about twenty minutes. The bill has led to some debate. I sincerely trust that Senators will hereafter feel it necessary to debate this bill. It is understood in the future that the bill must pass upon its merits; it will be a smaller bill; it will be a better bill, and it will more effectively subserve the public interest it is intended to accommodate.

Mr. President, I have detained the Senate longer than I expected. I regret very much that the desire of Senators to hear the truth about this bill led them to forego the privilege of taking a recess for certain hours during the night. I should have gladly yielded the floor for the purpose of allowing the Senate to stand in recess for a few hours, to the end that Senators might take much-needed rest. However, manifestly desiring to become thoroughly acquainted with the bill, the Senate remained in session.

I can not perceive that time enough now remains to dispose of it on its merits. I should like to see some member of the committee rise and explain why it is that three-fourths of these items were not stricken out in committee; why it is that the reports of the engineers were not scrutinized with some degree of care, to the end that items wholly wanting in merit, or apparently so, might be left out in consideration.

One word in closing, about the engineers of the Army. It rarely occurs that an engineer of the Army reports adversely upon any project he is directed to survey. In my humble judgment therein rests much of the difficulty connected with the preparation of this bill. From time immemorial, throughout the whole history of the Army of the United States, the Engineer Corps has justly held and has always been entitled to the entire confidence of the country.

This confidence has been abused only in very rare cases. The engineers are generally exacting, and possibly in some cases unjustly jealous of the Government's interest in enforcing stringent regulations and clauses in contracts. It so happens, however, that in the surveys of proposed improvements of rivers and harbors the feeling of good fellowship in some manner or other intervenes to such an extent that the engineer in reporting softens the truth to the very best of his ability.

So the engineer reporting on Trinity River passed by the artesian-well arrangement. He passed by the burning of logs in the middle of the stream during the dry weather in the channel, and he said that this thing could be done for about $4,000,000, and he itemized the expenditure. That report was made because the engineer in charge did not desire to hurt the feelings of the member of Congress in that district.

I imagine that that good fellowship which makes the world akin softened down that report. It seems to me, upon reading the report of the engineer, taking the plain facts as stated by him, it was his clear duty to directly and emphatically and in no uncertain terms condemn this project as not being feasible from an engineering point of view. As the Senator from Maryland suggested, a railroad could be built along the banks of this crooked little stream for half the money it would take to clear the timber from the hillsides, clean the river, burn the logs, put in dams and locks to hold the water raised from artesian wells.

Mr. President, I trust that this criticism, certainly meant in good part, may find lodgment in the mind of every engineer henceforth sent out to conduct a survey and an examination. No engineer would have tolerated a favorable report upon the Trinity River project, or a hundred other of these projects, for a private person. If he had reported to some railroad company that that was an investment that could be considered, he would have been immediately dismissed from the service as a person incompetent or lacking in strength of character to tell the truth when he saw it.

The criticism I have made of the engineers in this behalf is not intended to be unkind, nor do I wish it understood in this closing hour of the session that any remark I have felt called upon to make in connection with the consideration of this bill has been intended to reflect upon any member of either House. I have from the beginning attempted to show that this collection of matter known as the river and harbor bill emanated from a system inherently vicious and destined always to lead to an evil result.

It is the system of swapping—not in a wrongful sense—but in the sense of good fellowship in part, and through a desire to get legislation worked along and made successful. Thus it is that the larger items are diminished below the proper degree, that the smaller items may be provided with something. Where you can not do anything better for a district, throw a thousand dollars up there to try to improve a stream that never can be of any value for commerce.

This bill is just replete with items of that kind. There has not been an attempt on the floor of the Senate to defend any one of the items assailed. I feel now that since the committee thought proper to stand mute, since there is no defense offered for the items, it is fortunate indeed that they may go over to another Congress, where they can be fully and properly considered—considered as legislation carrying money from the public Treasury should be considered.

Mr. President, the appropriations at the present session of Congress are larger than ever before. I think they will reach, probably, in the neighborhood of $800,000,000; probably not so much as that—$750,000,000. Then, by laying this bill aside for future consideration we avoid reaching the $800,000,000 mark at this session of Congress. I trust that in the future this bill will be prepared with more care.

Other appropriations could not well be dispensed with. This one can be well laid aside for more deliberate consideration in the future. I have sought to lay it aside from a sense of public duty. Around about me in this Chamber I have observed Senators, whose hands are tied by the iniquitous system of construction which obtained in the bill, compelled to stand mute because cooperating, unconsciously it is true, in the execution of this scheme of legislation that carries into effect certain laws unnecessarily squandering the public money.

My part in this work, Mr. President, I am not ashamed of. I feel that in the six years I have been permitted to serve in this Chamber it has never been my privilege to perform a service which will be in the end more generally appreciated than the service performed here to day. When this bill comes in again it will come in purged and purified and reduced to a legitimate basis, unless it so happen that the constructors or framers of the bill have confidence that in the future things will be done as in the past, this case constituting only an exception. But if I am advised of the temper of the Senate, this day's work will in some measure tend to call a halt on this class of legislation, this manner of appropriating the public money for public work of any sort.

The bill, as I have said, contains 135 pages. I should like very much to incorporate all of those pages in my remarks. At an earlier hour I undertook to read the text, and intended to read the text complete, not for the consumption of time, but to the end that the facts themselves might stand forth in the RECORD to justify the statements I had made of the bill in detail. I wish to have it understood that this argument, in so far as it has treated of the details of the bill, did not unjustly select weak points here and there for special mention. I may have been unjust to some of the special appropriations. Some measures or items of merit may have been lightly mentioned, but not consciously so. It has been my purpose to deal with the bill as fairly as I could in the limited time allowed for its consideration after the conference committee reported.

Mr. President, there was not one moment allowed, practically, to consider this bill as the committee proposed to have it finally adopted. The amendments stand in disagreement there at this moment. There has been no time for examination or reflection. Such remarks as I have made have been made upon the text of the bill, and I should be glad if it could be published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, in order that the people might see just what a river and harbor bill is, from start to finish; so that the people in Wisconsin might find the number of rivers that were being appropriated for down in Alabama of which they had never heard and which no geography ever delineated on a map.

If there be no objection, I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to insert a copy of this bill in my remarks. I believe, however, that the bill as originally reported was read, but certain amendments that then appeared were subsequently disagreed to, so that now no text of the bill appears in the RECORD except in scattered form. I will, however, forego the request in view of the fact that perchance the copy of the bill now in the RECORD is quite as complete, as showing what the bill was when finally amended and offered to us for consideration, as the copy I hold in my hand.

It would be well if in conjunction with the text of the bill we could have this report go forth. The report explains in detail each and every item of the bill. It is largely drawn from the reports of the engineers. It deals with the facts and figures. I should like to have this complete report printed in order that the wheat growers in the Mississippi Valley, the miners of the Rocky Mountains, the people who work in the steel mills in Pennsylvania, and those engaged in industry and toil all over the country might find how we may expend $50,000,000 here in less than four hours upon a river and harbor bill, largely composed of items upon rivers of which the majority of the people never heard and never will hear until they come back again for an appropriation.

It has not been my purpose, Mr. President, to detain the Senate beyond this time, as the hour of 12 o'clock is near at hand.

Mr. SCOTT. I think the Senate is perfectly willing to extend the time of the Senator from Montana.

Mr. CARTER. I am perfectly willing to occupy the remainder of the time, but if any of the ceremonies of the Senate require the attention of the body, I am willing at this moment to surrender the floor.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Perhaps the Senator from Montana, before he sits down, would like to call attention to a few more items in this bill, and will do so on account of the euphonious names. I want to call his attention to Murder Kill River, in New Jersey, and Raccoon Creek, in one of the other States, both of which are to have some three or four hundred thousand dollars expended upon them.

Mr. CARTER. Raccoon Creek is in the list. Raccoon Creek has not been overlooked. Compared with most of the items to which I have alluded, it is a very meritorious item, and that is largely due to the modesty of the Senators from New Jersey.

Mr. President, in conclusion I thank the Senate for the considerate attention given to me in the course of these observations. I have endeavored to do my plain, simple duty. I realize that certain Senators, to whom this bill is very dear, indeed, earnestly wish I had yielded the floor at an earlier hour. I think upon mature reflection, however, any semblance of ill feeling incident to the disappointment of that kind will fade away. I recall many instances of contests on this floor where Senators indulged in very earnest and long-continued discussion, the effect of which was at the time to create some feeling, but it has been the general rule that the plain path of duty dictated by each man's conscience is a safe rule to follow.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, the committee who were directed by the Senate to go with the committee of the House to wait upon the President and inform him that the Congress have completed the business of the session, unless he has some further communication to make to them, have discharged their duty, and are authorized by the President to say that he has no further communication to make.

THANKS TO THE PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, I present a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALDRICH in the chair). The Senator from Arkansas presents a resolution for which he asks immediate consideration. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the resolution will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Senate are hereby tendered to Hon. WILLIAM P. FRYE for the dignified, impartial, and courteous manner in which he has presided over its deliberations during the present session.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent and unanimously agreed to.

ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senators, I thank you for the resolution just adopted and for its kind assurances. My election to the honorable office of President pro tempore of the Senate by your unanimous vote will be the pleasantest memory of my public life. Such an expression of your confidence could not be otherwise than very grateful to me. I hope that I have never betrayed it. I think I can say in this presence that I have never been conscious of yielding to any personal or political partiality.

The duties of the office, expected to be merely temporary, became practically permanent by the death of our greatly loved and lamented Vice-President, Mr. Hobart; but your cooperation and the kind consideration made their discharge easy and agreeable. Your labors in this Congress are about to close, and you are to enjoy a well-deserved rest. I sincerely hope that it may be both pleasant and profitable; that our dear Lord may not permit any great sorrow to invade your homes, and that you may each and all return to duty with renewed health and strength.

GUESTS OF THE SENATE.

At 11 o'clock and 55 minutes a. m. the members of the House of Representatives, preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms and Clerk, and headed by the Speaker and Chaplain, entered the Senate Chamber. The Speaker was escorted to a seat at the right of the President pro tempore of the Senate, the Clerk and Chaplain at the Secretary's desk, and the members of the House were escorted to the seats on the floor provided for them.

They were soon followed by the ambassadors and ministers of foreign countries, the Chief Justice, associate justices, and officers of the Supreme Court.

The heads of the Executive Departments, the Lieutenant-General Commanding the Army and his aid, the Admiral of the Navy and his aid, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and other persons entitled to admission occupied the seats on the floor of the Senate that were assigned to them.

SWEARING IN OF VICE-PRESIDENT.

The Vice-President elect (Theodore Roosevelt, of New York) entered the Chamber accompanied by members of the committee of arrangements for the inauguration, and was conducted to a seat at the right of the President pro tempore.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore administered the oath of office to the Vice-President elect.

The hour of 12 o'clock meridian having arrived,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair declares the United States Senate adjourned sine die.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

[Continuation of proceedings of legislative day, Friday, March 1, 1901.]

The recess having expired, the House reassembled at 2 o'clock p. m. (Sunday, March 3, 1901), and was called to order by the Speaker.

The Clerk read the Journal from the last approval up to the last recess; which was approved.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Rules to ask immediate action on the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order without delay or intervening motion to move to nonconcur in the Senate amendments in gross or to agree to or ask for a conference on House bill 13189, making appropriation for construction and repair and preservation of certan public works, etc.; and after ten minutes debate thereon the previous question shall be considered as ordered, and without delay or intervening motion a vote shall then be taken.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I demand the previous question.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. Has the resolution upon this subject been offered to the House and referred to the Committee on Rules?

The SPEAKER. Undoubtedly, or they would not have reported the rule.

The motion was put, and the previous question was ordered.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, when the river and harbor bill came from the Senate, upon objection being made to nonconcur in the amendments, it was sent to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors. The object of this resolution is to bring that bill from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and submit to the House at once an opportunity to vote either for or against concurring in the Senate amendments. That is the object of the rule. It is to get forward with the business in that way. I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman from Iowa desire time?

Mr. HEPBURN. He does.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. There was confusion on the floor, Mr. Speaker, and I did not catch the resolution. I would be glad if it could be reported again.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resolution will be reported again.

There was no objection.

The Clerk again reported the resolution.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman from Ohio how it happened that the rule says "agree to or ask for a conference." If the Senate has asked for a conference, plainly, then, it is for the House to agree to it. If the Senate has not asked for a conference, it is the duty of the House to ask for it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. There may have been some misunderstanding or failure to understand in regard to the rule, but the same result is reached.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I thought the rule was unusual in form.

Mr. GROSVENOR. It is.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I have no objection.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Does the gentleman from Tennessee desire to occupy some time?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I think there is no one on this side who wishes to speak. I will yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

[Mr. HEPBURN addressed the House. See Appendix.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I yield eight minutes to my colleague from Tennessee.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on this subject.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. Speaker, I shall address the House only for a very brief time before yielding my time to my friend from Nevada.

I have been greatly interested in the eloquent sermon that the gentleman from Iowa has preached to us upon this lovely Sabbath day, brimful and running over, as his sermons always are, with humanity and Christian charity. [Laughter.] I was interested also, Mr. Speaker, in the appeal which the gentleman made to the virtue existing upon this side of the Chamber, recognizing that there was none to appeal to upon his own. [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

Mr. Speaker, some gentlemen on that side of the Chamber are becoming intensely interested in the matter of economy in expenditures. The trouble with these gentlemen is that they begin at the wrong place. We are spending millions, tens of millions, hundreds of millions, upon projects upon the other side of the world, but when it comes to economy we must cut down the needful expenditures of the Government, expenditures to increase the commerce and prosperity of our own country, in order that we may have money to expend in criminal projects upon the other side of the earth. [Applause on the Democratic side.] The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] is willing to spend "millions for crime, but not one cent for commerce." [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

If gentlemen want to be economical, let them take note of the fact that hundreds of millions of dollars are being expended today, and will have to be expended in the future, to violate the solemn, honorable pledges made by this Government. We have only to be honest to keep the honor of this nation unsullied; and if we will do that, we can save money and have all that is needed to meet the peaceful expenditures of the Government.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that, in my judgment, there is no money more economically expended, or money that does more good for the people of the United States, than the money that is expended for the improvement of our rivers and harbors here in our own country.

But I say that not one dollar, not one single dollar, will ever come back to the people of the United States for the money which you are expending to-day in the Philippine Islands. You are willing to expend money in order that political and commercial adventurers and carpetbag thieves and scoundrels may have an opportunity to loot and plunder a people who have never done harm to you except by wishing to be free. [Applause on the Democratic side.] But when it comes to expending money for our own people you raise the cry of economy.

Let us be economical, Mr. Speaker, and let us spend our money here in our own land, among our own people, for the benefit of our own country, instead of squandering the blood and treasure of the nation upon criminal projects upon the other side of the world. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. Speaker, I wish to call the attention of the conferees that are to be appointed and of the House itself to three amendments of this river and harbor bill adopted by the Senate. One relates to the construction of three reservoirs on Piney Creek, in Wyoming, a tributary of the Missouri, another to the construction of the Great Bull River Reservoir, in that State, and another to the construction of reservoir on the Sioux River, in South Dakota. These three appropriations aggregate about $150,000 and involve a total, with the contracts which are herein authorized, of $337,000.

If the House will bear with me for a moment, I propose to show the relations of these reservoirs to the improvement of navigation upon the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, to which the rivers referred to are tributary. The total cost of these reservoirs will be $337,000.

Now, the average cost of storage water is between three and five dollars an acre-foot—that is to say, storage of water 1 foot deep and covering 1 acre costs between $3 and $5, and I assume that the cheapest storage has been selected for these experimental reservoirs. I assume, therefore, that from a total expenditure of $337,000 we will secure a storage of 100,000 acre-feet of water—that is to say, such water, if spread out, would cover a space of 100,000 acres 1 foot deep.

Now, you may say that the storage of that amount of flood water and its retention from the Missouri and the Mississippi rivers until the dry season, when those rivers are low, would have but little effect upon the Mississippi River below, for which we appropriate annually millions of dollars for protection against floods.

Let me state in this connection that this water is stored simply for emergency in the period of drought—the drought which comes in July and August. The storage of this water enables the utilization of the flood waters, which are not stored, for cultivation of land. The man who proposes to reclaim arid land finds the flood stream abundant for his uses in the early months of the irrigating season, but he fails to utilize it unless he is assured of a supply in July and August, when it is most needed for the maturing of the crops.

If he finds that the entire stream for these months is much reduced in volume and is appropriated by the people above, he knows that he can not reclaim the land and he abandons the enterprise; but if water is stored for use in the period of drought, he then utilizes the flood waters, knowing that when the floods abate the stored water can be utilized. Thus the storage of 100,000 acre-feet means the reclamation of at least 500,000 acres of land, and the floods which would otherwise go into the Missouri and Mississippi rivers and inundate adjoining lands are led out over the arid lands, and the lands themselves thus become the great artificial reservoirs which diminish inundation below.

Now, as I recollect, there are eight States and Territories tributary to the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, all having abundant streams which are fed by the snows in the mountains.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask, Mr. Speaker, three minutes more.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that his time be extended three minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. NEWLANDS. We have eight arid and semiarid States and Territories tributary to these great rivers, and by an expenditure of $337,000 it is proposed to store about 100,000 acre-feet of water, which in itself will, when added to the flood waters not stored, facilitate the reclamation of 500,000 acres of land, worth, when reclaimed by settlers, at least $40 per acre, or $20,000,000.

So you start by this expenditure the creation of wealth aggregating $20,000,000 out of the arid lands, now worthless, and you store about 100,000 acre-feet of flood water in the reservoirs and about 900,000 acre-feet of flood water on the lands reclaimed, and you prevent this enormous mass of flood water from being precipitated on the Lower Mississippi at a time when it is bank full and when the levees are in danger and inundation is imminent.

I ask you to continue this system as to all the rivers in these arid and semiarid States—Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, North and South Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado—by a comprehensive system of reservoirs intended to store the flood waters and enable their utilization in the reclamation of arid lands and the prevention of floods in the Mississippi and Missouri rivers.

There are two ways in which these floods can be guarded against. One is by dredging the channel or by erecting levees in order to protect adjoining lands; and another way is to maintain an equal and sustained flow of the rivers by the storage of the torrential waters. I submit that the mountain snows in these eight States, whence these great rivers take their source, contribute in no small degree to the torrential character of the Missouri and Mississippi rivers.

I trust that the conferees will take this matter into consideration when they go into conference, that they will not allow the narrow and provincial views, which have heretofore controlled them, to prevent them from entering upon a comprehensive plan of the storage of water which will immensely promote and develop the wealth of the country, by the creation of new land values and which will result in economy of expenditure lower down upon these great navigable rivers. I ask the chairman of the committee, if this matter goes into conference, if he will assure us that the House, in case they do not agree to the items, will have an opportunity to vote upon them?

Mr. BURTON. That will depend very much upon the course of business in the House. I think the chairman of the committee can give no assurance on that point. It depends upon the decision of the House. I will say to the gentleman, however, that the more time we occupy in this discussion on the special rule, the less time undoubtedly there will be for discussing the conference report when it comes.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. GROSVENOR. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DRIGGS].

Mr. DRIGGS. Mr. Speaker, when the river and harbor bill was being considered in the House I was unavoidably absent, being engaged at the time on other public business. Several anti-river and harbor Representatives at that time saw fit to attack, in a certain way, the proposition in this bill for the improvement of the Buttermilk Channel. I simply desire to say, in the little time assigned me by the gentleman from Ohio, that that is an improvement which has been recommended by the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of War of each Administration since that of Mr. President Cleveland, and I know of no proposition in this entire bill which is of more benefit to the Government itself than this same Buttermilk Channel improvement.

Let me say to the opponents of this proposition that the Buttermilk Channel is one of the two channels leading from the East River into New York Bay. There were two propositions suggested by the various Secretaries of War and the various Secretaries of the Navy—one of them the improvement of the Diamond Reef Channel and the other the improvement of the Buttermilk Channel. In consequence of the fact that the improvement of the Buttermilk Channel would cost less money, the River and Harbor Committee, looking at the interests of the Treasury of the United States, adopted the less expensive of the two projects.

I wish to say also to every opponent of this measure that at the present time our great men-of-war—our first-class battle ships—draw from 28 to 32 feet of water, and some of them, I understand, draw 33 feet. It is now almost an absolute impossibility, except at the highest tide, for all these deep-draft battle ships to come to or go from the navy-yard and sail down the East River to New York Harbor without danger of striking on the rocks at the mouth of East River.

Laying aside entirely the question of personal advantage accruing to Brooklyn from this improvement, I sincerely trust that the chairman of the River and Harbor Committee will insist on the proposition of the House in relation to the Buttermilk Channel. I believe more arguments can be made in favor of it than in favor of almost any other proposition in the bill. It is a work for the Government to do. General Wilson, of the Corps of Engineers, says repeatedly in his report that the Government should proceed to see that that harbor is dredged to a depth of 40 feet and for the width of the channel 1,000 feet. In spite of recommendations of this kind, we are told by the opponents of this bill that when an improvement of as great importance as this is proposed we are working for the personal advantage of our constituents. I say it is public advantage, not personal advantage, that we seek in the improvement of that channel from the East River to New York Bay. I ask every fair-minded man on this floor to consider carefully the following report of Major Marshall, of the Board of Army Engineers:

Buttermilk Channel is the southeasterly one of two channels connecting the East River with the main channel of New York Harbor. It extends along the Brooklyn water front southwesterly to Red Hook, where it meets the Red Hook Channel, and continues to the main harbor channel. The extreme length of Buttermilk Channel from the 40-foot curve in East River to the 40-foot curve in the main channel is 2¼ miles. Throughout this length the channel had a natural depth of about 26 feet at mean low water, but the deep waterway was crooked, in many places narrow, and on account of the rapid current it was very difficult to follow. Improvements made under different projects adopted and completed since 1880 have resulted in making the 26-foot channel 1,000 feet wide.

The piers and landings along Buttermilk Channel are points for receiving, storing, and shipping large quantities of freight, grain, South American, Caribbean, Mediterranean, and miscellaneous goods. The freight terminal of the Ward Line, the Prince Line, the Anchor Line, and the Lamport & Holt Line are on this channel.

The commerce of Buttermilk Channel consists of widely varying classes of goods, including large amounts of sugar and coffee, cotton, and other articles received and shipped to South American, Caribbean, and Mediterranean ports.

For the calendar year 1899 a fairly accurate statement of freights received has been obtained. No records of freights shipped are procurable. In previous years the shipments have exceeded the receipts by an average of about 10 per cent, and the same ratio may be assumed for 1899.

Commercial statistics for the calendar year 1899.

	Tons.	Estimated value.
Receipts	5,857,292	$177,978,512

Total	33,143

*No record.

The above statement is for cargoes and vessels at the several piers and landings. There is no means of making even an approximate estimate of the amount of freight which passes through this channel without touching at the landings.

I sincerely hope Congress will accede to our just, fair, and reasonable request. [Applause.]

Mr. GROSVENOR. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. REEVES].

Mr. REEVES. Mr. Speaker, I would not occupy a moment but for the suggestion of the gentleman from Iowa this morning charging, in effect, that the formation of a river and harbor bill is the work of a combination of interests without regard to the justice of individual claims. I have been a member of the River and Harbor Committee for six years, and I am unwilling that the gentleman's statement should go unchallenged.

This bill as passed through the House carried in round numbers $60,000,000 of appropriation—a little less than that—and the story was given currency all over the country that this was an extravagant bill, filled with projects such as are intimated by the gentleman from Iowa. Yet when this bill went to the Senate, and when the general statement was given forth that the bill must be materially reduced, the Senate, after about a month's deliberation, increased 49 of the items contained in the bill as passed by the House, the total increase of those 49 items amounting to about $1,800,000. The Senate decreased only 15 of the items in the bill, and the total amount of the decrease was about $2,600,000, of which amount more than $1,600,000 was in the one item for the improvement of the Buttermilk Channel, New York Harbor.

Mr. HEPBURN. Was there not a horizontal cut that affected many more than those propositions?

Mr. REEVES. I will answer that question in a moment. I was coming to it.

The Senate, as I have just said, increased the projects for which we made appropriations nearly $2,000,000, and decreased the projects for which we had made appropriations $2,800,000, of which $1,600,000 was in one item alone. So that of these smaller projects, of which the gentleman from Iowa especially complains, the Committee on Commerce of the Senate, after scrutinizing the bill as carefully as they could, found 15 items which, in their judgment, should be reduced, and of those 15 a majority were the larger projects. So that the judgment of the Committee on Commerce of the Senate, be it worth much or little, was a disapproval of the large projects and not of the smaller ones.

Mr. Speaker, the bill as it passed the House contained 389 different projects for which we appropriated. The Senate Committee on Commerce found but 4 which in their judgment should be thrown out, and only those 4 they rejected. They increased, as I have said, 49 of our appropriations, and decreased 15; and they added 28 new projects of their own.

Now, I want to say simply this: I am not one of those who believe that any censure is due to the gentleman from Iowa or others who may think as he does.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. REEVES. I would like just one minute more.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. We are very much interested in the speech of the gentleman, and I hope his time will be extended.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I yield the gentleman one minute more.

Mr. REEVES. Mr. Speaker, I do not think that the gentleman from Iowa and those who think with him should be censured. The policy of appropriations for this character of improvements is something about which men may honestly differ; and I agree with him upon this proposition: That the best interests of the country require that the vast amount of this appropriation should go to the larger harbors, where the greater commerce exists. I disagree with him on this point: There are a large number of smaller projects which are really valuable, and which I believe he would recognize as valuable, if time and opportunity gave him the privilege of examining them as we of the committee have to do.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, it is not the province of the Committee on Rules to judge of the value or nonvalue of an item in an appropriation bill. It would be a usurpation of authority if this committee should refuse the House the privilege of disposing of a matter of this importance in the most expeditious way, simply because they might differ about what the committee had reported on some of the items of the bill. Now, I admit that this thing of logrolling, against which the gentleman from Iowa has inveighed so eloquently, may be a very bad feature in some kinds of legislation. I notice that it runs more or less through a great many other things besides the river and harbor bill.

Now, on yesterday there came before the House a bill carrying items of appropriation for certain projects of a public character, located from the east, across the great central belt, and away out on the Pacific coast. It occurred to me that it was barely possible that there might be some community of interest between the various items of that bill, and that possibly there might be something in the nature of a little logrolling in that. I listened with great interest and great anxiety to hear my friend from Iowa get up and denounce the system of legislation that carried a combination of items like that bill. But he remained entirely and deferentially silent during the progress of debate and passage of the bill.

Mr. HEPBURN. Will the gentleman permit me to suggest that I have admitted that there was no such precipitation in my district as to make appropriations of this kind necessary?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Exactly.

Mr. HEPBURN. But there is enough rainfall to make it necessary to shield our courts from inclement weather. [Laughter.]

Mr. GROSVENOR. I listened to hear the gentleman's voice denouncing the logrolling scheme of public buildings from one end of the country to the other; and when he was silent and the bill went through practically without opposition, I turned to the bill itself to see what was the explanation——

Mr. HEPBURN. Human nature.

Mr. GROSVENOR. And if any of you want an explanation, go to the bill that passed yesterday and you will find the explanation. [Laughter and applause.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, I differ with the gentleman entirely and wholly upon another proposition. If we could regulate the size of the ships of all the world, then you might set the depth of the harbor and say, "Construct your ships to meet the water in our harbor or stay out." The trouble about it is that the shipbuilders of the old countries are unfortunately building 94 per cent of all the ships bringing foreign commerce into our harbors, and built of the depth they see fit to construct them; and we must have the depth of water or we must go without our commerce.

San Francisco asks no question of us; Seattle and Tacoma do not ask us to deepen their harbors; but there are harbors that must be deepened. If I had my way about it, for measures not only of commerce, but for measures of protection, national protection, I would put a channel not of 30 feet, but of 35 feet in the Delaware River and light that river so that it would be one great Pennsylvania avenue of commerce from Philadelphia out through the capes into the ocean. [Loud applause.] And I would invite the ships of all the world to come into our harbor.

The gentleman talked about Galveston. We did begin a project there that involved an engineering question of the material we used. When the teredo, as the vermin is named that infests the Southern waters, destroyed the mattresses put down, then we had to take another scheme. When I was a member of the River and Harbor Committee and went to Galveston, we lightered the ships that came to the harbor for 9 miles. To-day the ships laden with products of other countries coming after the products of our country go right up to the dock and discharge and receive freight, drawing the water that is necessary for the commerce of the world. So we can not measure the water with our harbor and expect to regulate the ships of the world. How are we going to compete with the manufacturers of iron and steel in the Old World if we carry only a 9-foot ship in Lake Erie, as we did twenty years ago? We must cheapen transportation by the deepening down of the bottom of the ship that carries our products, and then we can compete with the people of the Old World.

I have no fears of this appropriation. I want to say to the gentleman from Tennessee that the people of this country have never yet criticised the amount of appropriation if they believed it was for a worthy object and if they believed it was to be economically expended. We heard the same cry made two years ago in the closing hours of the Fifty-fifth Congress. This same pitiable cry went up, and the people were told that we were to be wiped off the face of the earth. I remember the warnings, that came torrential, and with more eloquence and power than we have heard today, that we were to be obliterated as a political party.

Now, then, Mr. Speaker, I have this to say: While the Democratic party exists with the present organization; while they continue attacks upon commerce and the financial credit of this country; while it organizes itself as an organized cry against the courts and the integrity of the Government of this country, I pray we may always be wiped off the earth just as we were after the predictions of two years ago. [Loud applause on the Republican side.] I can say to gentlemen that the people of this country are intelligent, they are wise, they understand as well as Congressmen do what are the real needs of the country. Now, Mr. Speaker, this bill must pass under and by virtue of this rule or it can not be passed. I have no question about the judgment of the House. The gentleman from Tennessee said the gentleman from Iowa had turned to that side of the House because, he said, there was no hope on the part of this side of the House. I do not know what was in the heart of the gentleman from Iowa. I suggest to the gentleman from Tennessee that missionaries are generally sent where the heathen live [laughter], and that they do not preach to those who are righteous, but call the other fellow to repentance. [Renewed laughter.] So that if——

Mr. CARMACK rose.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes.

Mr. CARMACK. I just want to say the gentleman from Iowa admitted the heathen were on that side, and he did not turn to them, because he had no hope.

Mr. GROSVENOR. That is one difference I have with the gentleman from Iowa in that respect.

Mr. CARMACK. One or other of the two gentlemen is bound to be right, and it is the only time that it ever occurred.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, time is precious, and I will not occupy any more than to say that the appropriations of this Congress will be overwhelmingly indorsed by the people of the country.

The SPEAKER. Time has expired on both sides. Debate is closed. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken; and the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House nonconcur in the Senate amendments to House bill 13189, making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, and ask for a conference thereon with the Senate. I only want to say——

The SPEAKER. Let the Chair state the motion. The gentleman from Ohio moves that the House nonconcur in the amendments of the Senate, in gross, on the bill H. R. 13189 and ask for a conference thereon.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, there seems to be some misapprehension of the purpose of this motion. It is a motion that we must pass in order that there may be a conference between the House and the Senate on this bill. Such action is rendered necessary by the fact that on Friday unanimous consent was refused, and I trust the motion will be promptly passed. I reserve the balance of my time. Does any gentleman want five minutes?

Mr. HEPBURN. Will the gentleman from Iowa permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. BURTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HEPBURN. I want to ask if, to his knowledge, members of this House, without appointment as a committee of conference, have been in conference with any members of the Senate upon the disagreement of the two Houses as to these items within the last two days?

Mr. BURTON. I will say that there has been an informal communication between the members of the House and the members of the Senate on this subject.

Mr. HEPBURN. Attempting to perform the usual functions of a conference committee?

Mr. BURTON. My attention for the moment was diverted by a gentleman on my left. Will the gentleman kindly repeat his question?

Mr. HEPBURN. I understand they have been acting as a conference committee with all the usual powers, except those of appointment.

Mr. BURTON. Nothing has been finally determined upon, I will say to the gentleman, but it has borne a very close analogy to a conference.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed as managers on the part of the House Mr. BURTON, Mr. REEVES, and Mr. CATCHINGS.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to bills of the following titles:

S. 4687. An act for the relief of Richard H. Townley, a lieutenant (junior grade) on the retired list of the United States Navy; and

S. 4787. An act to authorize the appointment of Thomas Lutz Stitt as an officer in the Navy.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to amendment No. 2 of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12901) to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of lands, etc.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 14309. An act for the reward of enlisted men of the Navy or Marine Corps;

H. R. 14260. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to constitute a new division of the eastern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for the holding of terms of court at Sherman, Tex., and for the appointment of a clerk for said court, and for other purposes," approved February 19, 1901;

H. R. 1452. An act to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to John C. Weckler; and

H. R. 13776. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to deliver to the mayor and city council of Baltimore, Md., Ionic columns.

COMMISSION TO VISIT PORTO RICO, THE PHILIPPINES, AND CUBA.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following privileged report.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. ——) to provide for the appointment of a commission to visit Porto Rico, the Philippines, and Cuba, and report on the conditions therein.

Be it resolved, etc., That the Speaker shall appoint a commission of seven members of the Committee on Insular Affairs, who are members-elect of the next Congress, to visit Porto Rico, the Philippines, and Cuba, who shall report to the next Congress, at its first session, all such facts and conclusions as they deem material bearing upon the relations of the United States with said Porto Rico, the Philippines, and Cuba and the inhabitants thereof. Not more than four members of said commission shall be of one political party. The expenses of said commission, including not to exceed $1,200 for a stenographer, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House upon vouchers signed by the chairman of that commission.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this resolution is to authorize the Speaker to appoint a commission consisting of seven members to visit Porto Rico, the Philippines, and Cuba, and report such information as they may gain to the next Congress at its first session. The commission is to consist of seven members, four Republicans and three Democrats. They are to be appointed from the members of the Committee on Insular Affairs who are members-elect of the next Congress. The resolution is in the shape of a joint resolution, inasmuch as it was the opinion of the committee that under the decisions Congress could not prolong any of its parliamentary functions beyond its adjournment. That being the case, and as this will have to receive the signature of the President, it is material that whatever action the House shall take should be taken promptly.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. May I ask the gentleman what is the necessity for including the Philippines when we have the Taft Commission there? Why not rely on that, and allow this commission to go to Porto Rico and Cuba?

Mr. DALZELL. I would say to the gentleman that it has been suggested that one of the purposes of a commission of this kind would be to satisfy Congress as to the correctness or incorrectness of the report made by the Taft Commission.

Mr. POWERS. Would it not be necessary to send a committee after this one?

Mr. DALZELL. I should think that would be a question for the next Congress. [Laughter.] I now yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON].

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Rules considered the resolution very carefully, and I think the reasons which exist in favor of its adoption are many, and that there is nothing to be said against it. This is not the ordinary junket. I think it is absolutely essential in order for members to legislate intelligently with respect to our insular possessions that we should get it from partisan sources. For this reason I favor this resolution. I am opposed to getting it from nonpartisan sources. I want to get it from partisan sources so as to get all the truth. Let both sides be represented by their partisans and the whole truth can be brought out.

Mr. KING. Will the gentleman allow me?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Certainly.

Mr. KING. I think the argument of my friend that we need information is correct. [Laughter.] Does he not think it would have been better to obtain the information before the Senate and House acted upon the legislation?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I do, but I think we shall have to legislate with reference to these possessions in the next Congress, and should possess ourselves of all the facts.

Mr. STEELE. Will the gentleman allow me?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Certainly.

Mr. STEELE. As long as we are about to surrender Cuba, and already have a commission in the Philippines, would not the gentleman consider this a provision for a junket, pure and simple?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I do not.

Mr. STEELE. I do.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I consider it essential in order to get at the facts, because I do not think we have ever had the facts. I now yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker' I do not care to make any extended remarks. It seems to me we can get this information, if that is what we really want, in other ways. It seems to me we have obtained already information from a good many sources as to the conditions there, and will have information as to new conditions if they change. What is wanting is not information of the subject of iniquities and un-Americanism in the Philippines, but the power to arouse the moral sense of our own people. I agree with the gentleman from Indiana that this is going to result in nothing less and nothing more than one more great, big, Congressional junketing tour. I have never known one of these committees appointed by the House to go off for the purpose of "seeking information" that ever brought back any useful information to the House. They are wined and dined and junketed and made to take the views of those by whom they are surrounded, like a chameleon.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. STEELE. Let us have the yeas and nays on this resolution.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Vermont desires time, and I yield to him.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Speaker, this is the baldest, boldest, and most inexcusable proposition for a junketing trip I ever heard made on the floor of this House. [Applause.] The only excuse that is given to us comes from the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL], who says that the commission we have already sent to all these islands—and there are several—ought to be looked after by another commission. Will it not follow, necessarily, Mr. Speaker, that after this commission has made its report the next Congress will have occasion to send out another commission to look after this commission and see if it has done its duty? I hope this will be voted down by an overwhelming majority. [Applause.]

Mr. DALZELL. I now yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER].

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, the commission now in the Philippines was appointed by the Executive, and as to the politics of the respective members of the commission, nobody knows. I think that if Congress is to legislate for those islands it should appoint a commission representing the respective political parties of the country to visit them and investigate and report to Congress, and in support of that position I call the attention of the committee to what Senator JOHN C. SPOONER said in the Senate. I will read:

> I should say that we will not be ready to legislate for the Philippines until we shall have sent a joint committee from both Houses over there to investigate thoroughly the situation there, the people, the form of government which would be adapted to them. That we have not done.
> Mr. TELLER. Are we likely to do it?
>
> Mr. SPOONER. I hope we will do it.
>
> Mr. TELLER. When?
>
> Mr. SPOONER. I hope we will provide for it before this session comes to an end.
>
> Mr. TELLER. I see no signs of it.
>
> Mr. SPOONER. I have intended to propose a resolution of that kind, and I shall endeavor to do so.
>
> Mr. HALE. It ought to be done.
> Mr. SPOONER. Of course it ought to be done. Congress ought to know the exact situation in the Philippines in every aspect, and it seems to me to be one of the first duties of Congress to provide itself with information upon which can be adopted a reasonable and sensible legislative policy of some kind as to government in the Philippines.

The SPEAKER. The Chair feels it to be his duty to state to the gentleman from Wisconsin that this treatment of the action of the Senate in discussion is beyond the realm of parliamentary law.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I did not suppose that reading verbatim from the report of the Senate debate was a violation of the rules.

The SPEAKER. That is exactly what is prohibited. Each House must have its own freedom of debate.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Of course, Mr. Speaker, I accept the ruling of the Chair. I know that comments are improper concerning utterances in debate in the Senate, but I made no comments.

But, Mr. Speaker, I can conceive of no greater abdication of the function of Congress than for this body, composed of members of all political parties, to leave to the Executive alone the eliciting of the information on which we base legislation for islands which have no representatives in this body.

The Senate at the last Congress passed a resolution to send a commission to Hawaii. There was nothing of a junketing trip, as I understand, on the part of the committee that went to Hawaii—composed of members of both bodies of Congress—members of the House and members of the Senate—who went to that island two years ago, and who afterwards submitted their report.

A member of that commission, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. TAWNEY] made on this floor a very forcible speech in which his information was given at first hand. He spoke of what he had seen and what he had heard from the natives—what he knew, not what a person appointed by another man had said.

So far as a junketing trip is concerned, I am sure there will be nothing of a junket about it; there will be nothing improper done by the committee, but every effort will be made by us as legislators to see what is going on in our insular possessions. This information will be collected by Republicans and by Democrats, and a nonpartisan commission will report to this body.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. This resolution, I believe, provides that the members of this commission shall not be all of one political party. I would like to know whether the Democrats to be appointed will be Democrats who voted the Republican ticket or bona fide Democrats?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I do not know of any Democrat on this floor who has voted with the Republicans during this session upon any matter pertaining to the government of our insular possessions.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. What I want to know is whether we are going to have appointed McKinley Democrats or Cleveland Democrats or real, "sure-enough" Democrats. [Laughter.]

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. In reply to the gentleman from Missouri, I will say that I introduced the original resolution on this subject, and it provided for the sending of the whole Committee on Insular Affairs to those islands.

Mr. POWERS. Why not take in the whole House? Why not let us all go?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Oh, no——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Will the gentleman from Wisconsin yield to me a moment?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Certainly.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Under this resolution the three Democrats to be appointed must be members of the Insular Committee. There are but four gentlemen in that category—Mr. JONES of Virginia, Mr. MADDOX of Georgia, Mr. HENRY of Texas, and Mr. JAMES R. WILLIAMS of Illinois.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. No one will question the ultra-Democracy of those gentlemen.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. They are all right.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Missouri whether the Democracy of those gentlemen is satisfactory?

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Certainly. I was thinking of the case of a gentleman from Tennessee who was appointed on the Philippine Commission, and of other cases of gentlemen appointed on commissions, who were selected as representatives of the Democracy, but who happened universally to be gentlemen who had voted against the Democratic ticket. I was apprehensive the same thing might happen in this case. I did not want to see appointed as Democrats men who had voted for McKinley.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. As the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHACKLEFORD] has referred to "a gentleman from Tennessee," will he not tell us who the gentleman was?

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I referred to Hon. Luke Wright, of the Taft Commission.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, there is another aspect to this question to which I wish to call the attention of the House. It has been charged in the House repeatedly—it has been charged in the newspapers of the country, many of them formerly Republican newspapers, and by many Democratic newspapers—that the information we are now getting from our insular possessions is not true information. I have read within the last three or four days that the information coming from those islands is distorted, that the press reports are censored, and that we can not legislate here as we ought to do in view of our duty to ourselves and our constituents. So, in all fairness, I suggest that this trip here proposed, instead of being a junketing trip, will be, if honorable men are appointed (and I can not doubt they will be) a patriotic trip to elicit information which we ought to have at first hand—information nonpartisan in character, and the only information which Congress will get which is nonpartisan.

Mr. BURKE of Texas. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire in anything I have said to make any insinuations as to the great ability, the perfect integrity, and the absolutely pure patriotism of the commission now in those islands. I have met those gentlemen. I know their reputation, as all of you gentlemen do. They are men of exceptional ability, some of them; and I use this adjective advisedly.

Mr. POWERS. If the members of that commission are men of such high character, why can you not trust their judgment?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I believe, as has been said repeatedly in the newspapers of the country, that we ought to have nonpartisan information on these questions from a body composed of members of all parties.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I should like to know why this commission should be confined to members of the Insular Committee?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Because under the rules that committee has exclusive charge of business pertaining to those islands.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Is that a good reason why this commission should be composed entirely of members of that committee? Could not other members of the House obtain some information which would be valuable?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I will say to the gentleman that when legislation touching these matters comes before the House it must of necessity come from that committee.

Mr. JONES of Washington. But it has to be considered by the whole House.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. That is perfectly true; but under the rules of the House the debate is almost entirely carried on—at least the principal debate—by members of that committee.

Mr. GRIGGS rose.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. GRIGGS. As I understand it, the Schurman Commission was first appointed to inquire into conditions in the Philippines. Is that true?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Yes, sir.

Mr. GRIGGS. Then, the Taft Commission was appointed to inquire into the correctness of the report of the Schurman Commission. Is that true?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. No; it was not appointed for that purpose.

Mr. GRIGGS. And now we are to appoint another commission to inquire into the correctness of the report of the Taft Commisson. Am I right? If so, I should like to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin who is to watch this new commission?

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD].

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I first desire order.

Mr. SNODGRASS. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has charge of the floor, so that any application for time will have to be made to him.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I only want to say a few words in favor of this committee. We have had a number of commissions appointed to investigate and report upon the condition of our new possessions. I do not know of any report that has been made by any of these commissions that has been satisfactory to this side of the House. There is not a gentleman on this side of the House that I know of that has given full faith and credit to the report of any commission that has been appointed by the Executive to report the facts to us. I know that the information of these commissions has not given satisfaction.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is of the utmost importance that gentlemen on this side of the House especially should be furnished with facts that they can rely upon, that they can believe in, that they are willing to take as the basis of their action when we come to legislate hereafter. Regardless of what position the Supreme Court may take on these important questions, whether they will hold the present law constitutional or unconstitutional, there is no man on the floor of this House who does not know next winter we will be called upon to legislate in some way with reference to those questions. Now, I say to the Democrats of this House it seems to be folly, when we have an opportunity of sending three Democrats from the floor of this House of high character and personal standing and integrity that can not be questioned by any man, to refuse to take that opportunity to send those gentlemen there to bring us back the facts which we can use for the purpose of legislation.

Moreover, I say that the best way for this House to obtain information that it desires to use for the purpose of legislation is to appoint its own committees and send them forth to investigate, and not create commissions appointed by the Executive and then rely on their information.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If we can not trust the members of this House to furnish us correct information, which will show us what is the best character of legislation, whom can we trust? More than that, we have had it illustrated to us in the last few months that if we want to get the facts, the bottom facts, in reference to a particular subject, the best way is to authorize a committee or commission that we can send forth as a committee from this House. Look at the investigation we have had as to the affairs at West Point. The remedy was pointed out——

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. But that had no politics in it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, but here politics are cared for by three Democrats.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DALZELL. I yield one minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SULZER].

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, I am constrained to differ with my friend the gentleman from Tennessee. I believe this resolution should be defeated. It ought to be, in my opinion. For myself, I am opposed to Congressional junketing committees and Congressional junketing trips. If members of Congress want to visit Porto Rico, Cuba, and the Philippine Islands, let them go, and God speed them; but, sir, let them go at their own expense, and not at the expense of the taxpayers of the country. I sincerely believe the adoption of this resolution will be futile. It will establish a bad precedent, which ought not to be established. It will be a great expense, with no satisfactory results. It will give us no additional information. We have now all the information we want in regard to Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands to do our duty to humanity and to ourselves according to the traditions of this Republic.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DALZELL. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. SNODGRASS].

Mr. SNODGRASS. Mr. Speaker, I am not surprised to see that the other side are becoming alarmed at the situation as it presents itself to them. The thing I am surprised at is the fact that they are willing to confess their condition before the American people, and that they need to ask further information upon this subject.

But, Mr. Speaker, in reply to the facetious reference of the gentleman from Missouri to General Wright, of Tennessee, a member of the commission, I wish to say that the Democracy of General Wright will compare very favorably with the Democracy of the gentleman from Missouri. General Wright was a gallant Confederate soldier, and is an eminent lawyer, and I will say to the gentleman that he has the unquestioned confidence and respect of all the people in his great State.

Mr. DALZELL. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois, a member of the committee.

Mr. JAMES R. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, while I am a member of the Committee on Insular Affairs, I desire to say I knew nothing of the appointment or proposed appointment of this commission until a few moments ago.

I wish to say, further, that I have no desire to go on this commission, and am not a candidate for one of the places; but I desire to say with all sincerity that in my judgment the members of this House would make a great mistake if they vote down this proposition. If you vote it down, let Democrats cease to complain against the character of information which we get from commissions sent by the Administration to these various islands. I am opposed to junketing trips.

The committee appointed to investigate hazing was not a junketing committee. This Administration had appointed a committee to investigate that subject, yet its information was of but little value compared with the information received by the members appointed by this House. I say if you are not satisfied on either side with the men to be selected, then let each party meet in caucus and select its members to be appointed upon this commission.

I believe the men who are appointed as Democrats ought to be Democrats, and not Administration Democrats. Let the men appointed as Republicans be Republicans. I have served long enough on the Committee on Insular Affairs to know how important it is, if it is to recommend any legislation to this House, that we should have proper information as to the conditions existing in those islands, as to what their people want, and as to what the people need, and this, in my judgment, is the only way that we can get information that is reliable.

The majority of this House must be satisfied with the report, and the minority of this House will receive much more reliable information than it will by any commission which has been appointed. I know some men appointed by the Administration on various commissions of this character, men aspiring to be kept in office by the Administration, men who go there without any independence.

I believe in sending as the three men of this commission independent Democrats who will go there and seek for information without any color whatever, and let the Republicans do the same thing. The little expense that attaches to it is nothing as compared with the vast importance connected with the legislation of this Congress over the affairs of the people in these islands.

Mr. Speaker, as I understand, there is no salary connected with it, and I want to say that because I am a member of that committee I do not intend to vote on this proposition. I am not a candidate for the place, I have no anxiety to make the trip, and if these men are appointed they will bring us information that is reliable; and if you do not like these men, let it be agreed that each party in caucus shall select its own men and recommend them to the Speaker and let them be appointed, for it is important that this House receive reliable information not only in regard to Porto Rico, but more especially as to the Philippine Islands. [Loud applause.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. HALE, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. TELLER as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

SUNDRY CIVIL BILL.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report upon the sundry civil bill, and ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the conference report and ask that the statement only be read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois presents a conference report upon the sundry civil bill, and asks that the statement be read and the reading of the report be omitted. Is there objection?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I desire to reserve all points of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana reserves all points of order on the report. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

[For conference report see Senate proceedings.]

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action on each of said amendments recommended in the accompanying conference report, namely:

On No. 1: Strikes out the appropriation of $75,000 proposed by the Senate for public building at Butte, Mont.

On No. 2: Appropriates $28,000, as proposed by the Senate, for rental of quarters at Cleveland, Ohio.

On Nos. 3 and 4: Appropriates $175,000, as proposed by the Senate, for buildings at immigrant station on Ellis Island, and makes a verbal correction in the text.

On No. 7: Strikes out the provision proposed by the Senate extending the limit of cost of public building at Cheyenne, Wyo., to $325,000.

On No. 9: Inserts the provision proposed by the Senate authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury not to sell the old public building at St. Paul, Minn.

On No. 10: Appropriates $50,000, as proposed by the Senate, for a boarding vessel for Reedy Island quarantine station.

On No. 11: Appropriates $40,000, as proposed by the House, for a boarding vessel at Port Townsend quarantine station.

On Nos. 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18, and 19: Appropriates, as proposed by the Senate, for a light-house and fog signal at Point-no-Point, Maryland, $65,000; for a light-house tender for the Seventh district, $85,000; for a light-house tender for the Eighth district, $125,000 instead of $40,000 for a steamer for the Mobile ship-channel lights; extends the limit of cost of the inspector's and engineer's light-house tenders for the Ninth district to $115,000 each; appropriates for the Point Dume light-house station, California, $63,000, and for a light-house tender for the Tenth district, $125,000.

On No. 21: Appropriates $4,000, as proposed by the Senate, for maintenance of lights on channels of the Great Lakes.

On Nos. 22 and 23: Makes the appropriation for Porto Rican light-house establishment available for buoys.

On Nos. 24 and 25: Appropriates $200,000, instead of $150,000, as proposed by the House, and $100,000, as proposed by the Senate, for light-house and fog signals in Alaskan waters, and strikes out the provision proposed by the Senate authorizing contracts for said service at an additional cost of $250,000.

On No. 27: Appropriates $2,000, as proposed by the Senate, for a Lyle gun, beach apparatus, and two surfboats for use at Cape Nome, Alaska.

On No. 29: Appropriates $50,000, as proposed by the Senate, for a revenue cutter at Boston.

On Nos. 31, 32, 33, and 34: Appropriates $13,400, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $3,400, as proposed by the House, for special surveys by the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

On No. 37: Requires the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution to report the expenditures under all appropriations made under the Astrophysical Observatory, as proposed by the Senate.

On No. 38: Appropriates $4,400, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $4,040, as proposed by the House, for rent of workshops for National Museum.

On Nos. 39, 40, and 43: Appropriates $4,000, as proposed by the Senate, for improvements at the Green Lake, Me., fish hatchery; $8,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $6,000, as proposed by the House, for additional land and water rights at San Marcos, Tex., fish hatchery, and $10,000, as proposed by the Senate, for a lobster hatchery on the coast of Maine.

On Nos. 44, 45, and 46: Appropriates $223,955.48, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $192,105.48, as proposed by the House, to pay interest on the public debt of Hawaii, and makes a verbal correction in the text.

On No. 47: Appropriates $1,086,300, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $1,035,000, as proposed by the House, for assistant custodians and janitors of public buildings, and prohibits the use of any other fund for this service.

On No. 48: Appropriates $19,500, as proposed by the Senate, for food and clothing for native inhabitants of the islands of St. Paul and St. George, Alaska.

On No. 50: Reappropriates, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation of $7,000 heretofore made for coal bin for the Pension Office building.

On Nos. 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, and 59, relating to Capitol building: Appropriates $37,530, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $34,250, as proposed by the House, for work at the Capitol; strikes out the appropriation, proposed by the House, of $18,200 for re covering with copper the roof of the central portion of the Capitol, and appropriates $153,500, as proposed by the Senate, for reconstructing and fireproofing the roof of the central portion of the Capitol; appropriates $2,150, as proposed by the Senate, for improving the steam-heating and ventilating apparatus in the Senate wing, and $25,000 instead of $67,500, as proposed by the Senate, for fireproof shelving in the Senate document rooms; appropriates $1,550 for repairs to the elevator in the Maltby Building, and $61,000 instead of $58,000 for refurnishing the Hall of the House and certain rooms in the House wing; and inserts a provision authorizing members of the House of the Fifty-sixth Congress to purchase the old desks used by them.

On Nos. 60 and 61: Inserts the provision proposed by the Senate relative to the manner of the selection of agents and others under the appropriations to prevent depredations on public timber and for the protection of forest reservations.

On Nos. 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, and 69, relating to surveying the public lands: Makes the appropriation therefor immediately available but not continuing; authorizes the survey of lines of reservations except forest reservations; strikes out the provision, proposed by the Senate, authorizing the examination of surveying returns in the General Land Office; inserts a provision authorizing per diem compensation to surveyors of examination of public surveys; appropriates $480 for a custodian for Fort Sherman abandoned military reservation in Idaho; and appropriates $3,300, as proposed by the Senate, for surveying portions of the northern and western boundaries of the Yellowstone Park.

On Nos. 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, and 83, relating to the Geological Survey: Appropriates $16,000, instead of $13,000 as proposed by the House and $20,000 as proposed by the Senate, for skilled laborers and temporary employees; $250,000, instead of $240,000 as proposed by the House and $260,000 as proposed by the Senate, for topographic surveys; $16,280, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $14,000, as proposed by the House, for illustrations for Geological Survey; requires that the report on Mineral Resources shall be published in one octavo volume and as a distinct publication; appropriates $5,000, instead of $6,000 as proposed by the House, for purchase of necessary books and payment for transmission of public documents through the Smithsonian exchange; appropriates $75,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $70,000, as proposed by the House, for engraving and printing geological maps; strikes out the provision, proposed by the Senate, to include Porto Rico within the provision for gauging streams; and makes an appropriation for the survey of forest reservations available for such reservations as may hereafter be designated.

On No. 85: Authorizes, as proposed by the Senate, the lease of the land known as Mesa Verde, in Colorado, to the Colorado Cliff Dwelling Association.

On No. 86: Strikes out the appropriation of $15,000, proposed by the Senate, for binding the population schedules of the Eleventh Census.

On No. 87: Inserts the provision, proposed by the Senate, authorizing the Secretary of War to care for insane patients at any State asylum in California.

On No. 90: Appropriates $130,500, as proposed by the Senate, for completion of water-power dam at Rock Island Arsenal.

On No. 92: Appropriates $2,400, as proposed by the Senate, for the employment of an engineer by the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds in Washington.

On No. 100: Authorizes the purchase of additional land, not to exceed $2,500, for Vicksburg National Military Park.

On No. 103: Appropriates $50,000, as proposed by the Senate, for a power house and nurses' home at Providence Hospital.

On No. 104: Appropriates $1,750, as proposed by the Senate, for work on the isolating ward at Garfield Memorial Hospital.

On No. 106: Appropriates $1,500, as proposed by the Senate, for expenses attending the unveiling of the statue of General Logan.

On No. 107: Appropriates $50,000, as proposed by the Senate, for a statue of General McClellan.

On No. 109: Strikes out the appropriation of $25,000 proposed by the Senate for the relief of the destitute in Alaska.

On No. 120: Strikes out the appropriation of $30,000 proposed by the Senate for one barrack at the Leavenworth Soldiers' Home.

On No. 136: Strikes out the provision for two additional members of the commission to codify the criminal and penal laws of the United States, and authorizes said commission to codify all laws of the United States of a permanent and general nature.

On No. 137: Restores to the bill the provision proposed by the House authorizing payment of district attorneys for services rendered by direction of the Attorney-General in cases before the Supreme Court.

On Nos. 138 and 139: Appropriates $7,500 for clerks to Senators who are not chairmen of committees, and $21,000 for furniture for new committee rooms for the Senate.

On No. 140: Strikes out the appropriation of $20,000 proposed by the Senate for a replica of the statue of Washington.

On No. 141: Strikes out the appropriation of $4,000 proposed by the Senate for a statue of Longfellow.

On No. 142: Appropriates $7,500, as proposed by the Senate, for a replica of a statue of Rochambeau.

On Nos. 143, 144, and 145: Appropriates $15,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $7,000, as proposed by the House, for illustrations for the report of the Geological Survey.

On Nos. 146 and 147: Strikes out the provisions proposed by the Senate relating to the catalogue of Government publications.

On No. 148: Authorizes, as proposed by the Senate, the publication of the proceedings in connection with the reception of the Webster statue.

On No. 153: Inserts the provision proposed by the Senate to settle certain claims relating to the Hot Springs Mountain Reservation in Arkansas.

J. G. CANNON,
W. H. MOODY,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. KITCHIN. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KITCHIN. Is it in order to demand a separate vote upon any items upon which the conferees have agreed?

The SPEAKER. The report must be adopted or fall as a whole.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois a question.

Mr. CANNON. What is it?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want to ask the gentleman if there will be an opportunity for debate upon these items that are not agreed to?

Mr. CANNON. If there is something that really calls for debate I would be glad to yield, as briefly as possible, to the gentleman, but I first want to adopt the conference report.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the gentleman does not allow debate before the report is adopted, I see no object in the debate.

Mr. CANNON. I think nobody can have any objection to the adoption of the conference report. The items are closed by the conference report and then there are probably one-third of the items not agreed to.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to ask the gentleman—I was called out during the reading of the statement, and did not get clearly all the items—if the conferees agreed on the various items of legislation, such as the St. Louis fair bill, the monument bill, and the bridge bill, that have been rejected by this House but have been put on by the Senate?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, no; the Senate receded in some instances and the House recedes in other instances by the conference report; but there is one-half or one-third of the amendments, including the fair bill, that are not agreed to. If the gentleman has any specific item in his mind I will be glad to answer.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand the items such as the St. Louis fair bill, the bridge bill, are not agreed to.

Mr. CANNON. No agreement as to the exposition, bridge, or the fair bill.

Mr. McRAE rose.

Mr. CANNON. I will yield to my colleague.

Mr. McRAE. I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that I hope the report will be adopted.

Mr. NEWLANDS. May I ask the gentleman from Illinois whether an opportunity will be presented to consider the items upon which there is still a disagreement after this report is approved?

Mr. CANNON. That matter is under the direction of the House.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I would like five minutes' time on a certain item here.

Mr. CANNON. I will see in my time what can be done about it. I want to see how much time is to be had.

Mr. HOPKINS. I was called out and did not hear all the report read. I would like to know what action was taken on amendment 150 of the Senate, increasing the salary of certain appraisers in Boston and Philadelphia.

Mr. CANNON. It was disagreed to.

Mr. LACEY. I want to ask the gentleman about amendment 109, authorizing a small appropriation for the War Department to take care of the indigent sick and destitute in Alaska.

Mr. CANNON. The Senate receded from that and there was an agreement.

Mr. LACEY. Does not the gentleman think that item ought to remain in, in view of the fact that the fees for licenses that go into the Treasury are much more than enough to make provision for these sick people and there is no local government to provide for it?

Mr. CANNON. The judgment of the House conferees in making this agreement was that the indigent sick are reported to be up somewhere toward the Frozen Ocean, about Cape Nome, and over that section of the country. Many weeks would pass by before they could be relieved; and before the relief would come the fishing season would begin, and we did not believe it policy to begin to debauch and demoralize these people.

The SPEAKER. The question is on adopting the conference report.

The question was taken; and the report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CANNON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Is there a separate vote demanded on any of the remaining amendments?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I desire to interrogate the chairman, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I want a separate vote upon amendment No. 151.

Mr. CANNON. I have not yielded the floor, Mr. Speaker. I desire to move that the House further insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendments and consent to another conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois moves that the House further insist on its disagreement to the other amendments of the Senate and agree to a conference.

Mr. ALEXANDER rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I move that the House recede and concur——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has already indicated the amendment upon which he wants a separate vote.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. Speaker, I ask the House to recede from its disagreement—I have not the number of the amendment——

The SPEAKER. The Chair, then, will recognize the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. RIXEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire a separate vote on amendment 105.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I would like to ask, Mr. Speaker, whether the conferees have agreed upon amendment 88, with reference to the purchase and exchange of land for the insane asylum?

Mr. CANNON. There is no agreement for two reasons. First, I desired the House to take action upon it if it wanted to do so; and second, there comes a proposition from the Secretary of the Interior and the superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Asylum in which they ask a modification of these amendments that will permit a further exchange of land so as to enable the asylum to obtain the whole 140 acres, in round numbers, for other land that the Goverment owns.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Is it the intention of the gentleman from Illinois to ask the House to pass upon the question at this time?

Mr. CANNON. I did not so intend, but I want to say that if it is the sense of the House to consider the matter now, I have no objection. I want to say, and I would have said it before if I had had the opportunity, that there is a proposition before the conference committee, or rather a request, to modify the Senate provision so as to authorize the further exchange of land, the object being to obtain for the Government and use of the asylum 140 acres south of the road.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield to me at the proper time to make a motion to concur in the Senate amendment?

Mr. CANNON. That is the gentleman's right.

The SPEAKER. What is the number of the amendment on which the gentleman from Indiana desires a separate vote?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Eighty-eight.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask a separate vote on amendments numbered 81 and 82.

Mr. LLOYD. I ask the gentlemen of the committee whether there was an agreement as to amendment numbered 89?

Mr. CANNON. There was a disagreement upon that amendment.

Mr. LLOYD. I simply wished to call attention to the fact that a bill was passed yesterday providing for education in Alaska for the coming year.

Mr. McCLEARY. I desire a separate vote on amendment numbered 141.

Mr. CANNON. That amendment is included in the conference report. The Senate receded.

Mr. LACEY. What was done with amendment numbered 152? There has been some work in progress there.

Mr. CANNON. There was no agreement touching that.

Mr. LACEY. Is there any objection to agreeing to the Senate amendment?

Mr. CANNON. I can not answer the gentleman.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I give notice that I desire a separate vote on amendment numbered 8, providing for the purchase of the Corcoran Art Gallery. I do not know that I shall insist upon a separate vote; but I do not wish to be barred from having such a vote if I should desire it.

Mr. HOPKINS. I ask for a separate vote on amendment numbered 150.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Before the question is put, I wish to ask the gentleman from Illinois whether he will yield a few minutes for debate?

Mr. CANNON. I want to yield only for real debate, and as little of it as possible, because this bill is to go back to conference and there must be another report, possibly two. Various other bills will come tramping in on the heels of this, and to-morrow at 12 o'clock this Congress dies. So that I hope there will be no debate except that which is to the point, and as brief as possible.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I would like to inquire in regard to the amendment concerning the Mesaverda Reservation.

Mr. CANNON. I am going to delight my friend's heart by telling him he is more fortunate than he supposed. On that amendment the House has receded, and the amendment is concurred in.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I am glad to hear it.

The SPEAKER. The vote will now be taken on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman from Illinois decline to yield me any time?

Mr. CANNON. I decline to yield any now. We first want to get these amendments adopted on which separate votes are not asked.

Mr. HULL. I wish to reserve for a separate vote the amendment numbered 99.

The SPEAKER. The motion of the gentleman from Illinois will be put upon all amendments except those which have been reserved, and which the Chair will now enumerate: Amendments numbered 8, 151, 105, 88, 81, 82, 150, and 99.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman from Illinois decline to yield to me?

Mr. CANNON. I decline to yield to anyone now. I want first to dispose of these amendments on which a separate vote has not been asked.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not desire to debate any particular one of the amendments. I wish to address my remarks to all of them—to the bill in general. I believe this is the proper time.

Mr. CANNON. I decline to yield to the gentleman for that purpose at this time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois, that the House further insist on its disagreement to all the amendments of the Senate except those just enumerated by the Chair, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question will first be taken on amendment numbered 8, on which a separate vote was reserved by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR].

Mr. GROSVENOR. I withdraw that demand.

Mr. SHERMAN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry—whether it is not in order to consider first amendment 151, the amendment upon which a separate vote was first asked.

The SPEAKER. The vote will be taken upon these amendments in the order in which they appear in the bill. The demand for a separate vote having been withdrawn in regard to amendment numbered 8, the question is, Will the House further insist on its disagreement to that amendment and agree to the conference?

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish to ask a parliamentary inquiry. Do I understand the Chair to hold that it is not in order to consider first the amendment upon which a separate vote was first asked?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has answered that question. The amendments will be voted upon in the order in which they appear in the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is not the question which I asked. My question was whether it was not the proper procedure to vote first upon the amendment on which a separate vote was first asked.

The SPEAKER. That is not a right that can properly be insisted upon. The Chair announced that the amendments would be voted upon in the order in which they appear in the bill. The next amendment is amendment numbered 81.

Mr. CANNON. I ask the Clerk to read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "wells," in line 5, page 70, insert "in arid and semiarid sections."

The SPEAKER. On this amendment a separate vote was reserved by the gentleman from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS]. What motion does he desire to submit?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I wish to move that the House recede from its disagreement to amendments numbered 81 and 82, and concur in those amendments. I would like the chairman of the committee to grant me a few moments for the discussion of this question.

The SPEAKER. If there is no objection, the question will be put as to amendments 81 and 82 at the same time. The Clerk will report 82.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 70, line 7, strike out "one" and insert "two;" so that it will read "$200,000."

Mr. CANNON. Now, Mr. Speaker, I am under obligations to yield just a moment. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would say to the chairman of the committee it is proposed to yield the gentleman from Nevada some time, and I will wait until he is through.

Mr. CANNON. I do not desire to yield beyond question, or an exceedingly short statement touching this matter. It has been discussed time and again; the House is familiar with it, and I want to vote as promptly as possible.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Will the gentleman permit me a few minutes for the purpose of discussing this question?

Mr. CANNON. I do not want to go into any formal discussion of the question again.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I only need five minutes.

Mr. CANNON. Twice—I think three times—has this and kindred questions been discussed.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I beg the gentleman's pardon. This question has not been discussed. I ask for only five minutes.

Mr. CANNON. My friend, I hope, can get along with two minutes.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will compromise on four. [Laughter.]

Mr. CANNON. I yield to my friend two minutes, if it is useful to him.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I want four.

Mr. CANNON. There are matters on this bill that are going to take time. This is old straw—the House is very familiar with it. I must beg of my friend to be as brief as possible. I yield him three minutes.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. Speaker, the time given by the gentleman is hardly sufficient to intelligently cover this question. This amendment relates to gauging streams, and investigations by the Geological Survey of the best method of dealing with the water resources of the arid and semiarid regions.

The House appropriated $100,000 for the purpose, and the Senate has increased it to $200,000, that amount lacking $50,000 of the amount recommended by the Geological Survey. Now, I wish to say there are four methods that have been presented to this House of dealing with this great question.

Some gentlemen in this House are in favor of simply taking one project as an experiment and ascertaining the result before proceeding further, and some, including the chairman of the Appropriations Committee [Mr. CANNON], are in favor of ceding the public lands of the West to the arid and semiarid States, so as to enable them to go on with the work of reclamation.

Others are in favor of direct appropriations from the Treasury, in a bill analogous to the river and harbor bill, for the storage and conservation of the waters of the arid and semiarid regions. Others, including myself, believe the Government should administer these as a great trust, in order that the receipts for the public lands shall go into a public fund to be called the reclamation fund; that fund to be used for the reclamation of the arid lands in those 16 States and Territories, the lands to be held for actual settlers in small tracts. It is an automatic plan for reclamation.

Now, objection is always made on this floor that no information is presented to the House as to the ultimate cost of this work. It is utterly impossible to give any estimate. This work will not be finished in fifty or a hundred years; and what would be thought of asking the first man who introduced a river and harbor bill to forecast the future and tell how much river and harbor improvements would cost the Government? This would only start the conservation of the waters. All we can say is that it is possible to reclaim from seventy-five to a hundred million acres of land, worth, when reclaimed, four or five billions of dollars.

Now, we ask whether it is not wise to put the Government in position where it can answer the question of the House intelligently upon this matter when it comes up for determination in the next session of Congress. Three committees have already acted upon the question, the Public Lands Committee of the Senate, the Public Lands Committee of the House, and the Irrigation Committee of the House, all favoring a scheme of reclamation and compensation for each project, so as to make the scheme self-supporting, and I ask, inasmuch as every effort to secure consideration of irrigation bills has failed and the whole question goes over to the next session, that at all events this small appropriation of $200,000 should be made in order that the Geological Survey may make the necessary investigation and report to Congress.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I wish the gentleman would yield to me further.

Mr. CANNON. I can not yield upon this for further debate. I will ask for a vote on one statement of thirty seconds. In 1891 we appropriated $12,000 for this purpose. It has grown until the current year it stands at $100,000. The amount as the House passed it after full discussion was $100,000. I ask the House to vote down the motion to concur; and now I call for a vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to concur in the motion of the gentleman from Nevada, to recede from this disagreement and concur in the Senate amendment.

The question was taken; and the motion to concur was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The next amendment is 88, and the Clerk will report the same.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, and had further insisted upon its amendments to the bill numbered 5, 6, 8, 17, 20, 26, 28, 30, 35, 36, 41, 42, 49, 62, 70, 71, 81, 82, 84, 88, 89, 91, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 101, 102, 105, 108, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 149, 150, 151, and 152, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had asked a further conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. ALLISON, Mr. HALE, and Mr. COCKRELL as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 14163. An act to authorize the Portland, Nehalem and Tillamook Railway Company to construct a bridge across Nehalem Bay and River, in the State of Oregon; and

H. R. 11900. An act granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railway through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 5084. An act granting a pension to Charles J. Clark.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 74, line 3, after the word "available," insert:

"Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to exchange a tract of land containing 60 acres, more or less, east of Nichols avenue and south of Congress Heights, for 60 acres, more or less, adjoining the grounds of the Government Hospital for the Insane on the south, to be selected by said Secretary, the exchange to be made acre for acre: And provided further, That a roadway 90 feet wide be reserved out of and on the south side of the land so acquired as a public highway from Nichols avenue to the river."

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I desire to have order.

Mr. CANNON. Will my friend from Indiana allow me a moment? I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

The SPEAKER. How much time?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want about three or four minutes.

Mr. CANNON. I yield three minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I do not take this occasion to occupy the time of the House when a great measure of this kind is up to do so fruitlessly; but there are some propositions in this conference report on this sundry civil bill that I have voted for on the floor of this House when they came here as independent measures, and I now propose to vote against every one of them. I think it is reasonable to allow a gentleman to explain why he has changed his vote. It is not that I am opposed to the measures now. Investigation shows that the Senate of the United States has put almost every measure that has been defeated in the House in the last month upon this sundry civil bill, attempting to make it a "pork" bill, instead of a sundry civil bill, and ram it down the throats of the members of this House. Many of the items I do not believe in. Some few I do believe in. I say when the Senate of the United States sends it to this House in this condition, practically robbing the Treasury by force of its power to compel an extra session, or force us to pass this bill, that the House of Representatives, the men who represent the people of this country, should protest by voting down and refusing to concur in every one of these amendments, whether we believe in them as independent propositions or not. [Loud applause.]

Mr. CANNON. What is the motion of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment No. 88.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana moves to recede and concur.

Mr. CANNON. Just a word.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Of course the gentleman will make a brief statement of the situation.

Mr. CANNON. It is only a word I want to say about it. [Cries of "Vote!"] Let the amendment be again reported.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the amendment will be again reported.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. CANNON. Now, Mr. Speaker, I would be glad to have the motion of the gentleman voted down or that he would assent that it should be for the following reasons: I am quite in harmony with the amendment, but the superintendent of St. Elizabeth's and the Secretary of the Interior have called my attention to the desirability of getting the balance of the tract by exchange of land that we have. I am inclined to believe that if the committee were to go back, leaving it open, that the House and Senate conferees can agree upon a provision amending this clause which will enable the Government to make a further exchange to the advantage of the asylum.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Without the payment of any money?

Mr. CANNON. Without the payment of any money.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. The Senate amendment proposes that we shall exchange the 59-acre tract on which the almshouse was to be built, according to a proposition ingrafted on the District of Columbia appropriation bill, for a like number of acres of the 145-acre tract that the House refused to purchase when this bill was up and the asylum project was being considered. Is it proposed that 80 acres of the 145 acres should be exchanged for the farm site across Nichols avenue?

Mr. CANNON. If my friend will listen to the reading of the proposition, either that or to exchange land across the way opposite Alexandria, known as Godding Croft. I will send it to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

And the Secretary of the Interior is further authorized, if in his judgment advisable, to exchange such portion as he may deem equitable of the agricultural land now owned by the Government, or of the farm opposite Alexandria and known as Godding Croft, for 80 acres, more or less, lying immediately adjoining this said 59½ acres and south of the present building site of the hospital. In case such exchange is made, the Secretary is also authorized, in his discretion, to grant a roadway along the south side of said tract, from Nichols avenue to the river, 90 feet in width.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I am willing, Mr. Speaker, to say that, in view of the fact that another tract that can be drawn on for exchange, and that the Secretary will probably draw on that rather than on the agricultural land, I will make the proper motion to take the sense of the House on that.

Mr. CANNON. Then my friend moves that the House concur with the following amendment?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Yes.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. I would like to call attention of the gentleman from Illinois and the gentleman from Indiana to the fact that this amendment requires further perfection.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. That can be arranged in conference.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana to recede from the disagreement of the House and concur with the amendment which has been reported.

Mr. GROUT. I would like to ask, Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Illinois would prefer to have the House act on this and indorse the proposed change, as a help in the conference, or would he prefer to have it left open?

Mr. CANNON. It is quite immaterial. If the motion is voted down, it would send it back to conference; but I would quite as soon have the House concur in the Senate amendment. It gives jurisdiction of the whole matter.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. And gives the roadway along the line of the land.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The next question is on the amendment numbered 99. The Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Toward the enlargement of Governors Island, $200,000; and for the erection of storehouses and other necessary buildings, in accordance with the plan reported by a board composed of Maj. Gen. John R. Brooke, Col. George L. Gillespie, and Col. Amos S. Kimball, dated July 21, 1900, $60,000; in all, $260,000.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, in order not to embarrass the conferees on the part of the House, I withdraw my request for a separate vote.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the House will further insist on its disagreement to that amendment.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The next amendment upon which a separate vote is asked is No. 105, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Memorial bridge across Potomac River: To enable the Secretary of War to commence the construction of a memorial bridge from the most convenient point of the Naval Observatory grounds, or from some point adjacent thereto, across the Potomac River to the most convenient point of the Arlington estate property, or property adjacent thereto, $100,000; said bridge to be constructed on a plan to be approved by the Secretary of War, and not to cost more than $5,000,000. And the Secretary of War is authorized to expend so much of the amount hereby appropriated as may be necessary for the purpose of securing and determining on a proper plan, opening the competition to all who may desire to submit plans.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask for time on this proposition.

The SPEAKER. There is no motion yet pending.

Mr. RIXEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement and concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves that the House recede and concur.

Mr. CANNON. Does the gentleman from Virginia want a minute?

Mr. RIXEY. Does the gentleman from Illinois only propose to yield a minute to this side?

Mr. CANNON. I want a vote at the earliest possible minute, and the gentleman from Wisconsin wants a minute.

Mr. BABCOCK. I want three minutes. [Laughter.]

Mr. RIXEY. If the gentleman from Illinois wants to say anything, very well; if not, we will take a vote.

Mr. CANNON. Well, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, at the last session of Congress I stood with the chairman of the Appropriations Committee and opposed this amendment. But I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that conditions have radically changed. Within a week the Senate District Committee has caused an investigation to be made of the Aqueduct Bridge, caused by the application to construct a street railway line over it, and I hold in my hand the report of the Secretary of War, who says it will be necessary to construct a new bridge, at an estimated cost of from eight hundred to nine hundred and sixty thousand dollars; that the piers are in such a condition that they will not carry any heavier traffic than is now being carried over it.

Mr. PAYNE. Does the gentleman suppose that appropriating $100,000 to begin a memorial bridge will remove the necessity for repairing the Aqueduct Bridge?

Mr. BABCOCK. Yes; it will remove the necessity for repairing the Aqueduct Bridge, because in its present condition the engineer reports that it will carry the present traffic, but not the traffic that must go over there if these railways are constructed. I believe, Mr. Speaker, rather than appropriate a million dollars to rebuild this Aqueduct Bridge it would be better to start the memorial bridge now.

Mr. RIXEY. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois, if there is to be a discussion on this proposition, if he will not yield to us such time as he proposes to consume?

Mr. CANNON. I want a vote inside of five minutes. At this stage of the session, in my judgment, it is necessary to do so, and if my friend wants time I will yield to him. [Cries of "Vote! Vote! Vote!"]

Mr. RIXEY. Is the gentleman willing to take a vote now?

Mr. CANNON. After I have used as much time as the gentleman from Wisconsin has—two minutes.

Mr. RIXEY. Well, I will let the gentleman take his two minutes, and then we will take a vote.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, gentlemen should understand what this motion is. It is to agree to the immediate construction of a memorial bridge, the minimum cost of which is $5,000,000, and, in my judgment, it will cost nearer $10,000,000 before it is done.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is no use for this bridge at this time. The Aqueduct Bridge is in daily use, and on the deficiency bill we have already agreed to appropriate money to repair it. And on the railroad terminal bills we provided for the construction of a wagon bridge across the Potomac, not a great way from this memorial bridge, for $560,000. That is a real bridge, and answers every purpose, minus the ornaments, minus the style. Let us be just before we are generous. I now ask a vote, and hope that the gentleman's motion to concur will be voted down.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. RIXEY and Mr. HAY) there were—65 yeas and 116 nays.

Mr. HAY. The yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker.

The question on ordering the yeas and nays was taken, and the yeas and nays were refused.

The SPEAKER. The next amendment to be separately voted on is amendment No. 150.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After line 20, page 135, insert the following:

"That sections Nos. 2529 and 2544 of the Revised Statutes of the United States are hereby so amended that there shall be one appraiser of merchandise at each of said ports instead of two, as now provided by law.

"The salary of said appraisers shall be $4,000 each per annum, instead of $3,000 each, as now established by law."

Mr. HOPKINS. In respect to the amendment just read I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the managers of the conference on the part of the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill H. R. 14018 are hereby instructed not to agree to the amendment of the Senate numbered 150.

Mr. CANNON. I hope the gentleman will first let us further insist on our disagreement, and then I think his resolution will be in order.

The SPEAKER. The motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] will be considered as applying to this amendment, and the House will further insist on its disagreement to the amendment. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The question is now on the resolution of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS].

Mr. CANNON. I yield two minutes to my colleague [Mr. HOPKINS].

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, in the two minutes allowed me I desire to say that the sole and only object of the amendment is to increase the salaries of the appraisers at Boston and Philadelphia from $3,000 to $4,000 each. This question was presented in the form of a bill, which passed the Senate and was sent to the Ways and Means Committee of the House. It was fully considered by that committee, and the committee determined against increasing these salaries, and voted against reporting the bill favorably.

Mr. MCCALL. Will the gentleman state precisely what the vote in the committee was? It was a tie, was it not?

Mr. HOPKINS. I state exactly what the vote was—that the Ways and Means Committee voted against the proposition. Now, if we are going into an increase of salaries, there is an appraiser at Chicago, another at San Francisco, another at New Orleans, another at New York, and appraisers at other places, who deserve just as much to have their salaries increased as do these appraisers at Boston and Philadelphia.

I submit that the remarks of my friend from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] are very apropos here. If the Senate can override the affirmative action of the House and force us to increase salaries in this way, we might just as well abdicate all independence on the part of this House and submit quietly to the action of the Senate. I trust that the resolution will be adopted.

Mr. CANNON. I yield a few moments to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOODY].

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, just a word. This amendment does not relate in any way to any matter personal to myself, as the gentleman from Illinois well knows. The conferees on the part of the House have decided to disagree to the Senate amendment. It seems to me that it would be entirely proper and safe to leave the interests of the House in their hands. I shall not oppose the resolution of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS], although I wish he had not presented it.

Mr. STEELE. The gentleman had better withdraw it.

Mr. HOPKINS. I ask a vote on the resolution.

The question being taken, the resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The next amendment on which a separate vote has been demanded is the amendment numbered 151. The Chair will state that this is one amendment, of 30 pages, embracing the St. Louis, the Charleston, and the Buffalo expositions.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the amendment. Everybody here understands what it is.

Mr. TAWNEY. I suggest that the reading be confined to the proposition in relation to the Pan-American Exposition. That has not been read in the hearing of the House; the other two propositions have been.

Mr. CANNON. Everybody knows what it is.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I beg the gentleman's pardon; all gentlemen here do not understand what it is. It has never been read in the House.

The SPEAKER. The request is that the reading of so much of this amendment as relates to the St. Louis fair and the Charleston fair be omitted, and that the amendment relating to the Buffalo fair be read. Without objection, that course will be pursued.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

151. PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION, BUFFALO, N. Y.

For the benefit and to the use of the Pan-American Exposition to be held at Buffalo, in the State of New York, from May 1, 1901, to November 1, 1901, $500,000, to be immediately available, said sum to be paid to and be disbursed by the Pan-American Exposition Company under rules and regulations and under conditions to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, however, That in the distribution of any moneys that may remain in the treasury of the said Pan-American Exposition Company after the payment of its debts the aforesaid sum so appropriated shall be repaid in full into the Treasury of the United States before any dividend, return, or distribution shall be made to the holders of the capital stock of said corporation: And provided also, That the United States shall not in any circumstances be liable for any debt or obligation of the said corporation or for any payment in addition to the foregoing sum. That as a condition precedent to the payment of this appropriation the Pan-American Exposition Company shall contract to close the gates to visitors on Sundays during the whole duration of the fair.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I wish to ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] how much time we may have.

Mr. SPEAKER. There has been as yet no motion offered in respect to the amendment.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I move that the House recede from its disagreement to amendment numbered 151, and concur in the amendment.

Mr. CANNON. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. ALEXANDER. There are three distinct propositions here. I suggest fifteen minutes on each proposition.

Mr. CANNON. Unless the House runs away from me, I will not assent to forty-five minutes' debate at this stage of the session.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I suggest ten minutes on each proposition.

Mr. CANNON. Does my friend from New York [Mr. ALEXANDER] desire to occupy the floor?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I want to yield to my colleague [Mr. SHERMAN].

Mr. POWERS. Here are three distinct propositions, with three different appropriations of money. Is not this question divisible, so that we may vote first on the Pan-American Exposition, then on the exposition at Buffalo, then on the St. Louis Exposition?

The SPEAKER. The Chair regrets to say that he does not know of any way in which that can be done. This is one amendment of the Senate.

Mr. POWERS. It is plainly a divisible proposition. Would it be in order, Mr. Speaker, to move for a separate vote on each distinct proposition?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the motion would be out of order.

Mr. SHERMAN. I would like a little time. I shall not be long. I think five minutes will be all that I shall require.

Mr. CANNON. I yield the gentleman five minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I shall confine my observations to the proposition making an appropriation for the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. This is not a proposition that Congress donate half a million dollars. We are not here asking for charity at the hands of the American Congress.

Mr. Speaker, we are here asking Congress for a loan to assist us in carrying on an exposition which is purely, clearly, and distinctly a Pan-American Exposition. It was started by the action of the American Congress in extending an invitation to the Republics of the Western Hemisphere to join with us in holding an exposition in 1902. After that action by Congress, the people of Buffalo began preparations for the exposition. They financed it at three and a half millions of dollars and procured funds to that amount.

If the exposition had not exceeded the original idea of the people of Buffalo, the three and a half million dollars which they had raised would have been ample to carry the enterprise to a conclusion. But, Mr. Speaker, responses have been made from all the Republics of South America save three, and the numerous responses from various States of the Union have necessitated enlargement of the original plans, so that it is now not possible to carry out this exposition for the amount originally contemplated.

We are therefore here asking that Congress loan, not donate, to the exposition half a million dollars and make that loan a preferred claim, to be preferred only by the two and a half million dollars of bonds that have been issued. This is not a new proposition. Congress made a loan to the Philadelphia Exposition in 1876, and received payment of every cent, as also did the private contributors. Congress has loaned its aid to other expositions—Nashville, New Orleans, and Chicago.

Mr. HOPKINS. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. HOPKINS. I want to ask the gentleman if it is not a fact that when the committee from Buffalo came before the Ways and Means Committee, to get the aid of the Government, it was stated that they would not come back and ask for any extra money, and if this proposition is not in violation of the promise made the Ways and Means Committee of the House when this first authorization was made?

Mr. SHERMAN. I was not a member of the Ways and Means Committee then, and am not now; but I do not understand the gentleman has correctly stated the proposition. I think no such promise was made in the first place, and in the second place the Pan-American Exposition Company is not here asking a gratuity of Congress. It is simply asking a loan.

And, Mr. Speaker, while at Chicago 27,000,000 people were in attendance, 27,000,000 paid admission, Buffalo has a population within the same radius of 25 per cent more than had Chicago, yet if at Buffalo the attendance is only 10,000,000 people, their gross receipts will be more than sufficient to meet all the expenses of the fair, to pay the bonds issued in its aid, and return to the Government of the United States every dollar provided to be loaned to this exposition under this bill.

It will be, Mr. Speaker, a great exposition, and it will be such an exhibition as will be a credit to this Government, one which in the end will entail the expenditure of not one single dollar from the Treasury of the country.

Mr. RIDGELY. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes.

Mr. RIDGELY. Does the gentleman say that he believes this money will be returned to the Treasury?

Mr. SHERMAN. I certainly do believe that this money will be returned to the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. RIDGELY. All of it?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; all of it. On every possible doctrine of chances the receipts from concessions and gate entrances will meet every outlay entailed. The proposition has merit, great merit. It is not new. It has ample precedent. The appropriation ought to be, and I trust will be, made.

I yield the gentleman from New York the balance of my time.

Mr. ALEXANDER. How much time have I?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has half a minute remaining.

Mr. ALEXANDER. How much time will the gentleman yield? There are half a dozen gentlemen who desire to speak for the half-million loan.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, well, I can not yield great time. I yield to my friend how much?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I would prefer not to have it now, but I would like to have at least five minutes.

Mr. CANNON. I think my friend had better take it now, because inside of twenty minutes I want to vote.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I would prefer to hear from those representing the other proposition. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. TAWNEY].

Mr. CANNON. I do not think my friend has any time to yield.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Well, I will say——

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. CANNON. I will first yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Georgia, three minutes.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I undertake to say, Mr. Speaker, that from those of us who have been here in the years that have passed, voting large appropriations for Philadelphia, Chicago, for Omaha, for New Orleans, and for Atlanta, Ga., it comes with bad grace now, or from any man in this House who participated in these appropriations, to stand here to-day and oppose the Charleston appropriation. This appropriation for Charleston is simply for a Government exhibit—nothing more nor less. She is in the extreme southeastern portion of this country, and this is the first thing of the kind she has ever asked at the hands of Congress. Now, then, we have given five millions, practically, to St. Louis, and we gave in the Fifty-fifth Congress $500,000 to Buffalo, and in this bill we propose to give $500,000 more. Why not, then, if you are going to put a stop to this matter, put a stop to all of them? Why make an exception of Charleston? Now, St. Louis is given $5,000,000 and Buffalo $1,000,000, while Charleston is only asking a Government exhibit—nothing more and nothing else.

Mr. CANNON. Does the gentleman from Minnesota desire any time?

Mr. TAWNEY. I would like to ask the gentleman one question before this vote is taken: Whether, in his judgment, in the event the Senate insists upon its amendment, there will be another opportunity given to the House to consider this proposition?

Mr. CANNON. Well, I will say to my friend that the Senate of the United States has now pending in the Senate a bill appropriating $5,000,000 for the St. Louis Exposition. They amended it for Charleston, and sent it with their compliments to the House. The House refused to concur in the Senate amendment; and it is within the power of the Senate now, at any time, to move that the Senate recede from its amendment, and if they would do so it would pass the St. Louis Exposition.

Mr. TAWNEY. I will state to the gentleman that it is entirely within the power of the Senate to recede, but it is not in keeping with the compact; and for that reason they will never vote to recede.

Mr. ELLIOTT. Yield to me a minute or two.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. In the event the motion now pending, namely, the motion to recede and concur—if the whole amendment is voted down, will it not be possible by motions to recede and concur with amendments to raise the question upon each separate exposition?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is of the opinion that that could be done after it is voted down. To whatever extent those motions would range the Chair can not determine now.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. That would depend upon the gentleman making the motion. There is no necessity for combination when we can vote upon these independently.

Mr. CANNON. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina three minutes.

[Mr. ELLIOTT addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. CANNON. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, the House is not bound hand and foot. We are not the abject slaves of gentlemen at the other end of the Capitol. We are not bound by this simple motion to concur. It is true it takes precedence; but if it is voted down, then it is in order for any gentleman to move to concur with an amendment striking out one or two of these propositions, and leave the others in which to concur; and we can send it back to the gentlemen at the other end of the Capitol, who are trying now to hold the House up by their determination that the House shall take not only one, but all three of these propositions or that this bill shall fail. [Loud applause.] For one, I say let it fail before we go into this business, to which I am opposed—forever opposed. [Applause.]

I am opposed utterly to the appropriation of $250,000, a sum equal to all that has been raised for the fair in Charleston, which will amount to no more than a State, county, or city fair. Why, we spend more money in the State of New York for a State fair than these gentlemen have raised there, and we never thought of coming to Congress and asking $250,000 for a State fair. We never will consent to it by my vote, and I would rather this bill fail and that we have an extra session of Congress, too, than to be held up in this manner. [Applause.] We sent the bill over to the Senate to redeem our promise of appropriating $5,000,000 for St. Louis.

Mr. LATIMER. What about Buffalo?

Mr. PAYNE. I will answer the gentleman in a moment. They sent back the bill and stuck the Charleston appropriation onto it. We sent it to conference and the committee is told there is a compact formed by which the two must stand or fall together. Let the people understand, then, that if we try to redeem our promise by giving $5,000,000 for this great exposition at St. Louis, the Senate holds us up with a proposition for a county fair in South Carolina. What is the argument for it? It is said that we must appropriate the $250,000 as a contribution toward the era of good feeling. If good feeling in the South is to be purchased by appropriations I say we do not want it. [Applause.] There is no good feeling in the South to be purchased; if it does not come spontaneously, from patriotic impulses, we want none of it. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON. I now yield to the gentleman from New York two minutes, and then I want to close the debate.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, I can not concur in what the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] has said. I dissent from his conclusions. There is nothing narrow, illiberal, or sectional about me. [Laughter and applause.] If we appropriate money for the St. Louis Exposition and for the Buffalo Pan-American Exposition, we ought to be big enough and brave enough and broad enough to appropriate $250,000 for the Charleston Exposition. I am in favor of the exposition at Buffalo, I am in favor of the exposition at St. Louis, and, sir, I am in favor of the exposition at Charleston. They are all in the interest of the people, and will help to educate us and disseminate useful and valuable information.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York, I doubt not, is in favor of the Buffalo Exposition; he wants public money for a city in his own State, and yet he is opposed to appropriating money just as necessary in the interest of education and the dissemination of information for the Charleston Exposition. He should be consistent. His position is untenable. I hope the House will vote for all of these expositions or defeat them all. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CANNON. I now yield two minutes on the other side to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CARMACK].

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. Speaker, I do not want that time. I will complete what I have to say in about a minute. I simply want to say that I shall vote against this entire proposition. I think we have gone as far as we ought to go in this matter of expositions, and I want to simply add, by way of emphasis to what was said by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], that I am tired of hearing men call for appropriations in order to bring about an era of good feeling. [Applause.]

I say the people of the South do not need to be paid with money for their loyalty to the Government of the United States. [Applause.] I am tired of hearing such appeals made here, and I hope that we never shall hear it again made by any Southern man. It is a disgrace and a dishonor to the South that such an appeal should be made here upon the floor of this Congress. [Applause.] No man has a right to demand a pledge of loyalty from the South, and no man has a right, speaking in the name of the South, to demand an appropriation as a price of loyalty. If the South were not sincerely loyal to the Union there is not money enough in the world to make her so. [Applause.] The South is for the old flag, with or without an appropriation. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON. I now yield one minute to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. LATIMER].

Mr. LATIMER. Mr. Speaker, in reply to the remarks just made by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CARMACK], I want to say that what I said the other day in regard to the injustice done the South and to Charleston by those on this floor who vote against the appropriation for the Charleston Exposition was intended in no sense to put my section of this country in the attitude of begging. We are an independent people, and I stand here as their Representative in part to demand justice, and I repudiate the statement made by the gentleman from Tennessee, and especially the leader on that side of the House [Mr. PAYNE] in his attempt to arouse the feelings of this House against this appropriation for Charleston, as unjust to the people of that section of this country, and makes himself appear ridiculous when we find him voting $1,000,000 for Buffalo, in his State. I say to those now who propose to discriminate against Charleston and the South, and cut off this appropriation of $250,000, that they should either vote for it or vote against the whole thing. Treat every section—every city in this Union alike. [Applause.] It is unjust to the South to hold up Charleston and attempt to divide this amendment so as to get a separate vote and keep out the appropriation of $250,000 for the South and the city of Charleston, and to hold in the bill $5,000,000 for St. Louis and half a million for Buffalo. There can be no explanation by those who strive to defeat the Charleston amendment and vote for the St. Louis and Buffalo appropriations except upon the ground of prejudice.

I appeal to the House to do justice in this vote; and as you can not vote for it all, vote against the whole. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to take much time in closing the debate upon this motion. I must ask the indulgence of the House, for the reason that I have contracted a cold and a sore throat and talk with difficulty. I will not take long, but I believe it is my duty to say a few words. What is this bill? The sundry civil bill, carrying $60,000,000 that goes all along the line in the Government service. It goes to the Senate, and the Senate takes this bill and writes out an amendment of 20 pages and puts upon it—what? A matter of appropriation and not legislation? No. If these matters had been offered in the House, every one of them would have gone off on a point of order; and I say it respectfully, that under the Senate rules, if they had been enforced, every one of them would have gone off on a point of order.

Now, then, do they bring three amendments—one for St. Louis, and one for Buffalo, and one for South Carolina? No. They put it all in one amendment of 20 pages and put it upon this bill and send it to us. Was it necessary? No. Under the lead of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. TAWNEY] the other day this House passed a bill keeping the pledge made by law for St. Louis. It went to the Senate four days ago. The Senate amended it and added South Carolina. It came back to the House. The House voted down the amendment by a two-thirds vote—two to one—and what was the result? It went back to the Senate, and there it is to-day. It is in the power of the majority of the Senate any minute to call up that St. Louis bill and, by moving to recede from the Senate amendment, adopt it and pass the St. Louis bill. Did they do it? No. There it lies, but they proceeded to put the St. Louis bill here that the House has refused, when untrammeled, to have amended.

Then they bring two propositions that never passed Congress, one for Buffalo and one for Charleston, S. C. Three separate amendments? No; one amendment that you can not divide, so that when the preferential motion comes, it must come to recede and concur with the Senate. What for? For the purpose of placing it or claiming to place it in the hands of one Senator so that he can under the Senate rules hold it up.

Mr. KLUTTZ. Mr. Speaker, a point of order. It is not in order for a member of the House to reflect on the conduct of a Senator.

Mr. CANNON. I am not speaking of any Senator; I am speaking of the parliamentary situation of this bill and the action of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is of the opinion that the gentleman ought not to allude to the proceedings and votes of the other body.

Mr. KLUTTZ. Does the Chair sustain the point of order?

The SPEAKER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. CANNON. I will try and keep within the rules. I thought I was. But, gentlemen, here it is. [Laughter.] And it stands in conference, and it is proper and parliamentary for me to say that the Senate conferees refuse up to this time to recede. Therefore comes this disagreement. With pale faces and trembling voices by some and with hot flushes of indignation by others, the question is put, What effect will it have if this bill fails? But the question comes by fives and tens whether the House is to be held up by these amendments. [Applause.] My reply has been to them individually for the last three hours as it has to this House. These amendments are not under the rules of the Senate. It is here as a leech, presuming that this House will take it and concur in it before it will jeopardize the passage of the $60,000,000 bill with many hundred items. Now, then, there are other legislative bodies than the House. One of them has no previous question. [Laughter.]

And the result is, in that legislative body any member of it, as long as he has lungs and strength can, if he is inclined, check the proceedings. And only by reason of such a proceeding as that can I account for these pages of amendments. This is a coordinate branch of Congress. I want to say of this amendment that it is not fair; it is unfair; it is unpatriotic; it is not legislatively honorable. [Applause.] And for one I look the situation fairly in the face. There are worse things than the failure of this bill. There are worse things than a special session of Congress. And I will not purchase exemption from a special session of Congress by such parliamentary proceedings. [Applause.]

Mr. FLEMING rose.

Mr. CANNON. I will yield to the gentleman in a moment. Let me complete what I am saying.

In my judgment, when the House of Representatives asserts its rights, and insists on correct parliamentary practices, I believe that the Senate of the United States will perform its function and we can go on and complete this bill. I am now ready, so far as I am concerned, for a vote.

Mr. FLEMING. The gentleman will allow me to say that I approve entirely of his position. I have always voted that way. But were not the resolutions known as the "Spooner resolutions" on the Philippines question put as a "rider" on the Army appropriation bill in the Senate, in the same way as these amendments; and did we hear from the gentleman on that question? [Applause on the Democratic side.] Was that "honorable" legislative action?

Mr. CANNON. If that was wrong, "two wrongs do not make a right."

Mr. FLEMING. Did not the gentleman vote for that other wrong? I voted against both.

Mr. CANNON. I did not have charge of the Army bill.

Mr. FLEMING. You voted for it.

Mr. CANNON. My committee did not have charge of it. I believed in those provisions. My friend from Georgia can not say that he believes in these.

Mr. FLEMING. I voted against both of them.

Mr. CANNON. Now I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN], that the House recede in its disagreement to the Senate amendment and concur.

The question being taken, there were on a division (called by Mr. SHERMAN)—ayes 76, noes 139.

So the motion of Mr. SHERMAN to recede and concur was rejected.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to move that the House recede from its disagreement and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment striking out all of the Senate amendment after line 10, page 174; and on that motion I demand the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that he regards the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] as in order; but he declines to entertain from the gentleman from New York a demand for the previous question, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], who has charge of this bill, can not be taken from the floor in that way.

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the proposed amendment of the gentleman from New York.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out that portion of the amendment of the Senate beginning on line 10, page 174, down to and including line 17, page 182.

Mr. CANNON. This amendment strikes out, as I understand, the provision for the exposition at Charleston, S. C.

The SPEAKER. The motion is in order.

Mr. CANNON. I hope the motion will not be agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the portion of the Senate amendment proposed to be eliminated.

Mr. CANNON. It is quite lengthy.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I ask that the reading be omitted. Everybody understands what it is.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] may state the effect of the amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. The motion as I offer it eliminates from the amendment of the Senate the South Carolina Exposition and leaves the other two.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Does it eliminate the Buffalo Exposition?

Mr. SHERMAN. It leaves in Buffalo and St. Louis.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is it in order to move to amend the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN]?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I move to amend that motion by striking out all that part of the Senate amendment beginning on line 6, page 160, down to the part proposed to be stricken out by the gentleman from New York. The effect of my motion is to make Buffalo share the fate of Charleston.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say to the gentleman from Texas that, as just stated in reply to his parliamentary inquiry, the motion of the gentleman from New York is subject to amendment. Still, the amendment must be germane to that motion; and as the amendment of the gentleman from Texas affects an entirely separate matter, it would seem to the Chair that it must be in the form of a separate motion and can not be offered as an amendment to the motion of the gentleman from New York. The proposition of the gentleman from Texas will be in order after the disposition of the motion now before the House.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I have no disposition to consume the time of the House in argument on the point of order. I merely suggest that it would be a singular circumstance if two parts of one amendment were not germane to each other. This whole proposition from the Senate embraces three expositions; and if it be permissible to strike out one, it would seem that a proposition to strike out another could scarcely be ruled out on the ground that it is not germane.

The SPEAKER. The Chair dislikes to entertain a discussion of this kind after making a decision; but the gentleman from Texas will readily realize that a motion to strike out one part of a bill would not properly be subject to amendment by a motion to strike out an entirely different part, which was not germane.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. But, Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN].

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Will the gentleman from Mississippi yield just a moment? I was not through.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I shall not appeal from the decision of the Chair; and I will say the question is not entirely plain in my own mind. I simply desire to suggest, by way of reply to the Chair, that we have before us not two different parts of the same bill, but a single part of the bill. As I am anxious, however, to save the time of the House in view of the early adjournment, I waive any appeal on the matter.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Would it be in order for me to move as an amendment, or as a substitute for the motion made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN], to strike out that part of Senate amendment 151? If so, I desire to make that motion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that would be equivalent to a nonconcurrence. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the motion was lost.

Mr. CANNON. Are there other amendments?

The SPEAKER. There are two other amendments.

Mr. CANNON. I move that the House further insist upon its disagreement and assent to a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced as conferees on the part of the House Mr. CANNON, Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts, and Mr. MCRAE.

GENERAL DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the conference report on the general deficiency bill.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman desire to have the report and the statement read?

Mr. CANNON. I ask that the statement be read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the statement only may be read, and that the report be not read.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. What bill is this on?

The SPEAKER. The general deficiency bill. Without objection, that course will be pursued.

The report of the committee of conference was read.

[For conference report see Senate proceedings.]

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House, at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies, submit the following written statement in explanation of the accompanying conference report:

The Senate, by its amendments, added to the bill $1,659,780.53, said sum being made up chiefly of additional estimates for deficiencies ascertained since the passage of the bill by the House and for judgments of courts and accounts audited by the accounting officers of the Treasury.

The bill as finally agreed upon in conference appropriates $14,147,074.04, being $23,143.38 less than as it passed the Senate.

J. G. CANNON,
S. S. BARNEY,
L. F. LIVINGSTON,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CANNON. I move the adoption of the conference report.
The motion was put, and the conference report was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. NELSON, Mr. MCMILLAN, and Mr. BERRY as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 5573) to amend section 203 of Title III of the act entitled "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14236) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 12291. An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes;

H. R. 13776. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to deliver to the mayor and city council of Baltimore, Md., Ionic columns;

H. R. 1452. An act to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to John C. Weckler;

H. R. 14260. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to constitute a new division of the eastern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for the holding of terms of court at Sherman, Tex., and for the appointment of a clerk of said court, and for other purposes," approved February 19, 1901;

H. R. 14309. An act for the reward of enlisted men of the Navy or Marine Corps;

H. R. 12901. An act to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of lands, etc.;

H. R. 11900. An act granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railway through the Devils Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of North Dakota; and

H. R. 14163. An act to authorize the Portland, Nehalem and Tillamook Railway Company to construct a bridge across Nehalem Bay and River, in the State of Oregon.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 2866. An act to extend the provisions of section 8 of the act entitled "An act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, concerning prosecutions for cutting timber on public lands, to California, Oregon, and Washington;

S. 5484. An act to provide for subports of entry and delivery in the Territory of Hawaii;

S. 4956. An act to grant the Knoxville Power Company the right to dam the Tennessee River at or near Knoxville, Tenn.;

S. 4509. An act extending to the city of Everett, Wash., a subport of entry, the privileges of the act approved June 10, 1880, governing the immediate transportation of dutiable merchandise; and

S. 4687. An act for the relief of Richard H. Townley, a lieutenant (junior grade) on the retired list of the United States Navy.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, Mr. MAHON obtained leave to withdraw from the files of the House the papers in the case of Henry Wolfe, there being no adverse report.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

And accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 47 minutes p. m.) the House was declared in recess.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order at 8 o'clock p. m. by the Speaker.

COMMISSION TO VISIT ISLAND POSSESSIONS.

The SPEAKER. The unfinished business is the special order reported from the Committee on Rules by the gentleman from Pennsylvania. The gentleman is recognized.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY].

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I have heard many men complain, and I have more than once complained myself, that all the information which we possess respecting the possessions which we have wrested from the Kingdom of Spain comes to us from Administration channels. It has been charged by some, and it is suspected by many, that this information has been prepared with a view of strengthening and supporting the Administration's policy. This may or it may not be true.

If it is not true, I should like to know it; if it is true, I should like for the country at large to know it. The only way to remove or confirm these suspicions is for this House, through one of its own committees, to supply itself with the information. It might happen that this information, coming at an opportune time, may save us from entering upon a policy of mistaken and fatal consequences, or it may happen that if our friends across the aisle are to continue administering this Government that both they and we will need the information as a basis upon which to frame our law.

It does not signify that those of us who favor the appointment of this committee and the obtaining of this information are prepared now or hereafter to sustain any portion of the present policy pursued toward those people. Speaking for myself, I would rejoice to-night at an opportunity to end the unfortunate connection. I would vote to-morrow, and I can not conceive of circumstances which could arise that would prevent me voting at any time, to relieve my country from the indefensible position of asserting the fundamental truth that all men are entitled to govern themselves, and yet deny the application of that sacred truth to a struggling and helpless people.

Mr. Speaker, if we must legislate for the unfortunate races who have been brought under our subjection, not, as you claim, by the providence of God, but, as we believe, by the improvidence of those in power, let us inform ourselves. The best we can do will never enable us to legislate wisely for that unhappy people. But it would be another crime committed, both against them and against ourselves, if we enter upon any system of legislation until we have possessed ourselves of all the information obtainable. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DALZELL. The gentleman from Ohio has a conference report and I yield.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio calls up a conference report. Does the gentleman desire the report and the statement both read?

Mr. BURTON. I would say, Mr. Speaker, that I asked unanimous consent that the reading of the report be dispensed with, as it is quite lengthy. I have not been able to prepare and obtain the signature of our conferees to any statement, but I can make a brief statement which will make the subject clear to the House.

Mr. HEPBURN. I desire to interpose the point of order that we must have a written statement.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I desire to ask the gentleman from Ohio if the conferees have agreed?

Mr. BURTON. We have agreed upon all but four items.

Mr. HEPBURN. I make the point of order that the rules require that reports shall be accompanied by a written statement.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentlemen indicate what rule requires it to be signed by all the conferees? The Clerk will read Rule XXIX.

Mr. BURTON. One other point. I now have information which makes it necessary to withdraw the report. I was under the misapprehension that the report had been messaged from the Senate. I understand that such is not the case. The messenger was in my committee room some time ago, and I thought the message had been presented here.

The SPEAKER. It can not be acted upon under that statement of facts. The Chair, however, will have this rule read to the House, if there is no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

The presentation of reports of committees of conference shall always be in order, except when the Journal is being read, while the roll is being called, or the House is dividing on any proposition; and there shall accompany every such report a detailed statement sufficiently explicit to inform the House what effect such amendments or propositions will have upon the measures to which they relate.

The SPEAKER. The House will observe that the rule does not say that the statement shall be signed. The statement that there was a statement would seem to be sufficient. The Chair is advised, and, in his own recollection, presented reports himself in which the statement was not signed, although it is usually the case that the statement is signed. But as the papers are not before the House, the matter can not be considered at this time.

COMMISSION TO VISIT ISLAND POSSESSIONS.

Mr. DALZELL. I now yield five minutes to the gentlemen from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I have been very much moved to find so many Democrats in favor of the legislation now pending before the House. I have been especially disappointed at the close of eight years' service with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] to come to the very first point of divergence.

There will be to me in the future no more gratifying recollection than that of the fact of having served with him eight years and of never having differed with him, as far as I remember, upon a single political question. I have been accustomed myself to varying from cardinal doctrines now and then, but I am satisfied in my own mind that when the time comes for him to vary the very earth is shaking beneath my feet. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, as a Democrat I am opposed to commissions and to junketing committees. I know from my experience in this House, as every member of this body does, that whether you call this a commission or a committee, when it goes to collecting information for political purposes and in connection with a political question that it becomes two things; first, a junketing committee, and in the second place a committee which will come back to this House after a while with two results, and two results only—a majority report, unfair, partisan, and untrue; a minority report, unfair, partisan, and untrue.

Gentlemen have told us of the West Point hazing commission, but that was not about a political question; and when the House wants to get information about matters in which politics are not concerned a committee of the House does always obtain it, and obtain it fairly. I will cite gentlemen to another committee, however—the committee for the investigation of the Cœur d'Alene affair; that was a political question.

I want to warn Democrats that what was done there can be done here. The power of the majority in exercising the right to protect men who are examined from answering questions can be exerted in such a way as to make up a record to suit himself.

And this will be all the easier in the Philippine Islands, because whenever a question is asked that will look to the Republican majority of that committee as if the answer might possibly damage them, they will object to its being answered and will rule it out upon the ground of some fancied public or military policy in the island. The vote of the majority of the committee will be: "That question will not do to answer, because it might disclose information that would interfere with the military arrangements and plans in the island that would be valuable to the enemy."

They have gone so far as to say that Democratic arguments against Philippine retention were "treasonable" because "valuable to the enemy."

You will find, my friends, that if you go into this you will come back with a great long book of investigation, answers, queries, and inquiries, but you will find that it is a Republican book, made up to suit the Republican majority.

What will that committee be? Why, my friends, the Insular Committee is in one respect like the Scriptural definition of man—it is "fearfully and wonderfully made." [Laughter.] There were selected for that Insular Committee all of the chairmen of all the important committees in this House. Who are they? You will go there first with the gentleman from Illinois, the Hon. JOSEPH CANNON, and what is he? Adroit, expert, the man of all men to prepare a party brief.

You say that the present information is not "satisfactory." Satisfactory to whom? Why, it ought to be satisfactory to that side of the Chamber, because it has come to them from Republican sources, colored by Republican intent and by Republican words. Satisfactory to this side? It is satisfactory to me, my fellow-Democrats, for all purposes of legislation in this House.

Although the Philippine situation has been reported as seen through Republican spectacles and as censored in the island, yet so much as has come to us is satisfactory to me. It is sufficient, in my opinion, to damn the entire Philippine scheme, to damn the entire history of the transactions through which it has gone in order to arrive at its results.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DALZELL. I yield to the gentleman three minutes more.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I know, my friends, how tender are the personal relations of the men in this House. I have no better friends and there are no men who deserve the friendship of any man or body of men more than the men on the Democratic side of this Committee on Insular Affairs.

Each and every one of them is my personal and warm friend and I am the friend of his. But the idea that they are to be parties to go on this junketing tour does not change my mind in the slightest degree as to the position which I shall take upon this question. My friends, I do not see for the life of me how any good can come from this matter.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Will the gentleman allow me? I am sure that the gentleman from Mississippi does not know exactly how that sounds or how it will appear in print. That is a suggestion that gentlemen on this side are influenced by their position on the committee.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. No, it is not; I did not have that idea in my mind. I had this idea in my mind: That if there was one thing that could make me vote for this, it was the fact that these gentlemen—personal friends of mine—would be on the committee, but that fact itself would not make me vote for it.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. It is a friendly suggestion to the gentleman, and if he chooses to say that he did not intend it that way, that is sufficient.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I did not have the idea of criticising a man in the Chamber because he was a member of the Committee on Insular Affairs. I merely had the idea of criticising my knowlege of ordinary human thought and human action. I know that the fact that a friend is to go upon the committee or something of that sort does have its influence upon all—upon me, and upon other people; and it was with a view of pushing that out of our minds that I mentioned this.

Mr. Speaker, who are the other Republicans on this committee? The Hon. ROBERT HITT, of Illinois, tactful, diplomatic, and able—expert in dividing a hair "betwixt the nor' and nor'west side." The Hon. SERENO PAYNE, the Hon. WILLIAM P. HEPBURN, who wields a sledge hammer with a perseverance equaled by no other man on this floor. [Laughter.] When that committee goes to represent the Republican party to the Philippines, Democrats need not expect any peculiar unpartisan majority report from that quarter. [Laughter.]

One more thing. When that commission arrives there, what will be its environment? The committee when it gets there—both Democrats and Republicans—will be associated with army and naval officers, and all that they will come into contact with will be either the Army or the Navy on one side, or else something un-American in the island on the other. For Filipino sources of information, they will be thrown always with officers of the Army and Navy whose highest ambition is to continue war in order to make room for promotion. The committee can not associate with the natives, first and chiefly because the committee can not speak their language.

I tell you, as far even as Democrats are concerned, they will find it a hard thing to be impartial, cool and collected, just and right in that sort of environment. They are the pleasantest fellows in the world—these Army and Navy officers—and it is mighty hard not to see through their spectacles when you have nobody else to run with except men who are warring against the United States or men who are playing amigos and ready to carry arms. Almost anybody would take his color from that environment. [Applause.]

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. BURTON. I submit the report of the committee of conference on the river and harbor bill. I ask unanimous consent that the statement of the House conferees be read instead of the report.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, is it in order at this time to reserve points of order against this report?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. HEPBURN. I desire to do so.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] reserves all points of order on this report. The Chair hears no objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON], that the reading of the conference report be dispensed with.

[For conference report see Senate proceedings.]

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The conferees appointed by the House of Representatives upon House bill 13189, making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, report that after full conference with the Senate conferees on said bill they have reached a partial agreement, including all amendments of the Senate except four, to wit, Nos. 168, 219, 220, and 221. A list of amendments agreed to or disagreed to are more specifically set forth in the accompanying statement filed herewith.

The bill as it passed the House appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, $22,792,711.30. It authorized for later appropriations, after June 30, 1902, $37,142,704.02; total, $59,935,415.32. The total was diminished by the Senate. This reduction was accomplished by the striking out of two items, a uniform reduction of one-fourth in cash appropriations of over $50,000, and a uniform reduction of one-third in amounts authorized for continuing contracts after the next fiscal year. Some items were increased in the Senate before being reduced. The items in dispute, referred to as amendments Nos. 168, 219, 220, and 221, respectively, are the following:

No. 168: On page 75 of the bill as it passed the Senate an appropriation of $400,000 for the Brazos River Channel and Dock Company. This company, organized under an act passed in 1888, proceeded to build certain works for the improvement of the harbor at the mouth of the Brazos River under a license contained in the act authorizing them to take control of this harbor, located at the mouth of the Brazos River, and collect from boats entering the port tolls, the reasonableness of which was to be determined by the Secretary of War.

The company also acquired 26,000 acres of land surrounding the mouth of the river and in the points nearest the improvement effected. After prosecuting the construction of these works for some years the company decided to abandon them, and came to Congress asking that an investigation be made by a board of engineers as to their value. This investigation was concluded and the report made by the board stating that the value of the works constructed by them, capitalized at 5 per cent, would be somewhat less than $400,000, and that the cost of them, if adopted and constructed anew by the Government, would be $600,000. The board, however, reported against paying any compensation to the company.

After this report was filed at the third session of the Fifty-fifth Congress the agents of this company appeared before committees of Congress, and it was agreed that in case the Government should pursue the improvement at the mouth of the river and take charge of the works constructed by the company, the company would by sufficient deed convey all their rights and interests in the works constructed to the United States.

In pursuance of this agreement, embodied as a provision in the river and harbor act of March 3, 1899, Congress has appropriated $85,000 for these improvements, has prosecuted the work, and the company executed a deed to the United States, approved by the Attorney-General. Your conferees under the circumstances detailed are unwilling to recommend the payment of the amount added by this amendment, to wit, $400,000.

The House conferees also are unable to agree with the conferees of the Senate on amendments Nos. 219, 220, and 221, providing, respectively, for reservoirs in Piney Creek and Gray Bull River, both in the State of Wyoming, and the Sioux River in South Dakota. The subject of building dams or reservoirs clearly intended for purposes of irrigation has been frequently discussed by the House, and we adhered to the opinion maintained by the House conferees on the act of March 3, 1899, that these do not properly belong in a river and harbor bill. Special mention is made of amendment 221, which is in the following language:

"For building dams and constructing reservoirs on the Sioux River in South Dakota, to control the flow of said stream and impound the flood waters to secure a permanent stage of water in the Missouri River, $52,500."

A report has been made upon this project by the engineer officers of the War Department, in which it is known as Document No. 93, Fifty-sixth Congress, second session. There is an adverse report upon this project. It clearly would confer no material benefit either upon irrigation or navigation.

The provision also assumes by dams and reservoirs in the Sioux River to impound the flood waters so as to secure a permanent stage of water in the Missouri River. The conferees do not think the promise made by this phraseology in the bill can be accomplished by the construction of this dam, and especially recommend that this amendment be rejected.

The amounts thus in dispute between the House and Senate conferees are as follows:

Brazos River, amendment 168, $400,000.
Reservoirs along Piney Creek, head waters of the Missouri, $215,000.
Gray Bull River, Wyoming, $75,000.
Sioux River, South Dakota, $52,500; in all, $732,500.

Numerous amendments made by the Senate are merely in the phraseology of the bill as it passed the House, often in the change of a single word, and do not materially affect the provisions of the bill as sent from the House to the Senate.

The above report is respectfully submitted.

T. E. BURTON,
WALTER REEVES,
T. C. CATCHINGS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the report.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Ohio what the conferees have done on amendment No. 23, in reference to Buttermilk Channel.

Mr. BURTON. The House appropriated $300,000 cash and $1,500,000 to be expended under contract. This was cut down by the Senate to $112,500 cash. The amount has been raised by the conference committee to $250,000.

Mr. FITZGERALD of New York. Does the provision as agreed on provide for a continuing improvement?

Mr. BURTON. No, sir; there is simply an appropriation of $250,000 cash. The appropriation is for a continuing improvement in the sense in which I think the gentleman uses the term.

Mr. FITZGERALD of New York. Is the present language the same as the language of the Senate amendment—"continuing improvement?"

Mr. BURTON. That language, as ordinarily used in the bill, means the authorization of a continuing contract, to be paid from appropriations subsequently made. The appropriation here is for a certain amount of cash immediately available for continuing the improvement in the sense in which, as I understand, the gentleman uses the language.

Mr. BROMWELL. I would like to inquire with regard to amendments numbered 185, 186, 187, and 188, in regard to the construction of the dam at Cullums Ripple. Has there been any change in the amount as appropriated by the House? What is the amount authorized now as a cash payment?

Mr. REEVES. Replying to the gentleman from Ohio, at the request of the chairman of the committee, I would simply say that the conference committee has restored the provision of the House bill.

Mr. BROMWELL. Then the appropriation is $100,000?

Mr. REEVES. Yes, sir.

Mr. BROMWELL. And the continuing contract, as I understand, is left as it is in the Senate bill. I wish to ask the chairman of the committee whether he thinks that the cutting down of the total amount fixed in the House bill, $950,000, to $633,334 will jeopardize in any way the continuation of this improvement?

Mr. BURTON. I would have preferred that the change should not have been made, but I think there is ample provision for the vigorous prosecution of the work.

Mr. BROMWELL. The Senate amendment, I observe, changes the word from "completing" to "prosecuting." Does this change of language jeopardize the completion of the dam by additional appropriations to be authorized hereafter?

Mr. BURTON. There will be no embarrassment in that respect.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I wish to inquire in regard to amendment 103, relative to the Puget Sound waterway.

Mr. BURTON. That was stricken out.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I wish to inquire further in regard to amendments 104 and 105, relating to Tacoma Harbor.

Mr. BURTON. We concurred with the Senate in respect to those amendments.

Mr. JONES of Washington. There was an entire concurrence?

Mr. BURTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. JONES of Washington. How about amendment 107, for the improvement of Grays Harbor and Chehalis River, Washington?

Mr. BURTON. We concurred in the appropriation of $50,000, which, I believe, is $17,000 more than the gentleman asked for in the House. It was claimed that that amount was needed.

Mr. JONES of Washington. What has been done in regard to the amendment No. 234, making an appropriation of $10,000 for the improvement of the Columbia River between the mouth of the Willamette River and Vancouver?

Mr. BURTON. That has been put in for the purpose of getting rid of the bar a few miles below Vancouver.

Mr. JONES of Washington. What did the conference committee do in regard to amendments Nos. 238 and 239, relative to the improvement of the Nooksack River?

Mr. BURTON. On that amendment we concurred with the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Washington. May I ask what was done in regard to amendment 241, for improving the Lewis River, Washington?

Mr. BURTON. That is concurred in.

Mr. DALZELL. I would like to ask the gentleman what has become of the provision for the improvement of the Monongahela River?

Mr. BURTON. The House provision has been restored, the Senate having receded, as they did also in regard to the provision for a dam in the Allegheny.

Mr. BELLAMY. What has been done with amendments numbered 138, 139, and 140?

Mr. BURTON. I do not recognize the amendments by their numbers.

Mr. BELLAMY. I refer to the Senate amendments appropriating $250,000 for the improvement of the Cape Fear River, North Carolina.

Mr. BURTON. The House concurred in the Senate provision, with an amendment. The amount agreed upon diminishes the Senate appropriation from $250,000 to $150,000. There was another Senate amendment of minor importance providing for 8 feet of water. The specification for 8 feet was stricken out and the words "suitable depth," or equivalent words, were inserted.

Mr. BELLAMY. What was done with amendment 139, striking out $140,000 and inserting $112,000 for the Cape Fear River.

Mr. BURTON. We concurred in the Senate amendment.

Mr. BELLAMY. Was amendment numbered 140 also concurred in?

Mr. BURTON. I believe that was an amendment in the same direction in regard to a place near the mouth of the river?

Mr. BELLAMY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BURTON. That is concurred in.

Mr. BREAZEALE. What was the action of the conference committee upon the amendment in regard to the Red River?

Mr. BURTON. In that case the amount was raised from $75,000 to $100,000.

Mr. OTEY. What has become of amendment 132, for the improvement of the New River?

Mr. BURTON. The committee of conference very reluctantly left that out. [Laughter.]

Mr. BUTLER. What was done with amendments Nos. 120 and 121, in regard to the improvement of the Delaware River?

Mr. BURTON. They were concurred in. It was thought that the amount remaining unexpended would be sufficient for the prosecution of the work for three or four years.

Mr. SMALL. May I ask what has been done in regard to the Senate amendment No. 141, providing for the appointment of a board of engineers to investigate the subject of an inland waterway from Norfolk Harbor to Beaufort Inlet?

Mr. BURTON. That provision, as I recollect, has been struck out. The committee of conference thought it too expensive a proposition to be taken up at this time.

Mr. SMALL. What was the action of the conference committee in regard to amendment No. 42, appropriating $3,000 for the improvement of Beaufort Harbor?

Mr. BURTON. That has been included in the bill. We concurred in the Senate amendment.

Mr. SMALL. Amendments 284, 285, and 286 provided for surveys of the Perquimans River, Shallowbag Bay, and Carrot Island Slough.

Mr. BURTON. I think they have all been included.

Mr. SNODGRASS. May I inquire what has been done with amendment 175, relating to the Cumberland River, Tennessee, below Nashville?

Mr. BURTON. The Senate provision for the river above Nashville was nonconcurred in; but as to the portion below Nashville, it was concurred in.

Mr. SNODGRASS. Does the gentleman remember that the committee of the House gave what it was thought would be sufficient to complete Lock No. 1, above Nashville—$105,000?

Mr. BURTON. It is thought a sufficient amount is appropriated for that purpose.

Mr. SNODGRASS. I want to call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that the local engineer recommends that an increase of 15 per cent be made in order to be able to complete that lock.

Mr. BURTON. I can not yield to any argument at this time, within fourteen hours of adjournment. It will be utterly without avail to endeavor to get that changed.

Mr. SNODGRASS. And he recommended, owing to the variation in price, that perhaps 15 per cent should be added to the original estimate made in 1892. What I want to call the gentleman's attention to is, does he expect to complete that lock for $105,000, and does that include the 15 per cent added in his recommendation?

Mr. BURTON. I would state that it includes the latest recommendation we have from the Board of Engineers.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I desire to ask the gentleman about amendment No. 106, where the change was made from fifteen to forty thousand dollars.

Mr. BURTON. The Senate provision is concurred in, changing it from fifteen to forty thousand dollars.

Mr. PAYNE. I would like to inquire what became of amendment No. 269, as to the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal and Choptank route?

Mr. BURTON. It was omitted. It was nonconcurred in by the committee of conference. We thought that a proposition too large to undertake at this time.

Mr. DENNY. May I ask the gentleman what was done with Senate amendment 38, Curtis Bay?

Mr. BURTON. The Senate amendment was concurred in. If there are no other questions, I move that the report be adopted.

Mr. HAMILTON. I would like to ask the gentleman what was done with amendment No. 84, Saugatuck Harbor?

Mr. BURTON. That provision was struck out after a full and free conference. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. BURTON. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. REEVES].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa addressed the Chair. The Chair asks the gentleman if he yields for a question?

Mr. BURTON. Certainly.

Mr. HEPBURN. I did not ask to yield to a question. I rose for the purpose of asking for a separate vote on these amendments.

The SPEAKER. That can not be done under the report. It must be done on the other items, but not on the items contained in the report.

Mr. BURTON. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REEVES. I merely wanted to make an inquiry of the gentleman from Iowa; and I did not hear the Speaker's ruling.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa has not submitted anything at present.

Mr. REEVES. I want a separate vote on one of these items.

The SPEAKER. That is not in order at present. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Ohio, to agree to the report.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. HEPBURN. I ask for a division, Mr. Speaker.

The House divided.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky demands the yeas and nays. [After counting.] Ten gentlemen have arisen—not a sufficient number. The yeas and nays are refused; and the motion is carried.

Mr. HEPBURN. I raise the point that no quorum is present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa makes the point that no quorum is present. The Chair will count. (After counting.) Two hundred and fifteen present; a quorum is present; the ayes are 126; the noes 25; the ayes have it; and the motion is carried. Is a separate vote demanded on any of the remaining amendments?

Mr. REEVES. I demand a separate vote upon that item for the appropriation for the mouth of Brazos River.

The SPEAKER. That is amendment 168.

Mr. HEPBURN. I demand a separate vote on the other three.

Mr. OTEY. I demand a vote on amendment 132.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa demands a separate vote upon the remaining amendments.

Mr. BURTON. I want to raise the point of order on the request of the gentleman from Virginia.

The SPEAKER. That was not recognized, as a separate vote was demanded on the four remaining amendments.

Mr. BURTON. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois how much time he would desire relating to the mouth of Brazos River?

Mr. REEVES. Not to exceed five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report amendment 168.

The Clerk read as follows:

The sum of $400,000 is hereby appropriated to the Brazos River Channel and Dock Company in payment to said company for the jetties built by said company at the mouth of the Brazos River, Texas, and heretofore transferred to the Government by said company: Provided, That of said amount the sum of $20,000 shall be retained by the Secretary of the Treasury and not paid to said company until the said company shall have conveyed to the United States, by proper and sufficient warranty deed, to be approved by the Attorney-General of the United States, the absolute title to a strip of land 1 mile in length and 300 feet in width upon the water front on the east side of Brazos River within 6 miles of the shore end of the east jetty, said strip of land to be selected by the Secretary of War and the limits thereof fixed by him.

Mr. BURTON. I desire to yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois, reserving the balance of my time. There is no motion made to recede and concur in this case.

Mr. REEVES. I will make it. Mr. Speaker, on this item just read I move that the House recede and concur. That is the point on which I shall address the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois moves that the House recede and concur upon the amendment just read, and the gentleman from Ohio yields five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. REEVES. Mr. Speaker, I would like if the members will listen to me for a moment in order to state the facts in this case for your judgment, as you will be called upon to pass upon it almost at once. Very briefly, the facts are these: Some years ago certain gentlemen obtained a license or permit to improve the harbor, or to make a harbor at the mouth of the Brazos River in Texas.

They expended a sum ranging from $1,200,000 to $1,500,000 upon this project, at the end of which time they failed absolutely, and were obliged to surrender the license which they had to the General Government. At the time of the surrender of this license Mr. Mills was a Senator from Texas, and some correspondence was had with him, and in so far as he could, he stated that there was no doubt in his mind that the Government, or Congress, would pay these men the value of this property.

There was no bargain for its payment. These gentlemen surrendered what they had done and their license back to the Government, after which the Government, through its engineers, made an estimate of what would be the value of this improvement to the General Government, and they reported that the work that had been done was worth to the Government $600,000, whereupon these men came to Congress and have asked payment.

I want to say to the House that, in my judgment, there is absolutely no legal right of any character or kind, but, on the contrary, there is an equitable right. That fact is established by the fact that the General Government has seen fit to go on and improve this harbor, and has utilized and used this work, which the engineers say is of value to the Government in the improvement, of $600,000.

Upon that state of affairs the Senate has made an amendment to pay these men $400,000. It is to that amendment that the conferees have disagreed, and this is the item before you. I want to say to the House that neither directly nor indirectly have I the slightest interest in it.

It is a mere matter of good conscience whether we shall pay to these men, who have spent all that they have, or at least some of them have, in this improvement; and the Government having taken it, it is a question whether or not we will concur in the Senate amendment and pay these men $400,000.

I think it is a matter for each gentleman to decide for himself. The objection to it is that these men own a large area of land near by, and that the improvement the Government will make will add value to it. I think that is true.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Is this to be in full payment for the entire demand?

Mr. REEVES. I intend to offer a proposition to make it in full payment of all demands, to make its acceptance full payment of claims of all kinds and character.

Mr. PAYNE. Has the gentleman offered any such amendment?

Mr. REEVES. I have not made it, but I propose to offer it in conference.

Mr. PAYNE. But the gentleman's proposition is to concur in the Senate amendment, and that will take it out of conference.

Mr. REEVES. That is true. Mr. Speaker, I desire to modify my motion to this effect: That in the acceptance of the payment of this money, if it shall be paid, that it be in full payment of every kind and character of claim, in full of all demands, and I move that the House recede and concur with that amendment.

Mr. BURTON. If the gentleman has concluded, I will yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BALL].

Mr. BALL. Mr. Speaker, in opposing this amendment which has been tacked onto the Texas appropriation I desire to say to this House that it ought to be voted down with practical unanimity. In 1887 there was no deep-water port on the Texas coast. A lot of very estimable gentlemen decided that it would be a profitable investment to get deep water at the mouth of the Brazos River, not believing that deep water could be had at Galveston, Tex. They secured, in 1888, a charter from the State of Texas authorizing them to develop a port at the mouth of the Brazos. At the same time a land company, owned by the same parties, was formed, which bought up 26,000 acres of land adjacent thereto, including water front for 10 miles, as a real-estate speculation.

Then deep water was secured by the Government at Galveston, and these gentlemen realized that no more money could be spent in developing the mouth of the Brazos, because under their charter they were allowed to charge tolls and tax the commerce of the country, which could not be done with a free port at Galveston, only 40 miles away.

It was found then that their investment, or their hope for large profits, had been a disappointment. I regret that these gentlemen should have made so unfortunate an investment, but the Congress ought not to pay their losses in the face of the report of our engineering board, consisting of one member of the Geodetic Survey, one member of the Army engineers, and a civil engineer, who reported that "no payment should be made to the company by whom the works had been constructed, any more than to the many municipal corporations by whom large sums have been expended in harbor construction without repayment." The speculation having proven disastrous, they then came to Congress and proposed that if the Government would take up the work they would convey the jetties and surrender their right to charge tolls, no doubt relying upon the hope of realizing from their real estate and at the same time avoiding the spending of more money in construction of jetties and maintenance of their works.

Mr. HAWLEY. I beg to differ with my colleague——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. BALL. No; I have only five minutes. The gentleman knows that so far as the Commerce Committee and the Committee on Rivers and Harbors are concerned the understanding was that they were to surrender their rights and to reserve their land. The board of engineers appointed by the Government reported that the Government ought not to undertake the work unless upon condition that they surrender their jetties, together with a mile of the river front. In my judgment this work would never have been entered upon if there had been any expectation that these gentlemen would claim reimbursement. But whether Congress ever reimburses them or not, one fact remains that ought to bar them from receiving any appropriation here, and that is the Committee on Commerce of the Senate and the River and Harbor Committee have both refused to make any appropriation to continue the work, and there is very little commerce at the mouth of the Brazos today. So that if any equity should ever arise by which these gentlemen are entitled to equitable reimbursement, they ought at least to wait until the Government's plan has developed and until it is shown that their works are of some value to the commerce of the country.

It is an absurdity, Mr. Speaker, to appropriate $400,000 here to reimburse a syndicate without appropriating a dollar to continue the work of the Government for the purposes of commerce. If you do this, the Aransas Pass Harbor Company is in the same boat, and they will demand relief. Galveston has spent a hundred thousand dollars on Government work, and they will ask relief. I have uniformly refused to support any attempt to recoup those who have made unprofitable investments, at the expense of the Government. There is at least $75,000,000 which has been spent by counties, municipalities, and States in these projects. And they will all be here clamoring for relief if you open the door.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 10698. An act to amend an act amending an act entitled "An act to authorize the receipt of United States gold coin in exchange for gold bars;" and

H. R. 2619. An act for the relief of Agnes and Maria De Leon.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to bills of the following titles:

H. R. 13189. An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, had further insisted upon its amendments to the bill, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had asked a further conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. NELSON, Mr. MCMILLAN, and Mr. BERRY as the conferees on the part of the Senate; and

H. R. 13729. An act making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles:

H. R. 9835. An act to establish a code of laws for the District of Columbia;

H. R. 10302. An act to amend an act to promote the safety of employees, etc., by requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, etc., approved March 2, 1893; and

H. R. 13436. An act to authorize the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BROMWELL. Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HAWLEY].

Mr. HAWLEY. I want to ask my colleague if he will not recall the statement he made that not a dollar had been appropriated for improvements at the mouth of the Brazos? Is not there an appropriation in this very bill for that purpose?

Mr. BALL. There is $30,000, but nothing to complete the jetties; it is merely for the purpose of dredging.

Mr. HAWLEY. Probably the engineers thought that was the best means of obtaining deep water; it was left to their judgment. Now, Mr. Speaker, in the very short time I have I wish to say that this is not only an equity in my judgment, but an absolute right. When this work was undertaken there was not a harbor west of the Mississippi River, and commerce was pressing in the South on the Gulf of Mexico, where the syndicate, as it is called, put their money and their reputation into this work.

It seems to me the attitude of the Government should be to restore at least in part money which was expended there in the interest of commerce. It was for the purpose of accommodating the territory lying west and north of Texas that the improvement of this harbor was undertaken. In accepting the deed for this property the Government certainly did not undertake to say to its citizens that it intended to take the property without some compensation. Is it possible that the Government would expect to receive property from citizens without compensation any more than it would expect citizens to receive property from the Government on the same terms?

The whole question is, Shall the Government accept without any compensation this work that cost $1,000,000? That was the amount spent there in the interest of developing the harbor for the benefit of commerce. Should a claim of this kind be denied, when citizens come here asking that relief to which every citizen is entitled when he comes to his Government for justice? I leave the matter to the judgment of the House.

Mr. BROMWELL. Let me ask the gentleman a question before he takes his seat. As I understand, this was an enterprise undertaken by private parties, with the privilege of collecting tolls for the navigation of that river, the profits from which were to go into their own treasury.

Mr. HAWLEY. But the Government reserved the right at any time it pleased to take over that property on its own account.

Mr. BROMWELL. But it did not do so.

Mr. HAWLEY. It did take over the property.

Mr. BROMWELL. The parties surrendered their rights.

Mr. HAWLEY. They ceded the property back to the Government.

Mr. BROMWELL. Then let them stand the loss.

Mr. BURTON. Does the gentleman from Iowa intend to oppose the Senate amendment?

Mr. HEPBURN. I am opposed to concurring in the amendment.

Mr. BURTON. I will yield to the gentleman. Will five minutes be sufficient?

Mr. HEPBURN. I think so.

Mr. BURTON. I yield to the gentleman five minutes.

[Mr. HEPBURN addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, I should hardly say a word upon this amendment if there did not seem to be a certain degree of vitality in the support which it receives in this House. As it appears to me, it has not a particle of solid foundation. What is it? In 1888 Congress passed an act by which the privilege was given to the Brazos River Channel and Dock Company to improve the mouth of the Brazos. They went ahead and expended a considerable sum of money. They purchased 26,000 acres of land.

Two or three years ago it appeared to them that they would not succeed in their enterprise. They then came to Congress and asked us to appropriate for the improvement of the mouth of that river. Bear in mind the improvement made since by the Government is not necessarily an extension or amplification of what they did at all.

They admitted that they had not succeeded. They were told, "The Government will undertake that work for the improvement at the mouth of that river where you have failed; but you must make a deed to the Government surrendering all right, title, interests, and franchises at that place."

It was provided even further at one time, as the bill passed the House, that they must deed to the Government of the United States a strip of land. That provision was stricken out in conference, because it was thought to be a little severe. We appropriated $85,000 for improvements at the mouth of the Brazos. Our action gave them a quid pro quo. The present application of that company for compensation is just the same as if a member of this House, having deeded to me a piece of property for a consideration, should come around two years afterwards and ask further pay for it.

And is there any different rule between the individual or a corporation on the one hand and the United States on the other from that which should prevail between two individuals? There is one little side light, besides, I want to throw on this claim. I never heard that it was to be introduced or to be included in this bill until last Thursday.

Suppose I were a judge on the bench and a claim of $400,000 were presented to me on Friday morning and I were told, "You must decide by midnight Sunday night upon that claim, and you must decide in favor of it." I would be very likely to conclude that it was not a claim of any great merit. If there is merit in it, they can wait; and I hope the House will vote this amendment down by an overwhelming majority. I ask for a vote on the motion.

The SPEAKER. The amendment will be reported to the House—the portion offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. REEVES moved that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment No. 168 and concur therein with the following amendment:

"Insert after the word 'him,' in line 10, on page 33, the following: 'That this appropriation and its acceptance shall be in full of all claims against the United States in all matters pertaining thereto.'"

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The question was taken; and the amendment was lost.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, I call up the next amendment. I understand several gentlemen desire to be heard on these two arid-land amendments in Wyoming. [Cries of "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. There is a motion to be submitted to the House that the House further insist on its disagreement on the other Senate amendment.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The next amendment is amendment 219, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 75, after line 19, insert:

"Reservoirs at the head waters of the Missouri River: For construction along Piney Creek, Wyoming, of three reservoirs for the purpose of holding back the flood waters of said stream, with the view of minimizing the formation of bars and shoals and other flood-formed obstructions to navigation and to aid in the maintenance of an increased depth and uniform flow of water for navigation during the dry season, in accordance with the recommendations submitted in House Document No. 141, Fifty-fifth Congress, second session, $50,000: Provided, That the Secretary of War may enter into a contract or contracts for such work and materials as may be necessary for the completion of such reservoirs, to be paid for as appropriations may, from time to time, be made by law, not to exceed in the aggregate $165,000, exclusive of the amount herein appropriated."

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, I move to nonconcur, unless the gentleman wishes to move to concur.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio moves that the House further insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend that motion by moving that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. That is the preferential motion—the motion to concur.

Mr. BURTON. I yielded merely for that purpose, that the gentleman might make the motion. I understood the gentleman wanted to make the motion to concur. The House has on very recent occasions had a discussion on the matter of the arid lands, and we have voted on it several times; and I do hope that as we are within twenty-four hours of the end of the session, no longer discussion will occur on this question. [Cries of "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. How much time does the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURTON. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13705) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, and had receded from its amendment No. 89.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 14269. An act confirming a lease between J. W. Peglow and the Seneca Nation of New York Indians;

H. R. 14228. An act to authorize the city of Nashville, Tenn., to construct a free public bridge across the Cumberland River within the corporate limits of said city;

H. R. 14138. An act to authorize the Pigeon River Improvement, Slide and Boom Company, of Minnesota, to enter upon the Grand Portage Indian Reservation and improve the Pigeon River in said State at what is known as the Cascades of said river;

H. R. 14093. An act to authorize the Paris, Choctaw and Little Rock Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across Red River in the State of Texas;

H. R. 13530. An act to provide an American register for the foreign-built ship Balclutha;

H. R. 13396. An act to amend section 5546 of the Revised Statutes;

H. R. 11350. An act to establish the national bureau of standards;

H. R. 7603. An act to correct the military record of James A. Somerville;

H. R. 3003. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to loan naval equipment to certain military schools; and

H. R. 523. An act for the relief of Arba N. Waterman.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate that the gentlemen interested in this bill are exceedingly anxious to have a vote upon it, and I shall detain the House but a moment in discussing the amendment. At the time the river and harbor bill was before the House I offered an amendment similar to that now before us.

This amendment provides for the construction of three storage reservoirs on one of the head waters of the Missouri River. This is a worthy project. It is a project that has been reported on favorably by an Army engineer. It is a project which will aid navigation more, in proportion to its size, than $9,000,000 or $10,000,000 appropriations carried in this bill for the improvement of the Mississippi River. [Cries of "Vote!"]

While so aiding navigation, it will at the same time make possible, without any additional expenditure on the part of the Government, the development of a very considerable region now barren, uninhabited, and unproductive. The gentlemen in charge of this bill have found fault that we have insisted on placing this amendment on the bill.

As one of those who favor this class of legislation, I regret, Mr. Speaker, that we could not place this item on a bill more defendable than the bill upon which this item is placed; but I will say that of all the items in the bill this is an item which can best be defended not only from the standpoint of aiding irrigation, but because in addition to that it will aid in the development of a vast amount of Government land and aid in the settlement of a great region. [Applause.]

Mr. HEPBURN. I ask the gentleman to yield to me for thirty seconds. I want to make a correction.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I wish the gentleman would yield to me.

Mr. HEPBURN. I simply want to say that the description that I read was of a different river than the one I named, but it served my purpose to illustrate the subject. [Laughter.]

Mr. BURTON. I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Wyoming, to recede and concur.

The question was taken; and the motion was lost.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the motion of the gentleman from Ohio, that the House further insist upon its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate.

The question was taken; and the motion was carried.

The SPEAKER. The next amendment is amendment 220.

Mr. BURTON. There is one other amendment—221, as I recollect it.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Certainly we can have a motion for concurrence in amendment 220.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, a vote will be taken on amendments 220 and 221. What is the motion of the gentleman?

Mr. BURTON. To further insist on the disagreement.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio moves to further insist on the disagreement to amendments 220 and 221.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to these amendments, and concur.

The question was taken; and the motion was lost.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Ohio.

The question was taken; and the motion was carried.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House comply with the request of the Senate for a conference.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion that the House agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the following managers on the part of the House: Mr. BURTON, Mr. REEVES, and Mr. CATCHINGS.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I present the conference report on the Post-Office appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman desire the report and statement both read?

Mr. LOUD. I will ask that the statement be read only.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks that the statement only be read. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13729) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon in the accompanying conference report on each of the Senate amendments, namely:

Your conferees have been unable to agree upon amendments numbered 2 and 3.

E. F. LOUD.
GEO. W. SMITH,
CLAUDE A. SWANSON,
Conferees on the part of the House.

The SPEAKER. What is the motion of the gentleman from California?

Mr. LOUD. I move that the House further insist upon its disagreement, and agree to the conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there any conference report to be agreed to first?

Mr. LOUD. There is a disagreement, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California moves that the House further insist on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate, and agree to the conference asked by that body.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the following managers on the part of the House: Mr. LOUD, Mr. SMITH of Illinois, and Mr. SWANSON.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I thought it was but fair to the House that the House should have some verbal statement of the condition existing between the Senate and the House on the Post-Office appropriation bill.

On Thursday last the conferees made their second report to the House, recommending an agreement in the shape of a modification of two amendments in the shape of legislation, which had been put upon the appropriation bill in the Senate. We modified the amendments in the conference as far as it was possible for any modification to be had.

The House by a very decided vote rejected the report of the conferees. On Friday morning the conferees again met. As is the custom in the House, we are notified from the Senate by messenger or telephone, and I was able to get one of the conferees to attend that meeting, not being able to find the third conferee.

We went to the Senate, assuming that we had received the instructions of the House, and the Senate conferees refused to meet the conferees of the House on the ground that there were but two of the House conferees present. We argued that question with the Senate conferees for some few moments; and I might mention, in passing, that there had been but two conferees present but a very little of the time on their side during the conference that had taken place.

The House conferees, after this refusal to meet was made, withdrew from the conference. Again, this afternoon, after two days had elapsed, the Senate again suggested a conference, and the conferees have been unable to agree. What may be the ultimate result I can not say. I believe the House conferees have been treated with such discourtesy, at least, as never before has been my lot to witness. This is legislation upon an appropriatian bill, and in accordance with the universal custom the Senate must recede. I thought that statement was due to the House.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Will the gentleman state how many amendments are in this agreement?

Mr. LOUD. Two—Nos. 2 and 3. One is the delivery in cities and towns and villages not now having delivery, under a box system, and the other is the postal telegraph.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA CODE.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia demands the regular order. The Chair lays before the House the bill H. R. 9835 with Senate amendments, and the Clerk will report the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 9835) entitled "An act to establish a code of laws for the District of Columbia."

The Clerk proceeded to read the Senate amendments.

During the reading the following occurred:

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Speaker, is it in order to move to dispense with the further reading of the amendments?

The SPEAKER. It is, by unanimous consent.

Mr. WHEELER. I ask, then, Mr. Speaker, unanimous consent that the further reading of the Senate amendments be dispensed with.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not like to object, Mr. Speaker, but——

Mr. WHEELER. Why, nobody can understand them. The gentleman can not understand the amendments himself, detached as they are.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I came down to the front to try to understand them. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The Clerk proceeded and completed the reading of the Senate amendments.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin a question.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask for order. It is impossible to hear what is going on.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state that it has been for some time manifest that the disturbance comes from the galleries, and unless order is observed, and conversation ceases, it will become the duty of the Chair, in order to promote the public business, to order the Sergeant-at-Arms to clear the galleries of the House. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin if he does not propose to give some explanation to the House as to the effect of the amendments carried in this bill. I notice that some of them change the criminal laws of the District, and I do not think the House ought to be called upon to vote on a proposition of this kind without knowing what it is voting upon.

Mr. BABCOCK. I want to say to the House, Mr. Speaker, that the most of the amendments, outside of one relating to the divorce laws, are immaterial. In many cases they are simply to correct the phraseology of the bill as it left the House. At this late hour it would be impossible for me to go into the details and explain fully to the House, and the House would not care to listen to it.

I want to say further that the amendments that are offered here have been approved by the bar of the District, and are entirely satisfactory.

I want to say further that it has been necessary to use haste, as it will take from now until 12 o'clock to-morrow to enroll this bill of 600 pages, and it has been impossible to take it up in detail and give it any more time. Another thing: For twenty years the people of the District of Columbia have been endeavoring to secure a framework for a code of law. Time and time again it has been before Congress, but disagreements arose here in the city of Washington, but not with Congress.

For the first time in twenty years the bar, including the supreme judges, the organization of the bar in Washington, together with one member of our committee [Mr. JENKINS], who spent three weeks working continuously on this code, have brought it to a condition where it is acceptable to the citizens and the people as a whole in the District, especially the supreme court of the District.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that the fact that the time is limited is no excuse for passing legislation of importance that we know nothing about. That is the reason I asked him for an explanation. I understand there is an amendment here providing for a new law in reference to making it a misdemeanor for a man to live at a boarding house and not pay his bills.

Mr. BABCOCK. I believe so. That is simply an amendment to the House provision on that subject.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Is there a law in existence in the District of Columbia now upon that subject?

Mr. BABCOCK. I can not inform the gentleman what the law is here. I want to say to him that the member of the committee who has charge of this bill is sick to-night.

Mr. RAY of New York. If the gentleman will pardon me, I want to say that I hardly think he is correct in saying that this makes it a misdemeanor.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is what I am trying to find out.

Mr. RAY of New York. I do not want to interfere with what belongs to another committee, but I want to say to both gentlemen that I am deeply interested in the matter myself. I have given it a great deal of careful thought, and I have looked at the amendments from time to time, and it is a vast improvement over what the law has been in this District. It would be in the nature of a great calamity to the people to have this bill fail after all this work has been expended upon it.

I want to say to the gentleman that it is not a misdemeanor to live in a boarding house and fail to pay your bill, but it is a misdemeanor under the law of most of the States to run up a bill at a boarding house with the preconceived intent of defrauding the boarding-house keeper and then leave without paying. That is the law almost everywhere.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is exactly the point I want to find out. I want to ascertain how far this code makes it a crime for a man to live in a boarding house without paying his bill.

Mr. BABCOCK. As the gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY] has just stated, it is a misdemeanor for a person intentionally and purposely to undertake to defraud a boarding-house keeper.

A MEMBER. The law is the same in that respect in nearly all the States.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I wish to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin whether this purports to be a revision and codification of the laws of the District of Columbia?

Mr. BABCOCK. Yes, sir. It is a code of law which this District has never had before.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. As I understand, it makes no change in the existing law, but simply collects and codifies the laws heretofore passed.

Mr. BABCOCK. I do not think that statement is quite correct. I believe this codification does make some changes. This code has been drafted and submitted by judges of the supreme court of the District of Columbia after years of preparation.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I was about to ask, Is this the work of a committee of Congress, or is it the work of a board appointed to codify and revise the laws?

Mr. BABCOCK. It is not the work of a special committee of Congress. The original draft of the code was prepared by the supreme court of this District. One of the judges of that court was appointed for this work and was engaged upon it for several years. It was then submitted to the Bar Association of this District and approved by them. Then it was submitted to the House and Senate for their action.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. And the supreme court of this District consists simply of trial judges, who sit in banc.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is an exceedingly dangerous proceeding for this House to adopt a code without knowing what is in it. But as this affects only the District of Columbia, and as the supreme court of the District has practically completed the work itself, I suppose we can afford to accept it. But I do not want to take any responsibility for a code adopted without my knowing what is between the lids.

Mr. BABCOCK. This is a House bill which was considered and passed at the last session of Congress. We have now before us a few Senate amendments which are being considered.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I generally take very little interest in the proceedings of Congress when it resolves itself into a common council, and therefore did not know of that proceeding. I do not object if this matter has been considered and passed by the House. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin to concur in the amendments of the Senate.

The question being taken, the amendments were concurred in.

On motion of Mr. BABCOCK, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

Mr. BABCOCK. I ask that a reprint of this bill be made.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection.

CHARLEROI AND MONESSEN BRIDGE COMPANY.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13436) to authorize the Charleroi and Monessen Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River.

The amendments were read.

Mr. DALZELL. I move that the House concur in the amendments of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. GROUT, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to print with his remarks in the RECORD on the St. Louis Exposition bill certain telegrams.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DAYTON. I call up the conference report on the naval appropriation bill, and I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the report be dispensed with and that only the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read.

There was no objection.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Is this a final report?

Mr. DAYTON. This is, as I understand the parliamentary situation, a final report. The conferees have agreed upon every item save one, upon which they report a disagreement. But since that time the Senate has receded from that amendment, so that it is no longer in controversy. This is, therefore, a final report.

The conference report was as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13705) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 3, 9, 10, 81, and 82.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 8, 25, 39, 40, 42, 65, 79, 80, 84, 85, and 86, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$250,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 24: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$600,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 26: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 26, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of said amendment strike out the words "four hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "three hundred and fifty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 60: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 60, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of said amendment, strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "one;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 61: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 61, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$6,775,010;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 67: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 67, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment, after the word "President," insert the words "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate;" and in line 38 of said amendment, after the word "be," insert the words "until further legislation by Congress;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On the amendment numbered 89 the committee of conference have been unble to agree.

GEORGE EDMUND FOSS,
ALSTON G. DAYTON,
AMOS J. CUMMINGS,
Managers on the part of the House.

EUGENE HALE,
W. E. CHANDLER,
B. R. TILLMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of Representatives make the following statement of the resolution of the third conference with the managers on the part of the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendments to H. R. 13705, making appropriations for the naval establishment:

The Senate receded from its amendment No. 3, increasing the pay of first and second clerks to commandants.

No. 9, providing for an inspector of accounts.

No. 10, providing for assistant chiefs of bureaus.

No. 81, authorizing the President to appoint to the Naval Academy not exceeding three of the acting cadets temporarily appointed during the war with Spain.

No. 82, providing that the President appoint to the Naval Academy 10 naval cadets in addition to the 10 now allowed to him.

The House receded from its disagreement to the following amendments of the Senate:

No. 8, making $50,000 of the emergency fund immediately available.

No. 25, enabling the Secretary of the Navy to acquire land for a naval station, harbor, and channel defense at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

No. 39, striking out the House provision for fire protection system at navy-yard, Portsmouth, N. H., and inserting "extension of office building for construction and repair, fireproof construction."

No. 40, providing office for steam engineering and $15,000 at navy-yard, Portsmouth, N. H.

No. 42, involving a clerical computation.

No. 65, increasing the appropriation for the Naval Observatory for grounds and roads from $5,000 to $10,000.

No. 79, commissioning certain cadets at sea and in the Academy as ensigns.

No. 80, giving the President power to appoint as ensigns, boatswains, gunners, or warrant machinists not exceeding six in any one calendar year upon competitive examination.

Nos. 84, 85, and 86, providing for the construction of marine barracks, commanding officers' and junior officers' quarters for the Marine Corps at Annapolis.

The House receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 7, providing for an emergency fund, and agreed to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed ($300,000) insert "$250,000;" and the Senate agreed to the same.

The House receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 24, providing depots for coal and agreed to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed ($700,000) insert "$600,000;" and the Senate agreed to the same.

The House receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 26, providing for the maintenance of colliers, and agreed to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of said amendment strike out the words "four hundred thousand dollars" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "$350,000," decreasing the appropriation $50,000; and the Senate agreed to the same.

The House receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 60, providing for a dry dock at Charleston, S. C., and agreed to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of said amendment strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "one," thereby reducing the appropriation for dry dock $100,000; and the Senate agreed to the same.

The House receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 61, involving a clerical computation, and agreed to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$6,775,010;" and the Senate agreed to the same.

The House receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 67, providing expenses for a board of visitors to the Naval Observatory, and agreed to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of the said amendment, after the word "President," insert the words "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate;" and in line 38 of said amendment, after the word "be," insert the words "until further legislation by Congress;" and the Senate agreed to the same.

The committee of conference have been unable to agree on amendment numbered 89 providing for the construction of three submarine boats of the Holland type.

GEORGE EDMUND FOSS,
ALSTON G. DAYTON,
AMOS J. CUMMINGS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The question being taken, the conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. DAYTON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

OPENING OF INDIAN LANDS FOR SETTLEMENT.

Mr. HEATWOLE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That 5,000 additional copies of House bill No. 12901 be printed when the same shall become a law; the copies to be placed in the document room of the House.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I would like to know what this bill is. The resolution simply gives the number, but does not indicate the subject.

Mr. HEATWOLE. It relates to the Kiowa and Comanche Reservation, to be opened for settlement.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. When did the bill pass?

Mr. HEATWOLE. Yesterday. There is a great demand from a number of people for copies of this bill. The reprint is asked for by the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I would like to know a little more about this bill. Is it the bill providing for the allotment of the Kiowa and Comanche lands?

Mr. LACEY. It is the bill agreed to in conference last night in regard to the final opening of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Reservation.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. If the bill has passed, I have no objection to printing extra copies.

Mr. LACEY. There should be some extra copies printed.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the resolution, and it was adopted.

SAFETY OF EMPLOYEES OF COMMON CARRIERS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 10302) to amend an act to promote the safety of employees, etc., by requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, etc., approved March 2, 1893, with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. CORLISS. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

CHAPTER 559 OF THE REVISED STATUTES.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill S. 6048, now on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the Senate bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 6048) to amend chapter 559 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved March 3, 1891.

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of chapter 559 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved March 3, 1891, limiting the use of timber taken from public lands to residents of the State in which such timber is found, for use within said State, shall not apply to the south slope of Pryor Mountains, in the State of Montana, lying south of the Crow Reservation, west of the Big Horn River, and east of Sage Creek; but within the above-described boundaries the provisions of said chapter shall apply equally to the residents of the States of Wyoming and Montana, and to the use of timber taken from the above-described tract in either of the above-named States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the gentleman state whether this bill has been reported by any Committee of the House. I understand it is a Senate bill.

Mr. MONDELL. This is a Senate bill. A similar bill has been unanimously reported by the Committee on Public Lands of the House. I will say to the gentleman that the act which is modified is an act which allows settlers upon public lands to take timber for firewood and for fencing, and it is provided that they shall only take timber from lands within the State in which they reside.

On the tract which will be affected by this bill there is no timber obtainable in Wyoming; and this is simply a provision that they can go into the State of Montana and have the same privilege that the citizens of Montana have. Similar bills have been passed with respect to other States.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Has this bill been considered by the Commissioner of Public Lands?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes, sir.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Has he recommended its passage?

Mr. MONDELL. I saw the Commissioner personally in regard to it. I do not think it a matter of enough importance to ask for a report from the Commissioner. It only affects 6 townships of land, and it allows the settlers in the prairie region of Wyoming to go over into Montana and to cut timber for firewood and fencing.

Mr. STEELE. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MONDELL. Certainly.

Mr. STEELE. We have throughout the country men employed for the preservation of our forests. Now, would not this have a tendency to encourage men to fire the forests so as to have an opportunity to go and get dead and down timber—so that they could go in and get it after it was dead and down?

Mr. MONDELL. This bill has nothing to do with dead and down timber.

Mr. STEELE. If they are going to fire our woods and cause the timber to be down and kill the timber, it would be dead timber then, and they could go in and get it.

Mr. MONDELL. I will say to the gentleman that this preserves the dead and down timber. Under this law they have the right to take any kind of timber.

Mr. STEELE. They can take any kind of timber?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHAFROTH. If the gentleman will yield to me, I will state in regard to this bill, the Committee on Public Lands had a bill of a similar character, and if the gentleman says it is exactly the same I am confident that it is.

Mr. MONDELL. It is.

Mr. SHAFROTH. It relates to taking timber by settlers for domestic purposes, and inasmuch as there is no timber in the State of Wyoming on that side of the boundary, it permits the same provision to the citizens of the State of Wyoming that the citizens of Montana have, and it is a right which would exist if this same land were included in the State of Wyoming, without any legislation whatever. It is a very proper measure.

People living out in the plains, upon the arid lands, can not get timber without going a great distance, and inasmuch as this also made a limit of the taking of timber within the State, these people who live near the boundary are placed at a disadvantage unless some of the timber is within the State. I see no objection to it whatever.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HOUSE PENSION BILLS WITH SENATE AMENDMENTS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following House bills relating to pensions, with Senate amendments. The bills and Senate amendments were severally read, and, on motion of Mr. SULLOWAY, the Senate amendments were concurred in:

A bill (H. R. 7202) granting a pension to Wiley Causey;

A bill (H. R. 2163) granting an increase of pension of Mary L. Cramer;

A bill (H. R. 9503) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Baughman;

A bill (H. R. 13080) granting an increase of pension to John F. Carbee;

A bill (H. R. 10334) granting an increase of pension to Nellie T. P. Koehler; and

A bill (H. R. 13329) granting an increase of pension to Grotius N. Udell.

EDWIN DE LEON.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 2617) for the relief of the legal representatives of Edwin De Leon, deceased, for $8,000 due him for judicial services; with Senate amendment to the title.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, it was impossible to hear. I would be glad to know something of that bill.

Mr. SULLOWAY. I do not think that is a pension bill, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I would be very glad if it could be reported again. I did not hear it.

The bill was again reported with the amendment to the title.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. That is simply an amendment to the title, I understand.

The SPEAKER. The attention of the gentleman from Pennsylvania is invited by the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I ask if it is simply an amendment to the title; if that is all there is in the Senate amendment?

Mr. MAHON. That is all. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield to the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MAHON. Certainly.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania be good enough to tell the House what these legal services were?

Mr. MAHON. I do not propose to go into that now. It passed the House and the Senate. This is an amendment to the title alone.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. When did this bill pass the House?

Mr. MAHON. I can not tell the date.

The SPEAKER. February 23.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I suppose the merits have been adjudicated, if it passed the House. I have no recollection of it myself.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman there is nothing in issue except the amendment of the title.

Mr. BAILEY of Texas. I understand that.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 13609) to incorporate the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists in the District of Columbia with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read at length.

Mr. COWHERD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

RESTORATION OF CERTAIN WIDOWS TO THE PENSION ROLL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 9886) to restore certain widows to the pension roll with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House disagree to the amendments of the Senate and ask for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed as managers on the part of the House Mr. GIBSON, Mr. CALDERHEAD, and Mr. MIERS of Indiana.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present another conference report on the river and harbor bill.

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate numbered 168, 219, 220, 221, and 222, to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 222, and agree to the same.

As to amendments numbered 168, 219, 220, and 221 the conferees have been unable to agree.

T. E. BURTON,
WALTER REEVES,
T. C. CATCHINGS,
Managers on the part of the House.

KNUTE NELSON,
JAMES McMILLAN,
JAMES H. BERRY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

The conferees on the part of the House, after full and free conference, report that the Senate conferees insist on their disagreement to amendments numbered 168, 219, 220, and 221. The conferees on the part of the House recommend that the House still further insist upon its disagreement and ask for a further conference.

They also recommend that amendment numbered 222, heretofore by clerical error reported as disagreed to when in fact agreed to, be concurred in.

T. E. BURTON,
WALTER REEVES,
T. C. CATCHINGS,
Conferees on the part of the House of Representatives.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, it will be noticed that this report contains the same disagreements as before, but by a clerical error amendment No. 222 was reported as disagreed to, when in fact it was agreed to, and the conferees recommend that that be agreed to. I make the motion, first, that the report upon amendment No. 222, heretofore in fact agreed to, be adopted.

The SPEAKER. Is that the recommendation of the report?

Mr. BURTON. It is.

The SPEAKER. Then, the adoption of the report will serve the same purpose.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I would like to ask what is the nature of the report?

Mr. BURTON. It is to correct the clerical error as to the Upper Missouri River.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Ohio if this has anything to do with Grass River?

Mr. BURTON. No.

The question was taken, and the report was agreed to.

Mr. BURTON. I now move, Mr. Speaker, that the House still further insist upon its disagreement to the amendments 168, 219, 220, and 221, and ask for a further conference, and upon that I hope the vote of the House may be prompt and emphatic.

The SPEAKER. Are those the only remaining amendments?

Mr. BURTON. They are, that are disagreed to.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Ohio yield to the gentleman from Nevada?

Mr. BURTON. No; I can not. We have discussed this matter fully.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I want to ask, Mr. Speaker, if it is not in order for me to move that the House recede from its disagreement and concur?

Mr. BURTON. I will yield for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. That is the privilege of the gentleman.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Then I move, Mr. Speaker, that the House recede and concur in amendments 219, 220, and 221.

The SPEAKER. As these amendments have been reported before, without objection they will not be again reported to the House. [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection. The first amendment is 168, and on that amendment the gentleman from Ohio moves that the House further insist on its disagreement and ask for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Now, the gentleman from Nevada moves to recede and concur in amendments 219, 220, and 221. Without objection these will be taken in gross. [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I desire to address the House, Mr. Speaker, on this motion.

Mr. BURTON. I can not yield the floor for discussion.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Does not the gentleman permit any time for discussion? [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. Speaker, I ask whether the gentleman from Ohio controls the time?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio is entitled to the floor, but the motion of the gentleman from Nevada is a preferential motion.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Upon my motion am I not entitled to the floor?

The SPEAKER. No; the gentleman from Nevada can not take the gentleman from Ohio, who is in charge of the bill, from the floor.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Will not the gentleman from Ohio allow us five or ten minutes' debate on this?

Mr. BURTON. No; I can not. I ask for the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The question was then taken on the motion of Mr. NEWLANDS, and the motion was lost.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks that the House further insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendments, and asks for a further conference.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed as managers on the part of the House Mr. BURTON, Mr. REEVES, and Mr. CATCHINGS.

HEIRS OF TAWAMNOHA, OR MARTHA CRAYON.

Mr. SPALDING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3670) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent to the heir or heirs of one Tawamnoha, or Martha Crayon, conveying to them certain lands in the State of North Dakota, confirming certain conveyances thereof, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, upon due proof of the death of one Tawamnoha, or Martha Crayon, an Indian woman, late of the Devils Lake Sioux Indian Reservation, and due proof of heirship, to issue a patent to her heir or heirs conveying to them the following-described premises, situated in the county of Benson, State of North Dakota, to wit:

The lots numbered 2 and 3 of section 15, the lot numbered 1 of section 22, and the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 14, in township 153 north, of range 67 west of the fifth principal meridian, in the State of North Dakota, containing 159.08 acres; the said premises being land allotted to her in severalty by trust allotment patent of date November 2, 1892; such patent so to be issued to convey to said heir or heirs the said premises in fee, discharged of any trust or incumbrance whatsoever.

SEC. 2. That a certain deed, of date October 23, 1898, executed, acknowledged, and delivered by Matochatka and Mahpiyatokahewin, the father and mother of said Tawamnoha, or Martha Crayon, and parties entitled to succeed to her estate by the laws of the State of North Dakota, she having died without issue, which said deed was duly filed for record in the office of the register of deeds in and for Benson County, State of North Dakota, and recorded in Book E of Deeds, on page 600, and which purported to convey the said premises to Thomas Crayon, the surviving husband of said Tawamnoha, or Martha Crayon, be, and the same is hereby, legalized and in all things confirmed and ratified.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I should like to know what this matter is.

Mr. SPALDING. Mr. Speaker, this is a Senate bill. It has for its object the issuance of a patent to the husband of an Indian woman who died, leaving no children. The widower is a white man. The woman died in 1893, leaving a will under which the husband took all her property. That will has been probated.

The husband sold this piece of land, but the title is incumbered by the fact that the Government holds the land for a term of years in trust for the heirs of the deceased woman. A portion of the trust period has elapsed, but not all of it. This land lies on the border of the reservation and near the site of a small village.

It was desired to secure it for the purpose of building a courthouse and schoolhouse upon it, for the reason that the physical characteristics of the land in the other parts of the town are such that there is no other place suitable for erecting those buildings. This man desires to dispose of his interest. The evidence shows that $600 is a fair price.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Has there been any similar bill reported from any other committee of this House?

Mr. SPALDING. This bill is reported unanimously by the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I wish to know whether the regular order is not the resolution of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] for the appointment of a committee to visit during the recess Porto Rico, the Philippines, etc.

The SPEAKER. That is the regular order.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I call for the regular order.

Mr. PAYNE. I move that the House take a recess until 12 o'clock—midnight.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The effect of that will be to kill this resolution. I hope the motion will be voted down.

The question being taken on the motion for a recess, there were on a division (called for by Mr. SHATTUC and others)—ayes 106, noes 67.

Mr. RICHARDSON and others called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 137, nays 86, answered "present" 6, not voting 124; as follows:

So the motion was agreed to.

The following pairs were announced:

For this day:

Mr. EMERSON with Mr. MAY.

Mr. MORRELL with Mr. SIMS.

On this vote:

Mr. BULL with Mr. JOHNSTON.

Mr. LYBRAND with Mr. NORTON of Ohio.

Until further notice:

Mr. DAYTON with Mr. MEYER of Louisiana.

Mr. SHELDEN with Mr. FINLEY.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri with Mr. RUCKER.

Mr. CANNON with Mr. MCRAE.

Mr. BINGHAM with Mr. TALBERT.

Mr. ROBERTS with Mr. BELLAMY.

Mr. WANGER with Mr. ADAMSON

Mr. BURTON with Mr. SPARKMAN.

Mr. JENKINS with Mr. LESTER.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BARTHOLDT). The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. If this vote shall be in the affirmative and the House takes a recess, is not the result to defeat the resolution proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL], and is it not a vote of want of confidence in the administration, and ought not the administration now in control of affairs in the House to resign?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. GAINES. Whether it is or not, you are evidently running from your own resolution.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded; and accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the House was declared in recess until 12 o'clock midnight.

The recess having expired, the House resumed its session.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. LOUD. I call up the conference report on the Post-Office appropriation bill. I ask that the reading of the report be dispensed with, and that the statement of the House conferees be read.

There was no objection.

Mr. LOUD. But I think the report ought to be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. It will be so ordered.

The report was as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13729) "making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 2; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out said amendment and insert the following in lieu thereof:

"The Postmaster-General is directed, if he has sufficient available information to enable him to do so, to report to Congress the probable cost of connecting a telegraph and telephone system with the postal service by some feasible plan."

And the Senate agree to the same.

E. F. LOUD,
GEO. W. SMITH,
CLAUDE A. SWANSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

E. O. WOLCOTT,
WM. E. CHANDLER,
MARION BUTLER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13729) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon in the accompanying conference report on each of the Senate amendments, namely:

The Senate receded on amendment numbered 2, which relates to free delivery of mail through repositories or compartment boxes in cities, towns, and villages not now entitled to free delivery under existing law.

The House receded on amendment numbered 3, with the following amendment: Strike out said amendment and insert the following in lieu thereof:

The Postmaster-General is directed, if he has sufficient available information to enable him to do so, to report to Congress the probable cost of connecting a telegraph and telephone system with the postal service by some feasible plan.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the report.
The report was agreed to.

PENSIONS.

Mr. GIBSON. I call up the conference report upon the bill (H. R. 9886) to restore certain widows to the pension roll. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the report be dispensed with.

Mr. STEELE. I think we ought to have the report read. It is short.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9886) to restore certain widows to the pension roll, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendments, and concur in the same.

HENRY R. GIBSON,
W. A. CALDERHEAD,
ROBERT W. MIERS,
Managers on the part of the House.

J. H. GALLINGER,
GEO. L. SHOUP,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The effect of the agreement is to generalize the House bill so as to make it refer to all wars, the House bill confining its benefits exclusively to the widows of soldiers in the war of the rebellion. The agreement also protects the interests of helpless children, and provides that no fee shall be paid any person for services in prosecuting claims under the act.

HENRY R. GIBSON,
W. A. CALDERHEAD,
ROBERT W. MIERS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. GIBSON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the report was agreed to was laid on the table.

HEARINGS ON THE OLEOMARGARINE BILL.

Mr. HEATWOLE. I desire to call up from the Speaker's table Senate concurrent resolution 115 for present consideration, with the amendments which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. Is this privileged?

Mr. HEATWOLE. I think so.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. HEATWOLE] calls up the resolution which will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 30,000 copies of the hearings, including the majority report and views of the minority thereon, before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and the House Committee on Agriculture, together with the briefs submitted, relating to House bill No. 3717, 20,000 copies of which shall be for the use of the House of Representatives and 10,000 copies for the use of the Senate. The usual number shall not be printed.

The amendments were read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out "twenty" and insert "four."
In line 10 strike out "ten" and insert "two."

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I do not think this is a privileged resolution.

Mr. HEATWOLE. This printing is for the House and Senate.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Not for the Departments, but altogether for the House?

Mr. HEATWOLE. For the House and Senate.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Will the gentleman state what this document is which the resolution proposes to have printed?

Mr. HEATWOLE. The hearings on the oleomargarine bill.

The SPEAKER. The opinion of the Chair is that the resolution is not privileged. It is not reported from the committee.

Mr. HEATWOLE. I consulted the members of the committee in regard to the resolution.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I have no doubt it is all right.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

The amendments proposed by Mr. HEATWOLE were agreed to, and the resolution as amended was adopted.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendment to the bill (H. R. 9886) to restore certain widows to the pension roll, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. GALLINGER, Mr. SHOUP, and Mr. KENNEY as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9886) to restore certain widows to the pension roll.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13929) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendment bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

H. R. 11830. An act for the relief of the devisees of Casper Barber and their assigns from the operation of the act restricting the ownership of real estate in the Territories and the District of Columbia to American citizens.

COMMISSION TO VISIT ISLAND POSSESSIONS.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I now desire to call up the report from the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee calls up the regular order.

Mr. PAYNE. I move that the House take a recess until half past 12.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I make the point that that motion is dilatory and in obstruction of public business.

Mr. PAYNE. I do so in the interest of public business, so that the House can transact public business. The sundry civil bill will be here by half past 12.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. We will get through this other matter by that time.

Mr. PAYNE. This will be in the way of the sundry civil bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I make the point of order that it is dilatory.

The SPEAKER. It is a pretty strained ruling, but the Chair will sustain the point. [Laughter.] The gentleman from Pennsylvania will proceed.

Mr. DALZELL. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. MAHON. I move to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. HEPBURN. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. What is the regular order?

The SPEAKER. The Speaker can not entertain the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, because the gentleman has not the floor.

Mr. SULZER. The revenue-cutter bill is the regular order.

Mr. DALZELL. I have already yielded to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX].

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, if I can have order for just a few minutes I would be very much obliged.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order.

Mr. MADDOX. I want to say on yesterday a resolution was introduced into this House by the gentleman from Wisconsin to appoint a committee or a commission from the Committee on Insular Affairs of this House to visit Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands and to make a report back to the next Congress. That resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules of this House, composed of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL], the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR], the Speaker himself, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON], and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY]. I mention these gentlemen for this purpose: That a gentleman on that side of the House, the gentleman from Vermont, to-day arose in his place and denounced this measure—that is, this resolution—that was unanimously reported by these gentlemen of the House for the purpose of appointing this commission as a "pure and simple junket." That is the way he denounced it. Now, let me say this: Has it come to this—that these gentlemen, who are leaders of this House upon that side and upon this, and even the Speaker, have lent themselves for this purpose; that is, to establish a junket for the benefit of members? That is exactly what the gentleman from Vermont did, and it did not only reach over that side, but the gentleman from Mississippi, on this side, also designated it in other words——

Mr. STEELE. Why, what do you think about it?

Mr. MADDOX. If you will sit down, I will tell you about it. [Laughter and applause.] That is exactly what I am going to do. Now, I want to say this: I say that the assertions of both gentlemen are a reflection upon the Committee on Rules of this House, and not only upon the Committee on Rules, but a reflection on the Committee on Insular Affairs, when they make that assertion. What does it mean? A "junket pure and simple"—going over the country at the expense of the Government, taking a mere pleasure trip. I want to say, as one member of that committee, that if that is the purpose, even if I were appointed, I would not under any circumstances go upon any such trip. I would not think of it.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. MADDOX. I do not care to yield. I want to tell the gentleman from Indiana what I think about it, and then I will tell what I expect the gentleman, too, thinks about it. I think, Mr. Speaker, that we ought to have a committee appointed by this House to go to the Philippines and Porto Rico and be able to report the conditions there, and be represented by both sides of this House. But now what do we have? As General Grant said upon one occasion many years ago, "You can always depend upon the Democrats acting the fool at the proper time." [Laughter.] Now, we have got an opportunity to give our side a chance to have Representatives go down to these islands—to the Philippines and Porto Rico—we have gentlemen to rise on this side and say this is a mere junket, and they have gentlemen upon that side to say it is a mere junket. I desire to say it is already whispered upon that side of the House that this is a bad proposition. "Don't you let these Democrats go down there and find out the facts in this case. Let us give it to them censored, as it is now. Let us give them the information we want them to have and no more."

Mr. HAMILTON. Will the gentleman yield to me now?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has already declined to yield.

Mr. MADDOX. I will yield if it is a question.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MADDOX. I will ask five minutes more.

Mr. DALZELL. I have no more time to give. I have promised it all. [Cries of "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks an extension of time for five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MADDOX. I want to say to the gentleman on this side of the House who said he was opposed because he thought the distinguished gentlemen on the other side would be abler—in other words, that the distinguished gentlemen on the other side of the House were so able, and so much more so than the minority members of the Committee on Insular Affairs, that we would practically have but one report—that I take it for granted that the mistake gentlemen made in reporting this was in not selecting those able men when they presented the report to us.

Mr. GAINES. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Do you not think it is necessary to have this report inasmuch as it presents an opportunity of getting the truth of the matter as to these islands?

Mr. MADDOX. I understand the situation. I have not got time to yield.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. MADDOX. I do not. The truth of the matter is this: I can see it; I can understand it. So far as I am individually concerned, I want to say that I do not want to go to the Philippines; but I will say, furthermore, that my colleague from Virginia and myself have already determined to go to Porto Rico at our own expense and see for ourselves what is going on down there. [Loud applause.] I have no desire to and I have never entered into a junket, either at the expense of the United States or anybody else, and I never intend to. I may not be as able as the gentleman from Mississippi, but I claim to be as honest and patriotic as he. And if this House shall think it wise that we ought to have a report, and this side of the House ought to be represented in the legislation to take place upon these islands, I suggest that you appoint the able gentleman from Mississippi to represent the Democrats on this side, and I think the opposition that we had from one or two will be withdrawn. [Applause.] I thank you for your attention. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Will the gentleman permit an interruption of a few moments, or for about ten seconds?

Mr. HOPKINS. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Mississippi be permitted to address the House for five minutes.

Mr. SHATTUC and others. I object.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I desire merely to reply in one minute.

The SPEAKER. No one rose in his place, and therefore——

Mr. CARMACK (rising). I object.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Do I understand, after a personal attack was made upon me, that the gentleman from Tennessee objects to my having one minute?

Mr. CARMACK. I object.

Mr. DALZELL. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, nothing has distressed me more than what I have just heard. If there is a gentleman upon the floor of this House for whom I have personal affection, great respect, and a high regard, it is the gentleman from Georgia who has just taken his seat. I have known him for many years. I know him to be perfectly honest; I know him to be perfectly earnest in all he undertakes; I know him to be patriotic in all his intents. Therefore I can not attribute the uncalled for and unprovoked mention of my name in that connection by the gentleman from Georgia to anything except a suspicion on his part that when I spoke of the ability of the Republican members of this committee he thought that I was reflecting upon his own lack of ability.

Mr. MADDOX. That is exactly what I understand, and I think the House understood the same thing.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. If the gentleman gathered that I thought he was not equal in mental ability or strategic ability to some other men whom I have mentioned, he gathered it from his own inner consciousness of the fact, and not from anything I said. [Applause.]

Mr. MADDOX. Now, Mr. Speaker, can I have just a word—just a minute?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent that he may speak for one minute. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I call gentlemen's attention to the remarks which the gentleman from Mississippi made; you all heard them. You all heard what he said in regard to what this committee would do.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I understood the gentleman from Georiga said he would not go to the Philippines, and therefore he ought to understand I could not have been talking about him.

Mr. MADDOX. I am not attempting to defend myself, but I am attempting to defend my colleagues. There is no man that heard the gentleman's remarks on this floor that could have understood it in any other direction than a reflection upon the ability of these men upon that committee. That is my answer.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I now yield three minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. FLEMING].

Mr. FLEMING. Mr. Speaker, I think this committee ought to be appointed. I think the investigation ought to be made. I believe the country wants to know the truth. I do not think we have yet got the truth. I think this commission would throw more light on this subject. I do think the resolution ought to be amended, however, and with the consent of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, I will offer the following amendment.

Mr. DALZELL. I can not consent to that.

Mr. FLEMING. Well, I will read it as a part of my remarks.

1. Amend by striking out the words "Porto Rico" and the words "and Cuba" in line 5 of the resolution, and also out of the title.

2. Amend by adding at the end of the resolution the following: "Provided, That no evidence or testimony shall be rejected by said commission, nor excluded from the printed proceedings when the reception and printing of said evidence or testimony shall be requested by any three members of said commission."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I seek to put that qualification upon this resolution in order that the truth may not be suppressed. I do not believe the committee will suppress it, but I have heard it intimated upon this side of the House that such action might be taken by the majority of four against the minority of three. I simply want to guarantee that whenever the minority of that committee desires certain testimony to be taken by that commission that the majority of four shall not be allowed to suppress it. I understand that such action was taken before one of the committees of this House. Witnesses were offered by the minority and the majority refused to allow them to testify. I do not know that that is true.

Mr. HULL. The gentleman refers to the Cœur d'Alene testimony. Was not the matter submitted to the House?

Mr. HAY. The gentleman from Iowa is mistaken upon that.

Mr. FLEMING. I am speaking of the abuse that was practiced in one instance, and I hope the House will accept this amendment and allow it to go on the resolution. With that amendment I am heartily in favor of this commission, and I hope every member on the Democratic side of this House will vote to let us get at a part of the truth, if we can not get at all of it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania whether he yielded to the gentleman from Georgia for the purpose of offering an amendment?

Mr. DALZELL. I did not; I can not yield for that purpose. I now yield three minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY].

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the committee which is proposed for three reasons. First, as a Democrat, I am opposed to all commissions, and I regard this as nothing but a commission under the name of a committee. Second, I do not think it practicable for this committee to visit Porto Rico, Cuba, and the Philippines and to bring back to this House on the 1st day of next December, or when it meets in December, any evidence that will be of any use to anybody.

In the third place, I am opposed to it from a political standpoint, because I never yet have been able to see that the Democratic party has gained anything from a committee a majority of whom are Republicans. I am opposed to it for another reason—that no matter what the evidence may be that these gentlemen bring back here, it will not change the attitude of the gentlemen on either side of the Chamber. We will have one report which one side will rely upon, and another report which the other side will rely upon. If this was a commission, or if it was a committee, to investigate the scandals in the Philippine Islands, then I should vote for it. But when they talk about investigating the facts as to the civilization and conditions there, I do not believe there is anything feasible in it or that anything practicable can come out of it. [Applause.]

Mr. DALZELL. I now yield three minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. CLAYTON], and then I shall ask the previous question.

Mr. MORRIS. Is it in order, Mr. Speaker, to move a recess?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] has the floor and he can not be taken from the floor.

Mr. CLAYTON of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, at the beginning of this Congress I had the honor to serve for some months on the Committee on Insular Affairs. This committee spent many days in the investigation of the condition of affairs in "our new acquisitions," to use a phrase that has been applied to them.

The answer always was, when the evidence adduced before that committee was quoted to sustain any proposition on any side of any contention, that the testimony was ex parte, that it was the testimony of witnesses sent out by the Administration from Washington to ascertain certain things and to report in accordance with previous instructions. I have never heard a Democrat give any credence to the testimony of any commissioner sent out by Mr. McKinley to Porto Rico or anywhere else unless it suited his side of the argument. And so likewise with our Republican brethren; unless the testimony of that witness suited their side of the contention it was discredited by them.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that in the interest of the whole truth—for, as I take it, the Republican party is committed to the retention of the Philippine Islands—if you propose to retain these islands for an indefinite period, to have a Territorial form of government there in perpetuity, why not let this House, Democrats as well as Republicans—because we on this side do not concede to you a monopoly in patriotism and we do not want you to have a monopoly of information—let us send this committee there at a mere nominal sum.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

Mr. CLAYTON of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I would like three minutes more.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama requests that his time be extended three minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CLAYTON of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, in the legislation that will concern the members of the Fifty-seventh Congress, and perhaps many more Congresses, one of the main questions will be, What shall we do with the Philippine Islands and Porto Rico? Then the testimony of this committee will be taken in preference to the testimony of the ex parte commission sent out by the Administration. Why not let the members of the minority and the majority go to these islands and investigate for themselves and report?

Mr. Speaker, I do not care for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia. I know these members of the Committee on Insular Affairs, and in point of honesty, patriotism, and ability they rank second to no committee in this House. As to the distinguished chairman of that committee, I have every confidence in his fairness, in his honesty, and pardon me for saying it, his fairness, his impartiality, so well known to every member of this House, is one of the deterring causes why some members on that side of the Chamber do not vote for this resolution. [Applause.]

It is known to you and every member in this Chamber that the distinguished chairman and other Republicans in this Congress to whom I might refer are in favor of a full and fair investigation. I believe that these members will bring back to us such information that we can legislate here intelligently, whatever may be the policy of the majority party. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, as one of the minority I hope this resolution will be adopted. I have no fear as to what this commission or committee will do. The Republican members of it are honest and fair. The Democratic members are experienced, able, honest, patriotic, and fair. I hope the resolution will be adopted. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I am not willing that there shall be any misunderstanding with respect to this proposition and the relation of the Committee on Rules thereto. This is not the proposition of any member of the Committee on Rules. It is not the proposition of the Committee on Rules. It came to that committee in the ordinary course. A resolution offered by the chairman of the Committee on Insular Affairs was referred to the Committee on Rules; and the matter was seriously considered by all the members of that committee. That resolution provided that the entire Committee on Insular Affairs, consisting of 17 members, should go on this visit to these various islands. I say, without disclosing any secrets of the committee room, that almost every member of the committee had serious scruples as to the reporting of this rule.

It was urged upon us, however, that this House must eventually deal with all these great questions, and that all the information which had come to this House, or was likely to come to it, had come and would come through Executive channels; and it was therefore proper that the House, through its own members, should possess itself of this information. The Committee on Rules, by its report of this resolution, is not committed in favor of the resolution or against it. I say it was represented to them that the House ought, by means of its own members, to possess itself of this information, and it was thought by the committee that this was a question which the House was entitled to pass upon. That is the question now to be submitted to the House; to be determined as each gentleman, voting according to his conscience, may see fit to decide. I ask for the previous question.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. After what the gentleman has said about this resolution having come from me, will he yield to me a few minutes for a reply?

Mr. DALZELL. I say it came from the Committee on Insular Affairs.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I want one minute to reply to that statement.

Mr. DALZELL. Well, I yield the gentleman one minute.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, the learned gentleman from Pennsylvania, of the Committee on Rules, has stated that the resolution now before the House came to the Committee on Rules in regular order, and that they are not responsible for it. The resolution which I drew and presented omitted Cuba. I told members of the Committee on Rules that I omitted Cuba deliberately; that I thought it ought not to be in the resolution. The Committee on Rules inserted it, and when I heard that it had been inserted I was under the impression that it was for the purpose of solidifying the Republican vote against the resolution. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

I want the gentleman from Pennsylvania to know that I understand at least a little of the game of politics; that it is perfectly apparent to me that Cuba was put in the resolution for the purpose of defeating it. I am not complaining. I am simply letting people understand that I know what is going on; that is all. [Applause.]

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's statement is wholly without justification. It is utterly preposterous. No such idea was in the mind of any member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman permit me to reply to that?

Mr. DALZELL. I ask for the previous question.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman permit me to reply to the statement he has just made?

Mr. DALZELL. No; I will not.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania demands the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is now on ordering the joint resolution to be engrossed and read a third time.

The question having been put,

The SPEAKER. The noes appear to have it.

Mr. CLAYTON of Alabama. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CANNON. I rise to submit a privileged report, the report of a conference committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois calls up a privileged report.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I make the point of order that the report of the Committee on Rules has precedence.

Mr. CANNON. This is a matter of the highest privilege. I think it will not take more than five minutes.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair reminds the gentleman from Tennessee that a conference report has often been called up when a special order was under consideration.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Can such a report be called up after the yeas and nays are ordered on another question?

The SPEAKER. It can. The Clerk had not been directed to call the roll.

Mr. CANNON. I ask that the report which I send to the desk be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have been unable to agree.

J. G. CANNON,
W. H. MOODY,
THOS. C. McRAE,
Managers on the part of the House.

W. B. ALLISON,
EUGENE HALE,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. CANNON. I move that the House further insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendments and ask a further conference.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. CANNON, Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts, and Mr. McRAE as conferees on the part of the House.

COMMISSION TO VISIT ISLAND POSSESSIONS.

The SPEAKER. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 83, nays 139, marked "present" 11, not voting 120; as follows:

So the House refused to order the joint resolution to be engrossed and read a third time.

The following additional pairs were announced:
Until further notice:
Mr. CONNELL with Mr. CALDWELL.
Mr. YOUNG with Mr. BENTON.
Mr. BURKE of South Dakota with Mr. JOHNSTON.
Mr. MORRELL with Mr. GORDON.
Mr. HOWELL with Mr. RYAN of Pennsylvania.
Mr. BAILEY of Kansas with Mr. ALLEN of Kentucky.
Mr. LOUDENSLAGER with Mr. STALLINGS.
Mr. SHERMAN with Mr. DRIGGS.
Mr. FOSS with Mr. LEWIS.
Mr. WEEKS with Mr. RHEA of Virginia.
Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts with Mr. THAYER.
Mr. JENKINS with Mr. LESTER.
Mr. HITT with Mr. DINSMORE.
Mr. DAHLE with Mr. TERRY.
On this vote:
Mr. PEARRE with Mr. JACK.
Mr. HEATWOLE with Mr. TATE.
Mr. MCCLEARY with Mr. COOPER of Texas.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH]; but understanding and believing that the gentleman from New York, if present, would cast the same vote I have cast, I shall allow my vote to stand upon this proposition.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest that such explanations are out of order.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago I referred to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], who made some remarks on the committee and what I thought about it, but I find on examination of the RECORD that his attention was called to this fact by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY], and the gentleman from Mississippi especially disclaimed, as the RECORD shows, anything of the sort, which I did not understand. I thought that he had reflected upon the committee to which I belonged, and I find, as I get it from the RECORD, that that is not true. Now, I feel it my duty, under the circumstances, to make it known to the House that I apologize to the gentleman for what I have said, because I was mistaken. [Applause.] This is the best I can do.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I want to say that this merely justifies me in what I said in claiming that of all the men in Washington who have been friends of mine, and who deserve to be friends of anybody as well as mine, my friend from Georgia would always remain in my memory as one of the chief. [Applause.]

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the two appropriation bills, the sundry civil bill and the river and harbor bill, are not yet agreed upon; that it will be impossible for the engrossing clerk to engross them if we take a recess until morning. I therefore move that the House take a recess until 2 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to, and accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 18 minutes) the House took a recess until 2 o'clock a. m.

The recess having expired, the House at 2 o'clock a. m. resumed its session.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, and still further insists upon its amendments to the bill disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the further conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. ALLISON, Mr. HALE, and Mr. COCKRELL as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

S. 5943. An act to establish Lowelltown, Me., a subport of entry.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 13609. An act to incorporate the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists within the District of Columbia;

H. R. 9886. An act amending section 4708 of the Revised Statutes of the United States in relation to pensions to remarried widows;

H. R. 14228. An act to authorize the city of Nashville, Tenn., to construct a free public bridge across the Cumberland River within the corporate limits of said city;

H. R. 4204. An act to correct the military record of George A. Winslow;

H. R. 13396. An act to amend section 5546 of the Revised Statutes;

H. R. 9503. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Baughman;

H. R. 2617. An act for the relief of the legal representatives of Edwin De Leon, deceased, for $8,000 due him for judicial services;

H. R. 13186. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Thompson;

H. R. 12232. An act granting a pension to Hanna Martha Dusenberry; and

H. R. 3003. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to loan naval equipment to certain military schools.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 3670. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent to the heir or heirs of one Tawamnoha, or Martha Crayon, conveying to them certain lands in the State of North Dakota, confirming certain conveyances thereof, and for other purposes; and

S. 6048. An act to amend chapter 559 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved March 3, 1891.

LOWELLTOWN, ME., A SUBPORT OF ENTRY.

Mr. BURLEIGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill H. R. 14018.

The SPEAKER. Does not the gentleman refer to the Senate bill 5943?

Mr. BURLEIGH. Yes; I ask that the House consider the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5943) to establish Lowelltown, Me., a subport of entry.

Be it enacted, etc., That Lowelltown, Me., be, and is hereby, established a subport of entry in the customs district of Bangor, Me.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. GROSVENOR. Where does that bill come from?

Mr. PAYNE. I will say in regard to that bill that it came over here from the Senate Friday or yesterday, I do not know which, and I have made some examination into the circumstances of the bill. Lowelltown is now a subport of delivery, attached to the Bangor district. The Secretary of the Treasury says making it a subport of entry will not add anything to the expense, as they already have two officers there.

Mr. HULL. Will it not make necessary the expense of a surveyor?

Mr. PAYNE. It will not, I am told.

Mr. HAWLEY. Who are the two officers?

Mr. PAYNE. It is a subport. Let me make my statement. This place is on the Canadian Pacific Railroad, and is the nearest town to the border on that road; and what they desire to do is to make it a subport of entry and attach it to the Bangor district. These are the facts. The bill never has been before the Committee on Ways and Means. I understand there was a bill introduced in the House some time, but it has never been considered by the Committee on Ways and Means; and I do not know that our attention has ever been called to it until this bill came from the Senate.

Mr. HAWLEY. What are these officers at this place; what rank have they, and what salary?

Mr. PAYNE. A deputy clerk, I understand. I do not know what his salary is.

Mr. HULL. They have to have a surveyor before they establish a subport, do they not; and if you establish a subport of entry, does it not follow that you would have to appoint a surveyor?

Mr. PAYNE. I do not know that it does.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Oh, yes; it does.

Mr. HULL. I think that is the invariable rule.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Do I understand the gentleman from New York, the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, to recommend the passage of this bill?

Mr. PAYNE. If I was in the committee and the bill was before it, with the information I have, I would vote for it.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It has not been considered by the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. PAYNE. It has not been considered by the committee;

and I think, after my examination of the statement of the Secretary of the Treasury and the report of the special agent sent there, at the request of the gentleman from Maine—and that examination has been within the last two days—and from the facts that I ascertained, I think the committee would have recommended the passage of the bill if it had had it before it.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Has the Secretary of the Treasury recommended it?

Mr. PAYNE. He has, and says there are two officers there now, and this will not add anything to the expense attaching it to the Bangor district and making it a subport of entry.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Then I understand the gentleman from New York, the chairman of the committee, to recommend it?

Mr. PAYNE. I do, so far as I am concerned.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. This is irregular.

Mr. PAYNE. Certainly it is.

Mr. WHEELER. I desire to know if unanimous consent is given to the consideration of this measure now will there be any opportunity given for general debate upon it?

Mr. STEELE. I suggest that the gentleman make a speech.

The SPEAKER. That will be under the control of the House.

Mr. WHEELER. If the gentleman will grant some time, I have no objection to the consideration of the measure.

Mr. STEELE. How much time would the gentleman like?

Mr. WHEELER. Thirty minutes—fifteen to the gentleman from Ohio and fifteen to myself.

Mr. STEELE. We will yield you three minutes; and if we like it we will give you the other twenty-seven minutes. [Laughter.]

Mr. WHEELER. I desire fifteen minutes for myself and fifteen minutes for the gentleman from Ohio, and five minutes for me to reply. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and the question is on the third reading.

Mr. WHEELER. A parliamentary inquiry. I thought the Chair was putting my request for time. [Laughter.]

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BURLEIGH, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I desire to ask what the call for the regular order will bring up?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it will bring up the revenue-cutter bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. DRIGGS. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I demand the regular order.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess for half an hour.

The motion was agreed to.

And accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 15 minutes a. m.) the House was declared in recess.

At the expiration of the recess, the House resumed its session.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, word comes from the conference committee on the sundry civil bill for the House to be here in session at 4 o'clock. I therefore move that the House take a recess until 4 o'clock.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Will the gentleman withhold that for a moment?

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withhold that until the gentleman from Indiana can make a request?

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I would like to ask for a reprint of the bill H. R. 9886.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STEELE. What is it?

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. It is the bill for the restoration of widows to the pension roll. I would like to have these bills placed to the credit of members in the folding room.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman modifies his request so that they may be placed to the credit of members in the folding room.

WORK OF FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

Mr. CORLISS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent, in view of the record of the Fifty-sixth Congress, to place in the RECORD a showing of the marvelous work accomplished by this Congress compared with the prior Congresses. It is prepared by the tally clerk of the House, F. H. Wakefield.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent to print a statement of the work done by the present Congress.

Mr. CARMACK. What is this?

Mr. CORLISS. It shows the number of bills introduced, the number of bills reported to the House, the number of bills acted upon by the House, and the number of acts up to the present time that have passed both Houses, showing that it has been the busiest Congress in the history of our country.

Mr. KING. Why does not the gentleman include a tabulated statement of the appropriations of this Congress compared with other Congresses?

Mr. CORLISS. I would be glad to do so, showing the marvelous development of our country and the necessity for such appropriations.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. CORLISS. The statement is as follows:

Using the eight Congresses just preceding as a basis for comparison, it is shown that each Congress has had presented in the House of Representatives an average total of 11,813 bills of various sorts; that the average session lasted 331 days, and in that time about 3,164 reports have been made by its committees, and the passage of a general total of 1,376 bills, composed of 414 public acts and 887 private acts. Viewing this as the average of a Congress, the work of this, "the busy Congress," stands out all the more prominently, for with the House in session but 197 days, 135 less than the average, there have been a total of over 2,100 bills passed, of which about 380, in round numbers, have been public acts.

The session has been marked by an entire absence of those signs of friction and heat ofttimes engendered when earnest men discuss weighty problems in the terms of conviction, backed by party feeling and sway; and under the wonderfully genial influence of our present Speaker our friends on the other side have seldom struck the hot spark of anger from the flint of passion in debate, but all have been drawn together in common appreciation of and affection for the man who has so worthily, impartially, and faithfully presided over our deliberations. I hold it a matter of no inconsiderable moment that in the whole course of the Fifty-sixth Congress there have been but two appeals from the decision of the Chair, and each time some of the opposition have voted to sustain the Speaker and the House has sustained him.

The friction between the two Houses has been slight, as the following table shows. The House of Representatives has given to the Senate bills a more kindly treatment than to its own measures, and it goes out of existence leaving proportionately more of its own bills unacted upon than of Senate acts, while in the passage of measures it has given the other branch of the Congress the marked preference.

*Only public laws signed by President to March 1, and printed on that date.

Mr. STEELE. It would be cheaper to have the law printed.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I ask that it be the act.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman amends his request to have the act printed, the same number as for a reprint, and placed to the credit of members in the folding room. Is there objection. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The gentleman from New York moves that the House take a recess until 4 o'clock this morning.

The motion was agreed to.

And accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 47 minutes a. m.) the House was declared in recess.

At 4 o'clock a. m. the House resumed its session.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, I present another conference report upon the bill 13189, the river and harbor bill.

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate numbered 168, 219, 220, and 221 to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriation for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference on amendments numbered 168, 219, 220, and 211 have been unable to agree.

THEODORE E. BURTON,
WALTER REEVES,
T. C. CATCHINGS,
Managers on the part of the House.

KNUTE NELSON,
JAMES McMILLAN,
JAMES H. BERRY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

STATEMENT.

The conferees on the part of the House, after full and free conference, report that the Senate conferees insist on their disagreement to amendments numbered 168, 219, 220, and 221. The conferees on the part of the House recommend that the House still further insist upon its disagreement, and ask for further conference.

T. E. BURTON.
WALTER REEVES.
T. C. CATCHINGS.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, that is a repetition of the conference report already made. I move that the House still further insist on its disagreement to amendments 168, 219, 220, 221; and on that I ask for the previous question.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the House recede and concur in Senate amendment 219. And I should like to have two or three minutes on that.

Mr. BURTON. I will yield to the gentleman from Colorado three minutes.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. Speaker, this is the provision that has been placed upon the bill by the Senate, and I want to explain to the House that it involves simply an appropriation of $50,000. The succeeding amendment involves $50,000, and the last one $52,000. I wish to say that I have no interest whatever in these appropriations. They are not in my State or within 200 miles of my State, and yet we in the West feel that inasmuch as the appropriation of millions of dollars are going to the States, and that this great question is receiving no consideration whatever, and that these taxes that are collected from the people to go to Ohio of $5,000,000 and to Michigan of $7,000,000 come also from the arid-land States—we think it is a paltry sum to ask that the House concur in the amendment involving only $177,000.

Mr. Speaker, there are three reservoir sites that have been selected by the Geological Survey. The estimates have been made, they have been found to be feasible propositions, and it seems to me that if this Congress wants to disregard the platforms of both political parties on this question it can do nothing more than to recede from the position we have taken.

The national platform contemplated a great scheme of the reclamation of arid lands, and you are not carrying it out when you attempt simply to vote for three little reservoir sites, two in Wyoming and one in South Dakota. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that this is a small thing to keep this House together upon. It is something that this House ought to concur in immediately, and ought to be glad to do it. The time is going to come, as sure as you live, in twenty years, when not only schemes of this kind, but millions of dollars are going to be appropriated for it.

A MEMBER. That is what we are afraid of.

Mr. SHAFROTH. But you are going to get it back. The Western States are not going to ask you to give money to them. They are going to ask that you permit the construction of these reservoirs, advance the capital, and tax the land and furnish the water for the inhabitants who reside there. The proposition for the reservoirs is not near as good as a perfected scheme would be, but it is the only way we can get it before the House, and the only way we can get any consideration whatever.

The proposition has been before Congress a number of years. I have been trying to get it considered. We first undertook to give the States 1,000,000 acres of land each, but we were denied a hearing.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Colorado has expired.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, just a word. This is a proposition to build reservoirs thousands of feet above the level of the sea, hundreds of miles away from any navigation at all, upon a river and harbor bill. It does not belong there. This may seem trivial—something over $200,000—but it is the entering wedge for untold millions, and there is no better time for this House to express its opinion upon the subject than this very night. We ought to vote this down, first, because we will not have this appropriation on a bill where it does not belong, and second, we will not enter upon this stupendous project without our eyes wide open and knowing exactly what we are doing. I ask the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks for the previous question on the motion of the gentleman from Colorado.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Colorado, that the House recede and concur in all the amendments but the last.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The last three.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman names amendments 219, 230, and 231, and those will be voted on in gross. Without objection, the House will further insist on its disagreement to amendment No. 168 and ask for a conference. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The question now is on the motion of the gentleman from Colorado, that the House recede and concur on the other three amendments.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SHAFROTH) there were—ayes 14, noes 88.

So the motion was lost.

Mr. BURTON. I move now that the House further insist on its disagreement to the other three amendments and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I think the message was that the Senate agreed to the conference asked by the House.

The SPEAKER (after a pause). Without objection, the message to the Senate will be that the House agrees to the conference asked, or asks for a conference, as may be necessary. The record of the different conferences has been written over so much that it is difficult to decipher. In the form stated, if there be no objection, the motion of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. BURTON, Mr. REEVES, and Mr. CATCHINGS as conferees on the part of the House.

Mr. DRIGGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for three minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. DRIGGS. Mr. Speaker, I merely wish to express my sincere thanks on behalf of the people of the borough of Brooklyn, city of New York, for what the River and Harbor Committee has done for us in this bill. I think it is only just and right to express on this floor the gratitude of the citizens of Brooklyn—business men and others—for the kind appreciation shown by the committee for our interests in this matter, which are also the interests of the country at large.

PRESERVATION OF THE FLAG OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a privileged report from the Committee on Accounts upon House resolution No. 383, providing for the preservation of the flag presented to the House of Representatives by the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States.

The report was read, as follows:

Report to accompany House resolution No. 383, in lieu of House resolutions Nos. 321 and 339.

The Committee on Accounts, to whom was referred House resolution No. 383, providing for the preservation of the flag presented to the House of Representatives by the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States, by placing the same in the museum of the Department of Agriculture, have had the same under consideration and recommend its adoption.

The preamble of the resolution recites the history of the presentation of the flag by the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States to the House of Representatives and its acceptance by the House; also, the fact that the flag, after being displayed in the Hall of the House of Representatives for about fifteen years, has been displaced by one representing by its stars, in accordance with law, the present number of States in the Union; and the resolution directs the Clerk of the House to deliver the flag to the Secretary of Agriculture, to be displayed and preserved in the museum of the Department of Agriculture, the expense thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Two other propositions were referred to your committee, in resolutions No. 321 and No. 339, one providing for the donation of the flag to the Long Island Historical Society of the State of New York and the other providing for the return of the flag to the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States, to be disposed of as said association might determine.

Your committee accorded hearings to the authors of these resolutions, but no good reason, in the opinion of your committee, was presented for the donation of the flag to the Long Island Historical Society, of the State of New York, or its return to the Women's Silk Culture Association, but there seemed to be every reason why the flag should remain in the possession of the United States; and the flag being of silk, an agricultural product, we believe that no better receptacle for it can be found, nor a place where it will be more carefully preserved or more appropriately displayed, than in the museum of the Department of Agriculture. We therefore recommend the adoption of resolution No. 383, providing that such disposition be made of the flag, and that resolutions Nos. 321 and 339 be laid on the table.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Whereas on January 23, 1885, a silk flag of the United States was presented to the House of Representatives in the following communication, to wit:

PHILADELPHIA, January 23, 1885.

To the honorable members of the House of Representatives at Washington:

The Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States, established in Philadelphia in 1880, have since that time demonstrated silk culture in the United States to a condition and progress never before attained, and upon the popularity of which numerous stock companies and individuals have established business centers.

"While not deprecating such conditions we do ask that the questions by whom and how was the industry introduced be honestly and properly accredited to its rightful authors, the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States, who herewith desire to present to the House of Representatives of the United States at Washington a truly American national flag in the sense that the silk produced for this flag was raised in American homes by American women and children; reeled by the Women's Association at Philadelphia, and, through the liberality of Mrs. C. C. Thum, of the association, who generously offered to defray the expenses incurred in producing the flag, the association is enabled to offer it to the national Capitol as a memento of their success in starting silk culture as an industry for their American sisters. We ask for this flag a place in the halls of our National Government that it may bear witness to the faithfulness of our effort and to the quality of our American product, both agricultural and mechanical.

This is not the first fruits of American-grown products. The Garfield brocade, presented to the widow of our lamented President, was manipulated by our own association, and its wonderfully beautiful quality and design displayed to our statesmen at Washington.

A State and national flag have just been presented to the legislature at Harrisburg which were made of native silk grown in the summer of 1883, and passed through all the processes of manufacture in the city of Philadelphia. Besides these national gifts, the association has had American silk worked up into knitting silk, brocade, velvet, grosgrain silk, and chenille, and in every form the quantity and quality have proved a good and profitable result.

For statistics we refer you to our fourth annual report of 1883, and to the files of the Daily Silk Record, published by the association during the late exhibit; and, begging your acceptance and a place of honor for this flag, we also ask that due consideration shall be given this association when the National Government shall see fit to aid this industry.

American women are raising silkworm eggs far superior to foreign breeds. What the industry needs is experimental stations, where the process of culture and reeling shall be established, and where the experience and knowledge of foreign operations shall be united to American talent, industry, and intelligence.

Remember, we are the silk association of the United States; our correspondence, our instructions, and progress belong to nearly every State in the Union. The California association is modeled after our own, but more liberally dealt with by her State.

All the work of our association has been carried on by the most frugal and economical management, but much left undone that could have been done had we the means of accomplishing our aims. Therefore we crave the assurance of future good will and influence in the interests we have stimulated and planted.

And

Whereas the House of Representatives accepted said flag by the adoption of the following resolution, to wit:

"Resolved, That the House of Representatives accepts the flag prepared for its use, and presented by the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States; that the excellence of the fiber and perfection of the colors it displays afford evidence of the remarkably rapid development of the culture and manufacture of silk by the American people, under the auspices of this association of women, and that the House will cause the flag to be displayed within the Hall of the House and preserved as a memorial of the tact and energy of the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States;" and

Whereas said flag was displayed in the Hall of the House of Representatives from the date of its presentation and acceptance, January 23, 1885, until the beginning of the year 1901, when it was displaced by one representing by its stars, pursuant to the requirement of section 1792 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the present number of States in the Union. During this period of time—the last fifteen years of the nineteenth century—the nation completed one hundred years of legislative history, the centennial anniversary of the inauguration of the first President of the United States, and of the establishment of the seat of government at Washington, in the District of Columbia, were commemorated in this Hall, the House of Representatives participated in the events preliminary to and in the enactment of legislation for the prosecution of the war with Spain; and many other historic and important acts originated, were perfected or consummated herein within the time aforesaid: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives, That, because of the association of the flag of the United States presented to the House by the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States with the legislative history of the country during the last fifteen years of the nineteenth century, it is the sense of this House that said flag should remain in the possession of the United States and be "preserved as a memorial of the tact and energy of the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States," its patriotic donors.

And be it further resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives is hereby authorized and directed to deliver said flag to the Secretary of Agriculture, to be displayed and carefully preserved, in such manner as the Secretary of Agriculture may deem necessary, in the museum of the Department of Agriculture, together with a certified copy of these preambles and resolutions. And such expense as may be necessary to carry out the purpose of these resolutions shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House, with the approval of the Committee on Accounts.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution just read.

Mr. FITZGERALD of New York. Mr. Speaker, as I introduced the original resolution in regard to this flag, I ask the gentleman from Michigan to yield to me for a few moments.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. FITZGERALD of New York. Three or four minutes.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. I yield the gentleman three minutes.

Mr. FITZGERALD of New York. Mr. Speaker, I desire to speak briefly to the resolution. I am impelled to do so on account of some of the statements contained in the committee's report. I regret that it has been deemed necessary to say that there appears to be no good reason for the donation of this flag to the Long Island Historical Society, as provided in the resolution introduced by me, and for which the pending resolution is a substitute.

This resolution provides that the flag that since about 1885 hung until recently behind the Speaker's table be presented to the Department of Agriculture. The resolution introduced by myself provided that it should be given to the Long Island Historical Society.

This flag was presented to the House of Representatives about 1885 by the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States. The flag was made of silk produced in this country from silkworms hatched here, and the flag was American in every feature. It was presented as an evidence of the advance that had been made in silk culture in this country. During the present session the attention of the Speaker was called to the fact that the flag did not conform to the requirements of the Revised Statutes.

By law early enacted in the history of the country it is provided that there shall be in the union of the flag as many stars as there are States in the Union. The Speaker immediately ordered a new flag to be secured and placed in position in the place of this flag, to which peculiar distinction attaches.

Mr. RYAN of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman state how many stars were in the union of the flag proposed to be presented to the Department of Agriculture?

Mr. FITZGERALD of New York. Mr. Speaker, I do not recall exactly. Since 1884, if I recollect aright, seven or eight States have been admitted to the Union. This would make about 37 or 38 stars in the union of this historic flag.

I was about to say, however, when interrupted by the gentleman from New York [Mr. RYAN] that the flag when removed from the place it had adorned for so many years was put into a storeroom of this House. It seemed to me that it should be placed where it would be properly preserved.

After waiting a reasonable time for some gentleman from Philadelphia to make some move in the matter, I introduced a resolution directing that the flag be given to the Long Island Historical Society. This is one of the oldest societies of its kind in the country. It is located in the old city of Brooklyn, now a borough of the city of New York. It has a magnificent collection of historical papers, documents, and books, as well as many valuable mementos. Its membership comprises the most distinguished men in Brooklyn. Liberally endowed for its necessities, it is housed in a splendid building.

At the hearing before the Committee on Accounts I urged that it would be proper to place this flag there. It would be gratefully received and carefully preserved and cherished as a valuable souvenir of this House. It would be a constant reminder to the students of Brooklyn of the great men who have served in this body and of the momentous questions considered and decided here, and as well a prized reminder of the advance made in certain industries in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I regret exceedingly that the committee has decided adversely to the proposition to place this flag with the Long Island Historical Society. The flag, however, should be preserved and carefully kept. There are excellent reasons for placing it in the Department of Agriculture. The resolution should be, and I hope will be, adopted without a dissenting vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HENRY C. SMITH, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the other two resolutions referred to in the report of the committee, numbered 321 and 339, will be laid on the table, as recommended in the report.

There was no objection.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until 5 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

And accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 47 minutes) the House was declared in recess.

At 5 o'clock a. m. the House resumed its session.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had receded from its amendment to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, numbered 151.

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. CUNNINGHAM, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 4120. An act to pay Eliza R. Crawford the amount of a United States loan certificate issued in 1779.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the concurrent resolution (Con. Res. 115) to print 30,000 copies of the hearings before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, etc.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, and had further insisted upon its disagreement to amendments numbered 168, 219, 220, and 221, had asked a further conference with the House on the said amendments, and had appointed Mr. NELSON, Mr. MCMILLAN, and Mr. BERRY as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Also, that the Senate had agreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the concurrent resolution (S. C. Res. 72) to print 3,500 copies of the report of the committee on awards of the World's Columbian Commission, etc.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report, and ask that the reading of the report be dispensed with and that the statement be read in lieu thereof.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois submits a conference report on the sundry civil appropriation bill, and asks unanimous consent that the reading of the report be dispensed with and that the statement only be read.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I desire, before consent is given, to ask the gentleman if this is a final agreement?

Mr. CANNON. It is a final agreement. If adopted, it passes the bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, this course will be pursued.

There was no objection.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I desire to reserve a point of order, and at this time make the point of order that the conferees have exceeded their authority on amendment numbered 88. I do this out of abundant caution; and if I am in error after I ascertain the real status of the amendant, the point of order can be withdrawn.

Mr. CANNON. I am ready to answer any question about it. I do not think it is subject to the point of order.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I will make the point of order, that it may be pending until the statement can be read.

Mr. CANNON. I do not think it is subject to the point of order; but, of course, I have no objection to the point of order being pending.

The SPEAKER. The statement will be read with that understanding.

The report of the committee of conference is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 17, 26, 30, 35, 36, 41, 42, 49, 62, 70, 71, 82, 89, 93, 105, 108, 110, 111, 112, 113, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 128, 129, 130, 132, 133, 134, 135, 149, and 150.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 6, 20, 28, 81, 91, 99, 101, 102, 127, 131, and 152, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the sum of $332,500 where it occurs in lines 3 and 4 and in lines 19 and 20 of the matter inserted by said amendment, and insert in lieu thereof the sum of "$300,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 84: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 84, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$950,770;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 88: That the House recede from its amendment to the amendment of the Senate numbered 88, and agree to said Senate amendment amended as follows: Strike out all after the word "acre," in line 8 of the matter inserted by said Senate amendment, and insert in lieu therof the following: "And the Secretary of the Interior is further authorized, if in his judgment advisable, to exchange such portion as he may deem equitable of the agricultural land now owned by the Government, or of the farm opposite Alexandria, and known as Godding Croft, for 80 acres, more or less, lying immediately adjoining this said 60 acres and south of the present building site of the hospital. In case such exchange is made the Secretary is also authorized in his discretion to grant a roadway along the south side of said tract, from Nichols avenue to the river, not exceeding 90 feet in width. Any of the buildings authorized in the sundry civil appropriation act approved June 6, 1900, for the Government Hospital for the Insane, may be erected on land now owned, or that may be acquired hereunder, by the United States for the Government Hospital for the Insane;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 94: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 94, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$860,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 95: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 95, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$35,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 96: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 96, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$35,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 97: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 97, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$35,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 98: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 98, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$35,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 114: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 114, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said Senate amendment amended as follows: On page 103 of the bill, in line 23, after the word "upon," insert the following: "or exercised by;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On amendment numbered 151 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

W. B. ALLISON,
EUGENE HALE,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. G. CANNON,
W. H. MOODY,
THOS. C. MCRAE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The statement was read, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14018) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses, submit the following written statement in explanation of the accompanying conference report:

Items inserted by the Senate have been eliminated, as follows, namely:

Fort Winfield Scott fog-signal station, California, $7,000;

The proposed increase in the salaries of superintendents of life-saving stations, $7,900;

Revenue cutter for Hawaii, $50,000;

Fish-cultural station in Utah, $25,000;

Fish-cultural station in Idaho, $25,000;

The provision granting rights to graze live stock in forest reserves;

Education in Alaska, $30,000;

The provision granting to the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution a site for a memorial building in Rawlins Park, in the District of Columbia;

The memorial bridge across the Potomac River, $100,000;

Payment to the county of Custer, Mont., $4,350;

The increase in the appropriations for the various branches of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, amounting to $11,550;

A Branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers in South Dakota, $75,000;

Authority to inquire as to the establishment of a Branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers in Idaho;

Conference for the protection of industrial property, $10,000;

Payment to Mexico, $412,572.70;

Traveling expenses of judicial officers in Hawaii, $1,000;

The provision authorizing the printing of additional copies of the "Messages and Papers of the Presidents;" and

The provision relating to the appraisers of customs.

The committee of conference have been unable to agree on the amendment of the Senate numbered 151, relating to—

The Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, $500,000;

The St. Louis Exposition, $5,000,000; and

The Charleston Exposition, $250,000.

The remaining points of disagreement between the two Houses are recommended to be agreed to, in whole or in part, by the House.

J. G. CANNON,
W. H. MOODY,
THOS. C. MCRAE,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, if the Clerk will now turn to amendment numbered 88 and read in the conference report it will give the gentleman from Indiana the information he desires. Read it as set out in the conference report itself.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the word "acre," in line 8 of the matter inserted by said Senate amendment, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"And the Secretary of the Interior is further authorized, if in his judgment advisable, to exchange such portion as he may deem equitable of the agricultural land now owned by the Government, or of the farm opposite Alexandria, and known as Godding Croft, for 80 acres, more or less, lying immediately adjoining this said 60 acres and south of the present building site of the hospital. In case such exchange is made, the Secretary is also authorized, in his discretion, to grant a roadway along the south side of said tract, from Nichols avenue to the river, not exceeding 90 feet in width. Any of the buildings authorized in the sundry civil appropriation act approved June 6, 1900, for the Government Hospital for the Insane may be created on land now owned or that may be acquired hereunder by the United States for the Government Hospital for the Insane."

Mr. BENTON. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois how much land it is proposed to exchange?

Mr. CANNON. Fifty-nine or sixty acres.

Mr. BENTON. Is it this land that lies down the river?

Mr. CANNON. The Senate amendment was that 60 acres, in round numbers, should be exchanged for this land, acre for acre. The Senate amendment was considered in the House, and on motion of the gentleman from Indiana, the House agreed to the Senate amendment with an amendment, and this follows that provision in its language.

Mr. RIDGELY. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I very much doubt the propriety of the erection of the asylum over there at all, but I want to ask the gentleman in reference to this road. Does it affect the location as provided for in the Senate amendment? The Senate amendment provided that it was to be immediately contiguous to the 60 acres of land that were to be exchanged.

Mr. CANNON. We had jurisdiction of the whole matter, both in the Senate amendment and the House amendment, and, having jurisdiction, we were satisfied that if this additional 80 acres was acquired that we did not want to run the road in the middle of the 143 acres, together with what was required, and that the road would go at the side of the land that is acquired.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. The purpose, then, is to erect this asylum, for which the Government has donated something like a million dollars, on this land to be acquired by exchange acre for acre?

Mr. CANNON. Acre for acre; but as to the last 80 acres, if it was 80, according to the gentleman's amendment, not acre for acre. We took the language of the gentleman's amendment, and for this reason: It was proper that we should do so because of the provision that the land at Godding Croft, down near Alexandria, across the river, that the Government owns, for an asylum—that that might be used. Now, then, it is not designed to exchange that land acre for acre. If it is exchanged, no doubt the Secretary will do the best he can with this land at Godding Croft.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. The Secretary of the Interior may use the agricultural land, a part of the 174 acres, for exchange, and take of this that which is the agricultural land.

Mr. CANNON. We just follow the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that the conferees exceeded their authority, as the law passed by Congress last year provided that the building for the insane asylum should be upon land already owned by the Government, "or upon such suitable land as may be donated to the Government." The amendment of the Senate provides nothing, and the language of the act provides nothing upon the subject of constructing the asylum upon land to be acquired by exchange. Therefore, the conferees having provided that the lands secured by the exchange shall be the site of the Government hospital, it is a change of existing law, and is a proposition upon which neither the Senate nor the House have acted. I insist on the point of order.

Mr. CANNON. In reply to the gentleman, I will state the conference committee had jurisdiction of the whole subject-matter—first, the Senate amendment, then the Senate amendment as modified by the gentleman's own amendment; and having jurisdiction of the whole matter, and of the acquisition of this land for the insane asylum, necessarily the greater included the less, and we could provide what should be done with the land in connection with the asylum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that often conferees bring in entirely new provisions, and so long as within the theme discussed it is not subject to the point of order. The Chair thinks in this case the conferees have remained completely within their jurisdiction.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Just so the Chair understands my proposition.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands it; remembers the discussion before; and feels he must overrule the point of order.

Mr. CANNON. I now move the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I want to ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. CANNON. Certainly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. What disposition was made of amendment No. 8.

Mr. CANNON. What was it?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Relating to the Corcoran Art Gallery.

Mr. CANNON. The House agrees to the proposition to purchase the Corcoran Art Gallery.

Mr. GROSVENOR. According to the Senate amendment, or with an amendment to the Senate amendment?

Mr. CANNON. The provision of the Senate was to purchase the building at $332,000, and the agreement is to purchase it at $300,000.

Mr. RIDGELY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CANNON. Certainly.

Mr. RIDGELY. We are to get about 60 acres more?

Mr. CANNON. There is authority to get it.

Mr. RIDGELY. And who has recommended on the part of the Government this exchange of land?

Mr. CANNON. The superintendent of the asylum. The Senate has approved it; the House has approved it, on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana; and the Secretary and, I think, everybody connected with it.

Mr. RIDGELY. Can the gentleman tell us about the relative value of the land?

Mr. CANNON. Not as to the Godding Croft land.

Mr. BROMWELL. Will the gentleman tell us what is the shape of the amendment including the expositions?

Mr. CANNON. They are eliminated from the bill by the Senate receding from the expositions.

Mr. MERCER. As to amendment No. 97, the Fort MacKenzie military post, was there a change outside of the reduction of the amount?

Mr. McRAE. It is $35,000.

Mr. MERCER. And no other change made?

Mr. CANNON. No.

Mr. McCLELLAN. In connection with the question that the gentleman from Ohio asked, as to the standing of the amendment in reference to the fairs, have all been eliminated, so that they can not be considered by the House in any way?

Mr. CANNON. The conference report agreed upon all the amendments in difference between the House and the Senate except amendment No. 151, 20 pages of it, which covered the three fair propositions. Now, the Senate adopted the conference report, and as it is a Senate amendment the Senate recedes from that amendment, and now the adoption of this conference report passes the bill.

Mr. LENTZ. I desire to ask the question whether it is true that the President's Messages and Papers have gone out?

Mr. CANNON. They have gone out.

Mr. LENTZ. Why?

Mr. CANNON. Simply because it is a great expense, and the House conferees believed that the Government was not justified in providing for the sale of them and entering upon the business of opening a book store, so to speak. We did not believe that it was an expenditure that was justifiable from any standpoint.

Mr. LENTZ. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that it is the most justifiable expense, or as much so as any item in this bill. After the Government has prepared these plates and created a market to make a monopoly of it is the most objectionable of all things.

Mr. CANNON. We do not propose to do that. I know of no reason why the Government should publish any more of these exceedingly expensive books. We have published now numbers enough to furnish all the libraries, and perhaps a good deal more than that. My opinion is that the Government is not justified in further publishing this expensive book.

Mr. LENTZ. There was no objection made to it in the House.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, yes; the House twice insisted on its disagreement to the Senate amendments.

Mr. LENTZ. I am almost tempted to raise the point of no quorum.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman would punish himself.

Mr. LENTZ. It would not punish me.

Mr. CANNON. I think the gentleman feels as sleepy as I feel and look. [Laughter.]

Mr. LENTZ. I am not sleepy, but it seems to me that these Presidents' Papers ought to go in. They are the most valuable documents that the Government ever issued.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the conference report.

The question was taken, and the conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CANNON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, from the information I get I think the House can take a recess until 6 o'clock, and then we may be able to close up business substantially. I move that the House take a recess until 6 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 25 minutes) the House took a recess until 6 o'clock.

At 6 o'clock a. m. the House resumed its session.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print some remarks in the RECORD upon the inland waterway from Boston to Beaufort Inlet.

Mr. PAYNE. If it is done without necessitating an appendix I have no objection.

Mr. SMALL. I think there are always supplements published after the close of the session.

Mr. PAYNE. There have been, but we want to avoid them at this time.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. How long a time does the gentleman wish?

Mr. SMALL. For five days.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The gentleman from North Carolina, I will say to the gentleman from New York, has given this subject a great deal of thought, and I trust that the gentleman from New York will not object.

Mr. PAYNE. We have had so many appendixes heretofore that I wish to avoid them.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina modifies his request and asks that he have the privilege for five days. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I now move the House take a recess for thirty minutes.

Mr. MONDELL. And I move, Mr. Speaker, that the House take a recess until 10 o'clock.

Mr. PAYNE. Of course if that should be adopted it would kill the river and harbor bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I would like to ask why the gentleman from New York wants to take the recess for thirty minutes?

Mr. PAYNE. Because at the end of thirty minutes I understand that the river and harbor bill will be ready for consideration.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Oh, well, if there is any possibility of engineering the river and harbor bill through safely, I shall not object to the motion. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Wyoming press his motion?

Mr. HEPBURN. I hope the gentleman from Wyoming will press it. We can not finish it until 10 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York moves that the House take a recess for thirty minutes, and the gentleman from Wyoming moves to amend that motion by moving that the House take a recess until 10 o'clock. The motion will first be on the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TOMPKINS) there were 14 ayes and 63 noes.

Mr. TOMPKINS. I make the point of no quorum, Mr. Speaker. [Cries of "Oh, no!" "No!" "No!"]

Mr. TOMPKINS. I will withdraw the point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York withdraws the point; the noes have it, and the motion is lost. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] that the House take a recess for thirty minutes.

The motion was agreed to. Accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 5 minutes) the House took a recess until 6 o'clock and 35 minutes.

The recess having expired, the House at 6 o'clock and 35 minutes a. m. resumed its session.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had receded from its amendment to the bill (H. R. 9829) to provide for celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the purchase of the Louisiana territory by the United States by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the products of the soil, mine, forest, and sea in the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, numbered 2.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the following title:

H. R. 636. An act for the relief of St. John's Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, No. 3, of Newbern, N. C.

ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one minute.

The SPEAKER. If this request relates to business of the House, the Chair will submit it.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. It does.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent to address the House for one minute. The Chair hears no objection. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, in behalf of the Missouri delegation and of the city of St. Louis, I wish to extend to the honorable Speaker of this House and all its members a cordial invitation to attend the St. Louis World's Fair, which we propose to make the grandest international exposition that the world has ever seen.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, if I may be allowed to proceed for a moment by unanimous consent——

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the gentleman will proceed.

Mr. BURTON. I am exceedingly reluctant to ask members of the House to stay here, awaiting the fate of the river and harbor bill. Its fate is uncertain, but we hope it will yet become a law. I dislike, as I have said, to ask members to tarry here, and not return to their residences for the present; but I think it best that a long recess should not be taken. I move that the House take a recess for one hour.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Before that motion is put, I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Does he not think it would be better and safer to proceed right now to procure a quorum?

Mr. BURTON. Answering the gentleman's question, I will say I do not think a quorum will be necessary—at least not for one hour. We can then tell the situation better than now.

Mr. HEPBURN. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. When he says "we hope" that the bill will be a success, is not that an editorial "we?"

Mr. BURTON. I think it is a good deal more than an editorial "we." I think it includes, perhaps, about nineteen-twentieths of those present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio moves that the House take a recess for one hour.

Mr. STEELE. I suggest a recess until 10 o'clock.

Several MEMBERS. Say half past 9.

Mr. BURTON. If I may be allowed again to address the House by unanimous consent, I will say the probabilities are that no danger would be incurred by a recess until 9 o'clock. But I am so anxious to lose no chances for carrying this bill into law, after it has reached this stage and when the Senate has agreed so nearly with this body, that I have proposed a recess for one hour.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves that the House stand in recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. BROMWELL. I suggest half past 8.

The SPEAKER. Is that agreeable to the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. BURTON. In accordance with what seems to be the wish of many members, I will modify my motion and move that the House stand in recess until half past 8 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

The recess having expired, the House (at 8 o'clock and 30 minutes a. m.) resumed its session.

REFURNISHING OF THE HALL OF THE HOUSE.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. CANNON, Mr. DALZELL, and Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee as members of the commission appointed in pursuance of the provision of the sundry civil appropriation act to superintend the refurnishing of the Hall of the House.

Mr. BURTON (at 9 o'clock and 7 minutes a. m.). I move that the House take a recess until 10 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

The recess having expired, the House resumed its session.

DEVISEES OF CASPER BARBER.

Mr. JENKINS. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the District of Columbia be discharged from the further consideration of House bill 11830, with a Senate amendment, and that the amendment be now taken up and concurred in.

The Clerk read the following amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11830) for the relief of the devisees of Casper Barber and their assigns from the operation of the act restricting the ownership of real estate in the District of Columbia to American citizens:

After the word "Barber," in line 4, insert the words "and George E. King."

The SPEAKER. Is there any objection?

Mr. SULZER. Reserving the right to object, I should like to hear an explanation of this.

Mr. JENKINS. This bill has already passed this House; this amendment simply makes a correction by the insertion of a name.

Mr. SULZER. What does the bill do?

Mr. JENKINS. Its effect is exactly as read by the Clerk. It gives the beneficiaries named in the bill a clear title to certain real estate. The gentleman from New York perhaps was not in the House when the bill was considered.

Mr. SULZER. Is it a bill to allow aliens to hold real estate in the District of Columbia?

Mr. JENKINS. In regard to a certain piece of real estate it was held by one of the title guaranty companies of this District that the Feder l Government held the title rather than the individual who claimed it. The question was submitted to the proper officers of the District and the Attorney-General. They all disclaimed any interest on the part of the United States in the land, and recommended that Congress pass this bill to quiet the title.

Mr. SULZER. How much land is involved?

Mr. JENKINS. It is a small lot. The person whom the bill proposes to relieve is a poor Irishman.

Mr. SHATTUC. That settles it.

Mr. SULZER. That is enough. [Laughter.]

There being no objection, the House proceeded to consider the amendment, which was concurred in.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Mr. RAY of New York. I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee on the Judiciary from the further consideration of the Senate bill which I send to the desk and to consider it now.

The bill (S. 5715) granting a charter to the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Mrs. Rebecca D. Lowe, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Dimies, T. S. Denison, New York, N. Y.; Miss Margaret J. Evans, Northfield, Minn.; Mrs. Emma A. Fox, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. George W. Kendrick, jr., Philadelphia, Pa.; Mrs. Emma M. Van Vechten, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Mrs. George H. Noyes, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. Edward L. Buchwalter, Springfield, Ohio; Mrs. William J. Christie, Butte, Mont.; Mrs. William T. Coad, Rapid City, S. Dak.; Mrs. Laura Rockwell Priddy, Wichita, Kans.; Mrs. Frank Sherwin Streeter, Concord, N. H.; Mrs. Anna D. West, Somerville, Mass.; Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks, Indiana; Mrs. Lucia E. Blount, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Ralph Trautman, New York; Mrs. John L. McNeil, Colorado; Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood,

Washington, D. C.; Mrs. May Wright Sewall, Indiana; Mrs. J. C. Croly, New York; Miss May V. Temple, Tennessee; Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst, California; Mrs. Kate Tannett Woods, Massachusetts; Mrs. Julia Plato Harvey, Illinois; Mrs. Jane O. Cooper, Colorado; Mrs. Harriet H. Robinson, Massachusetts; Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin, Illinois; Mrs. Mary E. Mumford, Pennsylvania; Mrs. C. P. Barnes, Kentucky; Mrs. Philip N. Moore, Missouri; Mrs. Alice Ives Breed, Massachusetts; Mrs. Frank Trumbull, Colorado; Miss Annie Laws, Ohio; Mrs. Sarah S. Platt-Decker, Colorado; Mrs. J. C. Royle, Utah; Josephine Bates, Mary Rogers, Octavia W. Bates, Fanny Purdy Palmer, Julia Ward Howe, Cordelia I. Sterling, Katherine Nobles, Mary D. Steele, and their associates and successors, are hereby created a body corporate and politic, of the District of Columbia, by the name, style, and title of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and by that name shall have perpetual succession, for educational, industrial, philanthropic, literary, artistic, and scientific culture, and to bring into communication with one another the various women's clubs throughout the world, with power in said corporation to make and use a common seal, and to alter the same at pleasure.

SEC. 2. That said corporation is authorized to acquire, by devise, bequest, or otherwise, hold, purchase, and convey, such real and personal estate as shall or may be required for the purposes of its incorporation, not exceeding $200,000, with authority in said corporation, should it be by it deemed necessary so to do, to mortgage or otherwise incumber the real estate which it may hereafter own or acquire, and may give therefor such evidences of indebtedness as such corporation may decide upon.

SEC. 3. That said corporation shall have a constitution and may adopt and make by-laws for the admission and qualifications of members, the management of its property, and the regulation of its affairs, and shall have the power to amend said constitution and by-laws at pleasure. Said corporation shall have its headquarters at Washington, in the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MADDOX. Reserving the right to object, I should like to hear some explanation of this bill.

Mr. LANHAM. I think there will be no objection to it.

Mr. RAY of New York. All that this bill does is to incorporate these ladies, who come from all the States of the Union, for the purposes mentioned in the act. This is an organization of ladies, having no relation to politics. It includes Democratic ladies and Republican ladies. The only purpose of the bill is to promote mutual culture in scientific, religious, and philanthropic work. The bill proposes simply to incorporate them in the District of Columbia only, giving them power to own real estate, and of course mortgage the same, for purposes connected with their work.

Mr. LANHAM. The operations of this corporation are, as I understand, limited to the District of Columbia?

Mr. RAY of New York. Yes, sir; and its headquarters are to be here. A bill of like character, for other purposes, however, has been passed by the House at this session. This bill has the unanimous approval of the members of the Judiciary Committee whom I have been able to see, and I have consulted the majority of them, Republicans and Democrats alike.

Mr. MADDOX. Is it a private charter?

Mr. RAY of New York. Of course it is a private incorporation.

Mr. MADDOX. Do the Committee on the Judiciary all agree to it?

Mr. RAY of New York. All I have been able to see. Of course I was not able to see them all.

Mr. MADDOX. How many have you been able to see?

Mr. RAY of New York. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND], the gentlemen from Texas [Mr. LANHAM], the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. TERRY], the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. JENKINS], the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD], the gentleman from New York [Mr. ALEXANDER], and one or two others, and there is no objection to it.

Mr. MADDOX. They all agree to it?

Mr. GAINES. You say they can not operate except in the District of Columbia?

Mr. RAY of New York. Oh, no; we can not incorporate an association outside of the District of Columbia. It is not a business incorporation, but simply for religious, scientific, literary, philanthropic, and social work and purposes.

Mr. GAINES. Do you mean to say that you can only operate in the District of Columbia?

Mr. RAY of New York. They are to have their headquarters in the District of Columbia. We can not incorporate generally for work or business throughout the United States, except it be some constitutional purpose is to be carried on or worked out when the power is confided to Congress.

Mr. GAINES. Can not they operate in Tennessee, or New York, or any of the other States?

Mr. RAY of New York. They would have to be be an incorporation there by the State if they did. This is not for the purpose of carrying on business as an incorporation outside of the District of Columbia. They would have no power to do anything of that kind. Their headquarters are here, and it is an association for literary, social, and philanthropic work.

Mr. COWHERD. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me from the reading of the bill at the Clerk's desk that this company was not limited, as are most of the charters that we grant for associations in the District of Columbia.

Mr. RAY of New York. It is an incorporation of the District of Columbia. I examined it, and consulted the gentleman of the Committee on the Judiciary, including the gentlemen from Texas and from Missouri [Mr. LANHAM and Mr. DE ARMOND].

Mr. COWHERD. If the gentleman is certain that it is limited to the District I would have no objection to it.

Mr. RAY of New York. I am certain of that.

Mr. JENKINS. I will ask my colleague a question: If in section 2, authorizing the corporation, if created, to acquire real estate anywhere makes it a corporation to do business? I agree with the chairman of the committee in his conclusion; but I thought from the reading of the bill that it was intended to be a general charter. Section 2 provides:

That said corporation is authorized to acquire, by devise, bequest, or otherwise, hold, purchase, and convey such real and personal estate——

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that we can not hear for the disorder.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order.

Mr. GAINES. I hope the gentleman will finish the reading of that section.

Mr. JENKINS (reading)—

SEC. 2. That said corporation is authorized to acquire, by devise, bequest, or otherwise, hold, purchase, and convey such real and personal estate as shall or may be required for the purposes of its incorporation, not exceeding $200,000, with authority in said corporation, should it be by it deemed necessary so to do, to mortgage or otherwise encumber the real estate which it may hereafter own or acquire, and may give therefor such evidences of indebtedness as such corporation may decide upon.

I want to ask the chairman of the committee if he does not think that would apply to any part of the country?

Mr. RAY of New York. I think not, because it is an incorporation of the District of Columbia; but still if they had the money and purchased some real estate outside of the District, I do not see what objection there could be to that.

Mr. GAINES. But you said it operated only in the District of Columbia, and did not do any business. Is not buying, owning, and controlling property business?

Mr. RAY of New York. It is not, except as I have stated.

Mr. PAYNE. Why should they not be able to buy property anywhere?

Mr. GAINES. But the gentleman said that it does not operate outside of the District of Columbia, and I say it does, that owning property outside the District of Columbia is business.

Mr. RAY of New York. I still insist that this company, if we incorporate them, can not own real estate outside of the District, because it is limited to the District. I do not say positively that they can not; but I do not think under this bill they can. It is in the same language of all the bills of like character we have passed which are limited to the District of Columbia. What I said was I did not see what possible harm can come to anyone if the corporation purchases and owns real estate in the various States. It is purely a religious, scientific, social, and philanthropic association.

Mr. LANHAM. And a woman's measure, at that.

Mr. RAY of New York. And a woman's measure; and we can not have too many of such associations operated by women devoted to this kind of work.

Mr. CLAYTON of Alabama. And meets entirely the approval of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. RAY of New York. So far as I have been able to see them; I have seen the majority. We have approved and passed similar bills heretofore.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. RAY of New York, a motion to recousider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

HOUR OF FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I understand, according to the arrangements for the day, the House is to leave this Hall at a quarter before 12 and proceed to the Senate to take part in or witness the ceremonies there. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the House adjourn finally at 11.45 to-day.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that the final adjournment of the House of Representatives take place at 15 minutes before 12. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the order is accordingly made.

Mr. PAYNE. I move that the House take a recess until 11 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 15 minutes a. m.) the House was declared in recess.

At 11 o'clock a. m. the House resumed its session.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, for the present consideration of the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That a committee of three members be appointed by the Chair to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses have completed the business of the present session and are ready to adjourn unless the President has some other communication to make to them.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.
The resolution was agreed to.
The SPEAKER appointed the following committee, in pursuance of the resolution: Mr. PAYNE, Mr. GROSVENOR, and Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 13729. An act making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902;
H. R. 4120. An act to pay Eliza R. Crawford the amount of a United States loan certificate issued in 1779;
H. R. 13705. An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes;
H. R. 9829. An act to provide for celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the purchase of the Louisiana territory by the United States by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the products of the soil, mine, forest, and sea in the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri;
H. R. 14018. An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes;
H. R. 636. An act for the relief of St. John's Lodge, Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons, No. 3, of Newbern, N. C.;
H. R. 9835. An act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia;
H. R. 11830. An act for the relief of the devisees of Casper Barber and their assigns from the operation of the act restricting the ownership of real estate in the District of Columbia to American citizens;
S. 5715. An act granting a charter to the General Federation of Woman's Clubs; and
S. 5943. An act to establish Lowelltown, Me., a subport of entry.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD within ten days a statement of the appropriations made at this session of Congress.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks leave to print for ten days a statement in respect to the appropriations of this Congress. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.
Mr. BROMWELL. Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, I ask unanimous consent that if he desires to print any matter on the subject of appropriations of this Congress that he be permitted to do so for ten days.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations be accorded the same privilege as that which has just been given to the gentleman from Georgia.
Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I want to say that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will make that personal request of the House. I was in to confer with him, and he was not in, but I know that he intends to make this a personal request. Therefore I did not make it for him.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROMWELL]? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President of the United States had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

On March 3, 1901:
H. R. 9835. An act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia;
H. R. 13705. An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes;
H. R. 13729. An act making appropriations for the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902;
H. R. 14018. An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes;

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Chair to join a similar committee appointed by the House of Representatives to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses, having completed the business of the present session, are ready to adjourn unless the President has some other communications to make to them; and that in compliance with the foregoing the Chair had appointed as said committee Mr. HOAR and Mr. COCKRELL.

The SPEAKER resigned the chair in favor of Mr. JOY, as Speaker pro tempore, amid general applause.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] will please take the chair. [Applause.]

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO WAIT UPON THE PRESIDENT.

The committee to wait upon the President appeared at the bar of the House.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, the committee appointed by the House to join a like committee on the part of the Senate to wait on the President of the United States to inform him that the two Houses had completed their business and were ready to adjourn unless he had some further communication to make, report that they have performed that duty and the President informs them that he has no further communication to make.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. JAMES R. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent, on account of sickness in my family, that I may have ten days instead of five to extend my remarks on the Army appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that he may have ten days within which to extend his remarks on the Army appropriation bill. Is there objection?

Mr. PAYNE. I hope there will be no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection.

RESOLUTION OF THANKS TO SPEAKER.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer the following resolution, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the thanks of this House are tendered to the Hon. DAVID B. HENDERSON for the able, impartial, and dignified manner in which he has presided over its deliberations and performed the arduous and important duties of the Chair.

[Applause.]

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, the resolution just offered by myself, and read at the desk, gives expression, as I believe, to the real feelings of every member of the House. I know from declarations made by members of the minority in this Chamber that without exception such is the opinion they entertain. When this Congress convened in December, 1899, the majority of the House, in party caucus, chose the Speaker and claimed him as their own, but by his generous treatment of those of us of the minority, and by an impartial discharge of the duties of a most responsible and at times perplexing office, he has shown himself to be the Speaker of the whole House, and not simply of the one side to which he owed his selection.

The position of Speaker of the House is both judicial and political. It is judicial in this, that the occupant of the chair is at all times bound by and obedient to a code of rules prescribed for the government and control of the House, and in the execution of which he is but its organ and servant. It is at the same time political. In the very nature of things, he is expected in his position to look carefully to the interests of his party, and while he is to administer the affairs of his great office in a manner to best promote the public weal, it is not expected that he will fail to use all legitimate and proper methods to build up his party and fortify it against attack.

It may be that in moments of excitement and acrimonious debate, such as we frequently witness here, when words are flying fast and hot and when crimination and recrimination are indulged, often too far, between the two sides, some of us are of opinion that unfair means are adopted and injustice done by a display of too much partisanship, yet in cooler moments, when reason is restored and all are satisfied that no intention to do injustice or to be unfair is discovered, these things are forgotten, or are properly attributed to the infirmities of temper and the imperfections of human nature.

After quite a long experience in this body, speaking for myself, I am thoroughly convinced that the House in its membership is honest and sincere, and that each, from the Speaker to the humblest member, earnestly endeavors to see his duty to the country, and then to discharge it to the very best of his ability.

I will not detain the House further, but ask as a proper tribute from us all that the resolution be adopted. [Loud applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BAILEY of Texas). The question is on agreeing to the resolution offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON]. The Chair will take a rising vote. All who are in favor of the resolution will signify it by rising.

[The members of the House rose in a body; and there was a loud outburst of applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Those voting in the affirmative will be seated. If there are any opposed to the adoption of this resolution, they will rise. [A pause.] No one rises; and the Chair declares the resolution unanimously adopted. The gentleman from Tennessee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. JOY] are appointed a committee to wait upon the Speaker and notify him of the action of the House.

After a pause the Speaker, escorted by the committee just appointed, entered the Hall and ascended to the Speaker's desk, amid loud and prolonged cheering.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Mr. Speaker, it becomes my very pleasant duty to inform you that the House of Representatives has just adopted, by a rising and unanimous vote, the resolution which I will ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the thanks of this House are tendered to Hon. DAVID B. HENDERSON for the able, impartial, and dignified manner in which he has presided over its deliberations and performed the arduous and important duties of the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. And I may be permitted to add, on behalf of myself and every member of this House, that we all sincerely wish for you a long and prosperous life. [Prolonged applause, during which the Speaker pro tempore handed the gavel to the Speaker and returned to the floor.]

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen of the House of Representatives: On the 4th day of December, 1899, when I assumed the duties of this office, my heart was filled with gratitude because of the generous reception accorded me by this body, and it was filled with apprehension because of the labors and difficulties that I saw before me. I then appealed to you—all of you—for that support without which no presiding officer could be successful. Not for a single day or hour have you forgotten that request. [Applause.] No member of this great body on either side has ever for an hour endeavored to embarrass me in the discharge of my duties, but with untiring kindness and patience, and I feel almost with affection, you remembered my request. The kind greeting you accorded me then gave me intense pleasure. But after serving with you for two years, to have this resolution so generously adopted touches me profoundly, and you have given me the greatest joy of my political life.

This has been a busy, working Congress. No day or hour has been wasted; and the cheerfulness with which you all energetically and earnestly moved up to a discharge of your great duties will be noted by the historian and justly noted. Grave questions you have met earnestly and at times with that heat essential to great conflicts over mighty problems, but, gentlemen, not one disgraceful scene mars the record of the Fifty-sixth Congress. After the conflicts in which each has sought to assert his convictions I know that you part as friends. Take with you my profound gratitude. Wishing you pleasant recollections of these great two years, assuring you that I believe in my heart your country is stronger because you have been members of the Fifty-sixth Congress, I sincerely wish you a safe return to your homes. And I now declare the House of Representatives of the Fifty-sixth Congress adjourned without day. [Loud and long continued applause.]

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communication was taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting statement in response to the resolution of the House calling for information as to a supplementary report of the Missouri River Commission on improvements at St. Joseph, Mo.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII Mr. MCCLEARY, from the Committee on the Library, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 13295) for the erection of an equestrian statue to the memory of Brig. Gen. Casimer Pulaski at Washington, D. C., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 3003); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred, as follows:
